NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets on Sale

TRANS MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
HOROWITZ
Second and Last Appearance
SATURDAY, MAR. 15, at 2:30
BRANSON DE COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
SPRINGTIME MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SAT., MAR. 22—CANADIAN ROCKIES
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

ADV MAR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23-24-25-26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

HER MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, at 3:30
Rachmaninoff
MARCH 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets on Sale

MCN MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY, MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

TRAV MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

HER MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3.30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
Brahms Festival
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

TRANS MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

HER MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON DE COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
SPRINGTIME MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

Post MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

TRANS MAR 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2.30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

GLOBE MAR 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets. 50c $1.00, $1.50.
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

HER MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

GLOBE MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

POST MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 19

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 19

SYMPHONY HALL
MARCH 21-22-23-24-25-26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
Sunday, March 30, at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 19

SYMPHONY HALL
Mar. 21-22-23-24-25-26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SATURDAY, MARCH 22 at 2:30
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
DREAM PICTURES
CANADIAN ROCKIES
TICKETS, 50c., $1.00, $1.50
FRIDAY EVE., MARCH 28 at 8 P.M.
DARTMOUTH Musical Clubs
FEATURING
BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 4

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 2:30
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
CANADIAN ROCKIES
TICKETS, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
Canadian Rockies
TICKETS, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2.30
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
CANADIAN ROCKIES
TICKETS, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 21

[166]

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3.30
HOROWITZ
Second and Last Appearance
TOMORROW at 8.15
THE CURTIS ORCHESTRA
Conductor—EMIL MLYNANSKI
from THE CURTIS INSTITUTE of MUSIC, PHILADELPHIA
JOSEF HOFMANN, Director
"STANDING ROOM ONLY"
5th TUES. CONCERT MAR. 11 at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY
Conductor
Program: DEBUSSY, "The Sea," RAVEL'S "Bolero," FRANCK'S "Symphony"
SATURDAY, MAR. 15, at 2.30
BRANSON De COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
SPRINGTIME MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SAT., MARCH 22—CANADIAN ROCKIES
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
MAR. 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets on Sale
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
HOROWITZ
Second and Last Appearance
TONIGHT AT 8:15
THE CURTIS ORCHESTRA
Conductor—EMIL MLYNARSKI
from THE CURTIS INSTITUTE of MUSIC, PHILADELPHIA
JOSEF HOFMANN, Director
"STANDING ROOM ONLY"
NEXT TUESDAY AT 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY
Conductor
Program: Debussy, "The Sea"—Ravel's Bolero — Franck's Symphony
SATURDAY, MAR. 15, at 2:30
BRANSON DE COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
SPRINGTIME MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SAT., MAR. 22—CANADIAN ROCKIES
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
MARCH 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets on Sale
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
HOROWITZ
Second and Last Appearance
SATURDAY, MAR. 15, at 2:30
BRANSON DE COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
SPRINGTIME MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SAT., MAR. 22—CANADIAN ROCKIES
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
MARCH 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets on Sale
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

Post MAR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
HOROWITZ
Second and Last Appearance
SATURDAY, MAR. 15, at 2:30
BRANSON DE COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
SPRINGTIME MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SAT., MAR. 22—CANADIAN ROCKIES
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
MARCH 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets on Sale
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 11

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 11

SYMPHONY HALL
SAT. MARCH 15 AT 2.30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
MARCH 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets on Sale
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23-24-25-26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

Post MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY, MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

HER MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY, MAR. 30 at 3:30
Rachmaninoff
MARCH 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets on Sale

MCN MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY, MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

TRAV MAR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

GLOBE MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
BRAHMS FESTIVAL
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

TRANS MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3.30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY MAR. 30 at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF
MARCH 23, 24, 25, 26
Brahms Festival
SINGLE TICKETS ON SALE

TRANS MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON DE COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

POST MAR 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

HER MAR 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

"RANS MAR 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

HER MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

GLOBE MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2.30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

POST MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 19

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

HER MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened.
Tickets, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

GLOBE MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 2:30
BRANSON De COU
and His Famous
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

POST MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 19

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 2:30
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
CANADIAN ROCKIES
TICKETS, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
Canadian Rockies
TICKETS, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2.30
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
CANADIAN ROCKIES
TICKETS, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
HOROWITZ
Second and Last Appearance
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
MARCH 23-24-25-26
Brahms Festival
Single Tickets Now on Sale
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

ADV MAR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON DE COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING
Great American Violinist
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2:30
BRANSON DE COU
AND HIS
Dream Pictures
MOTORING ON PACIFIC COAST
Including the Most Gorgeous Wild Flower Pictures Ever Screened
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SAT.—CANADIAN ROCKIES
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
SPALDING

POST MAR 14

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MAR. 30, at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, MARCH 30, AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 2.30
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
CANADIAN ROCKIES
TICKETS, 50c, $1.00, $1.50
SUNDAY, MARCH 30 at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 21

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 | ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2:30—LAST TIME

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTUERS

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 | Rachmaninoff

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies.
SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony.
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists.
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet.
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony.
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

MON MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3.30 | ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2.30—LAST TIME

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

FRI. EVE. MAR. 28 AT 8 P. M. | DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Benefit: Frances E. Willard Settlement

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3.30 | RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies.
SUN AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony.
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet.
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony.
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 | ALBERT SPALDING

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 | RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies
SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

ADV MAR 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 | ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2:30—LAST TIME

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

FRI. EVE. MAR. 28 AT 8 P. M. | DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Benefit: FRANCES E. WILLARD SETTLEMENT

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 | RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies
SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER MAR 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 — MARCH 24-25-26 AT 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 | RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

MON MAR 21

[67]

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST THREE PERFORMANCES

Brahms Festival

TONIGHT—REQUIEM

NEXT SUN., MAR. 30, at 3.30

RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 24

SYMPHONY HALL
Last Two Concerts

Brahms Festival

Tonight—Matzenauer-Schnabel
Chorus—Burgin Quartet

Next Sunday at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 25

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TWO CONCERTS

Brahms Festival

TONIGHT—MATZENAUER—SCHNABEL
CHORUS—BURGIN QUARTET

NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

PAC MAR 25

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TWO CONCERTS

Brahms Festival

TONIGHT—MATZENAUER—SCHNABEL
CHORUS—BURGIN QUARTET

NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

BOSTON MAR 25

SYMPHONY HALL

FRIDAY NIGHT, MARCH 28, at 8

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Featuring

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing from 10—12

NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA

BRANSON DeCOU

and His Famous

DREAM PICTURES

A 1929 Motor Tour of

YELLOWSTONE PARK

SALE OPENS TOMORROW—50c-$1.00-$1.50

TRANS MAR 25

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TWO CONCERTS

Brahms Festival

TONIGHT—MATZENAUER, SCHNABEL,
CHORUS, BURGIN QUARTET

FRIDAY NIGHT, MARCH 28 at 8

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING

Barbary Coast ORCHESTRA

Dancing from 10 to 12

NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30

RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA

BRANSON DeCOU

And His Famous

DREAM PICTURES

A 1929 MOTOR TOUR OF

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Sale Opens Tomorrow—50c $1.00 $1.50

TRANS MAR 25

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 | ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2:30—LAST TIME

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTUERS

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 | Rachmaninoff

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies.
SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony.
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists.
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet.
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony.
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

MON MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3.30 | ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2.30—LAST TIME

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

FRI. EVE. MAR. 28 AT 8 P. M. | DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Benefit: Frances E. Willard Settlement

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3.30 | RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies.
SUN AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony.
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet.
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony.
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 | ALBERT SPALDING

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 | RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies
SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet.
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony.
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

ADV MAR 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 | ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2:30—LAST TIME

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

FRI. EVE. MAR. 28 AT 8 P. M. | DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Benefit: FRANCES E. WILLARD SETTLEMENT

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 | RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies
SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER MAR 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 MARCH 24-25-26 AT 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 | RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

MON MAR 14

[67]

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST THREE PERFORMANCES
Brahms Festival
TONIGHT—REQUIEM
NEXT SUN., MAR. 30, at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 24

SYMPHONY HALL
Last Two Concerts
Brahms Festival
Tonight—Matzenauer-Schnabel
Chorus—Burgin Quartet
Next Sunday at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

ADV MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TWO CONCERTS
Brahms Festival
TONIGHT—MATZENAUER—SCHNABEL
CHORUS—BURGIN QUARTET
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TWO CONCERTS
Brahms Festival
TONIGHT—MATZENAUER—SCHNABEL
CHORUS—BURGIN QUARTET
NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
FRIDAY NIGHT, MARCH 28, at 8
DARTMOUTH
MUSICAL CLUBS
Featuring
BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA
Dancing from 10—12
NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU
and His Famous
DREAM PICTURES
A 1929 Motor Tour of
YELLOWSTONE PARK
SALE OPENS TOMORROW—50c-$1.00-$1.50

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TWO CONCERTS
Brahms Festival
TONIGHT—MATZENAUER, SCHNABEL
CHORUS, BURGIN QUARTET
FRIDAY NIGHT, MARCH 28 at 8
DARTMOUTH
MUSICAL CLUBS
FEATURING
Barbary Coast ORCHESTRA
Dancing from 10 to 12
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
RACHMANINOFF
EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU
And His Famous
DREAM PICTURES
A 1929 MOTOR TOUR OF
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Sale Opens Tomorrow—50c, $1.00, $1.50

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2:30—LAST TIME

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

FRI. EVE. MAR. 28 AT 8 P. M. — DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Benefit Frances E. Willard Settlement

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies

SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony

MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists

TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet

WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony

(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST MAR 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2:30

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

FRI. EVE. MAR. 28 AT 8 P. M. — DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Benefit: Frances E. Willard Settlement

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies

SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony

MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists

TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet

WED. EVE., MAR 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony

(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

GLOBE MAR 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30——MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHM'S FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE Daily 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under Ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c.-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS MAR 25

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30——MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MAR. 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES BY

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing 10 to 12—Benefit: Frances E. Willard Settlement

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under Ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c.-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRAV MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30——MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 28, at 8 P.M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

DANCING 10 to 12—BENEFIT: FRANCES E. WILLARD SETTLEMENT

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3.30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE Daily 2.30-8.30 — ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under Ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30——MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MAR. 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES BY

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing 10 to 12—Benefit: Frances E. Willard Settlement

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under Ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c.-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER MAR 23

[168]

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT—CLOSING CONCERT

Brahms Festival

ORCHESTRA, CHORUS
MATZENAUER, SCHNABEL

THIS FRIDAY AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing, 10-12

NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

THURS. EVE., APR. 3, at 8:15

BRANSON DeCOU

And His Famous

DREAM PICTURES

A 1929 MOTOR TOUR OF

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Sale Opens Tomorrow—50c, $1, $1.50

GLOBE MAR 26

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY at 3.30

RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 26

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing, 10-12

THIS SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

TRAV MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 8 P.M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing, 10-12

THIS SUNDAY at 3.30

RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing, 10-12

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 28

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2:30—LAST TIME

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

FRI. EVE. MAR. 28 AT 8 P. M. — DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Benefit Frances E. Willard Settlement

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies
SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST MAR 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — ALBERT SPALDING

LAST TIME—SAT., MAR. 22, AT 2:30

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

CANADIAN ROCKIES

Tickets 50c, $1.00 and $1.50

FRI. EVE. MAR. 28 AT 8 P. M. — DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Benefit: Frances E. Willard Settlement

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

Harvard and Radcliffe Choruses—Soloists

FRI. AFT., SAT. EVE., MAR. 21-22—Academic Festival Overture, Second and Third Symphonies
SUN. AFT., MAR. 23—Haydn Variations, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Artur Schnabel), Fourth Symphony
MON. EVE., MAR. 24—Song of Destiny and German Requiem
Orchestra, Chorus and Soloists
TUES. EVE., MAR. 25—Liebeslieder (Chorus), Piano Pieces (Artur Schnabel), Songs (Mme. Matzenauer), Piano Quintet
WED. EVE., MAR. 26—Rhapsody (Mme. Matzenauer and Male Chorus), Piano Concerto No. 1 (Artur Schnabel), First Symphony
(Single tickets on sale for MAR. 23-24-25-26)

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

GLOBE MAR 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30——MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHM'S FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE Daily 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

MAR 23

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30——MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 28, at 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES BY

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

DANCING 10 to 12—BENEFIT: FRANCES E. WILLARD SETTLEMENT

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3.30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE Daily 2.30-8.30
ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS MAR 22

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30——MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MAR. 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES BY

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing 10 to 12—Benefit: Frances E. Willard Settlement

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE Daily 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS MAR 22

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30——MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MAR. 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES BY

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing 10 to 12—Benefit: Frances E. Willard Settlement

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE Daily 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

GLOBE HER MAR 23

[168]

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT—CLOSING CONCERT

Brahms Festival

ORCHESTRA, CHORUS
MATZENAUER, SCHNABEL

THIS FRIDAY AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing, 10-12

NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

THURS. EVE., APR. 3, at 8:15

BRANSON DeCOU

And His Famous

DREAM PICTURES

A 1929 MOTOR TOUR OF

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Sale Opens Tomorrow—50c, $1, $1.50

GLOBE MAR 22

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY at 3.30

RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 26

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing 10-12

THIS SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

TRAV MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 8 P.M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing, 10-12

THIS SUNDAY at 3.30

RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing, 10-12

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 28

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30 — MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing 10 to 12—Benefit Frances E. Willard Settlement

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY—"FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED

Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

GLOBE MAR 23

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30 — MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing 10 to 12. Benefit Frances E. Willard Settlement

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED

Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST MAR 8

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT — CLOSING CONCERT — BRAHMS FESTIVAL

ORCHESTRA, CHORUS—MATZENAUER—SCHNABEL

THIS FRIDAY, MARCH 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrument Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and the

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Concert 8-10—Dancing 10-12

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER MAR 26

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT — CLOSING CONCERT — BRAHMS FESTIVAL

ORCHESTRA, CHORUS—MATZENAUER—SCHNABEL

THIS FRIDAY, MARCH 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrument Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and the

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Concert 8-10—Dancing 10-12

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST MAR 26

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW EVENING AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Insrumental Club, Campus Quartet

XYLOPHONE SOLOIST AND THE

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1—$3. Including Concert 8-10, Dancing 10-12

NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

HARVARD CRIMSON MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

Sunday AT 3.30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8.15—EXTRA

BRANSON DECOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APR. 7 — TWICE Daily 2.30-8.30 — ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS

ALL SEATS RESERVED

Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3.30 — ROLAND HAYES

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA

BRANSON DECOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)

Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS

ALL SEATS RESERVED

Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRAN'S MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and the

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing 10-12

THIS SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 28

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing 10-12

THIS SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 28

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY at 3.30

RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 28

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

POST MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

ONE WEEK ONLY — BEGINS MON. EVE. APR. 7

Mary Goldman Hayes ALL TALKING Picture

HEAR THE SINGING-TALKING UNDER IDEAL ACOUSTICS

"Hallelujah!"

TWICE DAILY 2.30 & 8.00

ALL SEATS RESERVED Now

AFT. 50c-$1.00 EVES. 50c-$1.50

AMER MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

THURS. EVE., APRIL 3, at 8:15

Branson DeCou

and His Famous

DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50

NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS

By KODALY

ORCHESTRA—CHORUS—SOLOISTS

HER APR 1

SYMPHONY HALL

Thurs. Eve., April 3, at 8.15

BRANSON De COU

AND HIS FAMOUS

Dream Pictures

YELLOWSTONE PARK

TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS

By KODALY

Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRANS APR 1

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS

By KODALY

Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRAV APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30 ——— MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing 10 to 12—Benefit Frances E. Willard Settlement

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY—"FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

Globe MAR 23

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30 ——— MARCH 24-25-26 at 8:15

BRAHMS FESTIVAL

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

FRIDAY EVENING, MARCH 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

FEATURING SPECIALTIES

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Dancing 10 to 12. Benefit Frances E. Willard Settlement

NEXT SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

Hear the Singing — Talking under ideal Acoustics

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c.-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

Post MAR 8

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT — CLOSING CONCERT — BRAHMS FESTIVAL

ORCHESTRA, CHORUS—MATZENAUER—SCHNABEL

THIS FRIDAY, MARCH 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrument Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and the

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Concert 8-10—Dancing 10-12

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER MAR 26

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing 10-12

THIS SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

HER MAR 28

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrumental Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Dancing 10-12

THIS SUNDAY at 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

GLOBE MAR 28

SYMPHONY HALL

TONIGHT — CLOSING CONCERT — BRAHMS FESTIVAL

ORCHESTRA, CHORUS—MATZENAUER—SCHNABEL

THIS FRIDAY, MARCH 28, AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Instrument Club, Campus Quartet, Xylophone Soloist and the

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1-$3, Including Concert 8-10—Dancing 10-12

SUN. AFT. MAR. 30 AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

Post MAR 26

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW EVENING AT 8 P. M.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Including Glee Club, Insrumental Club, Campus Quartet
XYLOPHONE SOLOIST AND THE

BARBARY COAST ORCHESTRA

Tickets $1—$3. Including Concert 8-10, Dancing 10-12

NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

HARVARD CRIMSON MAR 27

SYMPHONY HALL

Sunday AT 3.30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8.15—EXTRA

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APR. 7
TWICE Daily 2.30-8.30
ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3.30 — ROLAND HAYES

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRAN S MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA

BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY

King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing

"Hallelujah"

HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRAV MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY at 3.30

RACHMANINOFF

TRANS MAR 28

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

Post MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30

RACHMANINOFF

Globe MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

ONE WEEK ONLY BEGINS MON. EVE. APR. 7

Mervyn LeRoy-Hyer All Talking Picture

HEAR THE SINGING-TALKING UNDER IDEAL ACOUSTICS

Hallelujah!

TWICE DAILY 2.30 & 8.30

ALL SEATS RESERVED MOR. Mats. 50c-$1.00 Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AMER APR 1

SYMPHONY HALL

THURS. EVE., APRIL 3, at 8:15

Branson DeCou

and His Famous

DREAM PICTURES

YELLOWSTONE PARK

Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50

NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS

By KODALY

ORCHESTRA—CHORUS—SOLOISTS

TRANS APR

SYMPHONY HALL

Thurs. Eve., April 3, at 8.15

BRANSON DeCOU

AND HIS FAMOUS

Dream Pictures

YELLOWSTONE PARK

TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS

By KODALY

Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRANS APR

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN

THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS

By KODALY

Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRAN APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets NOW—50c—$1.00—$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

MON MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY
King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing
"Hallelujah"
HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

GLOBE MAR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY
King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing
"Hallelujah"
HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER MAR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
RACHMANINOFF
EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7
TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30
ONE WEEK ONLY
King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing
"Hallelujah"
HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST MAR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

HER APR ✓

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8.15
Branson DeCou
AND HIS FAMOUS
DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

GLOBE APR ✓

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

POST APR ✓

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRANS APR ✓ [170]

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

HER APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
Branson De Cou
AND HIS FAMOUS
DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

GLOBE APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

POST APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY at 8.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

MER APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
Verdi's Requiem
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

MON APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY at 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRANS APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

HER APR 4

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

POST APR 4

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY at 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—CONDUCTOR
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRANS APR 4

SYMPHONY HALL
NOW PLAYING—Mat. 2:30—Eve. 8:30
THIS WEEK ONLY
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM
SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Really Is All the Critics Say About It, and More!
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
NOW PLAYING—Mat. 2.30—Eve. 8.30
THIS WEEK ONLY
America's Prize Film
Sensation of 2 Continents
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Really Is All the Critics Say About It, and More!
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY—2:30-8:30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM
SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets NOW—50c—$1.00—$1.50

Mail Orders Promptly Filled — Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

MON — MAR 29

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY
King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing
"Hallelujah"
HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

GLOBE — MAR 30

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DECOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY
King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing
"Hallelujah"
HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 — ROLAND HAYES

HER — MAR 30

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY
King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing
"Hallelujah"
HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST — MAR 30

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

EXTRA—THURS., APRIL 3, at 8:15—EXTRA
BRANSON DeCOU AND HIS FAMOUS DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
Tickets Now—50c—$1.00—$1.50

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY
King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing
"Hallelujah"
HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST — MAR 30

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — RACHMANINOFF

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor — WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

BEG. MON. EVE. APRIL 7 — TWICE DAILY 2:30-8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY
King Vidor's Prize Film—Talking-Singing-Dancing
"Hallelujah"
HEAR IT UNDER PERFECT ACOUSTICS
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mats. 50c-$1.00. Eves. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

AGR — MAR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:15
BRANSON De COU
AND HIS FAMOUS
DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

HER — APR

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8.15
Branson De Cou
AND HIS FAMOUS
DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

NEXT SUNDAY AT 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

GLOBE — APR

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:15
BRANSON De COU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

POST — APR

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8.15
BRANSON De COU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRANS — APR [170]

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream·Pictures
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

HER — APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
Branson De Cou
AND HIS FAMOUS
DREAM PICTURES
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

GLOBE — APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
BRANSON De COU
AND HIS FAMOUS
Dream Pictures
YELLOWSTONE PARK
TICKETS 50c, $1.00, $1.50

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

POST — APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRANS — APR

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

HER — APR

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

POST — APR

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY at 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE—CONDUCTOR
VERDI'S REQUIEM
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

TRANS — APR

SYMPHONY HALL
NOW PLAYING—Mat. 2:30—Eve. 8:30
THIS WEEK ONLY
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM
SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Really Is All the Critics Say About It, and More!
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

POST — APR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
NOW PLAYING—Mat. 2.30—Eve. 8.30
THIS WEEK ONLY
America's Prize Film
Sensation of 2 Continents
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Really Is All the Critics Say About It, and More!
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS — APR 8

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY—2:30-8:30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM
SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER — APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
Verdi's Requiem
PSALMUS HUNGARICUS
By KODALY
Orchestra Chorus Soloists

MON — APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS MON. EVE. ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ALL SEATS RESERVED NOW— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AMER APR 5

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS MON. EVE. ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

TRAV APR 5

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

OPENS MON. EVE. ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2.30—8.30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c $1.00-$1.50

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3.30 | ROLAND HAYES

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS APR 5

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY, APRIL 6, AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

OPENS TOMORROW AT 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY, 2:30-8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 | ROLAND HAYES

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS PAYABLE TO SYMPHONY HALL

GLOBE APR 6

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Opens TOMORROW at 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 | ROLAND HAYES

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS PAYABLE TO SYMPHONY HALL

PGH APR 6

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

OPENS TOMORROW AT 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 | ROLAND HAYES

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS PAYABLE TO SYMPHONY HALL

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

OPENS TOMORROW AT 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 | ROLAND HAYES

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

ADV APR 6

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY-TOM'W ONLY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY—TOMORROW ONLY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

MAT. 50c. $1.00; EVE. 50c. $1.00, $1.50

APR 4 APR 11

SYMPHONY HALL

LAST 2 DAYS—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

APR 6 HMER APR 11

[171]

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS TONIGHT at 8:30

ONE WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

The Sensation of 2 Continents

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

Acclaimed by all critics as the best picture of the year

STARRING DANIEL HAYES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

An Artkino Guild Presentation

ALL SEATS RESERVED

MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50

TRAV APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS TONIGHT 8.30

King Vidor's Prize Film—

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

Acclaimed by All Critics as the Best Picture of the Year

THIS WEEK ONLY

Twice Daily 2.30—8.30

ALL SEATS RESERVED

Mat. 50c-$1—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

EASTER SUNDAY, APRIL 20 at 3.30

ROLAND HAYES

LAST APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

TRANS APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL

NOW PLAYING—Mat. 2:30—Eve. 8:30

THIS WEEK ONLY

AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

Really Is All the Critics Say About It, and More!

An Artkino Guild Presentation

All Seats Reserved

Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 8

SYMPHONY HALL

Now Playing—Mat. 2:30—Eve. 8:30

THIS WEEK ONLY

AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

REALLY IS ALL THE CRITICS SAY ABOUT IT, AND MORE!

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ALL SEATS RESERVED

MAT. 50c--$1.00--EVE. 50c--$1.00--$1.50

EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE APR 8

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS WEEK ONLY—2:30-8:30

AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

An Artkino Guild Presentation

All Seats Reserved

Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS MON. EVE. ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

ALL SEATS RESERVED NOW— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

AMER APR 5

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS MON. EVE. ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

TRAV APR 5

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

OPENS MON. EVE. ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c $1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3.30 | ROLAND HAYES

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS APR 5

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

OPENS TOMORROW AT 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKING GUILD PRESENTATION

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 | ROLAND HAYES

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS PAYABLE TO SYMPHONY HALL

GLOBE APR 6

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY (FIRST TIME IN BOSTON)
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Opens TOMORROW at 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 | ROLAND HAYES

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS PAYABLE TO SYMPHONY HALL

POST APR 6

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN THOMPSON STONE, Conductor

VERDI'S REQUIEM

PSALMUS HUNGARICUS BY KODALY "FIRST TIME IN BOSTON"
Soloists: NANETTE GUILFORD, Soprano, Metropolitan Opera Co.
MERLE ALCOCK, Contralto, Metropolitan Opera Co.
PAUL ALTHOUSE, Tenor WILLIAM SIMMONS, Baritone
70 MEMBERS BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

OPENS TOMORROW AT 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN

STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKING GUILD PRESENTATION

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 | ROLAND HAYES

Mail Orders Promptly Filled. Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

ADV

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY-TOM'W ONLY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing

Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY—TOMORROW ONLY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

MAT. 50c. $1.00; EVE. 50c. $1.00. $1.50

GLOBE APR 11

APR 6

SYMPHONY HALL

LAST 2 DAYS—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

HER APR 6

AMER APR 11

[171]

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS TONIGHT at 8:30

ONE WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

The Sensation of 2 Continents

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

Acclaimed by all critics as the best picture of the year

STARRING DANIEL HAYES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"

An Artkino Guild Presentation

ALL SEATS RESERVED

MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50

TRAV APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS TONIGHT 8.30

King Vidor's Prize Film—

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

Acclaimed by All Critics as the Best Picture of the Year

THIS WEEK ONLY

Twice Daily 2.30—8.30

ALL SEATS RESERVED

Mat. 50c-$1—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

EASTER SUNDAY, APRIL 20 at 3.30

ROLAND HAYES

LAST APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

TRANS APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL

NOW PLAYING—Mat. 2:30—Eve. 8:30

THIS WEEK ONLY

AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

Really Is All the Critics Say About It, and More!

An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved

Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 8

SYMPHONY HALL

Now Playing—Mat. 2:30—Eve. 8:30

THIS WEEK ONLY

AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

REALLY IS ALL THE CRITICS SAY ABOUT IT, AND MORE!

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION
ALL SEATS RESERVED

MAT. 50c--$1.00--EVE. 50c--$1.00--$1.50

EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE APR 8

SYMPHONY HALL

THIS WEEK ONLY—2:30-8:30

AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture

An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved

Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE APR 9

CUT-OUT

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS TONIGHT 8:30 — THIS WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
THE SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
Acclaimed by All Critics as the Best Picture of the Year
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT., 50c-$1.00 EVE., 50c, $1.00, $1.50

AN ARTKING GUILD PRESENTATION

POST APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS TONIGHT — ONE WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED NOW— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKING GUILD PRESENTATION

AJV APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS TONIGHT 8:30 — THIS WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
THE SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
Acclaimed by All Critics as the Best Picture of the Year
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c, $1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKING GUILD PRESENTATION

GLOBE APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL

OPENS TONIGHT AT 8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
THE SENSATION OF TWO CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
Acclaimed by All Critics as the Best Picture of the Year
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 — ROLAND HAYES

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS PAYABLE TO SYMPHONY HALL

AMER APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL

Opens TONIGHT at 8:30 — ONE WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30

KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
THE SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
Acclaimed by Critics as the Best Picture of the Year
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED NOW— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

AMER APR 7

Symphony Hall

BEGINNING MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 7
ONE WEEK ONLY
Twice Daily—2.30-8.30

KING VIDOR'S daring romance of Negro life

Prize Film of the Year

AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

HALLELUJAH

With Songs by IRVING BERLIN

Starring DANIEL HAYNES
The Sensation In "GREEN PASTURES"

M-G-M All Talking Singing Dancing Film Triumph

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mat. 50c, $1—Eve. 50c $1, $1.50

JEWISH ADVOCATE APR 4

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY 2:30-8:30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM
SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY—2:30-8:30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM
SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

TRAV APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY—2.30-8.30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM
SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30

ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
NOW PLAYING—MAT. 2:30—EVE. 8:30
THIIS WEEK ONLY
THE SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELU[illegible]

A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-
Really is all the critics say abo
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW
SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTUR
ALL SEATS RESERVED NOW— MAT. 50c
EVE. 50c-$1.

AMER

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY—2:30-8:30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM
SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS

HALLELUJAH

A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50

AMER APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST 3 DAYS—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 10

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST 3 DAYS—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 10

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST 3 DAYS—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30

ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 10

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST 3 DAYS—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

AMER APR 10

SCENIC [illegible]

SYMPHONY HALL
Today-Tom'w Only—2:30-8.30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30

ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 11

[172]

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY-TOM'W ONLY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 11

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY-TOM'W ONLY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 11

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8;30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

TRAV APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30

HALLELUJAH

All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00 — Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

AMER APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
Easter Sunday at 3:30

ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE APR 13.

CUT-OUT

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS TONIGHT 8:30 THIS WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30
KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
THE SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
Acclaimed by All Critics as the Best Picture of the Year
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT., 50c-$1.00 EVE., 50c, $1.00, $1.50
AN ARTKING GUILD PRESENTATION

POST APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS TONIGHT ONE WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30
KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
WITH SONGS BY IRVING BERLIN
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED NOW— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

ADV APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS TONIGHT 8:30 THIS WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30
KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
THE SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
Acclaimed by All Critics as the Best Picture of the Year
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c, $1.00-$1.50
AN ARTKING GUILD PRESENTATION

GLOBE APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS TONIGHT AT 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30
KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
THE SENSATION OF TWO CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
Acclaimed by All Critics as the Best Picture of the Year
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES — NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION
SUN. AFT. APRIL 20 AT 3:30 ROLAND HAYES
MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS PAYABLE TO SYMPHONY HALL

HER APR 7

SYMPHONY HALL
Opens TONIGHT at 8:30 ONE WEEK ONLY
TWICE DAILY 2:30—8:30
KING VIDOR'S PRIZE FILM
THE SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
Acclaimed by Critics as the Best Picture of the Year
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW THE SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTURES"
ALL SEATS RESERVED NOW— MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION

AMER APR 7

Symphony Hall
BEGINNING MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 7
ONE WEEK ONLY
Twice Daily—2.30-8.30
KING VIDOR'S daring romance of Negro life
Prize Film of the Year
AN ARTKINO GUILD PRESENTATION
HALLELUJAH

With Songs by IRVING BERLIN

Starring DANIEL HAYNES
The Sensation in "GREEN PASTURES"

M-G-M All Talking Singing Dancing Film Triumph
ALL SEATS RESERVED
Mat. 50c, $1—Eve. 50c $1, $1.50

FENISH ADVOCATE APR 4

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY 2:30-8:30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY—2:30-8:30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All-Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

TRAV APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY—2.30-8.30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
NOW PLAYING—MAT. 2:30—EVE. 8:30
THIIS WEEK ONLY
THE SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELU
A M-G-M ALL-TALKING-SINGING-
Really is all the critics say abo
STARRING DANIEL HAYNES—NOW
SENSATION IN "GREEN PASTUR
ALL SEATS RESERVED NOW— MAT. 50c
EVE. 50c-$1.

AMER APR

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS WEEK ONLY—2:30-8:30
AMERICA'S PRIZE FILM SENSATION OF 2 CONTINENTS
HALLELUJAH
A M-G-M All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
An Artkino Guild Presentation
All Seats Reserved
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

AMER APR 9

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST 3 DAYS—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 10

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST 3 DAYS—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 10

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST 3 DAYS—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 10

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST 3 DAYS—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

AMER SCENIC APR 10

SYMPHONY HALL
Today-Tom'w Only—2.30-8.30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 11
[172]

TODAY-TOM'W ONLY—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 11

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY-TOM'W ONLY—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 11

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
MAT. 50c-$1.00 EVE. 50-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

TRAV APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2:30-8:30
HALLELUJAH
All Talking-Singing-Dancing Picture
Mat. 50c-$1.00—Eve. 50c-$1.00-$1.50
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

AMER APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
Easter Sunday at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE APR 13.

CUT-OUT

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2.30-8.30
HALLELUJAH
ALL TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
EASTER SUNDAY at 3.30

LAST APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

TRANS APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
LAST APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

POST APR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
LAST APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

GLOBE APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2, $2.50

HER APR 16

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

GLOBE APR 16

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

POST APR 16

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
TICKETS $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

TRANS APR 16

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

HER APR 17

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

POST APR 17

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

TRANS APR 17

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

HER APR 18

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

GLOBE APR 18

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

POST APR 18

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

GLOBE APR 19

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

POST APR 19

TOMORROW at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN — Overture to Leonore No. 3 BEETHOVEN — Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS — Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
At 4 O'Clock
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

TRANS APRIL 21

SYMPHONY HALL
Today at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

SIXTH CONCERT TUES., APRIL 22, at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN—Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
AT 4 O'CLOCK
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

OPENS WED., MAY 7, at 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER,
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1—1st Balcony $1, 75c
Entire Second Balcony Reserved 50c
ON SALE ONE WEEK IN ADVANCE

HER APR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
Today at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

SIXTH CONCERT TUES., APRIL 22, at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN—Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
AT 4 O'CLOCK
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS

Opens Wed., May 7, at 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1—1st Balcony $1, 75c
Entire Second Balcony Reserved 50c
ON SALE ONE WEEK IN ADVANCE

GLOBE APR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

SIXTH CONCERT TUES., APRIL 22, at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN — Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24, AT 4 O'CLOCK
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

OPENS WED., MAY 7, at 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER,
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1—1st Balcony $1, 75c
Entire Second Balcony Reserved 50c
ON SALE ONE WEEK IN ADVANCE

POST APR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS WED. AT 8:15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 5 [173]

SYMPHONY HALL
SIXTH CONCERT TODAY AT 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN—Overture to Leonore No. 3 BEETHOVEN—Pastorale—symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS

GLOBE APR 22

SYMPHONY HALL
SIXTH TUES. TODAY AT 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN — Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

POST APR 22

SYMPHONY HALL
SIXTH TUESDAY—TODAY at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN—Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

HER APR 22

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3.30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

SIXTH CONCERT TUES., APRIL 22, at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN — Overture to Leonore No. 3 BEETHOVEN — Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS — Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
At 4 O'Clock
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

OPENS WED., MAYY 7, at 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1—1st Balcony $1, 75c
Entire Second Balcony 50c
ON SALE MONDAY, APRIL 21

TRANS APR 18

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
45th Season
OF
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
OPENS MAY 7
Wednesday Eve at 8.15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2nd BALCONY 50c

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
45th Season
OF
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY EVE, at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2ND BALCONY 50c

TRANS APR 26

SYMPHONY HALL
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
45th Season
of
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
Opens May 7
WEDNESDAY EVE, at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1ST BALCONY $1.00-75c
2ND BALCONY 50c

MOV APR 26

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OF
45th Season
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
OPENS MAY 7
Wednesday Eve, at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2nd BALCONY 50c

POST APR 27

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS WED. AT 8:15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 5

CUT-OUT

SYMPHONY HALL
LAST TIMES TODAY—2.30-8.30
HALLELUJAH
ALL TALKING-SINGING-DANCING PICTURE
EASTER SUNDAY at 3.30

[redacted]

LAST APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

TRANS APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
LAST APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

POST APR 3

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
LAST APPEARAACE THIS SEASON

HER APR 13

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY at 3:30 .
ROLAND HAYES
LAST APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

GLOBE APR 12

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER APR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

POST APR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS APR 15

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2, $2.50

HER APR 16

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

GLOBE APR 16.

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

POST APR 16

SYMPHONY HALL
EASTER SUNDAY at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
TICKETS $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

TRANS APR 16.

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

HER APR 17

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

GLOBE APR 17

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

TRANS APR 17

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

HER APR 18

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

GLOBE APR 18

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

POST APR 18

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

GLOBE APR 19

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

POST APR 19

TOMORROW at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN — Overture to Leonore No. 3 BEETHOVEN — Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS — Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
At 4 O'Clock
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

TRANS APRIL 21

SYMPHONY HALL
Today at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

SIXTH CONCERT TUES., APRIL 22, at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN—Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
AT 4 O'CLOCK
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS
OPENS WED., MAY 7, at 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER,
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1—1st Balcony $1, 75c
Entire Second Balcony Reserved 50c
ON SALE ONE WEEK IN ADVANCE

HER APR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
Today at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

SIXTH CONCERT TUES., APRIL 22, at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN—Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
AT 4 O'CLOCK
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS
Opens Wed., May 7, at 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1—1st Balcony $1, 75c
Entire Second Balcony Reserved 50c
ON SALE ONE WEEK IN ADVANCE

GLOBE APR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

SIXTH CONCERT TUES., APRIL 22, at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN — Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24, AT 4 O'CLOCK
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS
OPENS WED., MAY 7, at 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER,
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1—1st Balcony $1, 75c
Entire Second Balcony Reserved 50c
ON SALE ONE WEEK IN ADVANCE

POST APR 20

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS WED. AT 8:15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 5 [173]

SYMPHONY HALL
SIXTH CONCERT TODAY AT 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN—Overture to Leonore No. 3 BEETHOVEN—Pastorale—symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS

GLOBE APR 22

SYMPHONY HALL
SIXTH TUES. TODAY AT 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN — Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

POST APR 22

SYMPHONY HALL
SIXTH TUESDAY—TODAY at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN—Overture to Leonore No. 3. BEETHOVEN—Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS—Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS

HER APR 22

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3.30
Roland Hayes
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50

SIXTH CONCERT TUES., APRIL 22, at 3
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BEETHOVEN — Overture to Leonore No. 3 BEETHOVEN — Pastorale Symphony. BRAHMS — Symphony No. 4.
WED., APRIL 23—THURS., APRIL 24
At 4 O'Clock
YOUNG PEOPLES' CONCERTS
OPENS WED., MAYY 7, at 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1—1st Balcony $1, 75c
Entire Second Balcony 50c
ON SALE MONDAY, APRIL 21

TRANS APR 18

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
45th Season
OF
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY EVE, at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2ND BALCONY 50c

APR 21

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
45th Season
of
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
Opens May 7
WEDNESDAY EVE, at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1ST BALCONY $1.00-75c
2ND BALCONY 50c

APR 21

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OF
45th Season
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
OPENS MAY 7
Wednesday Eve, at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2nd BALCONY 50c

APR 21

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS WED. AT 8:15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 5

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
45th Season
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
OPENS MAY 7
Wednesday Eve. at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2ND BALCONY 50c

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

TRAV APR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

HER APR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

HER MAY 1

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
of the 45th Season
NEXT WED. at 8:15
POPS
ORCHESTRA OF 80 PLAYERS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1.00
1st Balcony $1, 75c
2nd Balcony 50c
Admissions (limited to seating capacity) and reserved seats—on sale two weeks in advance.

TRANS MAY 3

GLOBE APR 27

SYMPHONY HALL
45th Season
of
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY EVE, at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2ND BALCONY 50c

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

GLOBE APR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
45th Season
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Opens May 7
Wednesday at 8:15

POST APR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
45th Season
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Opens May 7
Wednesday at 8:15

MON MAY 1

SYMPHONY HALL
Opening Night
OF THE 45th SEASON
NEXT WED. at 8:15
POPS
ORCHESTRA OF 80 PLAYERS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1.00
1st Balcony $1, 75c
2nd Balcony 50c
Admissions (limited to seating capacity) and reserved seats—on sale two weeks in advance.

HER MAY 4

ADV APR 27

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

AMER APR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

TRANS MAY 1

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
OF THE 45th SEASON
NEXT WED. at 8:15
POPS
ORCHESTRA OF 80 PLAYERS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1.00
1st Balcony $1, 75c
2nd Balcony 50c
Admissions (limited to seating capacity) and reserved seats—on sale two weeks in advance.

TRAV MAY 3

SYMPHONY HALL
45th Season
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Opens May 7
Wednesday at 8:15

MON APR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

AMER MAY 1

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
OF THE 45th SEASON
NEXT WED. at 8:15
POPS
ORCHESTRA OF 80 PLAYERS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1.00
1st Balcony $1, 75c
2nd Balcony 50c
Admissions (limited to seating capacity) and reserved seats on sale two weeks in advance.

AMER MAY 3

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

TRANS APR 30

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

POST MAY 1

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS TOMORROW AT 8:15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 6

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS TOMORROW AT 8:15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 6

HER APR 27

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS WED. AT 8:15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS WED. at 8.15
45th SEASON OF
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TICKETS $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 5

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS TOMORROW AT 8:15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 6

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
OF THE 45th SEASON
NEXT WED. at 8:15
POPS
ORCHESTRA OF 80 PLAYERS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1.00
1st Balcony $1, 75c
2nd Balcony 50c
Admission (limited to seating capacity) and reserved seats on sale two weeks in advance.

POST MAY 4

[174]

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
45th Season
OF BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
OPENS MAY 7
Wednesday Eve. at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2ND BALCONY 50c

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY at 8:15

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
OF THE 45th SEASON
NEXT WED.
at 8:15
POPS
ORCHESTRA OF 80 PLAYERS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Table Seats $1.00
1st Balcony $1, 75c
2nd Balcony 50c
Admissions (limited to seating capacity) and reserved seats on sale two weeks in advance.

ADV MAY 4

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENS TOMORROW AT 8.15
45th Season of
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 6

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

HER MAY 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

GLOBE MAY 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

POST MAY 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

TRANS MAY 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

AMER MAY 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

HER MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

POST MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

GLOBE MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

AMER MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

GLOBE MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

POST MAY 4

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

TRAV MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

TRANS MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

MON MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

AMER MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Jeden Abend um 8.15 Uhr
POPS
Orchester von Symphonie-Spielern
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Dirigent
Populäre Programme—Erfrischungen
Eintritt 25c.—$1.00 Keine Steuer

GERMANIA MAY 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

POST MAY 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

AMER MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

TRAV MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

GLOBE MAY 4

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

HER MAY 10

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

GLOBE MAY 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

Record MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

HER MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

TRAV MAY 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

AMER MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

MON MAY 10

SYMPHONY HALL
2nd Week Opens
MONDAY AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN—TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale Two Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 11

SYMPHONY HALL
2nd WEEK OPENS
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN—TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 11

SYMPHONY HALL
2nd WEEK OPENS
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN—TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 11

SYMPHONY HALL
2ND WEEK OPENS
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN—TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 11

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 12

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 12

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert, May 18
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
Russian Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert, May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 12

SYMPHONY HALL
Tonight at 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 12

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 12

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 12

SYMPHONY HALL
2ND WEEK OPENS
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN—TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 11

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HARV MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert, May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Tonight at 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
2ND WEEK OPENS
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN—TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT, MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

ADV MAY 11

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 14

[175]

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert, May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT TOMORROW
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
MONDAY HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT TOMORROW
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
MONDAY—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY AT 8.15

N.E. News May 1

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
WED. AT 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
Table Seats $1.00
1st. Balcony $1.00, 75c
2nd. Balcony 50c

CRIMSON MAY 1

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
45th SEASON
of
Boston's Unique Concerts
Opens Tomorrow
Evening at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2nd BALCONY 50c
B. U. Night — June 16

B.U. News MAY 6

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

Record Trade MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
45th SEASON
of
Boston's Unique Concerts
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2nd BALCONY 50c
B. U. Night — June 16

B.U. News MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
WED. AT 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
Table Seats $1.00
1st. Balcony $1.00, 75c
2nd. Balcony 50c

CRIMSON MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8.30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
MONDAY, MAY 19
HARVARD NIGHT
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

CRIMSON MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program Tomorrow
MONDAY—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT TOMORROW
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
MONDAY—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY
PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8.30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT, MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT, MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 18

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 18

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 14

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 15

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st Sunday Concert May 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT MAY 18
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 16

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT TOMORROW
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
MONDAY HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT TOMORROW
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
MONDAY—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
45th SEASON
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
OPENS MAY 7
WEDNESDAY AT 8.15

M.E. News May 1

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
WED. AT 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
Table Seats $1.00
1st. Balcony $1.00, 75c
2nd. Balcony 50c

CRIMSON MAY 1

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
45th SEASON
of
Boston's Unique Concerts
Opens Tomorrow
Evening at 8:15
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2nd BALCONY 50c
B. U. Night — June 16

B.U. News MAY 6

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets 2 Weeks in Advance

Record Trops MAY 9

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
45th SEASON
of
Boston's Unique Concerts
TABLE SEATS $1.00
1st BALCONY $1.00-75c
2nd BALCONY 50c
B. U. Night — June 16

B.U. News MAY 13

SYMPHONY HALL
OPENING NIGHT
WED. AT 8.15
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Conductor
Table Seats $1.00
1st. Balcony $1.00, 75c
2nd. Balcony 50c

CRIMSON MAY 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8.30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
MONDAY, MAY 19
HARVARD NIGHT
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

CRIMSON MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1st SUNDAY CONCERT
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program Tomorrow
MONDAY—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

Post MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
1ST SUNDAY CONCERT TOMORROW
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
MONDAY—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY
PROGRAM
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8.30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
HARVARD NIGHT MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT, MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Russian-Tchaikovsky Program
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
TOMORROW
HARVARD NIGHT, MAY 19
REQUEST NIGHT, MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

AJV MAY 18

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—HARVARD NIGHT
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 19

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 21

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 21

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 21

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 21

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 21

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 21

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 22

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 22

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 22

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 22

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 22

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 22

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 22

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 22

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 23

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 23

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 23

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 23

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 23

SYMPHONY HALL, TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 23

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 8:30
Arthur Fiedler
CONDUCTOR
POPS
Request Night May 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance — $1.00, 75c, 50c

JEWISH ADVOCATE MAY 23

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 24

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, CONDUCTOR
TICKETS $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 24

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 24

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
BOSTON'S
UNIQUE CONCERTS
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 24

SYMPHONY HALL
POPS Jeden Abend um 8.15 Uhr
Orchester von Symphonie-Spielern
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Dirigent
Populäre Programme—Erfrischungen
Eintritt 25c.—$1.00 Keine Steuer

GERMANIA MAY 24

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
BOSTON'S
UNIQUE CONCERTS
REQUEST NIGHT, MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
BOSTON'S
UNIQUE CONCERTS
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
POPS
BOSTON'S
UNIQUE CONCERTS
REQUEST NIGHT MAY 29
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 26

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 26

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 26

SYMPHONY HALL — TONIGHT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00—75c—50c

POST MAY 26

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 26

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 27

SYMPHONY HALL — TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 27

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 27

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 27

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 27

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c.

GLOBE MAY 27

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 28

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

POST MAY 28

SYMPHONY HALL—REQUEST NIGHT
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00—75c—50c

POST MAY 29

SYMPHONY HALL—REQUEST NIGHT
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

TRAV MAY 29

SYMPHONY HALL
REQUEST NIGHT
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

AMER MAY 29

SYMPHONY HALL—REQUEST NIGHT
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

GLOBE MAY 29

Symphony Hall—Tonight at 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

MON MAY 29

SYMPHONY HALL—REQUEST NIGHT
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
Tickets $1.00

HER MAY 29

SYMPHONY HALL
REQUEST NIGHT
BOSTON'S
UNIQUE CONCERTS
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Tickets on Sale 2 Weeks in Advance
$1.00, 75c, 50c

TRANS MAY 29

SYMPHONY HALL
5th WEEK OF
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS
POPS
ARTHUR
FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

HER MAY 30

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c.

GLOBE MAY 30

CUT-OUT

SYMPHONY HALL
5th WEEK OF
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS

POPS

ARTHUR
FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

Post May 30

SYMPHONY HALL
5th WEEK OF
BOSTON'S UNIQUE CONCERTS

POPS

ARTHUR
FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

Traveler May 31

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c.

SYMPHONY HALL—Tonight 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c.

Globe May 31

American May 31

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00—75c—50c

SYMPHONY HALL
5th Week of
Boston's Unique Concerts

POPS

ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

Post May 31

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets, $1.00, 75c, 50c

Herald May 31

Monitor May 31

SYMPHONY HALL — TONIGHT AT 8.30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

Trans June 3

SYMPHONY HALL
5th WEEK OF BOSTON'S
UNIQUE CONCERTS

POPS

ARTHUR
FIEDLER, Conductor
TONIGHT—Special Concert for CENTENNIAL LEGION
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

American June 3

[redacted]

Herald June 1

Post June 4

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT, 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

Post June 3

SYMPHONY HALL—TONIGHT 8:30
POPS
ARTHUR FIEDLER—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

Post June 2

SYMPHONY HALL
FIFTH WEEK OF BOSTON'S
UNIQUE CONCERTS

POPS

ARTHUR FIEDLER
CONDUCTOR
Tickets $1.00, 75c, 50c

Transcript May 31

BLANK PAGE

CUT-OUT

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

SYMPHONY HALL
Friday Evening, Oct. 10, at 2
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE OCT 8

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
Movies of Sublime Beauty
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
'Kashmir and the Taj Mahal'
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

POST OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

TRAV OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Mahal"
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRANS OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
with Movies of Sublime Beauty
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
With Movies of Sublime Beauty
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Mahal"
With Movies of Sublime Beauty
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 10

[182]

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve.. Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRANS OCT 10

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
SUN. AFT., OCT. 19, AT 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
Capt. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

Monitor OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Aft., at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 & 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
NOV. 23—Dec. 14—Feb. 1
FEB. 15, MAR. 15, APR. 12, at 3:30
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—HAYES
THOMAS—GIESEKING
Yelli Daranyi—Pauline Danforth
Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board

HER OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano.
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
NOV. 23—Dec. 14—Feb. 1
FEB. 15, MAR. 15, APR. 12 at 3:30
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—HAYES
THOMAS—GIESEKING
Yelli Daranyi—Pauline Danforth
Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
BIG GAME HUNTER AND ADVENTURER
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

HER OCT 13

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

HER OCT 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8.30
LECTURE — MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
BIG GAME HUNTER AND ADVENTURER
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

SYMPHONY HALL

THURS. EVE. OCT. 16 AT 8.30	REAR ADMIRAL Richard E. Byrd "FLYING TO SOUTH POLE" (in person) Benefit, "Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children"
SUN. AFT. OCT. 19 AT 3.30	KREISLER	OPENING SUN. AFT. CONCERT
TUES. EVE. OCT. 21 AT 8.30	ARGENTINA New Dances and Costumes
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3.30	WINIFRED CHRISTIE	Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
SUN. AFT. NOV. 2 AT 3.30	HOFMANN	PIANIST

BRANSON DeCOU—DREAM PICTURES
Three Sunday Evenings—Oct. 19, Oct. 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND — National PARKS — Beautiful JAPAN
COURSE TICKETS NOW ON SALE AT BOX OFFICE—$3, $2, $1

SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
Nov. 23, Dec. 14, Feb. 1, Feb. 15, Mar. 15, Apr. 12, at 3.30
Jascha HEIFETZ — Florence AUSTRAL — Roland HAYES
John Charles THOMAS
Yelli D'ARANYI — Walter GIESEKING — Pauline DANFORTH
Season Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board—$7.50, $10, $12
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL

NEXT SUN. OCT. 19 AT 3:30	KREISLER	OPENING SUN. AFT. CONCERT
TUES. EVE. OCT. 21 AT 8:30	ARGENTINA New Dances and Costumes
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3:30	WINIFRED CHRISTIE	Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano

BRANSON DeCOU—DREAM PICTURES
Three Sunday Evenings—Oct. 19, Oct. 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND — National PARKS — Beautiful JAPAN
COURSE TICKETS NOW ON SALE AT BOX OFFICE—$3, $2, $1

SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
Nov. 23, Dec. 14, Feb. 1, Feb. 15, Mar. 15, Apr. 12, at 3:30
Jascha HEIFETZ — Florence AUSTRAL — Roland HAYES
John Charles THOMAS
Yelli D'ARANYI — Walter GIESEKING — Pauline DANFORTH
Season Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board—$7.50, $10, $12
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST OCT 12

SYMPHONY HALL

THURS. EVE. OCT. 16 AT 8:30	REAR ADMIRAL Richard E. Byrd "FLYING TO SOUTH POLE" (in person) Benefit, "Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children"
NEXT SUN. OCT. 19 AT 3:30	KREISLER	OPENING SUN. AFT. CONCERT
TUES. EVE. OCT. 21 AT 8:30	ARGENTINA New Dances and Costumes
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3:30	WINIFRED CHRISTIE	Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
SUN. AFT. NOV. 2 AT 3:30	HOFMANN	PIANIST

BRANSON DeCOU—DREAM PICTURES
Three Sunday Evenings—Oct. 19, Oct. 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND — National PARKS — Beautiful JAPAN
COURSE TICKETS NOW ON SALE AT BOX OFFICE—$3, $2, $1

SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
Nov. 23, Dec. 14, Feb. 1, Feb. 15, Mar. 15, Apr. 12, at 3:30
Jascha HEIFETZ — Florence AUSTRAL — Roland HAYES
John Charles THOMAS
Yelli D'ARANYI — Walter GIESEKING — Pauline DANFORTH
Season Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board—$7.50, $10, $12
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER OCT 12

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8.30
LECTURE — MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
BIG GAME HUNTER AND ADVENTURER
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRAV OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

AMER OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Friday Evening, Oct. 10, at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE OCT 8

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
Movies of Sublime Beauty
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
'Kashmir and the Taj Mahal'
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

POST OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

TRAV OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Mahal"
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRANS OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
with Movies of Sublime Beauty
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
With Movies of Sublime Beauty
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8
CAPT. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Mahal"
With Movies of Sublime Beauty
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 10

[182]

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve.. Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW PANCES AND COSTUMES

TRANS OCT 10

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
SUN. AFT., OCT. 19, AT 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow Evening at 8
Capt. JOHN NOEL
"Kashmir and the Taj Maha"
MOVIES OF SUBLIME BEAUTY
Benefit, "Camp Fire Girls"
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

MONITOR OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Aft., at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 & 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
NOV. 23—Dec. 14—Feb. 1
FEB. 15, MAR. 15, APR. 12, at 3:30
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—HAYES
THOMAS—GIESEKING
Yelli Daranyi—Pauline Danforth
Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board

HER OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19 at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Sun. Aft., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
BIG GAME HUNTER AND ADVENTURER
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

HER OCT 13

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

HER OCT 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

MON OCT. 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano.
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
NOV. 23—Dec. 14—Feb. 1
FEB. 15, MAR. 15, APR. 12 at 3:30
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—HAYES
THOMAS—GIESEKING
Yelli Daranyi—Pauline Danforth
Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board

ADV OCT 12

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
BIG GAME HUNTER AND ADVENTURER
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

HER OCT 13

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER

HER OCT 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun. Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
NOV. 23—Dec. 14—Feb. 1
FEB. 15, MAR. 15, APR. 12 at 3:30
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—HAYES
THOMAS—GIESEKING
Yelli Daranyi—Pauline Danforth
Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board

TRAV OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
THURS. EVE. OCT. 16 AT 8.30 — REAR ADMIRAL Richard E. Byrd "FLYING TO SOUTH POLE" (in person)
Benefit, "Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children"
SUN. AFT. OCT. 19 AT 3.30 — KREISLER — OPENING SUN. AFT. CONCERT
TUES. EVE. OCT. 21 AT 8.30 — ARGENTINA — New Dances and Costumes
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3.30 — WINIFRED CHRISTIE — Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
SUN. AFT. NOV. 2 AT 3.30 — HOFMANN PIANIST
BRANSON DeCOU—DREAM PICTURES
Three Sunday Evenings—Oct. 19, Oct. 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND — National PARKS — Beautiful JAPAN
COURSE TICKETS NOW ON SALE AT BOX OFFICE—$3, $2, $1
SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
Nov. 23, Dec. 14, Feb. 1, Feb. 15, Mar. 15, Apr. 12, at 3.30
Jascha HEIFETZ — Florence AUSTRAL — Roland HAYES
John Charles THOMAS
Yelli D'ARANYI — Walter GIESEKING — Pauline DANFORTH
Season Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board—$7.50, $10, $12
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS OCT 11

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUN. OCT. 19 AT 3:30 — KREISLER — OPENING SUN. AFT. CONCERT
TUES. EVE. OCT. 21 AT 8:30 — ARGENTINA — New Dances and Costumes
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3:30 — WINIFRED CHRISTIE — Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
BRANSON DeCOU—DREAM PICTURES
Three Sunday Evenings—Oct. 19, Oct. 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND — National PARKS — Beautiful JAPAN
COURSE TICKETS NOW ON SALE AT BOX OFFICE—$3, $2, $1
SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
Nov. 23, Dec. 14, Feb. 1, Feb. 15, Mar. 15, Apr. 12, at 3:30
Jascha HEIFETZ — Florence AUSTRAL — Roland HAYES
John Charles THOMAS
Yelli D'ARANYI — Walter GIESEKING — Pauline DANFORTH
Season Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board—$7.50, $10, $12
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

POST OCT 12

SYMPHONY HALL
THURS. EVE. OCT. 16 AT 8:30 — REAR ADMIRAL Richard E. Byrd "FLYING TO SOUTH POLE" (in person)
Benefit, "Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children"
NEXT SUN. OCT. 19 AT 3:30 — KREISLER — OPENING SUN. AFT. CONCERT
TUES. EVE. OCT. 21 AT 8:30 — ARGENTINA — New Dances and Costumes
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3:30 — WINIFRED CHRISTIE — Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
SUN. AFT. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST
BRANSON DeCOU—DREAM PICTURES
Three Sunday Evenings—Oct. 19, Oct. 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND — National PARKS — Beautiful JAPAN
COURSE TICKETS NOW ON SALE AT BOX OFFICE—$3, $2, $1
SUNDAY CONCERT COURSE
Nov. 23, Dec. 14, Feb. 1, Feb. 15, Mar. 15, Apr. 12, at 3:30
Jascha HEIFETZ — Florence AUSTRAL — Roland HAYES
John Charles THOMAS
Yelli D'ARANYI — Walter GIESEKING — Pauline DANFORTH
Season Tickets at Automatic Subscription Board—$7.50, $10, $12
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER OCT 12

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8.30
LECTURE — MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
BIG GAME HUNTER AND ADVENTURER
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

OCT 12.

SYMPHONY HALL
Sun Aft., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRAV OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun. Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
Big Game Hunter and Adventurer
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

GLOBE OCT 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
BIG GAME HUNTER AND ADVENTURER
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

TRANS OCT 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Sun. Aft., Oct. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano

TRANS OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRAV OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
Rear Admiral
RICHARD E.
BYRD
"Flying to South Pole"
Benefit Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children
Next Sun. Aft. at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50

HER OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
REAR ADMIRAL
RICHARD E.
BYRD
"FLYING TO SOUTH POLE"
Benefit: Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRANS OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

AMER OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 17

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 17

SYMPHONY HALL
Sunday at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50

TRANS OCT 17

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

AMER OCT 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
KREISLER
TOMORROW EVE. at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
KREISLER
TOMORORW EVE. at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
KREISLER
TOMORROW EVE. at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
KREISLER
TOMORROW EVE. at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
New Dances and Costumes
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
Lecture—Motion Pictures
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

MON OCT 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY 3:30 | KREISLER
TONIGHT AT 8:15 | BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures GLORIOUS SWITZERLAND NEXT SUN.—OUR NATIONAL PARKS
NEXT TUES. OCT. 21 AT 8:30 | ARGENTINA SPAIN'S incomparable dancer returned to her ardent AMERICAN public upon a crescendo of enthusiasm. —N. Y. Herald-Tribune, Oct. 15
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3:30 | WINIFRED CHRISTIE Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8:30 | KERMIT ROOSEVELT LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES "HUNTING IN ASIA" Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 | HOFMANN PIANIST
COMING! CLARE CLAIRBERT

HER OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY 3:30 | KREISLER
TONIGHT AT 8:15 | BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures GLORIOUS SWITZERLAND NEXT SUN.—OUR NATIONAL PARKS
NEXT TUES. OCT. 21 AT 8:30 | ARGENTINA Spain's incomparable dancer returned to her ardent American public upon a crescendo of enthusiasm. N. Y. Herald-Tribune Oct. 15
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3:30 | WINIFRED CHRISTIE Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8:30 | KERMIT ROOSEVELT LECTURE, MOTION PICTURES—"HUNTING IN ASIA" Benefit Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 | HOFMANN PIANIST
COMING! CLARE CLAIRBERT

POST OCT 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TONIGHT at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
TUES. NEXT, OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26 AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

ADV OCT 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TONIGHT at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, at 3:30
HOFMANN

GLOBE OCT 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ARGENTINA

P-LOBE OCT 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ARGENTINA

TRANS OCT 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
ARGENTINA

POST OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARGENTINA

GLOBE OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ARGENTINA

TOMORROW At 8:30

HER OCT 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ARGENTINA

POST OCT 20

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
Big Game Hunter and Adventurer
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

GLOBE OCT 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
3 Sun. Eves.—Oct. 19 and 26, Nov. 2
Glorious SWITZERLAND
NATIONAL PARKS
Beautiful JAPAN
Course Sale now $3, $2, $1
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
BIG GAME HUNTER AND ADVENTURER
Auspices: Associate Nursery School

TRANS OCT 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50

TRANS OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c, $1.00, $1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Sun. Aft., Oct. 26, at 3.30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano

TRANS OCT 15

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRAV OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
Rear Admiral
RICHARD E.
BYRD
"Flying to South Pole"
Benefit Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children
Next Sun. Aft. at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50

HER OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
REAR ADMIRAL
RICHARD E.
BYRD
"FLYING TO SOUTH POLE"
Benefit: Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3:30
KREISLER
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 6

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 19, at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRANS OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 16

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 17

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

TRAV OCT 17

SYMPHONY HALL
Sunday at 3.30
KREISLER
Tues. Eve., Oct. 21, at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
Sun. Eve., Oct. 19, at 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50

TRANS OCT 17

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

AMER OCT 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
KREISLER
TOMORROW EVE. at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

POST OCT 5

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
KREISLER
TOMORORW EVE. at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
TUES. EVE., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

GLOBE OCT 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
KREISLER
TOMORROW EVE. at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES

HER OCT 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
KREISLER
TOMORROW EVE. at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
New Dances and Costumes
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
Lecture—Motion Pictures
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

MON OCT 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY 3:30 | KREISLER
TONIGHT AT 8:15 | BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures GLORIOUS SWITZERLAND NEXT SUN.—OUR NATIONAL PARKS
NEXT TUES. OCT. 21 AT 8:30 | ARGENTINA SPAIN'S incomparable dancer returned to her ardent AMERICAN public upon a crescendo of enthusiasm. —N. Y. Herald-Tribune, Oct. 15
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3:30 | WINIFRED CHRISTIE Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8:30 | KERMIT ROOSEVELT LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES "HUNTING IN ASIA" Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 | HOFMANN PIANIST
COMING! CLARE CLAIRBERT

HER OCT 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY 3:30 | KREISLER
TONIGHT AT 8:15 | BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures GLORIOUS SWITZERLAND NEXT SUN.—OUR NATIONAL PARKS
NEXT TUES. OCT. 21 AT 8:30 | ARGENTINA Spain's incomparable dancer returned to her ardent American public upon a crescendo of enthusiasm. N. Y. Herald-Tribune Oct. 15
SUN. AFT. OCT. 26 AT 3:30 | WINIFRED CHRISTIE Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8:30 | KERMIT ROOSEVELT LECTURE, MOTION PICTURES—"HUNTING IN ASIA" Benefit Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 | HOFMANN PIANIST
COMING! CLARE CLAIRBERT

POST OCT 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TONIGHT at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
TUES. NEXT, OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26 AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

ADV OCT 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
KREISLER
TONIGHT at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
GLORIOUS
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEW DANCES AND COSTUMES
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, at 3:30
HOFMANN

GLOBE OCT 19

SYMPHONY HALL
ARGENTINA

TOMORROW At 8:30

HER OCT 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ARGENTINA

POST OCT 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8.30
ARGENTINA

TRANS OCT 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
ARGENTINA

POST OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARGENTINA

GLOBE OCT 21

CUT-OUT

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARGENTINA

TRAV OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEXT SUN., OCT. 26, AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano

MON OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
ARGENTINA

AMER OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEXT SUN., OCT. 26, AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

TRANS OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUN., OCT. 26 at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano
NEXT SUN. EVE., OCT. 26, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN
Sun. Aft., Nov. 9, at 3:30
CLARE CLAIRBERT
Great Coloratura Soprano

HER OCT 22

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 26 at 3:30
WINIFRED CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

GLOBE OCT 22

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUN., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor double-keyboard piano
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

POST OCT 22

SYMPHONY HALL
This Sunday at 3.30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
This Sunday at 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
Sun. Aft., Nov. 2, at 3.30
HOFMANN

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 26, at 3.30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
Next Sun. Oct. 26, at 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
Sun. Aft., Nov. 2, at 3.30
HOFMANN
Sun. Aft., Nov. 9, at 3.30
CLARE CLAIRBERT

TRANS OCT 22

SYMPHONY HALL
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26 AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN
SUN. AFT., NOV. 9 AT 3:30
CLARE
CLAIRBERT
Coloratura Soprano
First Boston Appearance

CRIMSON OCT 24

Next Tues., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
NEXT SUN., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

HER OCT 25

THE enterprising ladies and gentlemen who are entitled to the degree of H. C.—which, in case you don't know it, means Haute ...urier—are once again saying their ...pieces ...

Next Sun., Nov. 2, at 3:30
HOFFMANN

GLOBE OCT 25

...to learn the consensus of these win...enings, but some suspicion of what ...will show for evenings is presented ...n today. These evening models are ...handiwork of Lucien Lelong, to ... we are relinquishing our pulpit for ... The dapper Lucien always has a

NEXT SUN., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

POST OCT 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
Our NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Next Tues., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
NEXT SUN., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

TRAV OCT 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
TOMORROW
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 28, AT 8:...
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

MON OCT 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8.30
WINIFRED CHRISTIE
Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano

TOMORROW AT 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
NEXT SUN.—BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

NEXT TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8.30
KERMIT ROOSEVELT
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES "HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 8.30
HOFMANN PIANIST

TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8.30
PRINCE ACHMED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler
Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 8.30
CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURSDAY EVE., NOV. 20, AT 8.30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

Six Monday Eve. Concerts—Nov. 10, Dec. 15, Jan. 26, Feb. 16, Mar. 16, Apr. 27
Six Tuesday Aft. Concerts—Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, Feb. 24, Mar. 10, Apr. 11
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS AVAILABLE AT SUBSCRIPTION OFFICE
COMING! NOV. 16 DON COSSACKS

TRANS OCT 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
WINIFRED CHRISTIE
Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano

TONIGHT AT 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
NEXT SUN.—BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

NEXT TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8:30
KERMIT ROOSEVELT
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES—"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 8:30
HOFMANN PIANIST

TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30
PRINCE ACHMED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 8:30
CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURSDAY EVE., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

Six Monday Eve. Concerts—Nov. 10, Dec. 15, Jan. 26, Feb. 16, Mar. 16, Apr. 27
Six Tuesday Aft. Concerts—Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, Feb. 24, Mar. 10, Apr. 11
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS AVAILABLE AT SUBSCRIPTION OFFICE
COMING! NOV. 16 DON COSSACKS

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
HOFMANN
Tuesday Evg., Nov. 4, at 8:30
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
"PRINCE ACHMED"

An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER.
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House

ADV OCT 26

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

TRANS OCT 27

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Lecture—Motion Pictures
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
BENEFIT: ASSOCIATE NURSERY SCHOOL
Next Sun., Nov. 2, at 3:30
HOFMANN

GLOBE OCT 28

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. EVE., NOV. 2, AT 8:30
HOFMANN

POST OCT 28

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8.30
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
"PRINCE ACHMED"

An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER.
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House
NEXT SUN., NOV. 9, at 3.30
CLAIRBERT

TRANS NOV 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
"PRINCE ACHMED"

An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House
NEXT SUN. NOV. 9, AT 3:30
CLAIRBERT

HER NOV 4

[184]

CUT-OUT

ER
ream Pictures
ZERLAND
NAL PARKS
INA her ardent enthusiasm.
K. Herald-Tribune, Oct. 15
Recital on
The Bechstein-Moor
Double-Keyboard Piano
SEVELT PICTURES
HUNTING IN ASIA" ery School
N PIANIST
AIRBERT

CT 19

ER
ream Pictures
ZERLAND
NAL PARKS
INA
her ardent American
Herald-Tribune Oct. 15
Recital on he Bechstein-Moor
ble-Keyboard Piano
EVELT UNTING IN ASIA"
School
N PIANIST
RBERT

HONY HALL
DAY at 3:30
EISLER
IGHT at 8:15
SON DeCOU
m Pictures
LORIOUS
TZERLAND
50c—$1.00—$1.50
., OCT. 21, at 8:30
ENTINA
ES AND COSTUMES
OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED RISTIE
the Bechstein-Moor
-Keyboard Piano
Oct. 28, at 8:30
—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
SEVELT
TING IN ASIA"
ociate Nursery School
., NOV. 2, at 3:30
FMANN

OCT 19

ONY HALL
OW AT 8:30
NTINA

OCT 20

HONY HALL
ROW at 8.30
NTINA

OCT 20

NY HALL
AT 8:30
NTINA

OCT 21

NY HALL
AT 8:30
NTINA

OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARGENTINA

TRAV OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
NEXT SUN., OCT. 26, AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor
Double-Keyboard Piano

MON OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
ARGENTINA

HAMER OCT 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEXT SUN., OCT. 26, AT 3.30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor
Double-Keyboard Piano
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

TRANS OCT 2

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUN., OCT. 26 at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor
double-keyboard piano
NEXT SUN. EVE., OCT. 26, at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN
Sun. Aft., Nov. 9, at 3:30
CLARE CLAIRBERT
Great Coloratura Soprano

HER OCT 22

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 26 at 3:30
WINIFRED CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor
double-keyboard piano
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

GLOBE OCT 25

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUN., OCT. 26, at 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor
double-keyboard piano.
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

POST OCT 22

SYMPHONY HALL
This Sunday at 3.30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor
Double-Keyboard Piano
This Sunday at 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
Sun. Aft., Nov. 2, at 3.30
HOFMANN

SYMPHONY HALL
Next Sun., Oct. 26, at 3.30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor
Double-Keyboard Piano
Next Sun. Oct. 26, at 8.15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Tues. Eve., Oct. 28, at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
Sun. Aft., Nov. 2, at 3.30
HOFMANN
Sun. Aft., Nov. 9, at 3.30
CLARE
CLAIRBERT

TRANS OCT 22

SYMPHONY HALL
SUN. AFT., OCT. 26 AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
Recital on the Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN
SUN. AFT., NOV. 9 AT 3:30
CLARE
CLAIRBERT
Coloratura Soprano
First Boston Appearance

CRIMSON OCT 24

ame Gle

Next Tues., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
NEXT SUN., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

HER OCT 25

HE enterprising ladies and gentlemen who are entitled to the degree of H. C.—which, in case you don't know it, means Haute urier—are once again saying their pieces. Th to learn the consensus of these winenings, but some suspicion of what will show for evenings is presented u today. These evening models are handiwork of Lucien Lelong, to we are relinquishing our pulpit for . The dapper Lucien always has a

Next Sun., Nov. 2, at 3:30
HOFFMANN

GLOBE OCT 25

NEXT SUN., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

POST OCT 25

TRANS OCT 24

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
Our NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
Next Tues., Oct. 28, at 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
NEXT SUN., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

TRAV OCT 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
WINIFRED
CHRISTIE
TOMORROW
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50
NEXT TUES., OCT. 28, AT 8:
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery Schoo
SUN. AFT., NOV. 2, AT 3:30
HOFMANN

MON OCT 25

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3.30	WINIFRED CHRISTIE — Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
TOMORROW AT 8.15	BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures OUR NATIONAL PARKS NEXT SUN.—BEAUTIFUL JAPAN
NEXT TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8.30	KERMIT ROOSEVELT LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES "HUNTING IN ASIA" Benefit: Associate Nursery School
NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 3.30	HOFMANN PIANIST
TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8.30	PRINCE ACHMED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House
SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3.30	CLARE CLAIRBERT THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURSDAY EVE., NOV. 20, AT 8.30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

Six Monday Eve. Concerts—Nov. 10, Dec. 15, Jan. 26, Feb. 16, Mar. 16, Apr. 27
Six Tuesday Aft. Concerts—Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, Feb. 24, Mar. 10, Apr. 11
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS AVAILABLE AT SUBSCRIPTION OFFICE
COMING! NOV. 16 DON COSSACKS

TRANS OCT 25

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30	WINIFRED CHRISTIE — Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano
TONIGHT AT 8:15	BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures OUR NATIONAL PARKS NEXT SUN.—BEAUTIFUL JAPAN
NEXT TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8:30	KERMIT ROOSEVELT LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES—"HUNTING IN ASIA" Benefit: Associate Nursery School
NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 3:30	HOFMANN PIANIST
TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30	PRINCE ACHMED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House
SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30	CLARE CLAIRBERT THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURSDAY EVE., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

Six Monday Eve. Concerts—Nov. 10, Dec. 15, Jan. 26, Feb. 16, Mar. 16, Apr. 27
Six Tuesday Aft. Concerts—Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, Feb. 24, Mar. 10, Apr. 11
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS AVAILABLE AT SUBSCRIPTION OFFICE
COMING! NOV. 16 DON COSSACKS

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
HOFMANN
Tuesday Evg., Nov. 4, at 8:30
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
"PRINCE ACHMED"
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER.
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House

ADV OCT 26

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 8.30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

TRANS OCT 27

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
Lecture—Motion Pictures
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
BENEFIT: ASSOCIATE NURSERY SCHOOL
Next Sun., Nov. 2, at 3:30
HOFMANN

GLOBE OCT 28

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES
KERMIT
ROOSEVELT
"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School
SUN. EVE., NOV. 2, AT 8:30
HOFMANN

POST OCT 28

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8.30
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
"PRINCE ACHMED"
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER.
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House
NEXT SUN., NOV. 9, at 3.30
CLAIRBERT

TRANS NOV 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
"PRINCE ACHMED"
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House
NEXT SUN. NOV. 9, AT 3:30
CLAIRBERT

HER NOV 4

[184]

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — WINIFRED CHRISTIE — Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano

TONIGHT AT 8:15 — BRANSON DeCOU Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
NEXT SUN.—BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

NEXT TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 at 8:30 — KERMIT ROOSEVELT
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES—"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30 — PRINCE ACHMED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler
Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30 — CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

Six Monday Eve. Concerts—Nov. 10, Dec. 15, Jan. 26, Feb. 16, Mar. 16, Apr. 27
Six Tuesday Aft. Concerts—Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, Feb. 24, Mar. 10, Apr. 11
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS AVAILABLE AT SUBSCRIPTION OFFICE
COMING! NOV. 16 DON COSSACKS

GLOBE OCT 26

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — WINIFRED CHRISTIE — Recital on The Bechstein-Moor Double-Keyboard Piano

TONIGHT AT 8:15 — BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
NEXT SUN.——BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

NEXT TUES. EVE. OCT. 28 AT 8:30 — KERMIT ROOSEVELT
LECTURE—MOTION PICTURES—"HUNTING IN ASIA"
Benefit: Associate Nursery School

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30 — PRINCE ACHMED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler
Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30 — CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

Six Monday Eve. Concerts—Nov. 10, Dec. 15, Jan. 26, Feb. 16, Mar. 16, Apr. 27
Six Tuesday Aft. Concerts—Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, Feb. 24, Mar. 10, Apr. 11
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS AVAILABLE AT SUBSCRIPTION OFFICE
COMING! NOV. 16 DON COSSACKS

POST OCT 26

SYMPHONY HALL

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

NEXT TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30 — PRINCE ACHMED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30 — CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

Six Monday Eve. Concerts—Nov. 10, Dec. 15, Jan. 26, Feb. 16, Mar. 16, Apr. 27
Six Tuesday Aft. Concerts—Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, Feb. 24, Mar. 10, Apr. 11
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS AVAILABLE AT SUBSCRIPTION OFFICE
COMING! NOV. 16 DON COSSACKS

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 8:15 — BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

HER OCT 29

SYMPHONY HALL

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

NEXT TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30 — PRINCE ACHMED FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30 — CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

Six Monday Eve. Concerts—Nov. 10, Dec. 15, Jan. 26, Feb. 16, Mar. 16, Apr. 27
Six Tuesday Aft. Concerts—Nov. 25, Jan. 6, Feb. 10, Feb. 24, Mar. 10, Apr. 11
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS AVAILABLE AT SUBSCRIPTION OFFICE
COMING! NOV. 16 DON COSSACKS

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 8:15 — BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

HER OCT 29

SYMPHONY HALL

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

NEXT TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30 — PRINCE ACHMED
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Tickets $1-$5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30 — CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT NOV. 10 at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERT NOV. 12, 13 at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
Sunday Concert Course—LAST WEEK of Season Sale

OPENING CONCERT — ROLAND HAYES — SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3.30

Course Includes
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—THOMAS—HAYES
GIESEKING—DANFORTH and D'ARANYI
Season Prices, 6 Concerts, $6, $7.50, $10, $12
COURSE SALE OPENS MONDAY, NOV. 10—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)

NEWMAN TRAVEL TALKS
MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES
5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS	NOV. 21-22
ROME and VATICAN CITY	NOV. 28-29
OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY	DEC. 5- 6
SWITZERLAND	DEC. 12-13
LE VIE DE PARIS	DEC. 19-20

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS Nov 1

SYMPHONY HALL

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

NEXT SUN. NOV. 2 AT 8:15 — BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
HOFMANN
SUNDAY at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
OUR NATIONAL PARKS
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50

POST OCT 30

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
HOFMANN
TOMORROW at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
DREAM PICTURES
"BEAUTIFUL JAPAN"
Tickets 50c-$1.00-$1.50

POST NOV 1

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
HOFMANN
TOMORROW at 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
"BEAUTIFUL JAPAN"
TICKETS 50c—$1.00—$1.50

GLOBE NOV 1

TOMORROW
HOFMANN
TOMORROW AT 8:15
BRANSON DeCOU
Dream Pictures
"BEAUTIFUL JAPAN"
Tickets 50c—$1.00—$1.50

HER NOV 1

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
HOFMANN
NEXT SUN. NOV. 9 AT 3:30
CLARE
CLAIRBERT
GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO
SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
SINGING HORSEMEN OF THE STEPPES
TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8:15
PADEREWSKI
THURS. EVE. NOV. 27 AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI

1341 NOV 1

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
HOFMANN
NEXT Tuesday, Nov. 4, at 8:30
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
"PRINCE ACHMED"

An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER.
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House
NEXT SUN., NOV. 9, AT 3:30
CLARE
CLAIRBERT
GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO
SUN. AFT., NOV. 16, AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
Singing Horsemen of the Steppes

HER NOV 2

CLAIRBERT
Recital—SYMPHONY HALL NOV. 9
Best Seats for Benefit of the ELLIS MEMORIAL HOUSE
ON SALE AT HERRICK'S

HER NOV 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
"PRINCE ACHMED"

An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House
NEXT SUN., NOV. 9, AT 3:30
CLAIRBERT

GLOBE NOV 4

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

TONIGHT AT 8:15 — BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

NEXT TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30 — PRINCE ACHMED
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30 — CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30 — DON COSSACKS
Singing Horsemen of the Steppes

TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8:15 — PADEREWSKI

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT, NOV. 10, at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS, NOV. 12, 13, at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

Sunday Concert Course—LAST WEEK of Season Sale
OPENING CONCERT ROLAND HAYES SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30
Course Includes
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—THOMAS—HAYES
GIESEKING—DANFORTH and D'ARANYI
Season Prices, 6 Concerts, $6, $7.50, $10, $12

COURSE SALE OPENS MONDAY, NOV. 10—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS
MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES
5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS	NOV. 21-22
ROME and VATICAN CITY	NOV. 28-29
OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY	DEC. 5- 6
SWITZERLAND	DEC. 12-13
LA VIE DE PARIS	DEC. 19-20

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

Post Nov 2

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

TONIGHT AT 8:15 — BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

NEXT TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30 — PRINCE ACHMED
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30 — CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30 — DON COSSACKS
Singing Horsemen of the Steppes

TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8:15 — PADEREWSKI

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT NOV. 10 at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS NOV. 12, 13 at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

Sunday Concert Course—LAST WEEK of Season Sale
OPENING CONCERT ROLAND HAYES SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30
Course Includes
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—THOMAS—HAYES
GIESEKING—DANFORTH and D'ARANYI
Season Prices, 6 Concerts, $6, $7.50, $10, $12

COURSE SALE OPENS MONDAY, NOV. 10—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS
MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES
5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS	NOV. 21-22
ROME and VATICAN CITY	NOV. 28-29
OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY	DEC. 5- 6
SWITZERLAND	DEC. 12-13
LA VIE DE PARIS	DEC. 19-20

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

GLOBE Nov 2

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — HOFMANN PIANIST

TONIGHT AT 8:15 — BRANSON DeCOU—Dream Pictures
BEAUTIFUL JAPAN

NEXT TUES. EVE. NOV. 4 AT 8:30 — PRINCE ACHMED
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Music Conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Tickets $1 to $5—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 AT 3:30 — CLARE CLAIRBERT
THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30 — DON COSSACKS
Singing Horsemen of the Steppes

TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8:15 — PADEREWSKI

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT NOV. 10 at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS NOV. 12, 13 at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

Sunday Concert Course—LAST WEEK of Season Sale
OPENING CONCERT ROLAND HAYES SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30
Course Includes
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—THOMAS—HAYES
GIESEKING—DANFORTH and D'ARANYI
Season Prices, 6 Concerts, $6, $7.50, $10, $12

COURSE SALE OPENS MONDAY, NOV. 10—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS
MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES
5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS	NOV. 21-22
ROME and VATICAN CITY	NOV. 28-29
OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY	DEC. 5- 6
SWITZERLAND	DEC. 12-13
LA VIE DE PARIS	DEC. 19-20

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS Nov 5

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
"PRINCE ACHMED"
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House

NEXT SUN. NOV. 9, AT 3:30
CLAIRBERT

Post Nov 4

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8.30
FIRST TIME IN AMERICA
"PRINCE ACHMED"

An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER.
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House

TRAV Nov 5

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
"PRINCE ACHMED"
An Oriental Film Fantasy; Special Music Conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER
Tickets $1 to $5
Benefit Elizabeth Peabody House

TRANS Nov 5

SYMPHONY HALL

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 — CLAIRBERT THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3.30 — DON COSSACKS
Singing Horsemen of the Steppes

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8.30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

Sunday Concert Course—LAST WEEK of Season Sale
OPENING CONCERT ROLAND HAYES SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3.30
Course Includes
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—THOMAS—HAYES
GIESEKING—DANFORTH and D'ARANYI
Season Prices, 6 Concerts, $6, $7.50, $10, $12

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT NOV. 10 at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS NOV. 12, 13 at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS Nov 5

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 3:30
CLAIRBERT
$1-$2.50
Next Sun., Nov. 16, at 3:30
Don Cossacks
Singing Horsemen of the Steppes
Tues. Eve., Nov. 18 at 8:15
PADEREWSKI
Thurs. Eve., Nov. 20, at 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
Sunday Aft., Nov. 23, at 3:30
Roland Hayes
Opening Mon. Concert, Nov. 10, at 8:15
Young People's Concerts, Nov. 12-13, at 4
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

TRAV Nov 8

SYMPHONY HALL

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 9 — CLAIRBERT THE GREAT COLORATURA SOPRANO

SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30 — DON COSSACKS
SENSATIONAL SUCCESS AT OPENING CONCERT
CARNEGIE HALL, NEW YORK CITY, LAST TUES.

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

Sunday Concert Course—LAST WEEK of Season Sale
OPENING CONCERT ROLAND HAYES SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30
Course Includes
HEIFETZ—AUSTRAL—THOMAS—HAYES
GIESEKING—DANFORTH and D'ARANYI
Season Prices, 6 Concerts, $6, $7.50, $10, $12

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT NOV. 10 at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS NOV. 12, 13 at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER. Nov 6.

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
CLAIRBERT
$1—$2.50

HER Nov 8

Symphony Hall—Tomorrow at 3:30
CLAIRBERT
$1-$2.50

GLOBE Nov 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
CLAIRBERT
$1—$2.50
SAT. A. M., NOV. 15, AT 10:45
PRINCE ACHMED
Popular Prices 50c, 75c, $1, $1.50
NEXT SUN., NOV. 16, AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
SINGING HORSEMEN OF THE STEPPES
TUES. EVE., NOV. 18, AT 8:15
PADEREWSKI
THURS. EVE., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
SUN. AFT., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
OPENING MON. CONCERT, NOV. 10, AT 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS, NOV. 12-13, AT 4
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

TRAV Nov 8

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3.30 — CLAIRBERT — BOSTON DEBUT OF THE GREAT SOPRANO
$1-$2.50

SAT. A. M. Nov. 15 At 10.45 — REPEATED BY GENERAL DEMAND PRINCE ACHMED
Popular prices 50c, 75c, $1, $1.50

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3.30 — DON COSSACKS
"Scored sensational success—destined to win a victory unequalled by any foreign choral organization."—Straus, (N.Y.) Eve. World, Nov. 4.
"Signally successful debut. At one end were tenors who could sing high falsetto notes of clear and smooth quality, at the other bassos who could plumb the lower tonal depths. Jaroff magnetic leader."
—Perkins, (N.Y.) Tribune, Nov. 4.

NEXT SUN. EVE. NOV. 16 AT 8.15 — MARIE HEALY BRILLIANT YOUNG COLORATURA SOPRANO

TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8.15 — PADEREWSKI

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8.30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3.30 — ROLAND HAYES

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT NOV. 10 at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS NOV. 12, 13 at 4

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

COURSE SALE OPENS MONDAY, NOV. 10—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS
MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES

5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS	NOV. 21-22
ROME and VATICAN CITY	NOV. 28-29
OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY	DEC. 5- 6
SWITZERLAND	DEC. 12-13
LA VIE DE PARIS	DEC. 19-20

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRANS Nov #9

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — CLAIRBERT — BOSTON DEBUT OF THE GREAT SOPRANO
$1.-$2.50

SAT. A. M. NOV. 15 AT 10:45 — REPEATED BY GENERAL DEMAND PRINCE ACHMED
Popular prices 50c, 75c, $1, $1.50

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 at 3:30 — DON COSSACKS
"Signally successful debut. At one end were tenors who could sing high falsetto notes of clear and smooth quality, at the other bassos who could plumb the lower tonal depths. Jaroff magnetic leader."
—Perkins, New York Tribune, Nov. 4

NEXT SUN. EVE. NOV. 16 AT 8:15 — MARIE HEALY BRILLIANT YOUNG COLORATURA SOPRANO

TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8:15 — PADEREWSKI

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

SUN AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30 — ROLAND HAYES

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT NOV. 10 at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS NOV. 12, 13 at 4

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

COURSE SALE OPENS MONDAY, NOV. 10—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS
MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES

5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS	NOV. 21-22
ROME and VATICAN CITY	NOV. 28-29
OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY	DEC. 5- 6
SWITZERLAND	DEC. 12-13
LA VIE DE PARIS	DEC. 19-20

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

GLOBE Nov #9

SYMPHONY HALL
SATURDAY AT 10:45 A. M.
PRINCE ACHMED
Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50

THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Tickets $1.00, $1.50, $2, $2.50

THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3

SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

HER Nov 13

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — CLAIRBERT — BOSTON DEBUT OF THE GREAT SOPRANO
$1, $2.50

SAT. A. M. NOV. 15 AT 10:45 — REPEATED BY GENERAL DEMAND PRINCE ACHMED
Popular Prices 50c, 75c, $1, $1.50

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30 — DON COSSACKS
"Signally successful debut. At one end were tenors who could sing high falsetto notes of clear and smooth quality, at the other bassos who could plumb the lower tonal depths. Jaroff magnetic leader."
Perkins, N. Y. Tribune, Nov. 4

NEXT SUN. EVE. NOV. 16 AT 8:15 — MARIE HEALY BRILLIANT YOUNG COLORATURA SOPRANO

TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8:15 — PADEREWSKI

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30 — ROLAND HAYES

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT, NOV. 10, at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS, NOV. 12, 13, at 4

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

COURSE SALE OPENS MONDAY, NOV. 10—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS
MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES

5 FRI. EVES. SAT MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS	NOV. 21-22
ROME and VATICAN CITY	NOV. 28-29
OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY	DEC. 5- 6
SWITZERLAND	DEC. 12-13
LA VIE DE PARIS	DEC. 19-20

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

Post Nov #9

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — CLAIRBERT — BOSTON DEBUT OF THE GREAT SOPRANO
$1-$2.50

SAT. A. M. NOV. 15 AT 10:45 — REPEATED BY GENERAL DEMAND PRINCE ACHMED
Popular prices 50c, 75c, $1, $1.50

NEXT SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30 — DON COSSACKS
"Scored a sensational success—destined to win a victory unequalled by any foreign choral organization."—Straus, N.Y. Eve. World, Nov. 4
"Signally successful debut. At one end were tenors who could sing high falsetto notes of clear and smooth quality, at the other bassos who could plumb the lower tonal depths. Jaroff magnetic leader."
—Perkins, N. Y. Tribune, Nov. 4

NEXT SUN. EVE. NOV. 16 AT 8:15 — MARIE HEALY BRILLIANT YOUNG COLORATURA SOPRANO

TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8:15 — PADEREWSKI

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30 — ROLAND HAYES

OPENING MONDAY CONCERT NOV. 10 at 8:15
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS NOV. 12, 13 at 4

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

COURSE SALE OPENS MONDAY, NOV. 10—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS
MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES

5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS	NOV. 21-22
ROME and VATICAN CITY	NOV. 28-29
OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY	DEC. 5- 6
SWITZERLAND	DEC. 12-13
LA VIE DE PARIS	DEC. 19-20

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER Nov #9

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor

THURSDAY, NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI

NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
5 Fri. Eves Sat. Mats BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS—ROME and VATICAN CITY—OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY—SWITZERLAND —LA VIE DE PARIS
Course Sale $6, $4 (No Tax) Closes Sat.

SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

TRAN NOV 11

[187]

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
CLAIRBERT
$1—$2.50
Next Sun., Nov. 16, at 3:30
DON COSSACKS
Singing Horsemen of the Steppes
Thurs. Eve., Nov. 20 at 8:30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
Sun. Aft., Nov. 23 at 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Opening Mon. Concert, Nov. 10, 8:15
Young People's Concert, Nov. 12-13 at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

ADV Nov 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
CLAIRBERT
$1—$2.50
SAT. A. M., NOV. 15, AT 10:45
PRINCE ACHMED
Popular Prices 50c, 75c, $1, $1.50
NEXT SUN., NOV. 16, AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
SINGING HORSEMEN OF THE STEPPES
TUES. EVE., NOV. 18, AT 8:15
PADEREWSKI
THURS. EVE., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
SUN. AFT., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Opening Mon. Concert, Nov. 10 at 8:15
Young People's Concerts, Nov. 12-13, at 4
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY-Conductor

AMER Nov 4

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
OPENING MONDAY CONCERT
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY--Conductor
WED. NOV. 12—THURS. NOV. 13 AT 4
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER Nov 10

SYMPHONY HALL
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
5 Fri. Eves Sat. Mats BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS—ROME and VATICAN CITY—OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY—SWITZERLAND —LA VIE DE PARIS
Course Sale $6, $4 (No Tax) Closes Sat.
SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER Nov 11

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
OPENING MONDAY CONCERT
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
WED., NOV. 12—THURS., NOV. 13, at 4
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
THURS., NOV. 20, at 8.30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
SUN., NOV. 23, at 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS Nov 10

SYMPHONY HALL
SATURDAY AT 10:45 A. M.
PRINCE ACHMED
TICKETS 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Tickets $1, $1.50 $2, $2.50
THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
5 Fri. Eves. Sat. Mats. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS—ROME and VATICAN CITY—OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY—SWITZERLAND—LA VIE DE PARIS
Course Sale $6, $4 (No Tax), Closes Sat.
SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

GLOBE NOV 13

SYMPHONY HALL
SATURDAY at 10.45 A.M.
REPEATED BY POPULAR DEMAND
PRINCE ACHMED
Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50
THIS SUNDAY at 3.30
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
THURS., NOV. 20, at 8.30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3
SUN., NOV. 23, at 3.30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

TRANS Nov 13

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
Don Cossacks
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
5 Fri. Eves. Sat. Mats. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS—ROME and VATICAN CITY—OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY—SWITZERLAND—LA VIE DE PARIS.
Course Sale $6, $4 (No Tax) Closes Sat.
SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

MON Nov 3

SYMPHONY HALL
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS TODAY and TOMORROW at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
SAT. A. M. NOV. 15 AT 10:45 — REPEATED BY POPULAR DEMAND PRINCE ACHMED
Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House
THIS SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30 DON COSSACKS
Russian Male Chorus of 36. SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"Signally Successful"—N. Y. Tribune "Drew Tumults of Applause"—N. Y. Telegram
THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI GREAT GERMAN DANCERS
SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30 ROLAND HAYES
COURSE SALE NOW—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES
5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS—ROME AND VATICAN CITY—OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY—SWITZERLAND—LA VIE DE PARIS
MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

HER NOV 12

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 10.45 A. M.
PRINCE ACHMED
Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50
THIS SUNDAY at 3.30
DON COSSACKS
RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS OF 36
SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"THRILLING EXPERIENCE." —N. Y. World
"SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL." —N. Y. Tribune
"EXCEPTIONAL QUALIFICATIONS." —N. Y. Times
"SENSATIONAL SUCCESS." —N. Y. Eve. World
"DREW TUMULTS OF APPLAUSE." —N. Y. Telegram
Seats $1 to $2.50 Now at Box Office
THURS., NOV. 20, at 8.30
KREUTZBERG and GEORGI
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
5 Fri. Eves. Sat. Mats. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS—ROME and VATICAN CITY—OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY—SWITZERLAND—LA VIE DE PARIS
Course Sale $6, $4 (No Tax) Closes Sat.
SUN., NOV. 23, at 3.30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

TRANS Nov 4

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 10:45 A. M.
PRINCE ACHMED
Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50
TOMORROW at 3:30
DON COSSACKS
RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS of 36
SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"THRILLING EXPERIENCE." —N. Y. World
"SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL." —N. Y. Tribune
"EXCEPTIONAL QUALIFICATIONS." —N. Y. Times
"SENSATIONAL SUCCESS." —N. Y. Eve. World
"DREW TUMULTS OF APPLAUSE." —N. Y. Telegram
Seats $1 to $2.50 Now at Box Office

FR Nov 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 10:45 A. M.
PRINCE ACHMED
Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50
TOMORROW at 3:30
DON COSSACKS
RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS of 36
SERGE JAROFF, Conductor

POST NOV 15

SYMPHONY HALL
YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS TODAY and TOMORROW at 4
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
SAT. A. M. NOV. 15 AT 10:45 — REPEATED BY POPULAR DEMAND PRINCE ACHMED
Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.50—Benefit: Elizabeth Peabody House
THIS SUN. AFT. NOV. 16 AT 3:30 DON COSSACKS
Russian Male Chorus of 36. SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"Thrilling Experience," N. Y. World, Nov. 6 "Exceptional Qualifications," N. Y. Times
THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI GREAT GERMAN DANCERS
SUN. AFT. NOV. 23 AT 3:30 ROLAND HAYES
COURSE SALE NOW—$6.00 and $4.00 (No Tax)
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES AND COLORED SLIDES
5 FRI. EVES. SAT. MATS. BEG. NOV. 21-22
SEEING EUROPE
ITALY, NAPLES TO THE ALPS—ROME AND VATICAN CITY—OBERAMMERGAU, SCENES OF PASSION PLAY—SWITZERLAND—LA VIE DE PARIS
MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY FILLED—Checks Payable to Symphony Hall

TRAV NOV 12

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
DON COSSACKS
Russian Male Chorus of 36
SERGE JAROFF
CONDUCTOR
Tickets $1-$1.50-$2-$2.50

"Thrilling Experience"—N. Y. WORLD.—"Signally Successful"—N. Y. TRIBUNE.—"Exceptional Qualifications"-N.Y. TIMES.—"Sensational Success."-N.Y. EVE. WORLD.
TOMORROW AT 8.15 — MARIE HEALY BRILLIANT YOUNG COLORATURA SOPRANO
TUES. EVE. NOV. 18 AT 8.15 — PADEREWSKI
NEXT THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8.30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI THE GREAT DANCERS
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
Next Fri. Eve., Nov. 21, at 8.15
Saturday Mat., Nov. 22, at 2.30
ITALY NAPLES to the ALPS
NEXT SUN. NOV. 23 AT 3.30 — ROLAND HAYES
OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT, NOV. 25, at 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS—6 CONCERTS—$9, $12, $15
SUN. AFT. NOV. 30 AT 3.30 — WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8.15 — MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR
SUN. AFT. DEC. 7 AT 3.30 — KREISLER
MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS TO SYMPHONY HALL

TRANS NOV 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
DON COSSACKS
RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS of 36
SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"THRILLING EXPERIENCE." —N. Y. World
"SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL." —N. Y. Tribune
"EXCEPTIONAL QUALIFICATIONS." —N. Y. Times
"SENSATIONAL SUCCESS." —N. Y. Eve. World
"DREW TUMULTS OF APPLAUSE." —N. Y. Telegram
Seats $1 to $2.50 Now at Box Office
THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3
SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50
Sun. Aft., Nov. 30, at 3:30
WERRENRATH
Sun. Aft., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

ADV NOV 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
Don Cossacks
Russian Male Chorus of 36
SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"THRILLING EXPERIENCE." —N. Y. World
"SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL." —N. Y. Tribune
"EXCEPTIONAL QUALIFICATIONS." —N. Y. Times
"SENSATIONAL SUCCESS." —N. Y. Eve. World
"DREW TUMULTS OF APPLAUSE." —N. Y. Telegram
Seats $1 to $2.50 Now at Box Office
THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Next Fri. Eve. at 8:15 Next Sat. Mat. at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50
Opening Tuesday Aft. Concert Nov. 25 at 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
A Few Season Tickets, 6 Concerts, $9, $12, $15
SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER

MON NOV 15

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30 DON COSSACKS

Russian Male Chorus of 36
SERGE JAROFF
CONDUCTOR
Tickets $1-$1.50-$2-$2.50

"THRILLING EXPERIENCE."—N. Y. WORLD. "SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL."—N. Y. TRIBUNE. "EXCEPTIONAL QUALIFICATIONS."—N. Y. TIMES. "SENSATIONAL SUCCESS."—N. Y. EVE. WORLD.

TONIGHT AT 8:15 — MARIE HEALY BRILLIANT YOUNG COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI THE GREAT DANCERS

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
Next Fri. Eve., Nov. 21, at 8:15
Saturday Mat., Nov. 22, at 2:30
ITALY NAPLES to the ALPS

NEXT SUN. NOV. 23 AT 3:30 — ROLAND HAYES

OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT, NOV. 25, at 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS—6 CONCERTS—$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT. NOV. 30 AT 3:30 — WERRENRATH

TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8:15 — MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR

SUN. AFT. DEC. 7 AT 3:30 — KREISLER

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS TO SYMPHONY HALL

HER Nov 16

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30 DON COSSACKS

Russian Male Chorus of 36
SERGE JAROFF
CONDUCTOR
Tickets $1-$1.50-$2-$2.50

"Thrilling experience."—N. Y. WORLD. "Signally successful."—N. Y. TRIBUNE. "Exceptional qualifications."—N. Y. TIMES. "Sensational success."—N. Y. EVENING WORLD.

TONIGHT at 8:15 — MARIE HEALY BRILLIANT YOUNG COLORATURA SOPRANO

NEXT THURS. EVE. NOV. 20 AT 8:30 — KREUTZBERG and GEORGI GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
Next Fri. Eve., Nov. 21, at 8:15
Saturday Mat., Nov. 22, at 2:30
ITALY NAPLES to the APLS

NEXT SUN. NOV. 23 AT 3:30 — ROLAND HAYES

OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT, NOV. 25, at 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
A Few SEASON TICKETS—6 CONCERTS—$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT. NOV. 30 AT 3:30 — WERRENRATH

TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8:15 — MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR

SUN. AFT. DEC. 7 AT 3:30 — KREISLER

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS TO SYMPHONY HALL

POST Nov 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

NEXT SUN. AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
TENOR

Opening Concert—Tuesday Series
TUES., NOV. 25, at 3
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A Few Season Tickets 6 Concerts
$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

TUES. EVE., DEC. 2 at 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR

HER Nov 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
DON COSSACKS
RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS of 36
SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"THRILLING EXPERIENCE." —N. Y. World
"SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL." —N. Y. Tribune
"EXCEPTIONAL QUALIFICATIONS." —N. Y. Times
"SENSATIONAL SUCCESS." —N. Y. Eve. World
"DREW TUMULTS OF APPLAUSE." —N. Y. Telegram
Seats $1 to $2.50 Now at Box Office

THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG and GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3

SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT
NOV. 25 AT 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor
A Few Season Tickets 6 Concerts
$9, $12, $15.

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30 at 3:30
WERRENRATH

SUN. AFT., DEC. 7 at 3:30
KREISLER

AMER Nov 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
DON COSSACKS
RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS of 36
SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"THRILLING EXPERIENCE." —N. Y. World
"SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL." —N. Y. Tribune
"EXCEPTIONAL QUALIFICATIONS." —N. Y. Times
"SENSATIONAL SUCCESS." —N. Y. Eve. World
"DREW TUMULTS OF APPLAUSE." —N. Y. Telegram
Seats $1 to 2.50 Now at Box Office

TONIGHT AT 8:15
MARIE
HEALY
BRILLIANT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Next Fri. Eve. at Next Sat. Mat. at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT
NOV. 25 AT 3 P. M.
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A few SEASON TICKETS 6 CONCERTS
$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE Nov 16

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 3:30
DON COSSACKS
RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS of 36
SERGE JAROFF, Conductor
"THRILLING EXPERIENCE." —N. Y. World
"SIGNALLY SUCCESSFUL." —N. Y. Tribune
"EXCEPTIONAL QUALFICATIONS." —N. Y. Times
"SENSATIONAL SUCCESS." —N. Y. Eve. World
"DREW TUMULTS OF APPLAUSE." N. Y. Telegram
Seats $1 to $2.50 Now at Box Office

Tomorrow at 8:15
MARIE
HEALY
BRILLIANT COLORATURA SOPRANO

THURS., NOV. 20, AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3

SUN., NOV. 23, AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT
NOV. 25 at 3 P. M.
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS 6 CONCERTS
$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30 at 3:30
WERRENRATH

SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

TRAV Nov 5.

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
PADEREWSKI

THIS THURS. AT 8.30
KREUTZBERG and GEORGI
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3

NEXT SUN. AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

OPENING TUESDAY AFT. CONCERT
NOV. 25 AT 3 P. M.
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A few SEASON TICKETS 6 CONCERTS
$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3.30
WERRENRATH

MON. EVE., DEC. 8, AT 8.15
SECOND AND LAST TIME
Don Cossacks

TRANS Nov 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

NEXT SUN. AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
TENOR

Opening Concert—Tuesday Series
TUES., NOV. 25, AT 3
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS—6 Concerts
$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG and GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
TENOR

Opening Concert—Tuesday Series
TUES., NOV. 25, AT 3
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A few Season Tickets, 6 Concerts, $9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

MON Nov 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
PADEREWSKI

THIS THURS. AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3

NEXT SUN. AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT
NOV. 25 AT 3 P. M.
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A few SEASON TICKETS 6 CONCERTS
$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

MON. EVE., DEC. 8, AT 8:15
SECOND AND LAST TIME
DON COSSACKS

HER Nov 18

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG and GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
TENOR

Opening Concert—Tuesday Series
TUES., NOV. 25, AT 3
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A Few Season Tickets 6 Concerts
$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
Tues. Eve., Dec. 2, at 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR

GLOBE Nov 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
TENOR

Opening Concert—Tuesday Series
TUES., NOV. 25, at 3
Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A Few Season Tickets 6 Concerts
$9, $12, $15

SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

HER Nov 30

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLANDHAYES
TENOR
Opening Concert—Tuesday Series
TUES., NOV. 25, AT 3
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
A FEW SEASON TICKETS—6 Concerts
$9, $12, $15
SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

Post Nov 20

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8.30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES
TENOR
Opening Concert—Tuesday Series
TUES., NOV. 25, AT 3
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A Few Season Tickets—6 Concerts
$9, $12, $15
SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3.30
WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE., DEC. 2, at 8.15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR
MON., DEC. 8, AT 8.15
TICKETS NOW READY FOR SECOND AND LAST CONCERT
Don Cossacks

TRANS Nov 19

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
THIS SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES
TENOR
Opening Concert—Tuesday Series
TUES., NOV. 25, AT 3
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, Conductor
A Few Season Tickets—6 Concerts
$9, $12, $15
SUN. AFT., NOV. 30, AT 3.30
WERRENRATH

TRANS Nov 20

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOMOR AT 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLANDHAYES

Post Nov 21

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TONIGHT at 8.15 TOMOR. AT 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY AT 3.30
ROLAND HAYES

TRANS Nov 21

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TODAY AT 2:30
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER Nov 22

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TODAY AT 2:30
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE Nov 22

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TODAY AT 2:30
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW AT 3:30
ROLANDHAYES
Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

Post Nov 22

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
1st Tuesday Afternoon Concert
Tuesday, Nov. 25, at 3
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE., DEC. 2, AT 8:15
Maxim KAROLIK
Formerly of the THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA" of Petrograd
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MON. EVE., DEC. 8, AT 8:15
Don Cossacks
SECOND AND LAST CONCERTS
WED. EVE., DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
LAST BOSTON APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

MON Nov 22

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3 P. M.
OPENING TUESDAY CONCERT
BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BACH—Two Preludes
BEETHOVEN'S 7th Symphony
BRAHM'S 2nd Symphony
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

HER Nov 24

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOMOR AT 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER Nov 21

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOMOR AT 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE Nov 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3 P. M.
OPENING TUESDAY CONCERT
BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BACH—Two Preludes
BEETHOVEN'S 7th Symphony
BRAHM'S 2nd Symphony
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

HER Nov 24

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE., DEC. 2 AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR
Formerly of the Theater "Music Drama" of Petrograd
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7 AT 3:30
KREISLER
MON. EVE., DEC. 8 AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
Second and Last Concert

ADV Nov 23

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE., DEC. 2 AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR
Formerly of the Theater "Music Drama" of Petrograd
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7 AT 3:30
KREISLER
MON. EVE., DEC. 8 AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
Second and Last Concert

AMER Nov 12

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE., DEC. 2 AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR
Formerly of the Theater "Music Drama" of Petrograd
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7 AT 3:30
KREISLER
MON. EVE., DEC. 8 AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
Second and Last Concert

TRANS Nov 24

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3 P.M.
OPENING TUESDAY CONCERT
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BACH—Two Preludes
BEETHOVEN'S—Seventh Symphony
BRAHM'S—Second Symphony
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
WERRENRATH

TRANS Nov 24

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3 P. M.
OPENING TUESDAY CONCERT
BOSTON SYMPHONY
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BACH—Two Preludes
BEETHOVEN'S 7th Symphony
BRAHM'S 2nd Symphony
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

HER Nov 25

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
ROME and VATICAN CITY
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
WERRENRATH
Sun. Aft., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE Nov 26

SYMPHONY HALL
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, at 3.30
KREISLER

TRANS Nov. 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8.30
KREUTZBERG
AND GEORGI
THE GREAT DANCERS
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOMOR AT 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

HER Nov 20

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Travel Talks Color Views Motion Pictures
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOMOR AT 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SEEING ITALY NAPLES TO THE ALPS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES

GLOBE Nov 21

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT, NOV. 25, at 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
NEXT FRI. EVE. NOV. 28
SAT. MAT. NOV. 29
ROME AND VATICAN CITY
NEXT SUN. NOV. 30 AT 3.30 — WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8.15 — MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR
Formerly of the Theatre "Music Drama" of Petrograd
THURS. EVE. DEC. 4 AT 8.15 — JAMES R. HOUGHTON BARITONE
SUN. AFT. DEC. 7 AT 3.30 — KREISLER
MON. EVE. DEC. 8 AT 8.15 — DON COSSACKS
RETURNING FOR SECOND AND LAST CONCERT
WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8.30 — ARGENTINA
LAST BOSTON APPEARANCE THIS SEASON
SUN. AFT. DEC. 14 AT 3.30 — GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
SUN. EVE. DEC. 14 AT 8.15 — ENGLISH SINGERS SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS TO SYMPHONY HALL

TRANS Nov 22

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT, NOV. 25, at 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
NEXT FRI. EVE. NOV. 28
SAT. MAT. NOV. 29
ROME AND VATICAN CITY
NEXT SUN. OE 'AON AT 3:30 — WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8:15 — MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR
FORMERLY of the THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA" of PETROGRAD
THURS. EVE. DEC. 4 AT 8:15 — JAMES R. HOUGHTON BARITONE
SUN. AFT. DEC. 7 AT 3:30 — KREISLER
MON. EVE. DEC. 8 AT 8:15 — DON COSSACKS
RETURNING FOR 2nd AND LAST CONCERT
WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8:30 — ARGENTINA
LAST BOSTON APPEARANCE THIS SEASON
SUN. AFT. DEC. 14 AT 3:30 — GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
SUN. EVE. DEC. 14 AT 8:15 — ENGLISH SINGERS SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks to Symphony Hall

HER Nov 23

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
ROLAND HAYES
OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT, NOV. 25, at 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
NEXT FRI. EVE. NOV. 28
SAT. MAT. NOV. 29
ROME AND VATICAN CITY
NEXT SUN. NOV. 30 AT 3:30 — WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8:15 — MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR
FORMERLY of the THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA" of PETROGRAD
SUN. AFT. DEC. 7 AT 3:30 — KREISLER
Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks to Symphony Hall

GLOBE Nov 23

[190]

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3 P. M.
Opening Tuesday Concert
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BACH—Two Preludes
BEETHOVEN'S 7th Symphony
BRAHM'S 2nd Symphony
NEXT SUNDAY at 3:30
WERRENRATH
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE Nov 25

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3 P. M.
OPENING TUESDAY CONCERT
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
BACH—Two Preludes
BEETHOVEN'S 7th Symphony
BRAHM'S 2nd Symphony
NEXT SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

POST Nov 25

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TODAY at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
Rome and Vatican City
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW at 3:30
WERRENRATH
NEXT SUN., DEC. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE Nov 24

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3.30	WERRENRATH
NEXT TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8.15	MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR — FORMERLY OF THE THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA," PETROGRAD
NEXT THURS. EVE. DEC. 4 AT 8.15	JAMES R. HOUGHTON BARITONE
NEWMAN	TRAVELTALKS — MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. DEC. 5 / SAT. MAT. DEC. 6	OBERAMMERGAU SCENES OF PASSION PLAY
NEXT SUN. DEC. 7 AT 3.30	KREISLER
MON. EVE. DEC. 8 AT 8.15	DON COSSACKS RETURNING FOR SECOND AND LAST CONCERT
WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8.30	ARGENTINA LAST BOSTON APPEARANCE THIS SEASON
SUN. AFT. DEC. 14 AT 3.30	GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
SUN. EVE. DEC. 14 AT 8.15	ENGLISH SINGERS SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8.30	ALEXANDER KIPNIS RUSSIAN BASS CHICAGO OPERA CO.

BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS TO SYMPHONY HALL

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30	ROLAND HAYES

OPENING TUES. AFT. CONCERT, NOV. 25, at 3 P. M.
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

NEWMAN	TRAVELTALKS — MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
NEXT FRI. EVE., NOV. 28 / SAT. MAT., NOV. 29	ROME AND VATICAN CITY
NEXT SUN. NOV. 30 AT 3:30	WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8:15	MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR — FORMERLY of the THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA" of PETROGRAD
SUN. AFT. DEC. 7 AT 3:30	KREISLER
MON. EVE. DEC. 8 AT 8:15	DON COSSACKS RETURNING FOR 2nd AND LAST CONCERT
WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8:30	ARGENTINA LAST BOSTON APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

Mail Orders Promptly Filled—Checks to Symphony Hall

POST NOV 23

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TODAY AT 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
Rome and Vatican City
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW at 3:30
WERRENRATH
Next Sun., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

POST NOV 29

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tonight at 8:15 Tom'w at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
Rome and Vatican City
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
WERRENRATH
NEXT SUN., DEC. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE NOV 28

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

NEXT TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8:15	MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR — FORMERLY OF THE THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA," PETROGRAD
NEXT THURS. EVE. DEC. 4 AT 8:15	JAMES R. HOUGHTON BARITONE
NEWMAN	TRAVELTALKS — MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. DEC. 5 / SAT. MAT. DEC. 6	OBERAMMERGAU SCENES OF PASSION PLAY
NEXT SUN. DEC. 7 AT 3:30	KREISLER
MON. EVE. DEC. 8 AT 8:15	DON COSSACKS
WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8:30	ARGENTINA
SUN. AFT. DEC. 14 AT 3:30	GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
SUN. EVE. DEC. 14 AT 8:15	ENGLISH SINGERS SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8:30	ALEXANDER KIPNIS RUSSIAN BASS CHICAGO OPERA CO.

BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

TRANS Nov 26

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. NOV. 28 / SAT. MAT. NOV. 29 ROME AND VATICAN CITY

SUNDAY NOV. 30 AT 3.30	WERRENRATH
TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8.15	MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR — FORMERLY OF THE THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA," PETROGRAD
SUN. AFT. DEC. 7 AT 3.30	KREISLER
MON. EVE. DEC. 8 AT 8.15	DON COSSACKS RETURNING FOR SECOND AND LAST CONCERT
WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8.30	ARGENTINA LAST BOSTON APPEARANCE THIS SEASON
SUN. AFT. DEC. 14 AT 3.30	GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
SUN. EVE. DEC. 14 AT 8.15	ENGLISH SINGERS SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS TO SYMPHONY HALL

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
NEXT SUN., DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MON. EVE., DEC. 8, AT 8:30
SECOND AND LAST TIME
Don Cossacks
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
WED. EVE., DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SUN. AFT., DEC. 14, AT 3:30
GEISEKING
TUES. EVE., DEC. 16, AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS
Benefit South End Music School

MON Nov 29

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH

NEXT TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8:15	MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR — FORMERLY OF THE THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA," PETROGRAD
NEXT THURS. EVE. DEC. 4 AT 8:15	JAMES R. HOUGHTON BARITONE
NEWMAN	TRAVELTALKS — MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. DEC. 5 / SAT. MAT. DEC. 6	OBERAMMERGAU SCENES OF PASSION PLAY
NEXT SUN. DEC. 7 AT 3:30	KREISLER
MON. EVE. DEC. 8 AT 8:15	DON COSSACKS
WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8:30	ARGENTINA
SUN. AFT. DEC. 14 AT 3:30	GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
SUN. EVE. DEC. 14 AT 8:15	ENGLISH SINGERS SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8:30	ALEXANDER KIPNIS RUSSIAN BASS CHICAGO OPERA CO.

BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

GLOBE Nov 30

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
SUN. AFT., DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
WED. EVE., DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SUN. EVE., DEC. 14, AT 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

MON Nov 26

SYMPHONY HALL
THIS SUNDAY at 3:30
WERRENRATH
Sun. Aft., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER
Wed. Eve., Dec. 10, at 8:30
ARGENTINA

TRAV Nov 26.

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
WERRENRATH
Next Sun., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER
Mon. Eve., Dec. 8, at 8:30
SECOND AND LAST TIME
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Wed. Eve., Dec. 10, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
Sun. Aft., Dec. 14, at 3:30
GEISEKING

AMER Nov 29

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TODAY AT 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
Rome and Vatican City
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW AT 3:30
WERRENRATH
Next Sun., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

MON Nov 26

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tonight at 8.15 Tom'w at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
ROME and VATICAN CITY
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
THIS SUNDAY at 3.30
WERRENRATH
Next Sun., Dec. 7, at 3.30
KREISLER

TRANS Nov 28

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 3:30
WERRENRATH
Next Sun.. Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER
Mon. Eve., Dec. 8, at 8:30
SECOND AND LAST TIME
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Wed. Eve., Dec. 10, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
Sun. Aft., Dec. 14, at 3:30
GEISEKING

TRAV Nov 29

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30 — WERRENRATH

NEXT TUES. EVE. DEC. 2 AT 8:15 — MAXIM KAROLIK TENOR
FORMERLY OF THE THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA" PETROGRAD

NEXT THURS. EVE. DEC. 4 AT 8:15 — JAMES R. HOUGHTON BARITONE

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE., DEC. 5 SAT. MAT., DEC. 6 OBERAMMERGAU SCENES OF PASSION PLAY

NEXT SUN. DEC. 7 AT 3:30 — KREISLER

MON. EVE. DEC. 8 AT 8:15 — DON COSSACKS
RETURNING FOR SECOND AND LAST CONCERT

WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8:30 — ARGENTINA
LAST BOSTON APPEARANCE THIS SEASON

SUN. AFT. DEC. 14 AT 3:30 — GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST

Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

POST NOV 30

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR
Formerly of the Theatre "Music Drama" Petrograd
THURSDAY at 8.15
JAMES R.
HOUGHTON
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, at 3.30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, at 8.15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America

Second and Last Time
Wednesday
DEC. 10 at 8.30
ARGENTINA
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 3.30
GIESEKING
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 8.15
ENGLISH SINGERS
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, at 8.30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASSO
CHICAGO CIVIC OPERA CO.
Benefit: South End Music School

TRANS DEC 2

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
JAMES R.
HOUGHTON
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tom'w Eve. at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

POST DEC 4

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10 AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

TRAV DEC 4

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
JAMES R.
HOUGHTON
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tom'w at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

TRANS DEC 4

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tonight at 8.15 Tom'w at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3.30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8.15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10, AT 8.30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, AT 3.30
GIESEKING

TRANS DEC 5

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TODAY at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW AT 3:30
KREISLER

HER DEC 6

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
WERRENRATH
Next Sun., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER
Mon. Eve., Dec. 8, at 8:30
SECOND AND LAST TIME
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Wed. Eve., Dec. 10, at 8:30
ARGENTINA
Sun. Aft., Dec. 14, at 3:30
GEISEKING

TRAV NOV 30

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
Formerly of the Theatre "Music Drama," Petrograd
NEXT SUN., DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER

POST DEC 1

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
Formerly of the Theatre "Music Drama," Petrograd
Next Sun., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE DEC 1

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:15
JAMES R.
HOUGHTON
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America

HER DEC 3

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

GLOBE DEC 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
Formerly of the Theatre "Music Drama," Petrograd
Next Sun., Dec. 7, at 3:30
KREISLER

TRANS DEC 1

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR
Formerly of the Theatre "Music Drama", Petrograd
THURSDAY AT 8:15
JAMES R.
HOUGHTON
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America

Second and Last Time
Wednesday
DEC. 10 at 8:30
ARGENTINA
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, AT 3:30
GIESEKING
SUNDAY DEC. 14, AT 8:15
ENGLISH SINGERS
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASSO
CHICAGO CIVIC OPERA CO.
Benefit: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

HER DEC 2

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:15
JAMES R.
HOUGHTON
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

POST DEC 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:15
JAMES R.
HOUGHTON
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU SCENES OF PASSION PLAY
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3.30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8.15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, AT 3.30
GIESEKING
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, AT 8.15
ENGLISH SINGERS
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM

TRANS DEC 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.15
JAMES R.
HOUGHTON
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tom'w at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

TRANS DEC 4

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America

AMER DEC 4

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tonight at 8:15 Tom'w at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

HER DEC 5

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOM'W at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY at 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE DEC 5

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOM'W at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
OBERAMMERGAU Scenes of Passion Play
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America

POST DEC 5

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
Don Cossacks
WED., DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, AT 3:30
GIESEKING
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, AT 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL CHRISTMAS PROGRAM
SUN. AFT., DEC. 21, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE, Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

MON DEC 6

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR
Formerly of the THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA," PETROGRAD
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—CONDUCTOR
Greatest Male Chorus Ever To Visit America

POST DEC 2

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15
MAXIM
KAROLIK
TENOR
FORMERLY of the THEATRE "MUSIC DRAMA" PETROGRAD
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER

GLOBE DEC 2

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, DEC. 7, AT 3:30
KREISLER

MON DEC 4

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
KREISLER
MONDAY, DEC. 8, AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America
WEDNESDAY, DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER
SUN. AFT., DEC. 14, AT 3:30
GIESEKING
SUN. EVE., DEC. 14, AT 8:15
ENGLISH SINGERS
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
SUN. AFT., DEC. 21, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE, CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

TRAV DEC 6

[192]

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
KREISLER

TOMORROW AT 8:15
DON COSSACKS
SERGE JAROFF—Conductor
Greatest Male Chorus Ever to Visit America

WED. EVE., DEC. 10, AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

SUN. AFT., DEC. 21, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

ADV DEC 7

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT
DON COSSACKS
WEDNESDAY AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

GLOBE DEC 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT
DON COSSACKS
WEDNESDAY AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

TRAV DEC 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT
DON COSSACKS
WEDNESDAY at 8.30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER
NEXT SUNDAY at 3.30
GIESEKING
NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
ENGLISH SINGERS

TRANS DEC 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT
DON COSSACKS
WEDNESDAY at 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

HER DEC 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT
CHESTERTON
Benefit: League of Catholic Women

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

POST DEC 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

GLOBE DEC 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER

TRAV DEC 9

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:15 DON COSSACKS RUSSIAN MALE CHORUS OF 36 SERGE JAROFF CONDUCTOR

WED. EVE. DEC. 10 AT 8:30 ARGENTINA SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER
NEXT SUN. DEC. 14 AT 3:30 GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST

POST DEC 8

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW DEC. 10 AT 8.30 ARGENTINA SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER
NEXT SUN. DEC. 14 AT 3.30 GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
NEXT SUN. DEC. 14 AT 8.15 ENGLISH SINGERS SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8.30 ALEXANDER KIPNIS RUSSIAN BASS CHICAGO OPERA CO.
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
SUN. AFT. DEC. 28 Pension Fund Concert
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZY—Conductor ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

TRANS DEC 9.

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30 ARGENTINA SPAIN'S GREAT DANCER
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. DEC. 12
SAT. MAT. DEC. 13 SWITZERLAND
SUN. AFT. DEC. 14 AT 3:30 GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
SUN. EVE. DEC. 14 AT 8:15 English Singers SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
1st and ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8:30 ALEXANDER KIPNIS RUSSIAN BASS BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
2nd MONDAY CONCERT. DEC. 15 AT 8:15
PENSION FUND CONCERT DEC. 28 at 3:30
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, contralto
George Boynton, tenor—Walter Kidder, bass
Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

HER DEC 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ARGENTINA
Sunday, Dec. 14, at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
Sunday, Dec. 14, at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor
2nd Mon. Concert Dec. 15 at 8:15
PENSION FUND
Concert Dec. 28, at 3:30

GLOBE DEC 10

SYMPHONY HALL
TUESDAY, DEC. 16 at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: South End Music School

AMER DEC 11

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY AT 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
SUNDAY AT 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL CHRISTMAS PROGRAM
Boston Symphony
ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
2nd Mon. Concert, Dec. 15, 8:15
Pension Fund Concert
DEC. 28, AT 3:30

MON DEC 10

SYMPHONY HALL
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

HER DEC 11

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8.30
ARGENTINA
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 3.30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 8.15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
2d Monday Concert, Dec. 15 at 8:15
PENSION FUND CONCERT
DEC. 28 at 3.30
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, at 8.30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
SUNDAY, DEC. 21, at 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDEN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

TRANS DEC 10

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tom'w at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM

GLOBE DEC 11

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tom'w at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 3.30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 8.15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, at 8.30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

HER DEC 11

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOM'W at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

POST DEC 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Tonight at 8.15 Tom'w at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 3.30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 8.15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, at 8.30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOO

TRANS DEC 12

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TODAY at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
TOMORROW at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM

HER DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TODAY at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
TOMORROW at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM

GLOBE DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TODAY at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
TOMORROW at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
TOMORROW at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM

POST DEC 3

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
TOMORROW AT 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL CHRISTMAS PROGRAM
TUES. EVE., DEC. 16, AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
Benefit South End Music School
SUNDAY, DEC. 28, AT 3:30
BOSTON SYMPHONY
PENSION FUND CONCERT
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
All Tchaikovsky Program

MON DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
TONIGHT at 8:15 TOM'W at 2:30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
SWITZERLAND
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
SUNDAY, DEC. 14, at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

HER DEC 14

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
Tomorrow at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
Sunday, Dec. 28 at 3:30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

TRAV DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
SUNDAY, DEC. 28, at 3:30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

HMER DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3.30	GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
TOMORROW AT 8.15	English Singers SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM — ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON

Boston Symphony Orchestra
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
Dec. 15 at 8.15 2nd MONDAY CONCERT
PENSION FUND CONCERT DEC. 28 at 3.30
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8.30	ALEXANDER KIPNIS RUSSIAN BASS — BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. DEC. 19
SAT. MAT. DEC. 20
LA VIE DE PARIS

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, contralto
George Boynton, tenor—Walter Kidder, bass

SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3.30	ITURBI PIANIST
MONDAY JAN. 12 AT 8.30	Debate: "Is Divorce a Social Asset?" Chesterton (NO) vs. Hamilton (YES)

MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS TO SYMPHONY HALL

TRANS DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30	GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
TONIGHT AT 8:15	English Singers SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM — ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
TOMORROW AT 8:15 2ND MONDAY CONCERT
PENSION FUND CONCERT DEC. 28 at 3:30
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

TUES. EVE., DEC. 16 AT 8:30	ALEXANDER KIPNIS Russian Bass — BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE., DEC. 19
SAT. MAT. DEC. 20
LA VIE DE PARIS

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, contralto
George Boynton, tenor—Walter Kidder, bass
Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

GLOBE DEC 14

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 3:30	GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
TONIGHT AT 8:15	English Singers SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM — ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
TOMORROW AT 8:15 2ND MONDAY CONCERT
PENSION FUND CONCERT, DEC. 28, at 3:30
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8:30	ALEXANDER KIPNIS RUSSIAN BASS — BENEFIT SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE., DEC. 19
SAT. MAT., DEC. 20
LA VIE DE PARIS

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, Soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, Contralto
George Boynton, Tenor—Walter Kidder, Bass

MONDAY JAN. 12 AT 8:30	DEBATE: "IS DIVORCE A SOCIAL ASSET?" Chesterton (NO) vs. Hamilton (YES)

Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

POST DEC 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30
GIESEKING
TONIGHT AT 8:15
ENGLISH SINGERS
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUESDAY, DEC. 16 AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASSO
Benefit: South End Music School
SUNDAY, DEC. 28, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
Thompson Stone—Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
SUNDAY, DEC. 28, at 3:30
BOSTON SYMPHONY
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

ADV DEC 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

HER DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

POST DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

TRAV DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8.30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
Benefit: South End Music School

TRANS DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
Benefit: South End Music School

GLOBE DEC 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

POST DEC 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

HER DEC 16

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
La Vie de PARIS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
Sunday, Dec. 28, at 3.30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOWSKY PROGRAM
Sunday, Jan. 4, at 3.30
ITURBI
PIANIST
SUNDAY, DEC. 21, at 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

TRANS DEC 17

SYMPHONY HALL
Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Sunday, Dec. 28 at 3:30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

HER DEC 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30
GIESEKING GREAT PIANIST
TONIGHT at 8:15
English Singers SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM — ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
TOMORROW AT 8:15 2ND MONDAY CONCERT
PENSION FUND CONCERT DEC. 28 at 3:30
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8:30 — ALEXANDER KIPNIS RUSSIAN BASS — BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. DEC. 19
SAT. MAT. DEC. 20
LA VIE DE PARIS
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, contralto
George Boynton, tenor—Walter Kidder, bass
SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3:30 — ITURBI PIANIST
MONDAY JAN. 12 at 8:30 — Debate: "Is Divorce a Social Asset?" CHESTERTON (NO) vs. HAMILTON (YES)
Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

HER DEC 14

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
LA VIE DE PARIS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
Sunday, Dec. 28, at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Sunday, Dec. 28 at 3:30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
SUNDAY, JAN. 4 AT 3:30
ITURBI
PIANIST

HER DEC 17

[174]

SYMPHONY HALL
Tomorrow at 3:30
GIESEKING
GREAT PIANIST
Tomorrow at 8:15
English Singers
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
Sunday, Dec. 28 at 3:30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

TRAV DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TUESDAY, DEC. 16, at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
SUNDAY, DEC. 28, at 3:30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

HMER DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 3.30 — GIESEKING — GREAT PIANIST
TOMORROW AT 8.15 — English Singers — SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON
Boston Symphony Orchestra
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
Dec. 15 at 8.15 2nd MONDAY CONCERT
PENSION FUND CONCERT DEC. 28 at 3.30
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8.30 — ALEXANDER KIPNIS — RUSSIAN BASS — BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. DEC. 19
SAT. MAT. DEC. 20
LA VIE DE PARIS
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, contralto
George Boynton, tenor—Walter Kidder, bass
SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3.30 — ITURBI PIANIST
MONDAY JAN. 12 AT 8.30 — Debate: "Is Divorce a Social Asset?"
Chesterton (NO) vs. Hamilton (YES)
MAIL ORDERS FILLED PROMPTLY—CHECKS TO SYMPHONY HALL

TRANS DEC 13

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30 — GIESEKING — GREAT PIANIST
TONIGHT AT 8:15 — English Singers — SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
TOMORROW AT 8:15 2ND MONDAY CONCERT
PENSION FUND CONCERT DEC. 28 at 3:30
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8:30 — ALEXANDER KIPNIS — RUSSIAN BASS — BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE., DEC. 19
SAT. MAT. DEC. 20
LA VIE DE PARIS
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, contralto
George Boynton, tenor—Walter Kidder, bass
Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

GLOBE DEC 4

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 3:30 — GIESEKING — GREAT PIANIST
TONIGHT AT 8:15 — English Singers — SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
TOMORROW AT 8:15 2ND MONDAY CONCERT
PENSION FUND CONCERT, DEC. 28, at 3:30
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8:30 — ALEXANDER KIPNIS — RUSSIAN BASS — BENEFIT SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE., DEC. 19
SAT. MAT., DEC. 20
LA VIE DE PARIS
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, Soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, Contralto
George Boynton, Tenor—Walter Kidder, Bass
MONDAY JAN. 12 AT 8:30 — DEBATE: "IS DIVORCE A SOCIAL ASSET?"
Chesterton (NO) vs. Hamilton (YES)
Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

POST DEC 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY at 3:30 — GIESEKING — GREAT PIANIST
TONIGHT at 8:15 — English Singers — SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
ONLY CONCERT THIS SEASON
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor
TOMORROW AT 8:15 2ND MONDAY CONCERT
PENSION FUND CONCERT DEC. 28 at 3:30
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM
TUES. EVE. DEC. 16 AT 8:30 — ALEXANDER KIPNIS — RUSSIAN BASS — BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL
NEWMAN TRAVELTALKS MOTION PICTURES COLOR VIEWS
FRI. EVE. DEC. 19
SAT. MAT. DEC. 20
LA VIE DE PARIS
SUNDAY AFTERNOON, DEC. 21, AT 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY THOMPSON STONE CONDUCTOR
"MESSIAH" Tickets Now $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Ruth Rogers, soprano—Abbie Conley Rice, contralto
George Boynton, tenor—Walter Kidder, bass
SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3:30 — ITURBI PIANIST
MONDAY JAN. 12 at 8:30 — Debate: "Is Divorce a Social Asset?"
CHESTERTON (NO) vs. HAMILTON (YES)
Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

HER DEC 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

HER DEC 16

SYMPHONY HALL
NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks
Fri. Eve. at 8.15 Sat. Mat. at 2.30
IMPRESSIONS OF 1930
La Vie de PARIS
Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now
Sunday, Dec. 28, at 3.30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOWSKY PROGRAM
Sunday, Jan. 4, at 3.30
ITURBI
PIANIST
SUNDAY, DEC. 21, at 3.30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

TRANS DEC 17

SYMPHONY HALL
TODAY AT 8:30
GIESEKING
TONIGHT AT 8:15
ENGLISH SINGERS
SPECIAL XMAS PROGRAM
TUESDAY, DEC. 16 AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASSO
Benefit: South End Music School
SUNDAY, DEC. 28, AT 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
Thompson Stone—Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
SUNDAY, DEC. 28, at 3:30
BOSTON SYMPHONY
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

ADV DEC 14

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

HER DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

POST DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

TRAV DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TOMORROW at 8.30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
Benefit: South End Music School

TRANS DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT AT 8:30
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
Benefit: South End Music School

GLOBE DEC 16

SYMPHONY HALL
TONIGHT
ALEXANDER
KIPNIS BASS
BENEFIT: SOUTH END MUSIC SCHOOL

POST DEC 16

SYMPHONY HALL
Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30
HANDEL AND HAYDN
SOCIETY
THOMPSON STONE—Conductor
"MESSIAH"
Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50
Sunday, Dec. 28 at 3:30
Boston Symphony
PENSION FUND
CONCERT
Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor
ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

HER DEC 16

[194]

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

Tom'w at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

Sunday, Dec. 28, at 3:30

Boston Symphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

GLOBE DEC 15

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

Tom'w. at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

Sunday, Dec. 28 at 3:30

Boston Symphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

POST DEC 18

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

Tom'w at 8:15 Sat. Mat. at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

SUNDAY, DEC. 21, at 3.30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

Sunday, Dec. 28, at 3.30

Boston Symphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY—Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOWSKY PROGRAM

TRANS DEC 18

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

TONIGHT at 8:15 TOM'W at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

HER DEC 19

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

TODAY at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

HER DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

TONIGHT at 8:15 TOM'W at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

GLOBE DEC 19

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

Tonight at 8:15 Tom'w at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

POST DEC 19

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

TODAY at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

POST DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

Sunday, Dec. 28 at 3:30

Boston Symphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

TRAV DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIA ."

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

Sunday, Dec. 28, at 3:30

BostonSymphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky—Conducter

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

AMER DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

SAT., DEC. 27, at 10:45 a. m.

"Prince Achmed"

ORIENTAL FILM FANTASY

Tickets 50c-75c-$1.00

SUNDAY, DEC. 28, at 3:30

BOSTON SYMPHONY PENSION FUND CONCERT

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

All Tchaikovsky Program

SUNDAY, JAN. 4, at 3:30

ITURBI

PIANIST

MON DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDEN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

SATURDAY DEC. 27 AT 10:45 A. M.

'PRINCE ACHMED'

ORIENTAL FILM FANTASY

Tickets 50c-75c-$1.00

SUNDAY, DEC. 28, AT 3:30

Boston Symphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

SUNDAY JAN. 4 AT 3:30

ITURBI

PIANIST

SATURDAY JAN. 10 AT 8:30

KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

SUNDAY JAN. 11 AT 3:30

YEHUDI

MENUHIN

HER DEC 21

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

SATURDAY, DEC. 27, AT 10.45 A. M.

'PRINCE ACHMED'

ORIENTAL FILM FANTASY

Tickets 50c- 75c-$1.00

SUNDAY, DEC. 28, AT 3.30

Boston Symphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

SUNDAY, JAN. 4, AT 3.30

ITURBI

PIANIST

SATURDAY, JAN. 10, AT 8.30

KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

SUNDAY, JAN. 11, AT 3.30

YEHUDI

MENUHIN

TRANS DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

SUNDAY, DEC. 28, AT 3:30

Boston Symphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

SUNDAY, JAN. 4, AT 3:30

ITURBI

PIANIST

SATURDAY, JAN. 10, AT 8:30

KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

SUNDAY, JAN. 11, AT 3:30

YEHUDI

MENUHIN

POST DEC 21

SYMPHONY HALL

SAT., DEC. 27, at 10:45 a. m.

"Prince Achmed"

ORIENTAL FILM FANTASY

Tickets 50c-75c-$1.00

SUNDAY, DEC. 28, at 3:30

PENSION FUND CONCERT

Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

ITURBI

SUNDAY, JAN. 4, at 3:30

SPANISH PIANIST

TRAV DEC 21

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 10.45 A.M.

'PRINCE ACHMED'

Oriental Film Fantasy

TICKETS 50c-75c-$1.00

SUNDAY, DEC. 28, at 3.30

PENSION FUND CONCERT

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchmen Overture and Lohengrin Prelude

STRAVINSKY—Capriccio

TCHAIKOVSKY—4th Symphony

Soloist—JESUS MARIA SANROMA

TRANS DEC 26

SYMPHONY HALL

Today at 10:45 A. M.

PRINCE ACHMED

ORIENTAL FILM FANTASY

Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00

Tomorrow at 3:30

PENSION FUND CONCERT

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Dr Serge Koussevitzky Conductor

WAGNER — Flying Dutchman Overture and Lohengrin Prelude

STRAVINSKY — CAPRICCIO—TCHAIKOVSKY—Fourth Symphony

Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma

HER DEC 27

SYMPHONY HALL

SAT. DEC. 27 at 10.45 P.M. — PRINCE ACHMED

Oriental Film Fantasy—Tickets 50c, 75c, $1

Pension Fund Concert Sunday at 3.30

Boston Symphony Orchestra

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

WAGNER, Flying Dutchman Overture, and LOHENGRIN Prelude—STRAVINSKY, Capriccio—TCHAIKOVSKY, Fourth Symphony. Soloist—Jesus Maria SANROMA.

SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3.30 — ITURBI SPANISH PIANIST

SAT. EVE. JAN. 10 at 8.30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

SUN. AFT. JAN. 11 at 3.30 — YEHUDI MENUHIN VIOLINIST

BURTON HOLMES

Colorful Travel Adventures

5 FRIDAY EVES. SATURDAY MATS. WILL BEGIN JAN. 9-10

TODAY'S ROME—THE PASSION PLAY—NORTH AFRICAN TOUR—GRAND TOUR OF EUROPE—ABYSSINIA

Color and Motion—Course Tickets DEC. 29

Amazingly Beautiful Pictures

Prices $6.00, $4.00, $2.50

Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

TRANS DEC 24

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

TONIGHT at 8:15 TOM'W at 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

Sunday, Dec. 21, at 3:30

HANDEL HAYL SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1, $1.50, $2, $2.50

HER DEC 19

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

TODAY AT 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

HER DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30

HANDEL AND HAYDN SOCIETY

THOMPSON STONE—Conductor

"MESSIAH"

Tickets $1.50, $2, $2.50

SATURDAY, DEC. 27, AT 10.45 A. M.

'PRINCE ACHMED'

ORIENTAL FILM FANTASY

Tickets 50c- 75c-$1.00

SUNDAY, DEC. 28, AT 3.30

Boston Symphony PENSION FUND CONCERT

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

SUNDAY, JAN. 4, AT 3.30

ITURBI

PIANIST

SATURDAY, JAN. 10, AT 8.30

KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI

GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

SUNDAY, JAN. 11, AT 3.30

YEHUDI

MENUHIN

TRANS DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

NEWMAN Motion Pictures Color Views Travel Talks

TODAY AT 2:30

IMPRESSIONS OF 1930

LA VIE DE PARIS

Tickets 50c to $1.50 Now

HER DEC 20

SYMPHONY HALL

SAT. DEC. 27 at 10:45 P. M.

PRINCE ACHMED

Oriental Film Fantasy—Tickets 50c, 75c, $1

Pension Fund Concert Sunday at 3:30

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchmen Overture and LOHENGRIN Prelude. STRAVINSKY—Capriccio—TCHAIKOVSKY—4th Symphony.

SOLOIST—JESUS MARIA SANROMA

SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3:30 — ITURBI SPANISH PIANIST

SAT. EVE. JAN. 10 at 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

SUN. AFT. JAN. 11 at 3:30 — YEHUDI MENUHIN VIOLINIST

BURTON HOLMES

Colorful Travel Adventures

5 FRIDAY EVES. SATURDAY MATS. WILL BEGIN JAN. 9-10

TODAY'S ROME—THE PASSION PLAY—NORTH AFRICAN TOUR—GRAND TOUR OF EUROPE—ABYSSINIA

Color and Motion—Course Tickets Amazingly Beautiful Pictures DEC. 29

Prices $6.00, $4.00, $2.50

Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

HER DEC 25

SYMPHONY HALL

SAT., DEC. 27 at 10:45 P.M.

PRINCE ACHMED

Oriental Film Fantasy—Tickets 50c, 75c, $1

Pension Fund Concert, Sunday at 3:30

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

ALL TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM

WAGNER—Flying Dutchmen Overture and LOHENGRIN Prelude

STRAVINSKY—Capriccio. TCHAIKOVSKY—4th Symphony

SOLOIST—JESUS MARIA SANROMA

BURTON HOLMES

Colorful Travel Adventures

5 FRIDAY EVES. SATURDAY MATS. WILL BEGIN JAN. 9-10

TODAY'S ROME—THE PASSION PLAY—NORTH AFRICAN TOUR—GRAND TOUR OF EUROPE—ABYSSINIA

Color and Motion—Course Tickets Amazingly Beautiful Pictures DEC. 29

Prices $6.00, $4.00, $2.50

Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

POST DEC 25

SYMPHONY HALL

Today at 10:45 A. M.

PRINCE ACHMED

ORIENTAL FILM FANTASY

Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00

Tomorrow at 3:30

PENSION FUND CONCERT

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchman Overture and Lohengrin Prelude.

STRAVINSKY—CAPRICCIO—TCHAIKOVSKY—Fourth Symphony.

Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma

GLOBE DEC 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY, at 10:45 A. M.

PRINCE ACHMED

ORIENTAL FILM FANTASY

Tickets 50c, 75c, $1.00

TOMORROW, at 3:30

PENSION FUND CONCERT

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchman Overture and Lohengrin Prelude

STRAVINSKY—CAPRICCIO—TCHAIKOVSKY—Fourth Symphony

Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma

POST DEC 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30

PENSION FUND CONCERT

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchman Overture and Lohengrin Prelude.

STRAVINSKY—CAPRICCIO—TCHAIKOVSKY—Fourth Symphony

Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma

Sun. Aft., Jan. 4, at 3:30

ITURBI

SPANISH PIANIST

HER DEC 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 3:30

PENSION FUND CONCERT

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchman Overture and Lohengrin Prelude.

STRAVINSKY—CAPRICCIO—TCHAIKOVSKY—Fourth Symphony

Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma

Sun. Aft., Jan. 4, at 3:30

ITURBI

SPANISH PIANIST

TRAV DEC 27

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW AT 3:30

PENSION FUND CONCERT

Boston Symphony ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchman Overture and Lohengrin Prelude.

STRAVINSKY—CAPRICCIO—TCHAIKOVSKY—Fourth Symphony.

Soloist: Jesus Maria Sanroma

SUN. AFT., JAN. 4, at 3:30

ITURBI

SPANISH PIANIST

MON DEC 27

SYMPHONY HALL

COURSE TICKET SALE

BURTON HOLMES

NEW . . . COLORFUL TRAVEL ADVENTURES

OPENS TODAY

SYMPHONY HALL

5 FRIDAY EVES.--5 SATURDAY MATS. BEGINNING JANUARY 9-10

Prices (5 Tours) $6.00, $4.00, $2.50

HER DEC 29

SYMPHONY HALL

COURSE TICKET SALE

BURTON HOLMES

NEW . . . COLORFUL TRAVEL ADVENTURES

OPENS TODAY

SYMPHONY HALL

5 FRIDAY EVES.--5 SATURDAY MATS. BEGINNING JANUARY 9-10

Prices (5 Tours) $6.00, $4.00, $2.50

POST DEC 29

SYMPHONY HALL

TOMORROW at 2.30

BURTON HOLMES

LA BELLE FRANCE

Tickets 50c, $1.00

SUNDAY, JAN. 4, at 3.30

ITURBI

SPANISH PIANIST

Transcript Jan 2

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 2:30

BURTON HOLMES

LA BELLE FRANCE

Tickets 50c, $1.00

Benefit: Travelers Aid Society

Tomorrow at 3:30

ITURBI

SPAIN'S GREAT PIANIST

Post Jan. 3

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 2:30

BURTON HOLMES

LA BELLE FRANCE

Tickets 50c, $1.00 Benefit: Travelers Aid Society

Sunday, Jan. 4, at 3:30

ITURBI

SPAIN'S GREAT PIANIST

Herald Jan. 3

SYMPHONY HALL

TODAY AT 2:30

BURTON HOLMES

LA BELLE FRANCE

Tickets 50c. $1.00. Benefit: Travelers' Aid Society

TOMORROW AT 3:30

ITURBI

SPAIN'S GREAT PIANIST

Globe Jan. 3

SYMPHONY HALL

Pension Fund Concert Tomorrow at 3.30

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchman Overture and Lohengrin Prelude. STRAVINSKY—Capriccio. TCHAIKOVSKY—4th Symphony.

SOLOIST—JESUS MARIA SANROMA

SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3.30 — ITURBI SPANISH PIANIST

SAT. EVE. JAN. 10 at 8.30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

SUN. AFT. JAN. 11 at 3.30 — YEHUDI MENUHIN VIOLINIST

MON. EVE. JAN. 12 at 8.30 — DEBATE: "IS DIVORCE A SOCIAL ASSET?" CHESTERTON (NO) vs. HAMILTON (YES)

SUN. AFT. JAN. 18 at 3.30 — GIGLI TENOR

BURTON HOLMES

Colorful Travel Adventures

5 FRIDAY EVES. SATURDAY MATS. WILL BEGIN JAN. 9-10

TODAY'S ROME—THE PASSION PLAY—NORTH AFRICAN TOUR—GRAND TOUR OF EUROPE—ABYSSINIA

COURSE TICKETS MONDAY, DEC. 29

Prices $6.00, $4.00, $2.50

Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

TRANS DEC 27

SYMPHONY HALL

Pension Fund Concert Today at 3:30

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchmen Overture and Lohengrin Prelude. STRAVINSKY—Capriccio—TCHAIKOVSKY—4th Symphony.

SOLOIST—JESUS MARIA SANROMA

SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3:30 — ITURBI SPANISH PIANIST

SAT. EVE. JAN. 10 at 8:30 — KREUTZBERG AND GEORGI GREAT GERMAN DANCERS

SUN. AFT. JAN. 11 at 3:30 — YEHUDI MENUHIN VIOLINIST

MON. EVE. JAN. 12 at 8:30 — DEBATE: "IS DIVORCE A SOCIAL ASSET?" CHESTERTON (NO) vs. HAMILTON (YES)

SUN. AFT. JAN. 18 at 3:30 — GIGLI TENOR

BURTON HOLMES

Colorful Travel Adventures

5 FRIDAY EVES. SATURDAY MATS. WILL BEGIN JAN. 9-10

TODAY'S ROME—THE PASSION PLAY—NORTH AFRICAN TOUR—GRAND TOUR OF EUROPE—ABYSSINIA

COURSE TICKETS TOMORROW

Prices $6.00, $4.00, $2.50

Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

HER DEC 28

SYMPHONY HALL

Pension Fund Concert Today at 3:30

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

DR. SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY, Conductor

WAGNER—Flying Dutchmen Overture and Lohengrin Prelude. STRAVINSKY—Capriccio—TSCHAIKOVSKY—4th Symphony

SOLOIST—JESUS MARIA SANROMA

SUN. AFT. JAN. 4 at 3:30 — ITURBI SPANISH PIANIST

SUN. AFT. JAN. 11 at 3:30 — YEHUDI MENUHIN VIOLINIST

SUN. AFT. JAN 18 at 3:30 — GIGLI TENOR

BURTON HOLMES

Colorful Travel Adventures

5 FRIDAY EVES. SATURDAY MATS. WILL BEGIN JAN. 9-10

TODAY'S ROME—THE PASSION PLAY—NORTH AFRICAN TOUR—GRAND TOUR OF EUROPE—ABYSSINIA

COURSE TICKETS TOMORROW

Prices $6.00, $4.00, $2.50

Mail Orders Filled Promptly—Checks to Symphony Hall

GLOBE DEC 28

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

The Rose drawn by 1929

For Ads.	Dec 1926 –	December 1927	4.	4. Advertising
"	Jan 1928 –		7	9. 7. Advertising,

911 Scrap
Cosa J. Scrap
Dispatches

[201]

Shipman's Scrap Book
FOR DUPLICATE ORDER NUMBER
911
ASA L. SHIPMAN'S SONS
NEW YORK

END OF VOLUME

VOLUME 49

BSO
Pops

1926 - 1928

Stage

Weekly Comment

The 45th season of the Boston Symphony orchestra ended with the concert of last night. The season has been a brilliant, an unusual one. It is interesting to note the composers represented, for it was generally supposed that Mr. Koussevitzky would pay special attention first to the Russians, then to the wild-eyed contemporaneous anarchists, as they are characterized by some who deplore all modern tendencies in the art, and really believe that music was buried in the coffin of Johannes Brahms.

To the amazement, no doubt to the discomfiture of the reactionaries, who, we are glad to say, are more and more in the minority, lo, the names of Brahms and Beethoven led all the rest. Each one of these composers is credited with seven performances. It is true that a symphony of Brahms was repeated; that the funeral march from Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony was played twice outside the announced program; in memory of Wilhelm Gericke, and in memory of Franz Kneisel. Even without this extra number, and the repetition, the two named would have led.

Who were next in order? Debussy and Strauss, four each; Berlioz, Bloch, Prokofieff (one repetition); Ravel (one repetition); Stravinsky (one repetition); Tchaikovsky, Wagner, three each; Bach, Haydn, Imbert, Liszt, Mendelssohn, Moussorgsky, Mozart, Respighi (repetition); Rimsky-Korsakov, Vivaldi (repetition); Weber, two each.

Music by Copeland, Gilbert, Imbert, Spelman, Tailleferre, Vivaldi, was played for the first time.

Music by Delmas, Galliard, Hindemith, Imbert, Lekeu, Roussel, Tansman, was performed probably for the first time in this country.

Other works performed in Boston for the first time were by Bloch, Debussy, Delius, Glasounov, Goossens, Liadov, Liszt, Loeffler, Moussorgsky, Prokofieff, Purcell, Respighi, Rimsky-Korsakov, Strauss, Stravinsky.

The pieces by Chausson and Satie-Debussy, performed for the first time by this orchestra had been played here by other organizations.

The following composers were represented for the first time at these concerts: Corelli, Delmas, Galliard, Hindemith, Imbert, Purcell, Satie, Spelman, Tansman.

American composers represented were Bloch (by adoption), Copland, Gilbert, Loeffler, Spelman.

There were few soloists, nor was the audience disturbed by this fact. Mr. Koussevitzky, with the admirable orchestra, is a sufficient soloist. Mr. Stratton was the only singer. The music given to him by Liszt of the 13th psalm, and by Prokofieff did not call for vocal charm o[illegible]al finesse; it was chiefly of a declamatory nature, and he is to be [illegible]d for his performance of the extremely difficult recitatives assi[illegible] him by Prokofieff. The violinists were Messrs. Enesco (with Mr. [illegible] son, pianist) in Chausson's long-winded Concert; Mr. Thibaud, wh[illegible] always a pleasure to hear; and Mr. Szigeti, who, preceded by [illegible] reports concerning his ability, owing to an attack of the grip, [illegible] ably unable to do himself full justice.

Mr. Lefranc, the leader of the viola section, an artist [illegible] rank, was perhaps unfortunate as regards popular appre[illegible] selection of Bloch's suite. Nor was Mr. Allegra's choic[illegible] rhapsody for clarinet a happy one. Mr. Casals, the viol[illegible] delighted the audience by the display of his incomparable a[illegible]

We have mentioned Mr. Hutcheson. The other pia[illegible] Bauer, devoted as ever to Brahms, and who else plays the [illegible] certo of that composer in so masterly a manner? Mr. L[illegible] gave a remarkable performance of Tchaikovsky's first concer[illegible] Prokofieff, a most interesting apparition as pianist and compose[illegible]

There was a welcome absence of the prima donna, with h[illegible] airs, graces, costumes to excite the admiration or harsh criticis[illegible] two audiences. Corot, when he was once asked why he had not in[illegible] a female figure in a certain picture, gently replied: "Woman distu[illegible] landscape." This might be said of a prima donna and a symphony c[illegible]

The programs were at times apparently arranged in a hapl[illegible]u manner. They were rich in "novelties," some of which were disappointing except in this respect: it is a good thing to hear new works so that one can know what one dislikes. One does not find easily an excuse for the performance of the overture to "Penthesilee" by Delmas; Hindemith's concerto was noteworthy, chiefly by its rhythmic energy, yet to pass him by, considering his present prominence in the European musical world, would have been a pity; Roussel's suite from "Padmavati" is austere in its orientalism, devoid of emotion, lacking in the sensuousness expected by reason of the subject; Spelman's "Assissi" was probably chosen as a compliment to the American composer, but there were some agreeable pages in it; Miss Tailleferre's little pieces were pretty and, fortunately, short; Tansman's Sinfonietta excited a wish for a further acquaintance with the man; Imbert's "Song of Madness" is inferior to his "Ports-of-Call," and was poorly placed after Prokofieff's tremendous "They Are Seven." Lekeu's fantasie is hardly worth while.

On the other hand, the unfamiliar compositions by Copland, Galliard, Gilbert, Vivaldi, Bloch (Concerto Grosso), Respighi, Stravinsky, Prokofieff, Loeffler, were well worth while. Strauss's "Alp" symphony proved to have amusing pages. So let us forget Rimsky-Korsakov's "Battle at Kerjenetz," ineffective out of the opera house.

Forty-eight subscription concerts; five Monday night concerts; five Tuesday afternoon concerts; two Pension Fund concerts, besides the trips of the orchestra; and into all he does Mr. Koussevitzky puts his heart, soul, nervous energy, amazing personal magnetism. How does the man endure the strain?

Not without reason were two pairs of concerts conducted in turn by Mr. Pless and Mr. Goossens. The latter brought out his own Sinfonietta and a poetic piece by Delius, who is still too little known here. Nor was it reasonable to expect Mr. Koussevitzky to conduct the three concerts for young people.

There is this to be said about him: One looks forward eagerly to every concert he conducts, no matter what the program may be. The question is no longer, "who will be the soloist?" a question asked first of all by many in the past when there was talk of attending a concert. "Mr. Koussevitsky will conduct"; that is sufficient announcement, inducement.

One may differ with him now and then about the character of an interpretation, but the expression of his individual thinking is interesting, yes, instructive to those who are not slaves to some long established tradition, often without a foundation. Many actors have been seen as Hamlet on our stage. There was a marked difference in their general conception and in the details of stage business. Did any one of these actors fail to excite interest?

E. S. Willard was the one noteworthy exception. The Brahms of Mr. Koussevitzky may not be the Brahms known to the routine, time-beating conductor, but as speaking through Mr. Koussevitzky he is an emotional, glorified Brahms. This same producer of works by the radical school plays with a peculiar grace and elegance the music of long bygone years. One does not say of him—and the Lord be praised!—that he is a Beethoven "specialist," a Strauss "specialist," or any other "specialist." He is a man of all schools, of all periods.

The people hear him gladly. Not only in Boston, as is shown by necessary extra concerts; there is the same story in cities that he visits.

This city has reason to be proud of him. He is a great conductor. Possible failings, limitations of a trifling nature to which a few refer, not without a touch of bitterness, are more to be valued than the pedestrian and monotonous virtues of other conductors. These failings come from the romantic, the imaginative, the enthusiastic nature of the man; they are as a feather in the balance, weighed down by pure gold. P. H.

[illegible] fest and should be a great help and

KOUSSEVITZKY WINS TRIBUTE

Striking Ovation at Final Friday Afternoon Symphony Concert

VARIED APPEAL MARKS PROGRAM

By PHILIP HALE

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave the 24th and last Friday afternoon concert of its 45th season in Symphony hall. We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended Symphony concerts since the fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous; it was prolonged; it was enthusiastic; it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and the hearts of his audience.

His program for this memorable occasion was well contrasted, interesting, with a varied appeal; a program free from any desire to win for the conductor a sensational success by a vain display of virtuosity. There was no unfamiliar composition to cause surprise and excite discussion. Vivaldi's Concerto, E minor, for strings; Debussy's exquisite orchestration of Satie's "Gymnopedies," which are conceived in Sophoclean purity of form and spirit; the first symphony of Johannes Brahms—these had been performed in the course of this season. The remaining number was the Suite from Stravinsky's ballet: "Petrouchka."

It is not necessary to dwell on the character of this or that composition, but a few words may be said about the interpretation and the performance. Mr. Koussevitzky, a warm friend of contemporaneous composers of ultra-modern tendencies, zealous in their behalf, has a respect for the music of the 17th and 18th centuries, a respect that is more than historical. He sees, feels and reveals the gaiety and the serenity of these scores; the rhythmic energy, and the lyric tenderness. Nor was the jump from Vivaldi to that strange being, Erik Satie, so disconcerting as it might seem at first thought. Debussy learned much from Satie's opinions on musical art. He and his counsellor were nearer to the men of the 18th century than they were to the heroic figures of the 19th and 20th. While "Petrouchka" is first of all for the theatre, it is a brilliant if necessarily a less significant concert piece, but it well serves to display the technical proficiency of an orchestra and the imaginative dramatic nature of a conductor.

Here are three compositions that tested the skill and the aestheticism of Mr. Koussevitzky, tested them before he raised his baton for the symphony. Now Mr. Koussevitzky, a pronounced admirer of Brahms, has his own ideas as to the interpretation of that composer. He knows the absurdity of blindly obeying traditions, which in nine cases out of ten are without foundation or substantial reason. He recognizes the dramatic, the romantically dramatic side of Brahms. To bring it fully out he reads the score as a well-graced actor plays a Shakesperian part, without thought of the commentators, regardless of views held by preceding tragedians or comedians. And so his interpretation of the symphony was profoundly emotional, with stirring moments, not without recognition of the meditative, brooding spirit with which certain pages are charged.

Does some one say, "But this performance was not of the sort to which I have been accustomed. It was not Brahms as I know him."?

If it was not Brahms, it was better than Brahms.

A few remarks about the season that ends tonight with a repetition of this concert will be found in The Herald of tomorrow.

Symphony Conductor Honored by Audience

(Photo by Garo)
SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

TO BROADCAST POP CONCERTS

HERALD MAY 1

Programs Will Be Put on the Air Saturdays Through WEEI

One of the most important radio-musical events of the year will be the broadcasting of the Pop concerts on nine successive Saturday evenings beginning next Saturday and ending July 3, through station WEEI. This innovation has been made possible by W. S. Quinby of the W. S. Quinby Company, who was instrumental in having the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast this season, working in co-operation with the trustees of the orchestra and the officials of the Edison company.

Because of its prestige and the tradition which surrounded it, the broadcasting of the symphony was considered an experiment by those who arranged the series. There was much speculation as to whether such superlative music would ever be popular with radio audiences. The response, however, has been overwhelming.

Thousands of letters have been received by Mr. Quinby and station WEEI thanking them for the programs. Parents have commented on the unusual educational value of the symphony music; invalids, writing from their beds, have told of the comfort and inspiration it brought them; listeners in isolated sections of New England have sent messages of gratitude.

(Continued on Page Four, Column 8)

TO BROADCAST POP CONCERTS

(Continued from Page One)

All this convinced Mr. Quinby, the orchestra trustees and the officials of WEEI that it was only logical that the Pops should be the succeeding broadcast. The personnel of the Pops orchestra includes 80 of the regular symphony players, under the leadership of Agide Jacchia, who is about to open his 10th season as conductor.

Although the Pop programs will naturally be lighter than those of the symphony, the music will be of the finest quality and the playing will be on the same level. Beginning at 8:05 each Saturday night, thousands of persons sitting in their homes will have the same privilege as the thousands sitting in Symphony hall.

Mr. Quinby will announce the Pop broadcast at the final concert in the regular symphony series at 8:10 tonight over WEEI. He will be followed by E. F. A., chief announcer of the station, who will tell the concluding chapter of the symphony instrument story which was begun on the evening of Feb. 20, and which has continued at each succeeding symphony broadcast. The subject of the talk tonight will be "The percussion, harp, organ and other special instruments of the Boston Symphony Orchestra."

TRANS MAY 10.

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of Tufts College

March from "The Queen of Sheba" ..... Gounod
Overture to the Opera, "Merry Wives of Windsor" ..... Nicolai
Fantasia from the Opera, "Fedora" ..... Giordano
Tufts Songs .....
Concert Overture, "Euterpe" ..... Chadwick
Symphonic Poem, "Finlandia" ..... Sibelius
Carnival in Paris ..... Svendsen
Tufts Songs .....
Ride of the Valkyrs ..... Wagner
Waltz, "Estudiantina" ..... Waldteufel
Wedding March ..... Mendelssohn

Conductors:
A. Jacchia. G. W. Chadwick.

Attached Clipping Appeared in t

Issue of
MAY 1926

"Hurrah Boys" Symphonic Piece "Absolute Music"

"Yesterday people wrote only program music and took the greatest pains to let the audience in on the program. Today there is a rush for absolute music, and the composers, instead of writing long perorations on what the music is supposed to represent, write equally long perorations telling the audience that their music represents nothing."

This somewhat sweeping observation of Samuel Chotzinoff of the World prefaces his review of the first New York performance of Henry F. Gilbert's new Symphonic Piece, introduced by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Koussevitzky at the March 11 concert at Carnegie hall.

Mr. Gilbert, we are told by Mr. Chotzinoff, "assures us in a program note that he didn't want his music to mean one thing or another. His only desire was to write music that would contain some of the national (American) ingredients—vulgarity, vitality, and an immense optimism." . . .

"It is a pity that music lovers should fall into a state of mind which prevents the enjoyment of music unless it represents something," says Mr. Henderson. "Mr. Gilbert did have an idea in mind, but it was a broad one. . . . He had always wanted to write American music which could not have been written in any other country. . . . To him the American spirit is energetic, optimistic, nervous, and impatient of restraint. It revolts against the spirit of the past. It is full of jingoism and vulgarity and its battle cry is 'Hurrah boys.' Under all is the spirit of a new birth."

The symphonic piece designed by Mr. Gilbert to describe in a very general way America as he feels it, Mr. Henderson says "breathes the aggressiveness, the bumptiousness, if you will, of the American spirit, and all of its optimism, its perfect confidence in itself and its occasional sympathetic tear for sob sister romance. It is a brave, honest piece of music and it is pleasant to hear."

"Even though the vulgarity of which the composer speaks so optimistically does not enter disturbingly into his music," says Mr. Sanborn of the Telegram, "one may pronounce his symphonic piece highly successful. . . . Though too long it has substance, character, coherence, spirit, impetus. There is effective use of 'rag time'—hardly of jazz."

Mr. Gilbert's use of the 'rag time' rhythm "has not the cheapness of spirit which often accompanies it," says Olin Downes, in the Times. "Mr. Gilbert is individual—like no other composer—and at the same time genuinely racial in his expression. . . . His writing is direct and cogent, and incorruptibly sincere."

Because of Mr. Gilbert's being an American composer, Mme. Samaroff regrets particularly that she "could not find any musical importance" in the symphonic piece which was the first work she had heard by this composer, whose previous compositions, she tells us, "have elicted high praise from Philip Hale (Boston), Olin Downes, and other prominent critics.

"My attitude toward music," says Mme. Samaroff, "makes it always a matter of regret if I listen to a work without enjoyment. When the composer is an American the regret is doubled, but patriotism cannot create artistic impressions."

Globe MAY 9

Comment on the Season

Post mortems on the musical season just ended are in order at this time. Last Sunday this column commented at length on the Boston Symphony concerts, which have been this year again mostly Koussevitsky. One's perpetual grievance on the subject of the Boston Orchestra under his leadership is the excessively personal note Koussevitsky strikes.

But this is after all only the excess of a virtue. The Boston Symphony now overshadows every thing else in the local musical world as it did in its best

ZIONIST NIGHT
POPS CONCERT
Tuesday Evening, June 8, 1926
at 8 o'clock
SYMPHONY HALL

Auspices, Daughters of Zion
and Constituent Organizations
Proceeds, Jewish National Fund

SOLOIST
Cantor Isadore Adelsman
NOTED TENOR

Choice Seats Can Be Obtained: New England Zionist Bureau, 66 Scollay Square, Boston. Tel. Hay. 5624, Tel. Hay. 5245

ALL JEWS ASKED TO PARTICIPATE
Have a Good Time and Help to Redeem the Soil of Palestine!

ZIONIST NIGHT AT "POPS"

JEWISH ADV MAY 6

It was announced today from the headquarters of the Jewish National Fund and Zionist Organization that on Tuesday night, June 8, at Symphony Hall, through the efforts of the Daughters of Zion and in co-operation with other organizations, all seats of Symphony Hall have been purchased for a special Zionist night at the Pops.

Co-operating societies are the New England Zionist Region, New England National Fund, Crawford Street Synagogue, Sisterhood of Crawford Street Synagogue, Beth Eli Sisterhood, Zerie Zion, Ladies' Aid, Cambridge; Temple Ashkenaz, Young Judaeans, Somerville Young Zionists, Avukah, Amos Auxiliary and the Roxbury Ladies' Aid.

This will be the first Zion Night in the history of the Pops.

It was made known by a committee that conferred with the noted director, Agide Jacchia, that a special program consisting of Jewish national music is being arranged for that night.

On account of the fact that the entire proceeds of this affair will go for the Jewish National Fund to purchase land in Palestine, Zionist workers that met last Tuesday night at the Menorah Institute were greatly inspired to work and resolved to purchase all the seats of Symphony Hall on that night which will be on sale to the public. The committee is headed by Dr. Bessie Sharenson and the following are the members of the committee co-operating: Jacob Rabinovitz, chairman of the New England Jewish National Fund; Hon. Elihu D. Stone, president of the New England Zionist Region, together with the following others who are assisting actively to make the event a success: Mrs. Hurwitz, vice-president; Mrs. Bardin, chairman ex-officio; Mrs. J. Sieff, chairman ad department; Mrs. Goverman, secretary professional page; Mrs. Cohen, financial secretary; Mrs. J. Promboin, treasurer jewel page; Miss E. Promboin, Mrs. I. Pollack, Mrs. Amsoff, Mrs. Shapiro, Mrs. Glasser, Mrs. Cornblatt, Mrs. Lifshitz, Mrs. Kramer, Mrs. Olansky, Mrs. Glasser, Mr. Pokat, Elihu D. Stone, Mrs. Max Nigrosh, B. Levin, Mrs.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

MAY 2 1926

E-FLAT CLARINETS NOW MADE IN U. S.

Only the daring of the thief who stole the clarinets carried on his concert tours around the country by Arturo Vannini, clarinetist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, brought about the manufacture of E-flat clarinets in this country.

The instrument is one rarely used, so rarely, in fact, that American manufacturers never troubled to make them. Vannini, however, needed his to play the solo part in Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" in a concert the orchestra was to give some six months ago.

He expected to have to send to Europe for a new one. The Cundy-Bettoney Co., of Boston, whose attention was attracted by the artist's search for an instrument, offered to make him one. It was done and the concert program went on according to schedule.

E-flat clarinets, as a result, are now taking a place in the catalogues of most of the principal instrument manufacturers in the country.

Globe MAY 6

Second Week of Pops

With tonight's operatic program, the first Sunday concert of the season, the "Pops" at Symphony Hall will enter upon their second week. Agide Jacchia and the Symphony Orchestra of 80 players will be heard in the following programs of which Monday will be Tufts night, Tuesday, Northeastern University night, Friday, Maine night, and Thursday, Eastern Star night. All but the last named are open to the public.

Sunday, May 9, Operatic Program—"Jeanne D'Arc," overture, "Il Trovatore," selection, "La Forza Del Destino," overture, "Aida," fantasia, "Othello," the tempest, Verdi; "Eugen Onegin," fantasia, Tchaikovsky, "Seigfried," forest murmers, Wagner; "Carmen," toreador song, Bizet; "Goyescas," intermezzo, Granados; "Samson and Delilah," bachanale, Saint-Saens.

Monday, May 10—Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba," Gounod; overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Nicolai; fantasia, "Fedora," Giordano; Tufts songs; overture, "Euterpe," Chadwick; symphonic poem, "Finlandia," Sibelius; carnival in Paris, Svendsen; Tufts songs; "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner; waltz, "Estudiantina," Waldteufel; "Wedding March," Mendelssohn.

Tuesday, May 11—"March Militaire," Saint-Saens; overture to "Orpheus," Offenbach; fantasia, "Carmen," Bizet; college songs; "Rumanian Rhapsody," Enesco; "Orientale," Cui-Jacchia; "Whispering Flowers," Elon; finale from the Fourth Symphony, Tchaikovsky; Alfro-American folk songs, arranged by Jacchia; waltz, "Tres Jolie," Waldteufel; Northeastern victory song, C. J. Ginder.

Wednesday, May 12—"Cortege de Bacchus," Delibes; overture to "Oberon," Weber; fantasia, "Manon Lescant," Puccini; Harvard Freshman Glee Club in four folk songs; rhapsody, "Espana," Chabrier; prelude to "Lohengrin," Wagner; polovtsian dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin; songs by Harvard Freshman Glee Club; "Fete Boheme," Massenet; Orientale, Amaro-Jacchia; waltz, "Roses from the South," Strauss.

Eastern Star night, Thursday, May 13, entire house taken.

Friday, May 14—March, "From Maine to California," Sousa; overture to "Raymond," Thomas; minuet in G, No. 2, Beethoven; fantasia from "La Boheme," Puccini; Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody, Liszt; serenade, Schubert; waltz in A major, Brahms-Gericke; Finale from "Symphony for Organ and Orchestra," Guilmant; Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda," Ponchielli; Marche Miniature, Tchaikovsky; Slavonic dance No. 1, Dvorak.

Saturday, May 15—"Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg" from "Tannhauser, Wagner; Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Rossini; humoresque, op. 10, No. 2, [illegible]

Boston Symphony Orchestra

That the Boston Symphony Orchestra is one of the three or four of our great orchestras is almost a commonplace to say today. The impetus given the famous organization by Serge Kussevitzky, its brilliant leader, has been manifest from his first concert in this city, and the gradual welding together of all the forces that make up a symphony orchestra has been a constant delight to the big audiences that have again become the rule at these concerts.

Mr. Kussevitzky's final New York programs for the season included Brahms' Second Symphony, a charming Sonata by Galliard, orchestrated by Maximilian Steinberg, the "Tannhæuser" "Bacchanale," and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" on Thursday evening; Tschaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, Ravel's "Mother Goose" Suite, Debussy's "Gigues," and a Bach Concerto (arranged by Mottl) on Saturday afternoon.

The Brahms Symphony was played "a la Russe," but it was a vital reading, so why complain? The "Petrouchka" Suite has been played here quite frequently of late—by Toscanini even, among others—but under no conductor did it have quite the raciness as under Kussevitzky. The Galliard Sonata was a true delight. It was exquisitely rendered by the matchless string section of the orchestra. Tschaikovsky's Fourth Symphony closed Mr. Kussevitzky's second New York season triumphantly!

JEWISH TRIBUNE MAY 7

KOUSSEVITZKY WINS TRIBUTE

Striking Ovation at Final Friday Afternoon Symphony Concert

VARIED APPEAL MARKS PROGRAM

By PHILIP HALE

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave the 24th and last Friday afternoon concert of its 45th season in Symphony hall. We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended Symphony concerts since the fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous; it was prolonged; it was enthusiastic; it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and the hearts of his audience.

His program for this memorable occasion was well contrasted, interesting, with a varied appeal; a program free from any desire to win for the conductor a sensational success by a vain display of virtuosity. There was no unfamiliar composition to cause surprise and excite discussion. Vivaldi's Concerto, E minor, for strings; Debussy's exquisite orchestration of Satie's "Gymnopedies," which are conceived in Sophoclean purity of form and spirit; the first symphony of Johannes Brahms—these had been performed in the course of this season. The remaining number was the Suite from Stravinsky's ballet: "Petrouchka."

It is not necessary to dwell on the character of this or that composition, but a few words may be said about the interpretation and the performance. Mr. Koussevitzky, a warm friend of contemporaneous composers of ultra-modern tendencies, zealous in their behalf, has a respect for the music of the 17th and 18th centuries, a respect that is more than historical. He sees, feels and reveals the gaiety and the serenity of these scores; the rhythmic energy, and the lyric tenderness. Nor was the jump from Vivaldi to that strange being, Erik Satie, so disconcerting as it might seem at first thought. Debussy learned much from Satie's opinions on musical art. He and his counsellor were nearer to the men of the 18th century than they were to the heroic figures of the 19th and 20th. While "Petrouchka" is first of all for the theatre, it is a brilliant if necessarily a less significant concert piece, but it well serves to display the technical proficiency of an orchestra and the imaginative dramatic nature of a conductor.

Here are three compositions that tested the skill and the aestheticism of Mr. Koussevitzky, tested them before he raised his baton for the symphony. Now Mr. Koussevitzky, a pronounced admirer of Brahms, has his own ideas as to the interpretation of that composer. He knows the absurdity of blindly obeying traditions, which in nine cases out of ten are without foundation or substantial reason. He recognizes the dramatic, the romantically dramatic side of Brahms. To bring it fully out he reads the score as a well-graced actor plays a Shakesperian part, without thought of the commentators, regardless of views held by preceding tragedians or comedians. And so his interpretation of the symphony was profoundly emotional, with stirring moments, not without recognition of the meditative, brooding spirit with which certain pages are charged.

Does some one say, "But this performance was not of the sort to which I have been accustomed. It was not Brahms as I know him."?

If it was not Brahms, it was better than Brahms.

A few remarks about the season that ends tonight with a repetition of this concert will be found in The Herald of tomorrow.

Symphony Conductor Honored by Audience

(Photo by Garo)
SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

TO BROADCAST POP CONCERTS

Herald MAY 1

Programs Will Be Put on the Air Saturdays Through WEEI

One of the most important radio-musical events of the year will be the broadcasting of the Pop concerts on nine successive Saturday evenings beginning next Saturday and ending July 3, through station WEEI. This innovation has been made possible by W. S. Quinby of the W. S. Quinby Company, who was instrumental in having the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast this season, working in co-operation with the trustees of the orchestra and the officials of the Edison company.

Because of its prestige and the tradition which surrounded it, the broadcasting of the symphony was considered an experiment by those who arranged the series. There was much speculation as to whether such superlative music would ever be popular with radio audiences. The response, however, has been overwhelming.

Thousands of letters have been received by Mr. Quinby and station WEEI thanking them for the programs. Parents have commented on the unusual educational value of the symphony music; invalids, writing from their beds, have told of the comfort and inspiration it brought them; listeners in isolated sections of New England have sent messages of gratitude.

(Continued on Page Four, Column 8)

TO BROADCAST POP CONCERTS

(Continued from Page One)

All this convinced Mr. Quinby, the orchestra trustees and the officials of WEEI that it was only logical that the Pops should be the succeeding broadcast. The personnel of the Pops orchestra includes 80 of the regular symphony players, under the leadership of Agide Jacchia, who is about to open his 10th season as conductor.

Although the Pop programs will naturally be lighter than those of the symphony, the music will be of the finest quality and the playing will be on the same level. Beginning at 8:05 each Saturday night, thousands of persons sitting in their homes will have the same privilege as the thousands sitting in Symphony hall.

Mr. Quinby will announce the Pop broadcast at the final concert in the regular symphony series at 8:10 tonight over WEEI. He will be followed by E. F. A., chief announcer of the station, who will tell the concluding chapter of the symphony instrument story which was begun on the evening of Feb. 20, and which has continued at each succeeding symphony broadcast. The subject of the talk tonight will be "The percussion, harp, organ and other special instruments of the Boston Symphony Orchestra."

TRANS MAY 10

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of Tufts College

March from "The Queen of Sheba" ..... Gounod
Overture to the Opera, "Merry Wives of Windsor" ..... Nicolai
Fantasia from the Opera, "Fedora" ..... Giordano
Tufts Songs .....
Concert Overture, "Euterpe" ..... Chadwick
Symphonic Poem, "Finlandia" ..... Sibelius
Carnival in Paris ..... Svendsen
Tufts Songs .....
Ride of the Valkyrs ..... Wagner
Waltz, "Estudiantina" ..... Waldteufel
Wedding March ..... Mendelssohn

Conductors:
A. Jacchia. G. W. Chadwick.

Attached Clipping Appeared in t

Issue of
MAY 1926

"Hurrah Boys" Symphonic Piece "Absolute Music"

"Yesterday people wrote only program music and took the greatest pains to let the audience in on the program. Today there is a rush for absolute music, and the composers, instead of writing long perorations on what the music is supposed to represent, write equally long perorations telling the audience that their music represents nothing."

This somewhat sweeping observation of Samuel Chotzinoff of the World prefaces his review of the first New York performance of Henry F. Gilbert's new Symphonic Piece, introduced by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Koussevitzky at the March 11 concert at Carnegie hall.

Mr. Gilbert, we are told by Mr. Chotzinoff, "assures us in a program note that he didn't want his music to mean one thing or another. His only desire was to write music that would contain some of the national (American) ingredients—vulgarity, vitality, and an immense optimism." . . .

"It is a pity that music lovers should fall into a state of mind which prevents the enjoyment of music unless it represents something," says Mr. Henderson. "Mr. Gilbert did have an idea in mind, but it was a broad one. . . . He had always wanted to write American music which could not have been written in any other country. . . . To him the American spirit is energetic, optimistic, nervous, and impatient of restraint. It revolts against the spirit of the past. It is full of jingoism and vulgarity and its battle cry is 'Hurrah boys.' Under all is the spirit of a new birth."

The symphonic piece designed by Mr. Gilbert to describe in a very general way America as he feels it, Mr. Henderson says "breathes the aggressiveness, the bumptiousness, if you will, of the American spirit, and all of its optimism, its perfect confidence in itself and its occasional sympathetic tear for sob sister romance. It is a brave, honest piece of music and it is pleasant to hear."

"Even though the vulgarity of which the composer speaks so optimistically does not enter disturbingly into his music," says Mr. Sanborn of the Telegram, "one may pronounce his symphonic piece highly successful. . . . Though too long it has substance, character, coherence, spirit, impetus. There is effective use of 'rag time'—hardly of jazz."

Mr. Gilbert's use of the 'rag time' rhythm "has not the cheapness of spirit which often accompanies it," says Olin Downes, in the Times. "Mr. Gilbert is individual—like no other composer—and at the same time genuinely racial in his expression. . . . His writing is direct and cogent, and incorruptibly sincere."

Because of Mr. Gilbert's being an American composer, Mme. Samaroff regrets particularly that she "could not find any musical importance" in the symphonic piece which was the first work she had heard by this composer, whose previous compositions, she tells us, "have elicted high praise from Philip Hale (Boston), Olin Downes, and other prominent critics.

"My attitude toward music," says Mme. Samaroff, "makes it always a matter of regret if I listen to a work without enjoyment. When the composer is an American the regret is doubled, but patriotism cannot create artistic impressions."

Globe MAY 1

Comment on the Season

Post mortems on the musical season just ended are in order at this time. Last Sunday this column commented at length on the Boston Symphony concerts, which have been this year again mostly Koussevitsky. One's perpetual grievance on the subject of the Boston Orchestra under his leadership is the excessively personal note Koussevitsky strikes.

But this is after all only the excess of a virtue. The Boston Symphony now overshadows every thing else in the local musical world as it did in its best days.

ZIONIST NIGHT
POPS CONCERT
Tuesday Evening, June 8, 1926
at 8 o'clock
SYMPHONY HALL
Auspices, Daughters of Zion
and Constituent Organizations
Proceeds, Jewish National Fund
SOLOIST
Cantor Isadore Adelsman
NOTED TENOR
Choice Seats Can Be Obtained: New England Zionist Bureau, 60 Scollay Square, Boston. Tel. Hay. 5624, Tel. Hay. 5245
ALL JEWS ASKED TO PARTICIPATE
Have a Good Time and Help to Redeem the Soil of Palestine!

ZIONIST NIGHT AT "POPS"

Jewish Adv MAY 6

It was announced today from the headquarters of the Jewish National Fund and Zionist Organization that on Tuesday night, June 8, at Symphony Hall, through the efforts of the Daughters of Zion and in co-operation with other organizations, all seats of Symphony Hall have been purchased for a special Zionist night at the Pops.

Co-operating societies are the New England Zionist Region, New England National Fund, Crawford Street Synagogue, Sisterhood of Crawford Street Synagogue, Beth Eli Sisterhood, Zerie Zion, Ladies' Aid, Cambridge; Temple Ashkenaz, Young Judaeans, Somerville Young Zionists, Avukah, Amos Auxiliary and the Roxbury Ladies' Aid.

This will be the first Zion Night in the history of the Pops.

It was made known by a committee that conferred with the noted director, Agide Jacchia, that a special program consisting of Jewish national music is being arranged for that night.

On account of the fact that the entire proceeds of this affair will go for the Jewish National Fund to purchase land in Palestine, Zionist workers that met last Tuesday night at the Menorah Institute were greatly inspired to work and resolved to purchase all the seats of Symphony Hall on that night which will be on sale to the public. The committee is headed by Dr. Bessie Sharenson and the following are the members of the committee co-operating: Jacob Rabinovitz, chairman of the New England Jewish National Fund; Hon. Elihu D. Stone, president of the New England Zionist Region, together with the following others who are assisting actively to make the event a success: Mrs. Hurwitz, vice-president; Mrs. Bardin, chairman ex-officio; Mrs. J. Sieff, chairman ad department; Mrs. Goverman, secretary professional page; Mrs. Cohen, financial secretary; Mrs. J. Promboin, treasurer jewel page; Miss E. Promboin, Mrs. I. Pollack, Mrs. Angoff, Mrs. Shapiro, Mrs. Glasser, Mrs. Cornblatt, Mrs. Lifshitz, Mrs. Kramer, Mrs. Olansky, Mrs. Glasser, Mr. Pokat, Elihu D. Stone, Mrs. Max Nigrosh, B. Levin, Mrs.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

MAY 2 1926

E-FLAT CLARINETS NOW MADE IN U. S.

Only the daring of the thief who stole the clarinets carried on his concert tours around the country by Arturo Vannini, clarinetist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, brought about the manufacture of E-flat clarinets in this country.

The instrument is one rarely used, so rarely, in fact, that American manufacturers never troubled to make them. Vannini, however, needed his to play the solo part in Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" in a concert the orchestra was to give some six months ago.

He expected to have to send to Europe for a new one. The Cundy-Bettoney Co., of Boston, whose attention was attracted by the artist's search for an instrument, offered to make him one. It was done and the concert program went on according to schedule.

E-flat clarinets, as a result, are now taking a place in the catalogues of most of the principal instrument manufacturers in the country.

Globe MAY 7

Second Week of Pops

With tonight's operatic program, the first Sunday concert of the season, the "Pops" at Symphony Hall will enter upon their second week. Agide Jacchia and the Symphony Orchestra of 80 players will be heard in the following programs of which Monday will be Tufts night, Tuesday, Northeastern University night, Friday, Maine night, and Thursday, Eastern Star night. All but the last named are open to the public.

Sunday, May 9, Operatic Program—"Jeanne D'Arc," overture, "Il Trovatore," selection, "La Forza Del Destino," overture, "Aida," fantasia, "Othello," the tempest, Verdi; "Eugen Onegin," fantasia, Tchaikovsky, "Seigfried," forest murmers, Wagner; "Carmen," toreador song, Bizet; "Goyescas," intermezzo, Granados; "Samson and Delilah," bachanale, Saint-Saens.

Monday, May 10—Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba," Gounod; overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Nicolai; fantasia, "Fedora," Giordano; Tufts songs; overture, "Euterpe," Chadwick; symphonic poem, "Finlandia," Sibelius; carnival in Paris, Svendsen; Tufts songs; "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner; waltz, "Estudiantina," Waldteufel; "Wedding March," Mendelssohn.

Tuesday, May 11—"March Militaire," Saint-Saens; overture to "Orpheus," Offenbach; fantasia, "Carmen," Bizet; college songs; "Rumanian Rhapsody," Enesco; "Orientale," Cui-Jacchia; "Whispering Flowers," Blon; finale from the Fourth Symphony, Tchaikovsky; Alfro-Amelcan folk songs, arranged by Jacchia; waltz, "Tres Jolie," Waldteufel; Northeastern victory song, C. J. Ginder.

Wednesday, May 12—"Cortege de Bacchus," Delibes; overture to "Oberon," Weber; fantasia, "Manon Lescant," Puccini; Harvard Freshman Glee Club in four folk songs; rhapsody, "Espana," Chabrier; prelude to "Lohengrin," Wagner; polovtsian dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin; songs by Harvard Freshman Glee Club; "Fete Boheme," Massenet; Orientale, Amadi-Jacchia; waltz, "Roses from the South," Strauss.

Eastern Star night, Thursday, May 13, entire house taken.

Friday, May 14—March, "From Maine to California," Sousa; overture to "Raymond," Thomas; minuet in G, No. 2, Beethoven; fantasia from "La Boheme," Puccini; Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody, Liszt; serenade, Schubert; waltz in A major, Brahms-Gericke; Finale from "Symphony for Organ and Orchestra," Guilmant; Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda," Ponchielli; Marche Miniature, Tchaikovsky; Slavonic dance No. 1, Dvorak.

Saturday, May 15—"Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg" from 'Tannhauser, Wagner; Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Rossini; humoresque, op. 10, No. 2, Tschaikovsky.

Boston Symphony Orchestra

That the Boston Symphony Orchestra is one of the three or four of our great orchestras is almost a commonplace to say today. The impetus given the famous organization by Serge Kussevitzky, its brilliant leader, has been manifest from his first concert in this city, and the gradual welding together of all the forces that make up a symphony orchestra has been a constant delight to the big audiences that have again become the rule at these concerts.

Mr. Kussevitzky's final New York programs for the season included Brahms' Second Symphony, a charming Sonata by Galliard, orchestrated by Maximilian Steinberg, the "Tannhæuser" "Bacchanale," and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" on Thursday evening; Tschaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, Ravel's "Mother Goose" Suite Debussy's "Gigues," and a Bach Concerto (arranged by Mottl) on Saturday afternoon.

The Brahms Symphony was played "a la Russe," but it was a vital reading, so why complain? The "Petrouchka" Suite has been played here quite frequently of late—by Toscanini even, among others—but under no conductor did it have quite the raciness as under Kussevitzky. The Galliard Sonata was a true delight. It was exquisitely rendered by the matchless string section of the orchestra. Tschaikovsky's Fourth Symphony closed Mr. Kussevitzky's second New York season triumphantly!

EVENING TRANSCRIPT
MAY 7

KOUSSEVITZKY WINS TRIBUTE

Striking Ovation at Final Friday Afternoon Symphony Concert

VARIED APPEAL MARKS PROGRAM

By PHILIP HALE

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave the 24th and last Friday afternoon concert of its 45th season in Symphony hall. We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended Symphony concerts since the fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous; it was prolonged; it was enthusiastic; it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and the hearts of his audience.

His program for this memorable occasion was well contrasted, interesting, with a varied appeal; a program free from any desire to win for the conductor a sensational success by a vain display of virtuosity. There was no unfamiliar composition to cause surprise and excite discussion. Vivaldi's Concerto, E minor, for strings; Debussy's exquisite orchestration of Satie's "Gymnopedies," which are conceived in Sophoclean purity of form and spirit; the first symphony of Johannes Brahms—these had been performed in the course of this season. The remaining number was the Suite from Stravinsky's ballet: "Petrouchka."

It is not necessary to dwell on the character of this or that composition, but a few words may be said about the interpretation and the performance. Mr. Koussevitzky, a warm friend of contemporaneous composers of ultra-modern tendencies, zealous in their behalf, has a respect for the music of the 17th and 18th centuries, a respect that is more than historical. He sees, feels and reveals the gaiety and the serenity of these scores; the rhythmic energy, and the lyric tenderness. Nor was the jump from Vivaldi to that strange being, Erik Satie, so disconcerting as it might seem at first thought. Debussy learned much from Satie's opinions on musical art. He and his counsellor were nearer to the men of the 18th century than they were to the heroic figures of the 19th and 20th. While "Petrouchka" is first of all for the theatre, it is a brilliant if necessarily a less significant concert piece, but it well serves to display the technical proficiency of an orchestra and the imaginative dramatic nature of a conductor.

Here are three compositions that tested the skill and the aestheticism of Mr. Koussevitzky, tested them before he raised his baton for the symphony. Now Mr. Koussevitzky, a pronounced admirer of Brahms, has his own ideas as to the interpretation of that composer. He knows the absurdity of blindly obeying traditions, which in nine cases out of ten are without foundation or substantial reason. He recognizes the dramatic, the romantically dramatic side of Brahms. To bring it fully out he reads the score as a well-graced actor plays a Shakesperian part, without thought of the commentators, regardless of views held by preceding tragedians or comedians. And so his interpretation of the symphony was profoundly emotional, with stirring moments, not without recognition of the meditative, brooding spirit with which certain pages are charged.

Does some one say, "But this performance was not of the sort to which I have been accustomed. It was not Brahms as I know him."?

If it was not Brahms, it was better than Brahms.

A few remarks about the season that ends tonight with a repetition of this concert will be found in The Herald of tomorrow.

Symphony Conductor Honored by Audience

(Photo by Garo)
SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

TO BROADCAST POP CONCERTS

HERALD MAY 1

Programs Will Be Put on the Air Saturdays Through WEEI

One of the most important radio-musical events of the year will be the broadcasting of the Pop concerts on nine successive Saturday evenings beginning next Saturday and ending July 3, through station WEEI. This innovation has been made possible by W. S. Quinby of the W. S. Quinby Company, who was instrumental in having the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast this season, working in co-operation with the trustees of the orchestra and the officials of the Edison company.

Because of its prestige and the tradition which surrounded it, the broadcasting of the symphony was considered an experiment by those who arranged the series. There was much speculation as to whether such superlative music would ever be popular with radio audiences. The response, however, has been overwhelming.

Thousands of letters have been received by Mr. Quinby and station WEEI thanking them for the programs. Parents have commented on the unusual educational value of the symphony music; invalids, writing from their beds, have told of the comfort and inspiration it brought them; listeners in isolated sections of New England have sent messages of gratitude.

(Continued on Page Four, Column 8)

TO BROADCAST POP CONCERTS

(Continued from Page One)

All this convinced Mr. Quinby, the orchestra trustees and the officials of WEEI that it was only logical that the Pops should be the succeeding broadcast. The personnel of the Pops orchestra includes 80 of the regular symphony players, under the leadership of Agide Jacchia, who is about to open his 10th season as conductor.

Although the Pop programs will naturally be lighter than those of the symphony, the music will be of the finest quality and the playing will be on the same level. Beginning at 8:05 each Saturday night, thousands of persons sitting in their homes will have the same privilege as the thousands sitting in Symphony hall.

Mr. Quinby will announce the Pop broadcast at the final concert in the regular symphony series at 8:10 tonight over WEEI. He will be followed by E. F. A., chief announcer of the station, who will tell the concluding chapter of the symphony instrument story which was begun on the evening of Feb. 20, and which has continued at each succeeding symphony broadcast. The subject of the talk tonight will be "The percussion, harp, organ and other special instruments of the Boston Symphony Orchestra."

TRANS MAY 10

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of Tufts College

March from "The Queen of Sheba" ..... Gounod
Overture to the Opera, "Merry Wives of Windsor" ..... Nicolai
Fantasia from the Opera, "Fedora" ..... Giordano
Tufts Songs .....
Concert Overture, "Euterpe" ..... Chadwick
Symphonic Poem, "Finlandia" ..... Sibelius
Carnival in Paris ..... Svendsen
Tufts Songs .....
Ride of the Valkyrs ..... Wagner
Waltz, "Estudiantina" ..... Waldteufel
Wedding March ..... Mendelssohn

Conductors:
A. Jacchia. G. W. Chadwick.

Attached Clipping Appeared in t

Issue of

MAY 1926

"Hurrah Boys" Symphonic Piece "Absolute Music"

"Yesterday people wrote only program music and took the greatest pains to let the audience in on the program. Today there is a rush for absolute music, and the composers, instead of writing long perorations on what the music is supposed to represent, write equally long perorations telling the audience that their music represents nothing."

This somewhat sweeping observation of Samuel Chotzinoff of the World prefaces his review of the first New York performance of Henry F. Gilbert's new Symphonic Piece, introduced by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Koussevitzky at the March 11 concert at Carnegie hall.

Mr. Gilbert, we are told by Mr. Chotzinoff, "assures us in a program note that he didn't want his music to mean one thing or another. His only desire was to write music that would contain some of the national (American) ingredients—vulgarity, vitality, and an immense optimism." . . .

"It is a pity that music lovers should fall into a state of mind which prevents the enjoyment of music unless it represents something," says Mr. Henderson. "Mr. Gilbert did have an idea in mind, but it was a broad one. . . . He had always wanted to write American music which could not have been written in any other country. . . . To him the American spirit is energetic, optimistic, nervous, and impatient of restraint. It revolts against the spirit of the past. It is full of jingoism and vulgarity and its battle cry is 'Hurrah boys.' Under all is the spirit of a new birth."

The symphonic piece designed by Mr. Gilbert to describe in a very general way America as he feels it, Mr. Henderson says "breathes the aggressiveness, the bumptiousness, if you will, of the American spirit, and all of its optimism, its perfect confidence in itself and its occasional sympathetic tear for sob sister romance. It is a brave, honest piece of music and it is pleasant to hear."

"Even though the vulgarity of which the composer speaks so optimistically does not enter disturbingly into his music," says Mr. Sanborn of the Telegram, "one may pronounce his symphonic piece highly successful. . . . Though too long it has substance, character, coherence, spirit, impetus. There is effective use of 'rag time'—hardly of jazz."

Mr. Gilbert's use of the 'rag time' rhythm "has not the cheapness of spirit which often accompanies it," says Olin Downes, in the Times. "Mr. Gilbert is individual—like no other composer—and at the same time genuinely racial in his expression. . . . His writing is direct and cogent, and incorruptibly sincere."

Because of Mr. Gilbert's being an American composer, Mme. Samaroff regrets particularly that she "could not find any musical importance" in the symphonic piece which was the first work she had heard by this composer, whose previous compositions, she tells us, "have elicted high praise from Philip Hale (Boston), Olin Downes, and other prominent critics.

"My attitude toward music," says Mme. Samaroff, "makes it always a matter of regret if I listen to a work without enjoyment. When the composer is an American the regret is doubled, but patriotism cannot create artistic impressions."

Globe MAY 7

Comment on the Season

Post mortems on the musical season just ended are in order at this time. Last Sunday this column commented at length on the Boston Symphony concerts, which have been this year again mostly Koussevitsky. One's perpetual grievance on the subject of the Boston Orchestra under his leadership is the excessively personal note Koussevitsky strikes.

But this is after all only the excess of a virtue. The Boston Symphony now overshadows every thing else in the local musical world as it did in its best days.

ZIONIST NIGHT
POPS CONCERT
Tuesday Evening, June 8, 1926
at 8 o'clock
SYMPHONY HALL

Auspices, Daughters of Zion
and Constituent Organizations
Proceeds, Jewish National Fund

SOLOIST
Cantor Isadore Adelsman
NOTED TENOR

Choice Seats Can Be Obtained: New England Zionist Bureau, 60 Scollay Square, Boston. Tel. Hay. 5624, Tel. Hay. 5245

ALL JEWS ASKED TO PARTICIPATE
Have a Good Time and Help to Redeem the Soil of Palestine!

ZIONIST NIGHT AT "POPS"

JEWISH ADV MAY 6

It was announced today from the headquarters of the Jewish National Fund and Zionist Organization that on Tuesday night, June 8, at Symphony Hall, through the efforts of the Daughters of Zion and in co-operation with other organizations, all seats of Symphony Hall have been purchased for a special Zionist night at the Pops.

Co-operating societies are the New England Zionist Region, New England National Fund, Crawford Street Synagogue, Sisterhood of Crawford Street Synagogue, Beth Eli Sisterhood, Zerie Zion, Ladies' Aid, Cambridge; Temple Ashkenaz, Young Judaeans, Somerville Young Zionists, Avukah, Amos Auxiliary and the Roxbury Ladies' Aid.

This will be the first Zion Night in the history of the Pops.

It was made known by a committee that conferred with the noted director, Agide Jacchia, that a special program consisting of Jewish national music is being arranged for that night.

On account of the fact that the entire proceeds of this affair will go for the Jewish National Fund to purchase land in Palestine, Zionist workers that met last Tuesday night at the Menorah Institute were greatly inspired to work and resolved to purchase all the seats of Symphony Hall on that night which will be on sale to the public. The committee is headed by Dr. Bessie Sharenson and the following are the members of the committee co-operating: Jacob Rabinovitz, chairman of the New England Jewish National Fund; Hon. Elihu D. Stone, president of the New England Zionist Region, together with the following others who are assisting actively to make the event a success: Mrs. Hurwitz, vice-president; Mrs. Bardin, chairman ex-officio; Mrs. J. Sieff, chairman ad department; Mrs. Goverman, secretary professional page; Mrs. Cohen, financial secretary; Mrs. J. Promboin, treasurer jewel page; Miss E. Promboin, Mrs. I. Pollack, Mrs. Angoff, Mrs. Shapiro, Mrs. Glasser, Mrs. Cornblatt, Mrs. Lifshitz, Mrs. Kramer, Mrs. Olansky, Mrs. Glasser, Mr. Pokat, Elihu D. Stone, Mrs. Max Nigrosh, B. Levin, Mrs. L. H. Steinberg, Mrs. S. Abrams, A. Abrams, Mrs. Simberg, Mr. Bookspan, Mrs. Silverman, Mrs. Yorshis, Miss S. Cooperstock, Miss Libby Jacobson, Joseph Shupow, Dr. Anna Mintz, Mrs. H. Levin, Mrs. Charles Klarfield, Mrs. Charles Paisner and Mrs. I. Adelsman, publicity chairman.

The seats on sale are available at the Zionist Bureau, 60 Scollay square, Boston.

Globe MAY

Second Week of Pops

With tonight's operatic program, the first Sunday concert of the season, the "Pops" at Symphony Hall will enter upon their second week. Agide Jacchia and the Symphony Orchestra of 80 players will be heard in the following programs of which Monday will be Tufts night, Tuesday, Northeastern University night, Friday, Maine night, and Thursday, Eastern Star night. All but the last named are open to the public.

Sunday, May 9, Operatic Program—"Jeanne D'Arc," overture, "Il Trovatore," selection, "La Forza Del Destino," overture, "Aida," fantasia, "Othello," the tempest, Verdi; "Eugen Onegin," fantasia, Tchaikovsky, "Seigfried," forest murmers, Wagner; "Carmen," toreador song, Bizet; "Goyescas," intermezzo, Granados; "Samson and Delilah," bachanale, Saint-Saens.

Monday, May 10—Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba," Gounod; overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Nicolai; fantasia, "Fedora," Giordano; Tufts songs; overture, "Euterpre," Chadwick; symphonic poem, "Finlandia," Sibelius; carnival in Paris, Svendsen; Tufts songs; "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner; waltz, "Estudiantina," Waldteufel; "Wedding March," Mendelssohn.

Tuesday, May 11—"March Militaire," Saint-Saens; overture to "Orpheus," Offenbach; fantasia, "Carmen," Bizet; college songs; "Rumanian Rhapsody," Enesco; "Orientale," Cui-Jacchia; "Whispering Flowers," Bion; finale from the Fourth Symphony, Tchaikovsky; Alfro-Ameican folk songs, arranged by Jacchia; waltz, "Tres Jolie," Waldteufel; Northeastern victory song, C. J. Ginder.

Wednesday, May 12—"Cortege de Bacchus," Delibes; overture to "Oberon," Weber; fantasia, "Manon Lescant," Puccini; Harvard Freshman Glee Club in four folk songs; rhapsody, "Espana," Chabrier; prelude to "Lohengrin," Wagner; polovtsian dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin; songs by Harvard Freshman Glee Club; "Fete Boheme," Massenet; Orientale, Amani-Jacchia; waltz, "Roses from the South," Strauss.

Eastern Star night, Thursday, May 13, entire house taken.

Friday, May 14—March, "From Maine to California," Sousa; overture to "Raymond," Thomas; minuet in G, No. 2, Beethoven; fantasia from "La Boheme," Puccini; Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody, Liszt; serenade, Schubert; waltz in A major, Brahms-Gericke; Finale from "Symphony for Organ and Orchestra," Guilmant; Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda," Ponchielli; Marche Miniature, Tchaikovsky; Slavonic dance No. 1, Dvorak.

Saturday, May 15—"Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg" from 'Tannhauser, Wagner; Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Rossini; humoresque op. 10, No. 2, Tchaikovsky; fantasia, "Samson and Delilah," Saint-Saens; ancient dances, [illegible] maria," [illegible] panella," [illegible] Bartered [illegible] Rhapsody [illegible] rini; [illegible]

Boston [illegible] one of the three [illegible] orchestras is almost a [illegible] say today. The impetus [illegible] famous organization by Serge Kussevitzky, its brilliant leader, has been manifest from his first concert in this city, and the gradual welding together of all the forces that make up a symphony orchestra has been a constant delight to the big audiences that have again become the rule at these concerts.

Mr. Kussevitzky's final New York programs for the season included Brahms' Second Symphony, a charming Sonata by Galliard, orchestrated by Maximilian Steinberg, the "Tannhæuser" "Bacchanale," and Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" on Thursday evening; Tschaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, Ravel's "Mother Goose" Suite Debussy's "Gigues," and a Bach Concerto (arranged by Mottl) on Saturday afternoon.

The Brahms Symphony was played "a la Russe," but it was a vital reading, so why complain? The "Petrouchka" Suite has been played here quite frequently of late—by Toscanini even, among others—but under no conductor did it have quite the raciness as under Kussevitzky. The Galliard Sonata was a true delight. It was exquisitely rendered by the matchless string section of the orchestra. Tschaikovsky's Fourth Symphony closed Mr. Kussevitzky's second New York season triumphantly!

JEWISH TRIBUNE MAY 7

[illegible] ...ing
[illegible] ..., as a result, are now taking a place in the catalogues of most of the principal instrument manufacturers in the country.

PROGRAMS FOR NEXT WEEK

Herald MAY 9

Varied and Interesting Numbers for Second Week of "Pops"

With tonight's operatic program, the first Sunday concert of the season, the "Pops" at Symphony hall will enter upon their second week, Mr. Jacchia and the Symphony orchestra of 80 players, will be heard in the following programs, of which Monday will be Tufts night; Tuesday, Northeastern University night; Friday, Maine night; and Thursday, Eastern Sar night. All but the last named are open to the public and of general public interest.

SUNDAY, MAY 9—OPERATIC PROGRAM

Jeanne D'Arc, overture (1845); Il Trovatore, selection, (1853); La Forza Del Destino, overture, (1862); Aida, fantasia, (1871); Othello, The Tempest (1887). ..... Verdi
Eugen Onegin, fantasia.....Tchaikovsky
Siegfried, Forest Murmurs.....Wagner
Carmen, intermezzo.....Granados
Samson and Delilah, Bacchanale Saint-Saens

TUFTS NIGHT—MONDAY
(Open to the Public)

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" Nicolai
Fantasia, "Fedora" .....Giordano
Tufts Songs
Overture, "Euterpe".....Chadwick
(Conducted by the composer)
Symphonic Poem, "Finlandia".....Sibelius
Tufts Songs
"Ride of the Valkyries".....Wagner
Waltz, "Estudiantina" .....Waldteufel
Wedding March .....Mendelssohn

NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY NIGHT
(Open to the Public)
TUESDAY

Marche Militaire.....Saint-Suens
Overture to "Orpheus".....Offenbach
Fantasia, "Carmen" .....Bizet
College Songs
Roumanian Rhapsody .....Enesco

Orientale .....Cui-Jacchia
Whispering Flowers .....Blon
Finale from the Fourth Symphony, Tchaikovsky
Afro-American Folk Songs. Arr. by Jacchia
Waltz, "Tres Jolie".....Waldteufel
Northeastern Victory Song..C.J.Ginder '21

WEDNESDAY

Cortege de Bacchus.....Delibes
Overture to "Oberon" .....Weber
Fantasia, "Manon Lescaut".....Puccini
Harvard Freshman Glee Club—Four Folk Songs
English—The Keeper.
Irish—Londonderry Air.
Russian—Fireflies.
Dutch—Prayer of Thanksgiving.
Rhapsody, "Espana".....Chabrier
Prelude to "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin
Songs by Harvard Freshman Glee Club
Jerusalem .....Parry
Integer Vitae .....Flemming
"Now let every tongue".....Bach
Fete Boheme .....Masseret
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Waltz, "Roses from the South"....Strauss

EASTERN STAR NIGHT
THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1926
(Entire House Taken)
All other Nights Open to the Public

MAINE NIGHT
(Open to the Public)
FRIDAY

March, "From Maine to California"..Sousa
Overture to "Raymond".....Thomas
Minuet in G, No. 2.....Beethoven-Jacchia
Fantasia from "La Boheme".....Puccini
Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody..Liszt-Jacchia
Serenade..... Schubert-Jacchia
(English Horn solo: Speyer)
Waltz, No. 15.....Brahms-Gericke
Finale from "Symphony for Organ and Orchestra".....Guilmant
(Homer Humphrey)
Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda"..... Ponchielli
Marche Miniature....Tchaikovsky-Jacchia
Slavonic Dance No. 1.....Dvorak

SATURDAY

Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg from "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
Overture to "The Barber of Seville" Rossini
Humoresque, Op. 10, No. 2....Tchaikovsky

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
MAY 2 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY.

The demolishment of the Infantry Hall at Providence threatened the continuance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts. A group of Providence music lovers in a four days' campaign raised the money necessary to guarantee five performances at the Albee Theatre. Plans are being completed for the erection of a Masonic Temple with a large auditorium, but this building will not be ready for another year.

KOUSSEVITZKY RADIOS GREETING TO BOSTON

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who sailed yesterday from New York, sent greetings to Boston in a radiogram received late last night by the Radio Corporation of America, to be delivered here. The message follows: "From SS. Aquitania to Philip Hale, Boston Herald. Am sending sincerest wishes to all Boston friends and music lovers." (Signed) Koussevitzky. HERALD MAY 6

FINAL CONCERT OF SYMPHONY SEASON

Globe MAY 1

Conductor Koussevitzky Is Given an Ovation

The subscribers to the Friday afternoon series of Boston Symphony concerts are generally believed to constitute a cold, undemonstrative audience, chary of applause, incapable of appearing genuinely enthustiastic. Outsiders who believe this legend, which is not wholly without foundation, should have heard the shouts of "Bravo!" the pounding with canes and umbrellas, the slamming of seats, the tremendous hand-clapping, continued for many minutes at the close of the final concert of the season yesterday afternoon.

It is customary to bid the conductor and orchestra a cordial goodby, but one does not recall such an ovation as yesterday's at the conclusion of any season in the past 15 years. One doubts whether any previous conductor, with the possible exception of Nikisch, has been so warm a personal favorite with an overwhelming majority of the Boston Symphony subscribers as is Mr Koussevitzky. But elder listeners must decide this point.

To cap the climax, everyone in the hall stood for many minutes, not to put on coats and wraps, but in honor of conductor and players. Again and again Mr Koussevitzky bowed and smiled. Several times he brought the players to their feet. While seated they joined heartily in the applause for the conductor. There is no possible doubt of the extent of Mr Koussevitzky's popular success in Boston.

Three Repeats

Yesterday's program, by a curious and not wholly fortunate whim of Mr Koussevitzky's, contained three pieces already played at these concerts this season, Vivaldi's E-minor concerto, Debussy's arrangement of two of Satie's "Gymnopedies," and Brahms' C-minor symphony. Samazeuilh's "Night," announced in advance, had been dropped from the program. The other number, heard lately at the Tuesday concerts, was the suite from Stravinsky's "Petruchka." With so much music, new and old, unheard this season, why these repetitions?

Vivaldi's concerto, as the program book cautiously stated, has been "edited" by Mistovski, and lately published in England. Mr Koussevitzky was the first conductor to perform this arrangement last February. Yesterday in this music the strings played with a beauty and a balance of tone one would gladly enjoy oftener at these concerts. The present strings can play almost as beautifully as those in the Boston Symphony of pre-war days, when Mr Koussevitzky will let them. This concerto is smoothly ingratiating music, which one has completely forgotten within a brief time after hearing it.

Again the conductor broke the melodic line of Satie's pieces by interpreting the direction "lent" (slow) as meaning "largo languoroso," or as slowly as possible. Do all Russians instinctively feel slow music should move at the pace of a paralytic snail? Or is this particular trait peculiar to Mr Koussevitzky? It often offends Western ears far more than the same ears are likely to be offended by the reverse Slavic or, at any rate, Koussevitzkyian habit of taking most swift-moving music at as nearly as possible the speed of a ray of light.

Mr Koussevitzky's Stravinsky is unorthodox. A man who will not obey the printed directions of Beethoven and Wagner and Brahms about tempi and dynamics and phrasing can scarcely be expected to show due deference to the desires of a living and radical composer.

Koussevitzky's justification for going his own way with the music of Stravinsky and Brahms as he did yesterday, is that by so doing, he can make it vivid, make it thrilling. He can, and yesterday, as most days, he did.

Those who judge art by the voltage of the thrill they get, cannot but adore Koussevitzky. Those to whom music, ideally speaking, means not delirious excitement, but joy and peace, cannot but be annoyed at missing from such things as the magnificient finale of Brahms' C minor symphony joy and peace.

It is all a question of taste and this reviewer has so often questioned Mr Koussevitzky's taste that readers are no doubt weary of his plaints.

Quinby's Generosity

At any rate tonight's radio audience, at the last of the broadcasts made possible by W. S. Quimby's generosity, can, to use a popular and expressive phrase, expect to "get quite a kick out of" Stravinsky's music and out of much of the Brahms symphony, music far easier to enjoy than his Fourth Symphony, heard on the night of the initial broadcast. The Vivaldi and Satie should come through clearly.

One hopes that both the radio audience and the musical public, terms still not wholly synonymous, realize how fine and rare a thing Mr Quimby has done. The listeners in from lonely sick rooms and isolated farmhouses, [illegible] few of them venture to trouble orchestra or donor with their thanks. [illegible] Higginson once said that at a time when it had become financially almost impossible to carry on the orchestra he was nerved to the effort of continuing it by the thought of the ray of sunshine the concerts brought into the otherwise grey lives of many of the listeners in the rush seats on Friday. But it takes generosity and understanding like his to feel and try to gratify the needs of humble ordinary people who are not even spectacularly poor.

One hopes that these broadcasts will be continued next year. They have been the real events of a far from uneventful Boston Symphony season. P. R.

G TRANSCRIPT, SATURD

MAY 1st

Symphony

THE FINAL MATINEE: LARGE LEAVE-TAKING FOR MR. KOUSSEVITZKY

HAIL AND FAREWELL BEYOND ALL PRECEDENT

Good Will That Became a Veritable Demonstration—Just Share for the Orchestra—A Program of Repetitions, Satie's and Debussy's Grecian Dances Included—Stravinsky via "Petrushka"—Brahms of the First Symphony

THERE SHOULD BE some other way. Every spring the parting of the public with the conductor of the Symphony Concerts becomes more ardent and less articulate. These fervors began when Mr. Monteux took leave at the end of a term five years long, by no means unmarked in the annals of the orchestra. They waxed when Mr. Koussevitzky, in two concerts only four hours apart, went his way twelve months ago. They mounted yesterday when, after prologue at Cambridge, the annual rites were renewed more eagerly but not less impotently. Possibly, it is a defect of rites that there is only to multiply and prolong them.

In Symphony Hall Friday afternoon were 2600 persons, habitués of that concert-room, all more or less alert to testify their regard for the departing conductor. Obviously, when he stood bowing before them, there could be no snatching of necklaces from throats or rings from fingers to heap at his feet. Such things are not done nowadays; as likely as not, they were never done in this New England. No more could one and all skirt the corner of St. Stephen's Street; dislodge Mr. Koussevitzky's chauffeur from his seat; fasten a rope to the motor; drag the conductor in triumph, even to Pond Street, which is in Jamaica Plain. Suburbia, watching the procession pass, would have drawn but one inference: that the car had not only broken down, but also been mobbed. Plausibly enough, it might have telephoned for the police. Possibly, such parades for the artistically illustrious went out with horses and carriages. Yet, if the primi donne enjoyed them from Jenny Lind to Adelina Patti, why should they not be meet for the primi-donne conductors of a later day? Custom forbids—and custom can be an indecently arbitrary thing.

There you are! With the best will in the world between that departing conductor and that farewelling audience, yesterday afternoon there was nothing to do but applaud. Let the bystander hope piously that the dowagers, graciously assembled, never once shouted in their lives that their daughters reserve such ebullitions for something at least as important as a hockey-game. Friday, however, they no more than rustled and ruffled in their comely throats, though there were reports that a few lads in the upper balcony actually "yelled." Middle-Westerners doubtless, that know no better; sent to Boston for an education, curiously pursuing it at Symphony Hall rather than at the movies. . . . The elect ladies did clap their hands; clapped them very loud and very long—so long indeed that some of us bred to the reporting of conventions as well as of concerts, instinctively reached for watches.

Within recollection, no Symphony Concert has heard such sustained plaudits as greeted Mr. Koussevitzky when he came first to his place. They were instant and warm; they snapped from every corner and quarter of the hall. Plainly and warrantably they moved the conductor. They were renewed at the end of Vivaldi's Concerto for Strings (which began the actual music) and promptly directed by Mr. Koussevitzky to the standing choir. At the intermission, upon the dancing heels of the Suite from "Petrushka," the whole orchestra rose to the clapping, whereupon it swelled and beat and swelled again. The practised recorders believed it at acme; since the audience of Friday afternoon is quick to disperse at the rounding of the final cadence. Not so at this matinée of farewell. In a delicious blur of excitement over Brahms in C minor and the departing conductor, the audience lingered and would not have done. Mr. Koussevitzky bent his head and lifted both grateful and deprecating arms. More than

There was also music-making; but more and more music-making tends to be secondary at the last pair of Symphony Concerts. In fact, the program rather encouraged such an impression. Out of four appointed pieces, Vivaldi's Concerto in E minor was repeated from a pair of concerts in February and Brahms's Symphony in C minor from the first pair last autumn. The Suite from "Petrushka"—or more truly the portions of it that Mr. Koussevitzky elects to play—was transferred from the final Tuesday matinée; while thence came Satie's two dances in Debussy's scoring. To the very end—a few said—the conductor must be innovating. They demurred to these repetitions. With none too valid reason they complained of Brahms in C minor, because some other "classical symphony" had gone unheard the season through.

Yet, at the end of a long series, final concerts of repetition seems rather chic—if the word is permissible as to august doings at Symphony Hall. That last Friday and this last Saturday so become a friendly parting, when conductor, orchestra and audience look back, remember and smile as they recall. Anyhow, it was a witty and a rounding notion to end a succession of ninety-four pieces by the very symphony with which it had begun. As for the routinières, they might easily be content with Satie's "Gymnopédies," first time at these concerts, as though it were the thirtieth of January instead of the thirtieth of April; while even they might agree that the Suite from "Petrushka" is that hybrid thing, a modern classic. To each hearer his own particular objection. There are those who count this Concerto of Vivaldi, in the edition of the mysterious Mistovski and Oxford University, the least interesting of Mr. Koussevitzky's current ancients.

Moreover, lest the purists be also "in his hair," the reviewer hies to his bounden duty of reviewing. This time, however, he no more proposes to exercise it in extenso than Mr. Koussevitzky chose to array a usual program. For him, as well as for the conductor, it was the final matinée. Through the spring mists, he also could descry the summer holidays looking both large and sweet. Therefore be it said briefly that Signor Vivaldi has written a fortieth or a fiftieth Concerto—these eighteenth-century maestri di capella composed like rabbits; that it "lies well" for string choir; that the first division marches and upswells into a climax of vigorous, keen-rhythmed counterpoint; that the finale contains a light, pleasing, sensuous tune; that the middle movement misses Vivaldi's usual depth and warmth of unfolding song. As for Satie's Spartan dances, they are not in the least Grecian, as antiquarians of music might conceive them; while not at all do they seek what the learned name historical perspective. They are, in fact, tone-poems in miniature—a frieze in marble of dancing youths, upon a sudden recalled, in long defile, to life and motion. They move in a sound that is like stillness; the colors are pale; the rhythm barely quickens the air. The melancholy of remoteness and remembrance suffuses the music, which seems quite as much Debussy as Satie. And the phrases of the flute above its bed of strings—in the second dance—turn the heart to water. It is as though the flute-player also remembered, and is sad.

Nor at a final matinée need the Suite from "Petrushka" or the First Symphony of Brahms feed discourse. Since Mr. Toscanini, Mr. Koussevitzky, and every other conductor follows his own bent in choice from the ballet, why not cast out altogether Petrushka himself? Invisible, without narrative or action to character him, the piteous puppet undergoes, in the concert-hall, one more humiliation. Under his name, the orchestra emits strange, broken, clawing, discordant sounds; while a few recall the irony, the wit, the pathos, those scraps and ejaculations engender in the theater. Besides, the dances suffice. They bound, they whirl, they snap, they shiver with rhythm. They flare with color. Though humor and wit bedeck them, they exhale wildness and riot. Possessed of new sense, the ear smells in them an earthy humanity—that earth to which his richest (as in "Le Sacre" and "Les Noces") Stravinsky is always getting close.

And Johannes in C minor—enough that he is music for its own sake, in itself contained and disclosed, more than sufficient unto thought engrossed and feeling stirred by no other than musical sensation. [illegible] can be done; it has been done; twice, thrice and four times in a season Brahms renews the miracle. Yesterday, too, the serving conductor was more than acolyte. [illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 3 1926

BUILD THAT TEMPLE

The eleven day campaign of the Masonic order to raise $1,500,000 for the building of a Temple on Francis street, which is to be inaugurated this evening, is addressed not to Masons alone but to all of the people of Providence, and for the best of reasons. Providence, otherwise dignified as one of the chief cities of the East, is without an adequate auditorium for the presentation of civic and cultural programmes. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, most cherished of visitors, is without a Rhode Island home. There is no central point of assembly where the hundred and one casual events of this active age may be offered for the attention of citizens.

All these needs the Temple will meet with its great auditorium—all these needs and more. Masons have already pledged a million dollars and the remainder is sought upon a foundation of civic pride. An exceptionally beautiful building is planned, and a commendable spirit of disinterest actuates the promoters of the idea in their arrangements for its future conduct. No profit from the operation of the Temple will accrue to the Masonic order—the entire net income will be devoted to charity. Hence the handsome edifice will be virtually a civic possession, entrusted to the stewardship of the organization which is erecting it.

The appeal commends itself to all thoughtful persons who keep at heart the common welfare. The public answer should be instant and generous. Every gift will be an investment in a better Providence.

POPS CONCERT ON THE AIR TONIGHT FROM WEEI

This evening will usher in for the radio listeners of New England a continuation of the concerts from Symphony Hall, when stations WEEI and WEAN broadcast the "Pops". The series of "Pops" concerts will be broadcast every Saturday night up to and including July 3.

These concerts are of the light, informal type, in keeping with the season. They are played by 80 Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Agide Jacchia, prominent conductor and composer. The series is given through the courtesy of W. S. Quinby.

Globe MAY 8
Herald MAY 7

Koussevitsky Greeting America and Departing

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 10 1926

SYMPHONY LEADER SAILING TO EUROPE

Koussevitsky to Give Concerts in Paris, Then Will Rest Remainder of Summer.

46TH SEASON OPENS OCT. 8

New Boston Orchestra Conductor Achieves Great Success During His Second Year.—Plan His Next Appearance Here

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the past two seasons, is on his way to Europe, where he will spend the summer. He will return to this country to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Symphony Hall, Boston, Oct. 8.

His second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was eminently successful and the closing concerts of the series in various cities were like a triumphal tour for Koussevitsky and his men. At the last Saturday night concert of the season in Boston, May 1, the audience cheered conductor and orchestra to the echo.

When the orchestra played for the last time at Infantry Hall here in March seats for the concert were sold out on the first day of the ticket sale. Funds have been subscribed to secure the Albee Theatre for five nights next season so that the orchestra may play there and so that the city will not be deprived of its infrequent opportunities to hear the famous musicians.

Final steps in the negotiations to obtain the use of the theatre had not been completed late last week, but supporters of the plan were then confident that the details could be satisfactorily arranged.

Mr. Koussevitsky in Paris will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitsky" from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre and Bloch's "Concerto Gresso."

He will rest for the remainder of the summer.

Koussevitsky brought forth a number of new and significant works during the season past, by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre and the American composers Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

Despite the considerable portion of new music, the composers most often represented were Beethoven and Brahms.

PROGRAMS FOR NEXT WEEK

Herald — MAY 9

Varied and Interesting Numbers for Second Week of "Pops"

With tonight's operatic program, the first Sunday concert of the season, the "Pops" at Symphony hall will enter upon their second week. Mr. Jacchia and the Symphony orchestra of 80 players, will be heard in the following programs, of which Monday will be Tufts night; Tuesday, Northeastern University night; Friday, Maine night; and Thursday, Eastern Sar night. All but the last named are open to the public and of general public interest.

SUNDAY, MAY 9—OPERATIC PROGRAM

Jeanne D'Arc, overture (1845); Il Trovatore, selection, (1853); La Forza Del Destino, overture, (1862); Aida, fantasia, (1871); Othello, The Tempest (1887). ..... Verdi

Eugen Onegin, fantasia.....Tchaikovsky
Siegfried, Forest Murmurs.....Wagner
Carmen, intermezzo.....Granados
Samson and Delilah, Bacchanale Saint-Saens

TUFTS NIGHT—MONDAY

(Open to the Public)

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" Nicolai
Fantasia, "Fedora" .....Giordano
Tufts Songs
Overture, "Euterpe".....Chadwick
(Conducted by the composer)
Symphonic Poem, "Finlandia".....Sibelius
Tufts Songs
"Ride of the Valkyries".....Wagner
Waltz, "Estudiantina" .....Waldteufel
Wedding March .....Mendelssohn

NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY NIGHT

(Open to the Public)

TUESDAY

Marche Militaire.....Saint-Suens
Overture to "Orpheus".....Offenbach
Fantasia, "Carmen" .....Bizet
College Songs
Roumanian Rhapsody .....Enesco

Orientale .....Cui-Jacchia
Whispering Flowers .....Blon
Finale from the Fourth Symphony, Tchaikovsky
Afro-American Folk Songs.Arr. by Jacchia
Waltz, "Tres Jolie".....Waldteufel
Northeastern Victory Song..C.J.Ginder '21

WEDNESDAY

Cortege de Bacchus.....Delibes
Overture to "Oberon" .....Weber
Fantasia, "Manon Lescaut".....Puccini
Harvard Freshman Glee Club—Four Folk Songs
English—The Keeper.
Irish—Londonderry Air.
Russian—Fireflies.
Dutch—Prayer of Thanksgiving.
Rhapsody, "Espana".....Chabrier
Prelude to "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin
Songs by Harvard Freshman Glee Club
Jerusalem .....Parry
Integer Vitae .....Flemming
"Now let every tongue".....Bach
Fete Boheme .....Masseniet
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Waltz, "Roses from the South"....Strauss

EASTERN STAR NIGHT

THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1926

(Entire House Taken)

All other Nights Open to the Public

MAINE NIGHT

(Open to the Public)

FRIDAY

March, "From Maine to California"..Sousa
Overture to "Raymond".....Thomas
Minuet in G, No. 2.....Beethoven-Jacchia
Fantasia from "La Boheme".....Puccini
Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody..Liszt-Jacchia
Serenade..... Schubert-Jacchia
(English Horn solo: Speyer)
Waltz, No. 15.....Brahms-Gericke
Finale from "Symphony for Organ and Orchestra".....Guilmant
(Homer Humphrey)
Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda"..... Ponchielli
Marche Miniature....Tchaikovsky-Jacchia
Slavonic Dance No. 1.....Dvorak

SATURDAY

Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg from "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
Overture to "The Barber of Seville" Rossini
Humoresque, Op. 10, No. 2....Tchaikovsky

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
MAY 2 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY.

The demolishment of the Infantry Hall at Providence threatened the continuance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts. A group of Providence music lovers in a four days' campaign raised the money necessary to guarantee five performances at the Albee Theatre. Plans are being completed for the erection of a Masonic Temple with a large auditorium, but this building will not be ready for another year.

KOUSSEVITZKY RADIOS GREETING TO BOSTON

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who sailed yesterday from New York, sent greetings to Boston in a radiogram received late last night by the Radio Corporation of America, to be delivered here. The message follows: "From SS. Aquitania to Philip Hale, Boston Herald. Am sending sincerest wishes to all Boston friends and music lovers." (Signed) Koussevitzky.

Herald MAY 6

FINAL CONCERT OF SYMPHONY SEASON

Globe — MAY 1

Conductor Koussevitzky Is Given an Ovation

The subscribers to the Friday afternoon series of Boston Symphony concerts are generally believed to constitute a cold, undemonstrative audience, chary of applause, incapable of appearing genuinely enthustiastic. Outsiders who believe this legend, which is not wholly without foundation, should have heard the shouts of "Bravo!" the pounding with canes and umbrellas, the slamming of seats, the tremendous hand-clapping, continued for many minutes at the close of the final concert of the season yesterday afternoon.

It is customary to bid the conductor and orchestra a cordial goodby, but one does not recall such an ovation as yesterday's at the conclusion of any season in the past 15 years. One doubts whether any previous conductor, with the possible exception of Nikisch, has been so warm a personal favorite with an overwhelming majority of the Boston Symphony subscribers as is Mr Koussevitzky. But elder listeners must decide this point.

To cap the climax, everyone in the hall stood for many minutes, not to put on coats and wraps, but in honor of conductor and players. Again and again Mr Koussevitzky bowed and smiled. Several times he brought the players to their feet. While seated they joined heartily in the applause for the conductor. There is no possible doubt of the extent of Mr Koussevitzky's popular success in Boston.

Three Repeats

Yesterday's program, by a curious and not wholly fortunate whim of Mr Koussevitzky's, contained three pieces already played at these concerts this season, Vivaldi's E-minor concerto, Debussy's arrangement of two of Satie's "Gymnopedies," and Brahms' C-minor symphony. Samazeuilh's "Night," announced in advance, had been dropped from the program. The other number, heard lately at the Tuesday concerts, was the suite from Stravinsky's "Petruchka." With so much music, new and old, unheard this season, why these repetitions?

Vivaldi's concerto, as the program book cautiously stated, has been "edited" by Mistovski, and lately published in England. Mr Koussevitzky was the first conductor to perform this arrangement last February. Yesterday in this music the strings played with a beauty and a balance of tone one would gladly enjoy oftener at these concerts. The present strings can play almost as beautifully as those in the Boston Symphony of pre-war days, when Mr Koussevitzky will let them. This concerto is smoothly ingratiating music, which one has completely forgotten within a brief time after hearing it.

Again the conductor broke the melodic line of Satie's pieces by interpreting the direction "lent" (slow) as meaning "largo languoroso," or as slowly as possible. Do all Russians instinctively feel slow music should move at the pace of a paralytic snail? Or is this particular trait peculiar to Mr Koussevitzky? It often offends Western ears far more than the same ears are likely to be offended by the reverse Slavic or, at any rate, Koussevitzkyian habit of taking most swift-moving music at as nearly as possible the speed of a ray of light.

Mr Koussevitzky's Stravinsky is unorthodox. A man who will not obey the printed directions of Beethoven and Wagner and Brahms about tempi and dynamics and phrasing can scarcely be expected to show due deference to the desires of a living and radical composer.

Koussevitzky's justification for going his own way with the music of Stravinsky and Brahms as he did yesterday, is that by so doing, he can make it vivid, make it thrilling. He can, and yesterday, as most days, he did.

Those who judge art by the voltage of the thrill they get, cannot but adore Koussevitzky. Those to whom music, ideally speaking, means not delirious excitement, but joy and peace, cannot but be annoyed at missing from such things as the magnificient finale of Brahms' C minor symphony joy and peace.

It is all a question of taste and this reviewer has so often questioned Mr Koussevitzky's taste that readers are no doubt weary of his plaints.

Quinby's Generosity

At any rate tonight's radio audience, at the last of the broadcasts made possible by W. S. Quimby's generosity, can, to use a popular and expressive phrase, expect to "get quite a kick out of" Stravinsky's music and out of much of the Brahms symphony, music far easier to enjoy than his Fourth Symphony, heard on the night of the initial broadcast. The Vivaldi and Satie should come through clearly.

One hopes that both the radio audience and the musical public, terms still not wholly synonymous, realize how fine and rare a thing Mr Quinby has done. The listeners in from lonely sick rooms and isolated farmhouses, will few of them venture to trouble orchestra or donor with their thanks. Mrs Higginson once said that at a time when it had become financially almost impossible to carry on the orchestra he was nerved to the effort of continuing it by the thought of the ray of sunshine the concerts brought into the otherwise gray lives of many of the listeners in the rush seats on Friday. But it takes generosity and understanding like his to feel and try to gratify the needs of humble ordinary people who are not even spectacularly poor.

One hopes that these broadcasts will be continued next year. They have been the real event of a far from uneven Boston Symphony season. P. R.

MAY 1st

Symphony

THE FINAL MATINEE: LARGE LEAVE-TAKING FOR MR. KOUSSEVITZKY

HAIL AND FAREWELL BEYOND ALL PRECEDENT

Good Will That Became a Veritable Demonstration—Just Share for the Orchestra—A Program of Repetitions, Satie's and Debussy's Grecian Dances Included—Stravinsky via "Petrushka"—Brahms of the First Symphony

THERE SHOULD BE some other way. Every spring the parting of the public with the conductor of the Symphony Concerts becomes more ardent and less articulate. These fervors began when Mr. Monteux took leave at the end of a term five years long, by no means unmarked in the annals of the orchestra. They waxed when Mr. Koussevitzky, in two concerts only four hours apart, went his way twelve months ago. They mounted yesterday when, after prologue at Cambridge, the annual rites were renewed more eagerly but not less impotently. Possibly, it is a defect of rites that there is only to multiply and prolong them.

In Symphony Hall Friday afternoon were 2600 persons, habitués of that concert-room, all more or less alert to testify their regard for the departing conductor. Obviously, when he stood bowing before them, there could be no snatching of necklaces from throats or rings from fingers to heap at his feet. Such things are not done nowadays; as likely as not, they were neve done in this New England. No more could one and all skirt the corner of St. Stephen's Street; dislodge Mr. Koussevitzky's chauffeur from his seat; fasten a rope to the motor; drag the conductor in triumph, even to Pond Street, which is in Jamaica Plain. Suburbia, watching the procession pass, would have drawn but one inference: that the car had not only broken down, but also been mobbed. Plausibly enough, it might have telephoned for the police. Possibly, such parades for the artistically illustrious went out with horses and carriages. Yet, if the primi donne enjoyed them from Jenny Lind to Adelina Patti, why should they not be meet for the primidonne conductors of a later day? Custom forbids—and custom can be an indecently arbitrary thing.

There you are! With the best will in the world between that departing conductor and that farewelling audience, yesterday afternoon there was nothing to do but applaud. Let the bystander hope piously that the dowagers, graciously assembled, never once shouted in their lives that their daughters reserve such ebullitions for something at least as important as a hockey-game. Friday, however, they no more than rustled and ruffled in their comely throats, though there were reports that a few lads in the upper balcony actually "yelled." Middle-Westerners doubtless, that know no better; sent to Boston for an education, curiously pursuing it at Symphony Hall rather than at the movies. . . . The elect ladies did clap their hands; clapped them very loud and very long—so long indeed that some of us bred to the reporting of conventions as well as of concerts, instinctively reached for watches.

Within recollection, no Symphony Concert has heard such sustained plaudits as greeted Mr. Koussevitzky when he came first to his place. They were instant and warm; they snapped from every corner and quarter of the hall. Plainly and warrantably they moved the conductor. They were renewed at the end of Vivaldi's Concerto for Strings (which began the actual music) and promptly directed by Mr. Koussevitzky to the standing choir. At the intermission, upon the dancing heels of the Suite from "Petrushka," the whole orchestra rose to the clapping, whereupon it swelled and beat and swelled again. The practised recorders believed it at acme; since the audience of Friday afternoon is quick to disperse at the rounding of the final cadence. Not so at this matinée of farewell. In a delicious blur of excitement over Brahms in C minor and the departing conductor, the audience lingered and would not have done. Mr. Koussevitzky bent his head and lifted both grateful and deprecating arms. More than

There was also music-making; but more and more music-making tends to be secondary at the last pair of Symphony Concerts. In fact, the program rather encouraged such an impression. Out of four appointed pieces, Vivaldi's Concerto in E minor was repeated from a pair of concerts in February and Brahms's Symphony in C minor from the first pair last autumn. The Suite from "Petrushka"—or more truly the portions of it that Mr. Koussevitzky elects to play—was transferred from the final Tuesday matinée; while thence came Satie's two dances in Debussy's scoring. To the very end—a few said—the conductor must be innovating. They demurred to these repetitions. With none too valid reason they complained of Brahms in C minor, because some other "classical symphony" had gone unheard the season through.

Yet, at the end of a long series, final concerts of repetition seems rather chic—if the word is permissible as to august doings at Symphony Hall. That last Friday and this last Saturday so become a friendly parting, when conductor, orchestra and audience look back, remember and smile as they recall. Anyhow, it was a witty and a rounding notion to end a succession of ninety-four pieces by the very symphony with which it had begun. As for the routinières, they might easily be content with Satie's "Gymnopédies," first time at these concerts, as though it were the thirtieth of January instead of the thirtieth of April; while even they might agree that the Suite from "Petrushka" is that hybrid thing, a modern classic. To each hearer his own particular objection. There are those who count this Concerto of Vivaldi, in the edition of the mysterious Mistovski and Oxford University, the least interesting of Mr. Koussevitzky's current ancients.

Moreover, lest the purists be also "in his hair," the reviewer hies to his bounden duty of reviewing. This time, however, he no more proposes to exercise it in extenso than Mr. Koussevitzky chose to array a usual program. For him, as well as for the conductor, it was the final matinée. Through the spring mists, he also could descry the summer holidays looking both large and sweet. Therefore be it said briefly that Signor Vivaldi has written a fortieth or a fiftieth Concerto—these eighteenth-century maestri di capella composed like rabbits; that it "lies well" for string choir; that the first division marches and upswells into a climax of vigorous, keen-rhythmed counterpoint; that the finale contains a light, pleasing, sensuous tune; that the middle movement misses Vivaldi's usual depth and warmth of unfolding song. As for Satie's Spartan dances, they are not in the least Grecian, as antiquarians of music might conceive them; while not at all do they seek what the learned name historical perspective. They are, in fact, tone-poems in miniature—a frieze in marble of dancing youths, upon a sudden recalled, in long defile, to life and motion. They move in a sound that is like stillness; the colors are pale; the rhythm barely quickens the air. The melancholy of remoteness and remembrance suffuses the music, which seems quite as much Debussy as Satie. And the phrases of the flute above its bed of strings—in the second dance—turn the heart to water. It is as though the flute-player also remembered, and is sad.

Nor at a final matinée need the Suite from "Petrushka" or the First Symphony of Brahms feed discourse. Since Mr. Toscanini, Mr. Koussevitzky, and every other conductor follows his own bent in choice from the ballet, why not cast out altogether Petrushka himself? Invisible, without narrative or action to character him, the piteous puppet undergoes, in the concert-hall, one more humiliation. Under his name, the orchestra emits strange, broken, clawing, discordant sounds; while a few recall the irony, the wit, the pathos, those scraps and ejaculations engender in the theater. Besides, the dances suffice. They bound, they whirl, they snap, they shiver with rhythm. They flare with color. Though humor and wit bedeck them, they exhale wildness and riot. Possessed of a new sense, the ear smells in them an earthy humanity—that earth to which his richest (as in "Le Sacre" and "Les Noces") Stravinsky is always getting close.

And Johannes in C minor—enough that he is music for its own sake, in itself contained and disclosed, more than sufficient unto thought engrossed and feeling stirred by no other than musical sensation. It can be done; it has been done; twice, thrice and four times in a season Brahms renews the miracle. Yesterday, too, the serving conductor was more than acolyte. Fro[illegible] m[illegible] s[illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 3 1926

BUILD THAT TEMPLE

The eleven day campaign of the Masonic order to raise $1,500,000 for the building of a Temple on Francis street, which is to be inaugurated this evening, is addressed not to Masons alone but to all of the people of Providence, and for the best of reasons. Providence, otherwise dignified as one of the chief cities of the East, is without an adequate auditorium for the presentation of civic and cultural programmes. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, most cherished of visitors, is without a Rhode Island home. There is no central point of assembly where the hundred and one casual events of this active age may be offered for the attention of citizens.

All these needs the Temple will meet with its great auditorium—all these needs and more. Masons have already pledged a million dollars and the remainder is sought upon a foundation of civic pride. An exceptionally beautiful building is planned, and a commendable spirit of disinterest actuates the promoters of the idea in their arrangements for its future conduct. No profit from the operation of the Temple will accrue to the Masonic order—the entire net income will be devoted to charity. Hence the handsome edifice will be virtually a civic possession, entrusted to the stewardship of the organization which is erecting it.

The appeal commends itself to all thoughtful persons who keep at heart the common welfare. The public answer should be instant and generous. Every gift will be an investment in a better Providence.

POPS CONCERT ON THE AIR TONIGHT FROM WEEI

This evening will usher in for the radio listeners of New England a continuation of the concerts from Symphony Hall, when stations WEEI and WEAN broadcast the "Pops". The series of "Pops" concerts will be broadcast every Saturday night up to and including July 3.

These concerts are of the light, informal type, in keeping with the season. They are played by 80 Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Agide Jacchia, prominent conductor and composer. The series is given through the courtesy of W. S. Quinby.

Globe — MAY 8

Herald — May 9

Koussevitsky Greeting America and Departing

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 1 0 1926

SYMPHONY LEADER SAILING TO EUROPE

Koussevitsky to Give Concerts in Paris, Then Will Rest Remainder of Summer.

46TH SEASON OPENS OCT. 8

New Boston Orchestra Conductor Achieves Great Success During His Second Year.—Plan His Next Appearance Here

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the past two seasons, is on his way to Europe, where he will spend the summer. He will return to this country to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Symphony Hall, Boston, Oct. 8.

His second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was eminently successful and the closing concerts of the series in various cities were like a triumphal tour for Koussevitsky and his men. At the last Saturday night concert of the season in Boston, May 1, the audience cheered conductor and orchestra to the echo.

When the orchestra played for the last time at Infantry Hall here in March seats for the concert were sold out on the first day of the ticket sale. Funds have been subscribed to secure the Albee Theatre for five nights next season so that the orchestra may play there and so that the city will not be deprived of its infrequent opportunities to hear the famous musicians.

Final steps in the negotiations to obtain the use of the theatre had not been completed late last week, but supporters of the plan were then confident that the details could be satisfactorily arranged.

Mr. Koussevitsky in Paris will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitsky" from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre and Bloch's "Concerto Gresso."

He will rest for the remainder of the summer.

Koussevitsky brought forth a number of new and significant works during the season past, by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre and the American composers Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

Despite the considerable portion of new music, the composers most often represented were Beethoven and Brahms.

PROGRAMS FOR NEXT WEEK

Herald — MAY 9

Varied and Interesting Numbers for Second Week of "Pops"

With tonight's operatic program, the first Sunday concert of the season, the "Pops" at Symphony hall will enter upon their second week. Mr. Jacchia and the Symphony orchestra of 80 players, will be heard in the following programs, of which Monday will be Tufts night; Tuesday, Northeastern University night; Friday, Maine night; and Thursday, Eastern Sar night. All but the last named are open to the public and of general public interest.

SUNDAY, MAY 9—OPERATIC PROGRAM

Jeanne D'Arc, overture (1845); Il Trovatore, selection, (1853); La Forza Del Destino, overture, (1862); Aida, fantasia, (1871); Othello, The Tempest (1887). ..... Verdi
Eugen Onegin, fantasia.....Tchaikovsky
Siegfried, Forest Murmurs.....Wagner
Carmen, Intermezzo.....Granados
Samson and Delilah, Bacchanale Saint-Saens

TUFTS NIGHT—MONDAY
(Open to the Public)

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" Nicolai
Fantasia, "Fedora" .....Giordano
Tufts Songs
Overture, "Euterpe".....Chadwick
(Conducted by the composer)
Symphonic Poem, "Finlandia".....Sibelius
Tufts Songs
"Ride of the Valkyries".....Wagner
Waltz, "Estudiantina" .....Waldteufel
Wedding March .....Mendelssohn

NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY NIGHT
(Open to the Public)
TUESDAY

Marche Militaire.....Saint-Suens
Overture to "Orpheus".....Offenbach
Fantasia, "Carmen" .....Bizet
College Songs
Roumanian Rhapsody .....Enesco

Orientale .....Cui-Jacchia
Whispering Flowers .....Blon
Finale from the Fourth Symphony, Tchaikovsky
Afro-American Folk Songs. Arr. by Jacchia
Waltz, "Tres Jolie".....Waldteufel
Northeastern Victory Song..C.J.Ginder '21

WEDNESDAY

Cortege de Bacchus.....Delibes
Overture to "Oberon" .....Weber
Fantasia, "Manon Lescaut".....Puccini
Harvard Freshman Glee Club—Four Folk Songs
English—The Keeper.
Irish—Londonderry Air.
Russian—Fireflies.
Dutch—Prayer of Thanksgiving.
Rhapsody, "Espana".....Chabrier
Prelude to "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin
Songs by Harvard Freshman Glee Club
Jerusalem .....Parry
Integer Vitae .....Flemming
"Now let every tongue".....Bach
Fete Boheme .....Massenet
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Waltz, "Roses from the South"....Strauss

EASTERN STAR NIGHT
THURSDAY, MAY 13, 1926
(Entire House Taken)
All other Nights Open to the Public

MAINE NIGHT
(Open to the Public)
FRIDAY

March, "From Maine to California"..Sousa
Overture to "Raymond".....Thomas
Minuet in G, No. 2.....Beethoven-Jacchia
Fantasia from "La Boheme".....Puccini
Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody..Liszt-Jacchia
Serenade..... Schubert-Jacchia
(English Horn solo, Speyer)
Waltz, No. 15.....Brahms-Gericke
Finale from "Symphony for Organ and Orchestra".....Guilmant
(Homer Humphrey)
Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda".....Ponchielli
Marche Miniature....Tchaikovsky-Jacchia
Slavonic Dance No. 1.....Dvorak

SATURDAY

Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg from "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
Overture to "The Barber of Seville" Rossini
Humoresque, Op. 10, No. 2....Tchaikovsky
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saens
Ancient Dances and Airs.....Respighi
a. Gagliarda b. Villanella.
c. Passo Mezzo e Mascherada.
(Solo violin, harp, organ and strings)
La Campanella.....Handel
Overture to "The Bartered Bride" Smetana
Irish Rhapsody.....Herbert
Minuet..... Boccherini
Hungarian Dance, No. 1.....Brahms

to guarantee ...
Albee Theatre. Plans are being completed for the erection of a Masonic Temple with a large auditorium, but this building will not be ready for another year.

KOUSSEVITZKY RADIOS GREETING TO BOSTON

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who sailed yesterday from New York, sent greetings to Boston in a radiogram received late last night by the Radio Corporation of America, to be delivered here. The message follows: "From SS. Aquitania to Philip Hale, Boston Herald. Am sending sincerest wishes to all Boston friends and music lovers." (Signed) Koussevitzky. HERALD MAY 6

FINAL CONCERT OF SYMPHONY SEASON

Globe — MAY 1

Conductor Koussevitzky Is Given an Ovation

The subscribers to the Friday afternoon series of Boston Symphony concerts are generally believed to constitute a cold, undemonstrative audience, chary of applause, incapable of appearing genuinely enthustiastic. Outsiders who believe this legend, which is not wholly without foundation, should have heard the shouts of "Bravo!" the pounding with canes and umbrellas, the slamming of seats, the tremendous hand-clapping, continued for many minutes at the close of the final concert of the season yesterday afternoon.

It is customary to bid the conductor and orchestra a cordial goodby, but one does not recall such an ovation as yesterday's at the conclusion of any season in the past 15 years. One doubts whether any previous conductor, with the possible exception of Nikisch, has been so warm a personal favorite with an overwhelming majority of the Boston Symphony subscribers as is Mr Koussevitzky. But elder listeners must decide this point.

To cap the climax, everyone in the hall stood for many minutes, not to put on coats and wraps, but in honor of conductor and players. Again and again Mr Koussevitzky bowed and smiled. Several times he brought the players to their feet. While seated they joined heartily in the applause for the conductor. There is no possible doubt of the extent of Mr Koussevitzky's popular success in Boston.

Three Repeats

Yesterday's program, by a curious and not wholly fortunate whim of Mr Koussevitzky's, contained three pieces already played at these concerts this season, Vivaldi's E-minor concerto, Debussy's arrangement of two of Satie's "Gymnopedies," and Brahms' C-minor symphony. Samazeuilh's "Night," announced in advance, had been dropped from the program. The other number, heard lately at the Tuesday concerts, was the suite from Stravinsky's "Petruchka." With so much music, new and old, unheard this season, why these repetitions?

Vivaldi's concerto, as the program book cautiously stated, has been "edited" by Mistovski, and lately published in England. Mr Koussevitzky was the first conductor to perform this arrangement last February. Yesterday in this music the strings played with a beauty and a balance of tone one would gladly enjoy oftener at these concerts. The present strings can play almost as beautifully as those in the Boston Symphony of pre-war days, when Mr Koussevitzky will let them. This concerto is smoothly ingratiating music, which one has completely forgotten within a brief time after hearing it.

Again the conductor broke the melodic line of Satie's pieces by interpreting the direction "lent" (slow) as meaning "largo languoroso," or as slowly as possible. Do all Russians instinctively feel slow music should move at the pace of a paralytic snail? Or is this particular trait peculiar to Mr Koussevitzky? It often offends Western ears far more than the same ears are likely to be offended by the reverse Slavic or, at any rate, Koussevitzkyian habit of taking most swift-moving music at as nearly as possible the speed of a ray of light.

Mr Koussevitzky's Stravinsky is unorthodox. A man who will not obey the printed directions of Beethoven and Wagner and Brahms about tempi and dynamics and phrasing can scarcely be expected to show due deference to the desires of a living and radical composer.

Koussevitzky's justification for going his own way with the music of Stravinsky and Brahms as he did yesterday is that by so doing, he can make it vivid, make it thrilling. He can, and yesterday, as most days, he did.

Those who judge art by the voltage of the thrill they get, cannot but adore Koussevitzky. Those to whom music, ideally speaking, means not delirious excitement, but joy and peace, cannot but be annoyed at missing from such things as the magnificient finale of Brahms' C minor symphony joy and peace.

It is all a question of taste and this reviewer has so often questioned Mr Koussevitzky's taste that readers are no doubt weary of his plaints.

Quinby's Generosity

At any rate tonight's radio audience, at the last of the broadcasts made possible by W. S. Quimby's generosity, can, to use a popular and expressive phrase, expect to "get quite a kick out of" Stravinsky's music and out of much of the Brahms symphony, music far easier to enjoy than his Fourth Symphony, heard on the night of the initial broadcast. The Vivaldi and Satie should come through clearly.

One hopes that both the radio audience and the musical public, terms still not wholly synonymous, realize how fine and rare a thing Mr Quimby has done. The listeners in from lonely sick rooms and isolated farmhouses, will few of them venture to trouble orchestra or donor with their thanks. Mr Higginson once said that at a time when it had become financially almost impossible to carry on the orchestra he was nerved to the effort of continuing it by the thought of the ray of sunshine the concerts brought into the otherwise gray lives of many of the listeners in the rush seats on Friday. But it takes generosity and understanding like his to feel and try to gratify the needs of humble ordinary people who are not even spectacularly poor.

One hopes that these broadcasts will be continued next year. They have been the real event of a far from uneventful Boston Symphony season. P. R.

G TRANSCRIPT, SATURD

MAY 1st

Symphony

THE FINAL MATINEE: LARGE LEAVE-TAKING FOR MR. KOUSSEVITZKY

HAIL AND FAREWELL BEYOND ALL PRECEDENT

Good Will That Became a Veritable Demonstration—Just Share for the Orchestra—A Program of Repetitions, Satie's and Debussy's Grecian Dances Included—Stravinsky via "Petrushka"—Brahms of the First Symphony

THERE SHOULD BE some other way. Every spring the parting of the public with the conductor of the Symphony Concerts becomes more ardent and less articulate. These fervors began when Mr. Monteux took leave at the end of a term five years long, by no means unmarked in the annals of the orchestra. They waxed when Mr. Koussevitzky, in two concerts only four hours apart, went his way twelve months ago. They mounted yesterday when, after prologue at Cambridge, the annual rites were renewed more eagerly but not less impotently. Possibly, it is a defect of rites that there is only to multiply and prolong them.

In Symphony Hall Friday afternoon were 2600 persons, habitués of that concert-room, all more or less alert to testify their regard for the departing conductor. Obviously, when he stood bowing before them, there could be no snatching of necklaces from throats or rings from fingers to heap at his feet. Such things are not done nowadays; as likely as not, they were neve done in this New England. No more could one and all skirt the corner of St. Stephen's Street; dislodge Mr. Koussevitzky's chauffeur from his seat; fasten a rope to the motor; drag the conductor in triumph, even to Pond Street, which is in Jamaica Plain. Suburbia, watching the procession pass, would have drawn but one inference: that the car had not only broken down, but also been mobbed. Plausibly enough, it might have telephoned for the police. Possibly, such parades for the artistically illustrious went out with horses and carriages. Yet, if the primi donne enjoyed them from Jenny Lind to Adelina Patti, why should they not be meet for the primidonne conductors of a later day? Custom forbids—and custom can be an indecently arbitrary thing.

There you are! With the best will in the world between that departing conductor and that farewelling audience, yesterday afternoon there was nothing to do but applaud. Let the bystander hope piously that the dowagers, graciously assembled, never once shouted in their lives that their daughters reserve such ebullitions for something at least as important as a hockey-game. Friday, however, they no more than rustled and ruffled in their comely throats, though there were reports that a few lads in the upper balcony actually "yelled." Middle-Westerners doubtless, that know no better; sent to Boston for an education, curiously pursuing it at Symphony Hall rather than at the movies. . . . The elect ladies did clap their hands; clapped them very loud and very long—so long indeed that some of us bred to the reporting of conventions as well as of concerts, instinctively reached for watches.

Within recollection, no Symphony Concert has heard such sustained plaudits as greeted Mr. Koussevitzky when he came first to his place. They were instant and warm; they snapped from every corner and quarter of the hall. Plainly and warrantably they moved the conductor. They were renewed at the end of Vivaldi's Concerto for Strings (which began the actual music) and promptly directed by Mr. Koussevitzky to the standing choir. At the intermission, upon the dancing heels of the Suite from "Petrushka," the whole orchestra rose to the clapping, whereupon it swelled and beat and swelled again. The practised recorders believed it at acme; since the audience of Friday afternoon is quick to disperse at the rounding of the final cadence. Not so at this matinée of farewell. In a delicious blur of excitement over Brahms in C minor and the departing conductor, the audience lingered and would not have done. Mr. Koussevitzky bent his head and lifted both grateful and deprecating arms. More than once—in the flesh of Mr. Burgin, concert-master—he shook the collective hand of the standing orchestra. So it went, until at last everyone forgot to clap, so intent was everyone upon talk about "the demonstration." As the venerable editor of the program-book likes to say, it was "memorable." Mr. Koussevitzky, choosing music, is sensitive to sincerities. By that token he cannot doubt the regard, the good wishes, the recollection and anticipation, in which the matinée half of his Bostonian public holds him.

GRACE H. BULLOCK ENGAGED

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Bullock of Cambridge to Be Married to Gordon Preston Marshall of Newton ville ninety-four pieces by the very symphony with which it had begun. As for the routinières, they might easily be content with Satie's "Gymnopédies," first time at these concerts, as though it were the thirtieth of January instead of the thirtieth of April; while even they might agree that the Suite from "Petrushka" is that hybrid thing, a modern classic. To each hearer his own particular objection. There are those who count this Concerto of Vivaldi, in the edition of the mysterious Mistovski and Oxford University, the least interesting of Mr. Koussevitzky's current ancients.

Moreover, lest the purists be also "in his hair," the reviewer hies to his bounden duty of reviewing. This time, however, he no more proposes to exercise it in extenso than Mr. Koussevitzky chose to array a usual program. For him, as well as for the conductor, it was the final matinée. Through the spring mists, he also could descry the summer holidays looking both large and sweet. Therefore be it said briefly that Signor Vivaldi has written a fortieth or a fiftieth Concerto—these eighteenth-century maestri di capella composed like rabbits; that it "lies well" for string choir; that the first division marches and upswells into a climax of vigorous, keen-rhythmed counterpoint; that the finale contains a light, pleasing, sensuous tune; that the middle movement misses Vivaldi's usual depth and warmth of unfolding song. As for Satie's Spartan dances, they are not in the least Grecian, as antiquarians of music might conceive them; while not at all do they seek what the learned name historical perspective. They are, in fact, tone-poems in miniature—a frieze in marble of dancing youths, upon a sudden recalled, in long defile, to life and motion. They move in a sound that is like stillness; the colors are pale; the rhythm barely quickens the air. The melancholy of remoteness and remembrance suffuses the music, which seems quite as much Debussy as Satie. And the phrases of the flute above its bed of strings—in the second dance—turn the heart to water. It is as though the flute-player also remembered, and is sad.

Nor at a final matinée need the Suite from "Petrushka" or the First Symphony of Brahms feed discourse. Since Mr. Toscanini, Mr. Koussevitzky, and every other conductor follows his own bent in choice from the ballet, why not cast out altogether Petrushka himself? Invisible, without narrative or action to character him, the piteous puppet undergoes, in the concert-hall, one more humiliation. Under his name, the orchestra emits strange, broken, clawing, discordant sounds; while a few recall the irony, the wit, the pathos, those scraps and ejaculations engender in the theater. Besides, the dances suffice. They bound, they whirl, they snap, they shiver with rhythm. They flare with color. Though humor and wit bedeck them, they exhale wildness and riot. Possessed of a new sense, the ear smells in them an earthy humanity—that earth to which at his richest (as in "Le Sacre" and "Les Noces") Stravinsky is always getting close.

And Johannes in C minor—enough that he is music for its own sake, in itself contained and disclosed, more than sufficient unto thought engrossed and feeling stirred by no other than musical sensation. It can be done; it has been done; twice, thrice and four times in a season Brahms renews the miracle. Yesterday, too, the serving conductor was more than acolyte. From a Brahms loosed to power and dominion over the minds and hearts of men, sound at Mr. Koussevitzky's will the embattled measures of the first movement; the Andante that out of contemplation drains beauty. Then call the horns of the finale and to the stars the ascent begins. Trumpets and trombones peal their chorale—at Mr. Koussevitzky's hands like voices of the Apocalypse. Straightway the heavens stand opened. H. T. P.

All these needs the Temple will meet with its great auditorium—all these needs and more. Masons have already pledged a million dollars and the remainder is sought upon a foundation of civic pride. An exceptionally beautiful building is planned, and a commendable spirit of disinterest actuates the promoters of the idea in their arrangements for its future conduct. No profit from the operation of the Temple will accrue to the Masonic order—the entire net income will be devoted to charity. Hence the handsome edifice will be virtually a civic possession, entrusted to the stewardship of the organization which is erecting it.

The appeal commends itself to all thoughtful persons who keep at heart the common welfare. The public answer should be instant and generous. Every gift will be an investment in a better Providence.

POPS CONCERT ON THE AIR TONIGHT FROM WEEI

This evening will usher in for the radio listeners of New England a continuation of the concerts from Symphony Hall, when stations WEEI and WEAN broadcast the "Pops". The series of "Pops" concerts will be broadcast every Saturday night up to and including July 3.

These concerts are of the light, informal type, in keeping with the season. They are played by 80 Boston Symphony Orchestra players under the direction of Agide Jacchia, prominent conductor and composer. The series is given through the courtesy of W. S. Quinby.

Globe MAY 8

Herald MAY 7

Koussevitsky Greeting America and Departing

Above Is Shown Famous Conductor Arriving on the Aquitania Last September to Direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Below, Sailing for Europe on the Same Liner After a Successful Season Here.

Street, R. I.

46TH SEASON OPENS OC..

New Boston Orchestra Conductor Achieves Great Success During His Second Year.—Plan His Next Appearance Here

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the past two seasons, is on his way to Europe, where he will spend the summer. He will return to this country to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Symphony Hall, Boston, Oct. 8.

His second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was eminently successful and the closing concerts of the series in various cities were like a triumphal tour for Koussevitsky and his men. At the last Saturday night concert of the season in Boston, May 1, the audience cheered conductor and orchestra to the echo.

When the orchestra played for the last time at Infantry Hall here in March seats for the concert were sold out on the first day of the ticket sale. Funds have been subscribed to secure the Albee Theatre for five nights next season so that the orchestra may play there and so that the city will not be deprived of its infrequent opportunities to hear the famous musicians.

Final steps in the negotiations to obtain the use of the theatre had not been completed late last week, but supporters of the plan were then confident that the details could be satisfactorily arranged.

Mr. Koussevitsky in Paris will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitsky" from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre and Bloch's "Concerto Gresso."

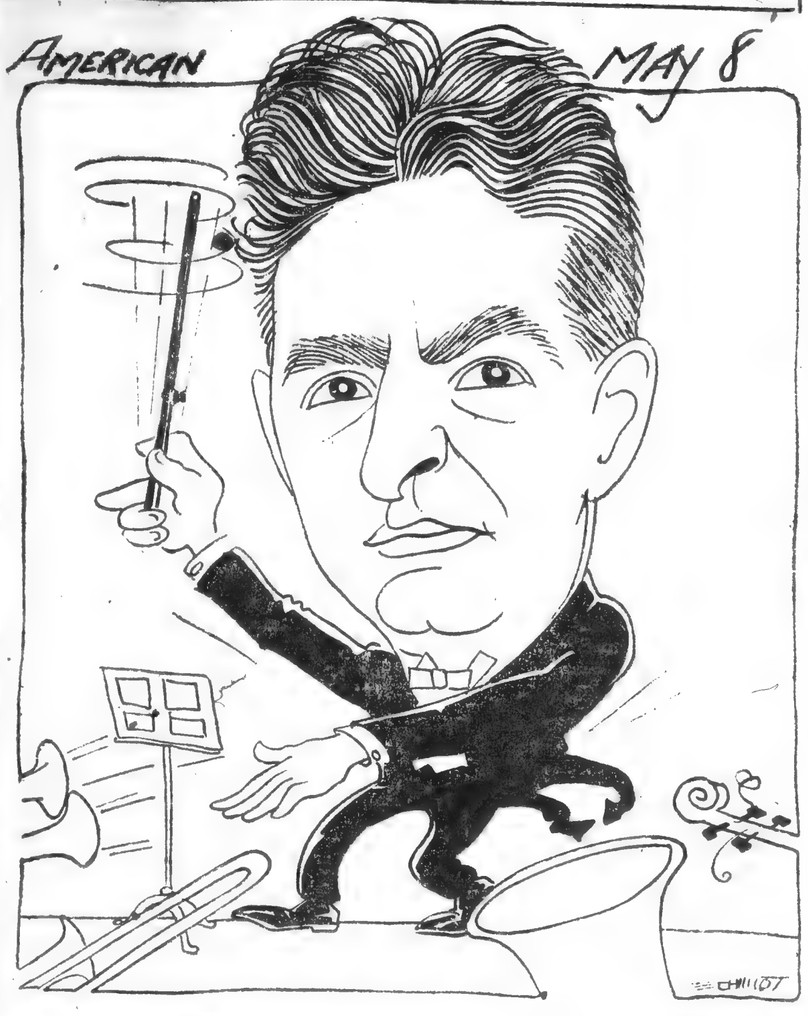
He will rest for the remainder of the summer.

Koussevitsky brought forth a number of new and significant works during the season past, by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre and the American composers Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

Despite the considerable portion of new music, the composers most often represented were Beethoven and Brahms.

HIS SWISHING BATON PUTS PEP IN 'POPS'

AMERICAN MAY 8



AGIDE JACCHIA pours out the sweet sounds at the "Pops" these nights while the waitresses pour out the sweet sodas and everyone drinks it in and seems satisfied.

"POP" CONCERTS BEGIN 41ST SEASON IN SYMPHONY HALL

CLOSE — MAY 4

Enthusiastic Applause For Conductor Jacchia and His Melodious Program

The "Pops" popped and fizzed and sparkled brilliantly last evening in Symphony Hall in a glorious opening of their 41st season. Again came Agide Jacchia, with his grayed hair and spirited baton, and the wonderfully fine aggregation of Symphony players. Again the crowded tables, the near-beer and the pretzels, the faint columns of smoke from a thousand cigarettes, with over all the crashing cymbals, the blare of brasses and the sweep of the violins.

Promptly at 8:15 Mr Jacchia steps out vigorously to a round of applause. He is a most business-like person; steps out as if he were in the midst of a five-mile walk. He bows a bit awkwardly as he looks over the great hall, which by this time is pretty nearly jammed. The balconies are filled. On the floor the late-comers are still drifting into their table seats. Cigarettes are alight, and everyone is ready and expectant.

Mr Jacchia forthwith launches in Berlioz' slashing "Hungarian March," and the "pop"ular concerts are on for another season. The end brings a storm of handclapping. Mr Jacchia bows and smiles, and smiles and bows. It's a bit too early in the evening for an extra. So finally, with the applause still ringing out, Mr Jacchia sits himself solidly down, with grim determination to smile and bow no more.

The audience for this opening night is a typical one. There is very little formal dress—here and there a party at one of the tables, but they are exceptions. Dress, in the painful sense of the word, is rather conspicuous for its absence. And of the women, but few are smoking.

Mr Jacchia goes through on close schedule. He gives us Thomas' "Mignon" overture for a second piece; with its vigorous finale that sets the leader's hair all awry. Then the first extra, which is "The Lark" (Olinka-Jacchia). There is a sprightly and interesting bird song at the end, which brings applause.

Moszkovski's tricky little Scherzina (Opus 18, No. 2) is followed by Emil Sauer's "The Music Clock" as an extra, a highly ingenious thing, entirely for the wood and resembling what we imagine would result from a cross-breed of a calliope and a music box.

Closing the first part of the program is the fantasia from Alfano's "Resurrection." Fast and furious it wends its tremulous way under Mr Jacchia's emphatic baton, drawing upon everything available from the great organ to the xylophone and chimes. One expects to have someone hammer out a tune upon the flowerpots that range across the platform. But no. Comes an uproarious smashing finale that sets the audience clapping even before the last notes are sounded.

It is an interesting and varied program, especially with the extras. And Mr Jacchia himself is generously represented in it. Brahms Rhapsody in E-flat, Scott's negro dance, the Cordoba of Albeniz, all in the second section, are from Mr Jacchia's orchestrations, as was the Moszkovski Scherzina, and Godard's "Pan," Op. 50, No. 2, which comes later. In spite of the blasts and blares of the usual "Pop" program, it is plain to see how Mr Jacchia leans to the more delicate thing himself.

But this is a "Pop" audience. It is the popular things, mainly thrown in as extras, which set the feet going and bring the loudest applause. The Brahms "Waltz No. 15," for example; and then the Weber-Berlioz "Invitation to the Dance." Ah, there's the stuff they like—it mixes well with ginger pop and lends a kick even to fruit cocktails. The applause is eloquent.

Mr Jacobia attacks Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" with a savage warmth. This bit of Russia sets the tables vibrating, as the brass lets go its sonorous opening refrain of the old Russian national hymn.

The third and final section opens with a bacchanale from Wagner's "Tannhauser." It is a magnificent rendering of a beautiful thing; intelligent, studied, forceful but blusterless. Jacchia knows his Wagner. And then, deftly enough, he throws in an extra, a spirited bit of modern light opera (from Bayreuth to New York), the stirring March of the Toys from Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland."

Now comes the "Pan," and lastly Rimsky-Korsakov's fandango from "Capriccio Espagnol." Mr Jacchia, with hair now disheveled, his collar a bit wilted, his face wet with perspiration, bows and smiles for the dozenth time. He has a right to smile, too, for it was a fine evening for everyone.

Tonight is "Simmons College Night," with college songs to lend flavor to the program. Wednesday will bring a Jewish program and Thursday will be University Club Night. Friday and Saturday programs have no special designation, but next Sunday will be Verdi Memorial Night, with five of the

UNIVERSITY CLUB NIGHT AT POPS

TRAV MAY 6

At the "Pop" concert in Symphony Hall tonight, at which the University Club will be represented, Agide Jacchia will be heard in the following program:

Prelude to "Carmen".....Bizet
Overture to "The Ruins of Athens"
Beethoven
Fantasia from "Pagliacci"....Leoncavallo
College songs.
Finale, Scheherazade....Rimsky-Korsakov
Festival at Bagdad. The sea. The ship goes to pieces on a rock surmounted by a bronze warrior. Conclusion.
Spanish dance.....Granados-Seiniger
"Children at Play"
Van Westerhout-Jacchia
Overture to "Tannhauser".....Wagner
College songs
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube"
Strauss
Furiana from "La Gioconda"....Ponchielli

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

At the "Pop" concert in Symphony Hall tonight, at which the University Club will be represented, Agide Jacchia will be heard in the following program:

Prelude to "Carmen".....Bizet
Overture to "The Ruins of Athens"
Beethoven
Fantasia from "Pagliacci"....Leoncavallo
College songs.
Finale, Scheherazade....Rimsky-Korsakov
Festival at Bagdad. The sea. The ship goes to pieces on a rock surmounted by a bronze warrior. Conclusion.
Spanish dance.....Granados-Seiniger
"Children at Play"
Van Westerhout-Jacchia
Overture to "Tannhauser".....Wagner
College songs
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube"
Strauss
Furiana from "La Gioconda"....Ponchielli

First Sunday 'Pop' Concert; Season Now Under Way

The "Pop" concerts will open their second week tomorrow night in Symphony Hall with the first Sunday concert of the season and an operatic program featuring the music of Verdi. Agide Jacchia and the "Pops" orchestra of eighty Symphony players will provide manifold musical delights each night in the week, all of which are open to the public, with the single exception of Thursday, for which the "Pops" has been taken over by the Eastern Star organization. The program tonight is:

Polonaise Militaire.....Chopin
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Spring Song.....Mendelssohn
Fantasia from "Madam Butterfly"..Puccini
Suite from "Carnival"...Schumann-Jacchia
a. Preamble b. Pierrot. c. Chopin.
d. Reconnaisance. e. Sphinxes.
Trombone Quartet.
Scherzo, "The Flight of the Bumble-Bee".....Rimsky-Korsakov
Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Prelude to the "Mastersingers of Nuremberg".....Wagner
The Music Box.....Liadov
Waltz, "1001 Nights".....Strauss

POPS RESURGENT

Collations, Colloquies, and Familiar Tunes Inaugurate Another Season of the Summer Concerts—Alfano's "Resurrection" Supplies a Novelty — Encores as Ever

TRANS — MAY 4

LIKE the quality of the punch that bears the name, there is an amiable temper and gentle gusto to the Pop concerts that usher them in each year at their appointed time with more than a sounding of clarions and shrilling of fifes. Pops are an institution, respected, loved even; but not, like the elms at Keeb, "blatantly immemorial." No one would ever call them that. The shadow of fame and report that surrounds them is cast by simple tradition in which the hideous effrontery of modern advertising has but a small share. They need no bush. Friends of the Pop concerts are most likely (in the majority) old friends who have tried them over many seasons of string and brass and pretzel and found them excellent. The world revolves, a winter is tolled off, and the Pops are with us as unerringly as the first robin. Pops longae, vita brevis.

Over a green and yellow fringe of ferns and Scotch broome, Mr. Jacchia began last evening in Symphony Hall the current and forty-first session of the Pops. Unlike most premières, the opening Pop is no different from any that follow. The program resembles the average program, the attention paid it is alternately rapt and distraught, the clink and crunch of glasses and confections is neither louder nor softer than it is apt to be later on in the spring. Perhaps the crowd, only, is larger. It filled the hall last night, saluted the conductor with an affectionate racket, and demanded with loud insistence at least four or five encores. Mr. Jacchia's choice of music ran to the dramatic and resounding; two marches (Berlioz and Chaikovsky); Thomas's "Overture to Mignon"; Brahms's "Rhapsody in E flat"; "Tannhäuser"; a fantasia of some of the best music in Alfano's opera, "Resurrection," etc., for a total of the usual eleven numbers. "Resurrection" is a delightful addition to the Pops reportory. Mr. Jacchia can pull it out of the lazaret so often as he pleases and still, I venture, audiences will not tire of it. It is good, full music, more than once reminiscent of Moussorgsky, preserving its interludes of Easter bells and chants (for organ). Another item, tested by pie and lemonade, is Chaikovsky's "Marche Slave." Few favorites at Pops get such a hand as this.

Few, save the traditional encores. Mr. Jacchia has collected a shelf of them over many years; among them many of the most appropriate scores with which he trafficks. Those of last night included such as Sauer's "The Musical Clock," Victor Herbert's immortal "March of the Toys." Glinka's "The Lark," and others. The very popularity of this little group of intermezzos is frequently a barrier to honest appreciation of a regular offering. The idea appears to be to clap with large intent, not because you liked the Brahms, but because you know you will probably like the encore. "En Sourdine" (Tellam), Liadov's "The Music Box," or Rimsky-Korsakov's little scherzo, "The Flight of the Bumble Bee," lead one inpetuously on. It becomes a game of chance in which it is hard to be a loser, and where every throw (so to speak) is in imminent peril of being the right one. Mr. Jacchia on first night reserved some of his better fare, but there is solace that under the normal laws of frequency on which the Pops are grounded, they yet will out.

D. McC.

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of Simmons College

March, "Pomp and Circumstance" Elgar
Overture to the Hindu Play,
"Sakuntala".....Goldmark
Fantasia from the Opera "L'Oracolo"
Leoni
College Songs
Suite from the Ballet, "Sleeping Beauty".....Chaikovsky
Meditation from "Thais".....Massenet
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5....Rakhmaninov
Ride of the Valkyrs.....Wagner
Selection from the Opera, "Cavalleria Rusticana".....Mascagni
By the Waters of Minnetonka
Lieurance-Jacchia
Charge of the Hussars.....Spindler

Conductor: A. Jacchia

TRAVELER MAY 4

"POPS" BEGIN AT SYMPHONY

Agide Jacchia Conducts First of Forty-First Season

Bigger and better than ever, the Symphony Hall pop concerts inaugurated its 41st season last evening, with Agide Jacchia resuming his post of conductor. The orchestra, 80 men strong, appeared to include almost the full roster of the Boston Symphony orchestra, with but a few notable exceptions.

The delightful informality of the Pops, the privilege of listening to the music while sitting comfortably at tables sipping "Pop Punch," eating pretzels with the beer that was named by a poor judge of distance, or enjoying a smoke—these are as strong attractions as the popular programs that are presented during the nine weeks of the Pops season.

The programs Mr. Jacchia has announced for the first week are more varied and interesting than ever before. There are many novelties and pieces from the symphonic repertoire to please the most discriminating concert-goer, as well as the good old favorites that are always clamored for. Music that might be casually dismissed as hackneyed takes on new interest at the Pops, for it is most apt to be recognized by the infrequent concert-goer, while the symphony subscriber is even less likely to have heard it recently.

The opening program of the season swung off with Berlioz's stirring Hungarian March. Then there was the familiar overture to "Mignon," Mr. Jacchia's transcription of a Moszkovski Scherzino, and a Fantasia on airs from Alfano's opera, "Resurrection,"

MAY 4 EVENING AMERICAN —

'POPS' CONCERT SEASON OPENS WITH THRONG

Music and Refreshments at Symphony Hall Are of Excellent Quality

by MOSES SMITH

"Pops" came back to Symphony Hall and brought with it final evidence that Spring is not an illusion. The weather man may often be tricky in dear old New England, but "Pops" never lies. The very first night brings out a throng, mostly young, many girls, mostly pretty. See these fair one dressed in their gaily-colored clothes, talking, laughing, eating, drinking, occasionally smoking, and even, occasionally, listening to the music, their escorts a little more subdued, but happy and proud enough—see these things, and you realize quite keenly that the month of Maying is here.

There are others, older ones, who listen to the music more intently perhaps, but enjoy the bustle about them. After all, they get at "Pops" something that no other institution in America has offered so long, a concert that may be taken in the spirit of entertainment, without too much worry and seriousness.

The music is good, for it is played by eighty members of an orchestra that ranks as one of the world's best; it is conducted by Agide Jacchia, an able musician. He has a knack of arranging programs so that it may include music of varied appeal, so that each listener may say he got his "money's worth."

Of course, the refreshments are good, for it is now an old story that the food and drinks at "Pops" meet a high standard. And they are reasonably priced, which is an important consideration for most of us. The drinks—alas, or happily, according to your point of view—don't have quite the same ingredients as of old.

Mr. Jacchia was enthusiastically greeted when he made his appearance, and there was much applause throughout the evening from the opening "Rakoczy" March of Berlioz to the final Fandango from Rimsky-Korsakov's "Spanish Caprice." The Fantasia from hte recent opera by Alfano, "Resurrection," was well received.

Special nights begin early. Tonight will be "Simmons College

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
MAY 1 1920

A concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast direct from the Symphony Hall tonight through station WEEI, Boston, at 8:10 o'clock, D. S. T. Serge Koussevitsky will direct the concert.

SYMPHONY IN FINAL MATINEE

Post — MAY 1

Audience Emphatic In Approval of Mr. Koussevitzky

BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Since there is no existing instrument for recording the intensity of public demonstrations, such matters may not always be gauged with accuracy. Yet it seemed, yesterday afternoon, at the final matinee of the Symphony season, that the applause, cheers and other manifestations of approval heaped upon Mr. Koussevitsky, at the conclusion of the concert, exceeded in fervor any previous show of enthusiasm toward him on the part of the Friday subscribers.

TRIBUTE OF WARM REGARD

It would appear, then, that Mr. Koussevitzky is held in increasing regard. He has "worn well." Yesterday in presenting what might impolitely be termed a warmed-over programme, listing only one piece not already heard at this season's regular subscription concerts, he risked disfavor. Yet, as a matter of fact, he was tendered a warmth of acclamation that again belied the traditional apathy of the Friday audiences, and that might well have led an uninformed observer to the conclusion that Mr. Koussevitzky was taking his leave for all time, not merely until next October.

With the E-minor Concerto of Vivaldi, as edited by A. Mistovski, for stately beginning, and the First Symphony of Brahms for stirring and exalting ending, yesterday's concert also offered the two Gymnopedies of Satie in Debussy's orchestration, and the Suite from Stravinsky's "Petrushka," played last season and already heard this year at the final concert of the Tuesday "historical" series.

Stravinsky's Suite Liked

While it is not the most impressive example of its school, the Concerto of Vivaldi is agreeable music, dignified, melodious, touched with grave beauty in the Largo, and it made excellent vehicle for display of the suppleness, the warm and living tone of the string section.

The pieces of Satie which replaced at the last moment the announced tone-poem of Samazeuilh did not precisely cry for such prompt repetition. But the exhilarating Suite of Stravinsky, by now become one of the orchestra's most brilliant achievements, more than deserved its place upon the programme and, as it proved, as much might be said for the Symphony of Brahms.

Not that we of Boston are exactly in need of more intimate acquaintance with Brahms' first symphonic effort. For long the piece has been tolerably well known here, and that of this evening will be its sixth performance in Symphony Hall this season. But since it was played at the opening pair of concerts last October it served yesterday strikingly to indicate the strides that an already exceptional orchestra has made in the past 10 months.

Aside from Mr. Koussevitzky's engrossing if occasionally unorthodox interpretation, yesterday's performance of the Symphony was remarkable for its tonal beauty, richness and solidity, its plasticity, its flow of line, ever-bending, never-breaking. Yet deeper than these technical impressions went Mr. Koussevitzky's conveyance of the nobility, the strength, the emotional warmth of the music. Not in recollection has the superb exordium so seized upon ear and imagination, the Andante yielded such eloquence of song, the introduction to the last movement such a wealth of fantasy or the final climax scaled such heights.

Do you still hold Brahms to be an unemotional, austere, cerebral composer? Then hear his music from Mr. Koussevitzky and be straightway undeceived.

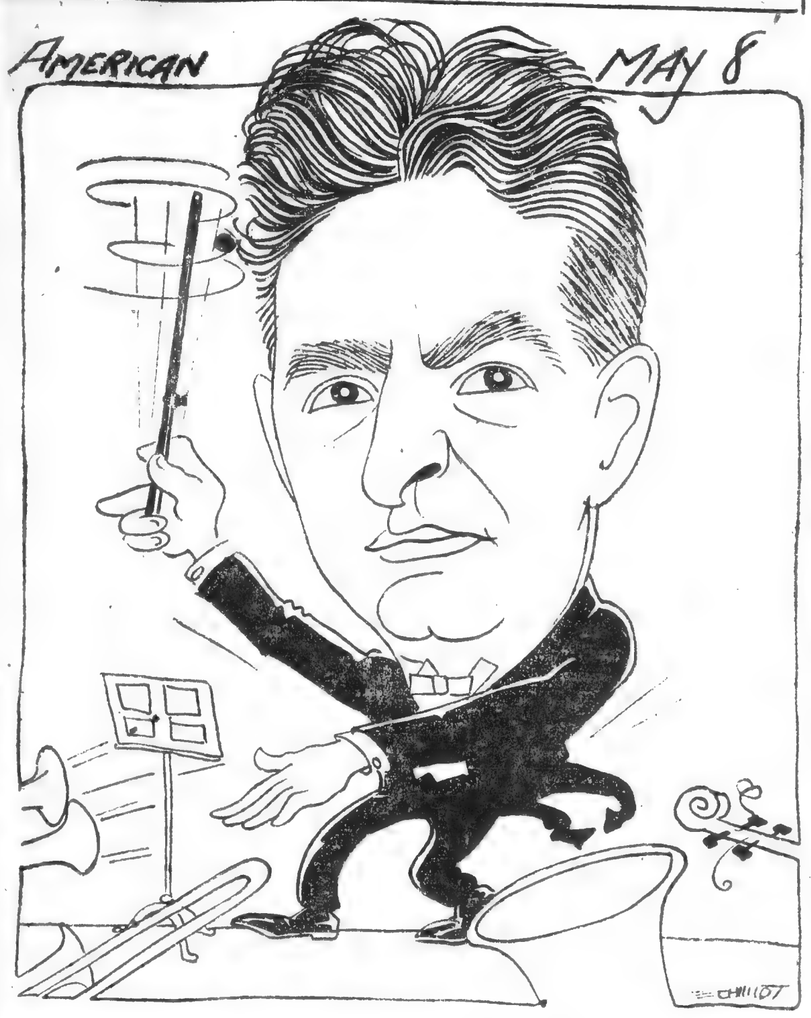
TRANSCRIPT MAY 13

At the Pops Tonight

The Order of the Eastern Star has Reserved the Whole of Symphony Hall, and the Concert is Not Open to the Public

HIS SWISHING BATON PUTS PEP IN 'POPS'

AMERICAN MAY 8



AGIDE JACCHIA pours out the sweet sounds at the "Pops" these nights while the waitresses pour out the sweet sodas and everyone drinks it in and seems satisfied.

"POP" CONCERTS BEGIN 41ST SEASON IN SYMPHONY HALL

CLOSE MAY 4

Enthusiastic Applause For Conductor Jacchia and His Melodious Program

The "Pops" popped and fizzed and sparkled brilliantly last evening in Symphony Hall in a glorious opening of their 41st season. Again came Agide Jacchia, with his grayed hair and spirited baton, and the wonderfully fine aggregation of Symphony players. Again the crowded tables, the near-beer and the pretzels, the faint columns of smoke from a thousand cigarettes, with over all the crashing cymbals, the blare of brasses and the sweep of the violins.

Promptly at 8:15 Mr Jacchia steps out vigorously to a round of applause. He is a most business-like person; steps out as if he were in the midst of a five-mile walk. He bows a bit awkwardly as he looks over the great hall, which by this time is pretty nearly jammed. The balconies are filled. On the floor the late-comers are still drifting into their table seats. Cigarettes are alight, and everyone is ready and expectant.

Mr Jacchia forthwith launches in Berlioz' slashing "Hungarian March," and the "pop"ular concerts are on for another season. The end brings a storm of handclapping. Mr Jacchia bows and smiles, and smiles and bows. It's a bit too early in the evening for an extra. So finally, with the applause still ringing out, Mr Jacchia sits himself solidly down, with grim determination to smile and bow no more.

The audience for this opening night is a typical one. There is very little formal dress—here and there a party at one of the tables, but they are exceptions. Dress, in the painful sense of the word, is rather conspicuous for its absence. And of the women, but few are smoking.

Mr Jacchia goes through on close schedule. He gives us Thomas' "Mignon" overture for a second piece; with its vigorous finale that sets the leader's hair all awry. Then the first extra, which is "The Lark" (Olinka-Jacchia). There is a sprightly and interesting bird song at the end, which brings applause.

Moszkovski's tricky little Scherzina (Opus 18, No. 2) is followed by Emil Sauer's "The Music Clock" as an extra, a highly ingenious thing, entirely for the wood and resembling what we imagine would result from a cross-breed of a calliope and a music box.

Closing the first part of the program is the fantasia from Alfano's "Resurrection." Fast and furious it wends its tremulous way under Mr Jacchia's emphatic baton, drawing upon everything available from the great organ to the xylophone and chimes. One expects to have someone hammer out a tune upon the flowerpots that range across the platform. But no. Comes an uproarious smashing finale that sets the audience clapping even before the last notes are sounded.

It is an interesting and varied program, especially with the extras. And Mr Jacchia himself is generously represented in it. Brahms Rhapsody in E-flat, Scott's negro dance, the Cordoba of Albeniz, all in the second section, are from Mr Jacchia's orchestrations, as was the Moszkovski Scherzina, and Godard's "Pan," Op. 50, No. 2, which comes later. In spite of the blasts and blares of the usual "Pop" program, it is plain to see how Mr Jacchia leans to the more delicate thing himself.

But this is a "Pop" audience. It is the popular things, mainly thrown in as extras, which set the feet going and bring the loudest applause. The Brahms "Waltz No. 15," for example; and then the Weber-Belioz "Invitation to the Dance." Ah, there's the stuff they like—it mixes well with ginger pop and lends a kick even to fruit cocktails. The applause is eloquent.

Mr Jacobia attacks Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" with a savage warmth. This bit of Russia sets the tables vibrating, as the brass lets go its sonorous opening refrain of the old Russian national hymn.

The third and final section opens with a bacchanale from Wagner's "Tannhauser." It is a magnificent rendering of a beautiful thing; intelligent, studied, forceful but blusterless. Jacchia knows his Wagner. And then, deftly enough, he throws in an extra, a spirited bit of modern light opera (from Bayreuth to New York), the stirring March of the Toys from Victor Herbert's "Babes in Toyland."

Now comes the "Pan," and lastly Rimsky-Korsakov's fandango from "Capriccio Espagnol." Mr Jacchia, with hair now disheveled, his collar a bit wilted, his face wet with perspiration, bows and smiles for the dozenth time. He has a right to smile, too, for it was a fine evening for everyone.

Tonight is "Simmons College Night," with college songs to lend flavor to the program. Wednesday will bring a Jewish program and Thursday will be University Club Night. Friday and Saturday programs have no special designation, but next Sunday will be Verdi Memorial Night, with five of the

UNIVERSITY CLUB NIGHT AT POPS

TRAV MAY 6

At the "Pop" concert in Symphony Hall tonight, at which the University Club will be represented, Agide Jacchia will be heard in the following program:

Prelude to "Carmen".....Bizet
Overture to "The Ruins of Athens"
Beethoven
Fantasia from "Pagliacci"....Leoncavallo
College songs.
Finale, Scheherazade....Rimsky-Korsakov
Festival at Bagdad. The sea. The ship goes to pieces on a rock surmounted by a bronze warrior. Conclusion.
Spanish dance.....Granados-Seiniger
"Children at Play"
Van Westerhout-Jacchia
Overture to "Tannhauser".....Wagner
College songs
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube"
Strauss
Furiana from "La Gioconda"....Ponchielli

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

At the "Pop" concert in Symphony Hall tonight, at which the University Club will be represented, Agide Jacchia will be heard in the following program:

Prelude to "Carmen".....Bizet
Overture to "The Ruins of Athens"
Beethoven
Fantasia from "Pagliacci"....Leoncavallo
College songs.
Finale, Scheherazade....Rimsky-Korsakov
Festival at Bagdad. The sea. The ship goes to pieces on a rock surmounted by a bronze warrior. Conclusion.
Spanish dance.....Grenados-Seiniger
"Children at Play"
Van Westerhout-Jacchia
Overture to "Tannhauser".....Wagner
College songs
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube"
Strauss
Furiana from "La Gioconda"....Ponchielli

First Sunday 'Pop' Concert; Season Now Under Way

The "Pop" concerts will open their second week tomorrow night in Symphony Hall with the first Sunday concert of the season and an operatic program featuring the music of Verdi. Agide Jacchia and the "Pops" orchestra of eighty Symphony players will provide manifold musical delights each night in the week, all of which are open to the public, with the single exception of Thursday, for which the "Pops" has been taken over by the Eastern Star organization. The program tonight is:

Polonaise Militaire.....Chopin
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Spring Song.....Mendelssohn
Fantasia from "Madam Butterfly"..Puccini
Suite from "Carnival"...Schumann-Jacchia
a. Preamble b. Pierrot. c. Chopin.
d. Reconnaisance. e. Sphinxes.
Trombone Quartet.
Scherzo, "The Flight of the Bumble-Bee".....Rimsky-Korsakov
Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Prelude to the "Mastersingers of Nuremberg".....Wagner
The Music Box.....Liadov
Waltz, "1001 Nights".....Strauss

POPS RESURGENT

Collations, Colloquies, and Familiar Tunes Inaugurate Another Season of the Summer Concerts—Alfano's "Resurrection" Supplies a Novelty — Encores as Ever

TRANS—MAY 4

LIKE the quality of the punch that bears the name, there is an amiable temper and gentle gusto to the Pop concerts that usher them in each year at their appointed time with more than a sounding of clarions and shrilling of fifes. Pops are an institution, respected, loved even; but not, like the elms at Keeb, "blatantly immemorial." No one would ever call them that. The shadow of fame and report that surrounds them is cast by simple tradition in which the hideous effrontery of modern advertising has but a small share. They need no bush. Friends of the Pop concerts are most likely (in the majority) old friends who have tried them over many seasons of string and brass and pretzel and found them excellent. The world revolves, a winter is tolled off, and the Pops are with us as unerringly as the first robin. Pops longae, vita brevis.

Over a green and yellow fringe of ferns and Scotch broome, Mr. Jacchia began last evening in Symphony Hall the current and forty-first session of the Pops. Unlike most premières, the opening Pop is no different from any that follow. The program resembles the average program, the attention paid it is alternately rapt and distraught, the clink and crunch of glasses and confections is neither louder nor softer than it is apt to be later on in the spring. Perhaps the crowd, only, is larger. It filled the hall last night, saluted the conductor with an affectionate racket, and demanded with loud insistence at least four or five encores. Mr. Jacchia's choice of music ran to the dramatic and resounding; two marches (Berlioz and Chaikovsky); Thomas's "Overture to Mignon"; Brahms's "Rhapsody in E flat"; "Tannhäuser"; a fantasia of some of the best music in Alfano's opera, "Resurrection," etc., for a total of the usual eleven numbers. "Resurrection" is a delightful addition to the Pops reportory. Mr. Jacchia can pull it out of the lazaret so often as he pleases and still, I venture, audiences will not tire of it. It is good, full music, more than once reminiscent of Moussorgsky, preserving its interludes of Easter bells and chants (for organ). Another item, tested by pie and lemonade, is Chaikovsky's "Marche Slave." Few favorites at Pops get such a hand as this.

Few, save the traditional encores. Mr. Jacchia has collected a shelf of them over many years; among them many of the most appropriate scores with which he trafficks. Those of last night included such as Sauer's "The Musical Clock," Victor Herbert's immortal "March of the Toys," Glinka's "The Lark," and others. The very popularity of this little group of intermezzos is frequently a barrier to honest appreciation of a regular offering. The idea appears to be to clap with large intent, not because you liked the Brahms, but because you know you will probably like the encore. "En Sourdine" (Tellam), Liadov's "The Music Box," or Rimsky-Korsakov's little scherzo, "The Flight of the Bumble Bee," lead one inpetuously on. It becomes a game of chance in which it is hard to be a loser, and where every throw (so to speak) is in imminent peril of being the right one. Mr. Jacchia on first night reserved some of his better fare, but there is solace that under the normal laws of frequency on which the Pops are grounded, they yet will out.

D. McC.

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of Simmons College

March, "Pomp and Circumstance" Elgar
Overture to the Hindu Play,
"Sakuntala" .....Goldmark
Fantasia from the Opera "L'Oracolo"
Leoni
College Songs
Suite from the Ballet, "Sleeping Beauty" .....Chaikovsky
Meditation from "Thais".....Massenet
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5....Rakhmaninov
Ride of the Valkyrs.....Wagner
Selection from the Opera, "Cavalleria Rusticana" .....Mascagni
By the Waters of Minnetonka
Lieurance-Jacchia
Charge of the Hussars.....Spindler

Conductor: A. Jacchia

TRAVELER MAY 4

"POPS" BEGIN AT SYMPHONY

Agide Jacchia Conducts First of Forty-First Season

Bigger and better than ever, the Symphony Hall pop concerts inaugurated its 41st season last evening, with Agide Jacchia resuming his post of conductor. The orchestra, 80 men strong, appeared to include almost the full roster of the Boston Symphony orchestra, with but a few notable exceptions.

The delightful informality of the Pops, the privilege of listening to the music while sitting comfortably at tables sipping "Pop Punch," eating pretzels with the beer that was named by a poor judge of distance, or enjoying a smoke—these are as strong attractions as the popular programs that are presented during the nine weeks of the Pops season.

The programs Mr. Jacchia has announced for the first week are more varied and interesting than ever before. There are many novelties and pieces from the symphonic repertoire to please the most discriminating concert-goer, as well as the good old favorites that are always clamored for. Music that might be casually dismissed as hackneyed takes on new interest at the Pops, for it is most apt to be recognized by the infrequent concert-goer, while the symphony subscriber is even less likely to have heard it recently.

The opening program of the season swung off with Berlioz's stirring Hungarian March. Then there was the familiar overture to "Mignon," Mr. Jacchia's transcription of a Moszkovski Scherzino, and a Fantasia on airs from Alfano's opera, "Resurrection,"

MAY 4 EVENING AMERICAN —

'POPS' CONCERT SEASON OPENS WITH THRONG

Music and Refreshments at Symphony Hall Are of Excellent Quality

By MOSES SMITH

"Pops" came back to Symphony Hall and brought with it final evidence that Spring is not an illusion. The weather man may often be tricky in dear old New England, but "Pops" never lies. The very first night brings out a throng, mostly young, many girls, mostly pretty. See these fair one dressed in their gaily-colored clothes, talking, laughing, eating, drinking, occasionally smoking, and even, occasionally, listening to the music, their escorts a little more subdued, but happy and proud enough—see these things, and you realize quite keenly that the month of Maying is here.

There are others, older ones, who listen to the music more intently perhaps, but enjoy the bustle about them. After all, they get at "Pops" something that no other institution in America has offered so long, a concert that may be taken in the spirit of entertainment, without too much worry and seriousness.

The music is good, for it is played by eighty members of an orchestra that ranks as one of the world's best; it is conducted by Agide Jacchia, an able musician. He has a knack of arranging programs so that it may include music of varied appeal, so that each listener may say he got his "money's worth."

Of course, the refreshments are good, for it is now an old story that the food and drinks at "Pops" meet a high standard. And they are reasonably priced, which is an important consideration for most of us. The drinks—alas, or happily, according to your point of view—don't have quite the same ingredients as of old.

Mr. Jacchia was enthusiastically greeted when he made his appearance, and there was much applause throughout the evening from the opening "Rakoczy" March of Berlioz to the final Fandango from Rimsky-Korsakov's "Spanish Caprice." The Fantasia from hte recent opera by Alfano, "Resurrection," was well received.

Special nights begin early. Tonight will be "Simmons College Night," and tomorrow Jewish Night, when music of Jewish composers will fill the program.

[illegible] station WBZ, Boston, at 8:10 o'clock, D. S. T. Serge Koussevitsky will direct the concert.

SYMPHONY IN FINAL MATINEE

POST MAY 1

Audience Emphatic In Approval of Mr. Koussevitzky

BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Since there is no existing instrument for recording the intensity of public demonstrations, such matters may not always be gauged with accuracy. Yet it seemed, yesterday afternoon, at the final matinee of the Symphony season, that the applause, cheers and other manifestations of approval heaped upon Mr. Koussevitsky, at the conclusion of the concert, exceeded in fervor any previous show of enthusiasm toward him on the part of the Friday subscribers.

TRIBUTE OF WARM REGARD

It would appear, then, that Mr. Koussevitzky is held in increasing regard. He has "worn well." Yesterday in presenting what might impolitely be termed a warmed-over programme, listing only one piece not already heard at this season's regular subscription concerts, he risked disfavor. Yet, as a matter of fact, he was tendered a warmth of acclamation that again belied the traditional apathy of the Friday audiences, and that might well have led an uninformed observer to the conclusion that Mr. Koussevitzky was taking his leave for all time, not merely until next October.

With the E-minor Concerto of Vivaldi, as edited by A. Mistovski, for stately beginning, and the First Symphony of Brahms for stirring and exalting ending, yesterday's concert also offered the two Gymnopedies of Satie in Debussy's orchestration, and the Suite from Stravinsky's "Petrushka," played last season and already heard this year at the final concert of the Tuesday "historical" series.

Stravinsky's Suite Liked

While it is not the most impressive example of its school, the Concerto of Vivaldi is agreeable music, dignified, melodious, touched with grave beauty in the Largo, and it made excellent vehicle for display of the suppleness, the warm and living tone of the string section.

The pieces of Satie which replaced at the last moment the announced tone-poem of Samazeuilh did not precisely cry for such prompt repetition. But the exhilarating Suite of Stravinsky, by now become one of the orchestra's most brilliant achievements, more than deserved its place upon the programme and, as it proved, as much might be said for the Symphony of Brahms.

Not that we of Boston are exactly in need of more intimate acquaintance with Brahms' first symphonic effort. For long the piece has been tolerably well known here, and that of this evening will be its sixth performance in Symphony Hall this season. But since it was played at the opening pair of concerts last October it served yesterday strikingly to indicate the strides that an already exceptional orchestra has made in the past 10 months.

Aside from Mr. Koussevitzky's engrossing if occasionally unorthodox interpretation, yesterday's performance of the Symphony was remarkable for its tonal beauty, richness and solidity, its plasticity, its flow of line, ever-bending, never-breaking. Yet deeper than these technical impressions went Mr. Koussevitzky's conveyance of the nobility, the strength, the emotional warmth of the music. Not in recollection has the superb exordium so seized upon ear and imagination, the Andante yielded such eloquence of song, the introduction to the last movement such a wealth of fantasy or the final climax scaled such heights.

Do you still hold Brahms to be an unemotional, austere, cerebral composer? Then hear his music from Mr. Koussevitzky and be straightway undeceived.

TRANSCRIPT MAY 13

At the Pops Tonight

The Order of the Eastern Star has Reserved the Whole of Symphony Hall, and the Concert is Not Open to the Public

POPS' OPENING PLEASES CROWD

41st Season Inaugurated Under Direction of Agide Jacchia

FINE PROGRAM HAS WEALTH OF VARIETY

SYMPHONY HALL—"Pops."

This was the program for last night's concert, the first of the "Pops":

Hungarian March.....Berloiz
Overture to "Mignon".....Thomas
Scherzino, Op. 18, No. 2.....
Moszkovski-Jacchia
Fantasia from "Resurrection".....Alfano
Rhapsody in E-flat.....Brahms-Jacchia
Negro Dance.....Scott-Jacchia
Cordoba.....Albeniz-Jacchia
Marche Slave.....Tchaikovsky
Bacchanale from "Tannhauser".....Wagner
Pan, Op. 50, No. 2.....Godard-Jacchia
Fandango from "Capriccio Espagnol"
Godard-Jacchia, Rimsky-Korsakov

A vast audience greeted Mr. Jacchia, with a heartiness which told of admiration and friendly feeling, too. He richly deserved it, for he is a master-hand at planning programs which perfectly suit the occasion; and, as everybody knows, he is a conductor of both grace and authority.

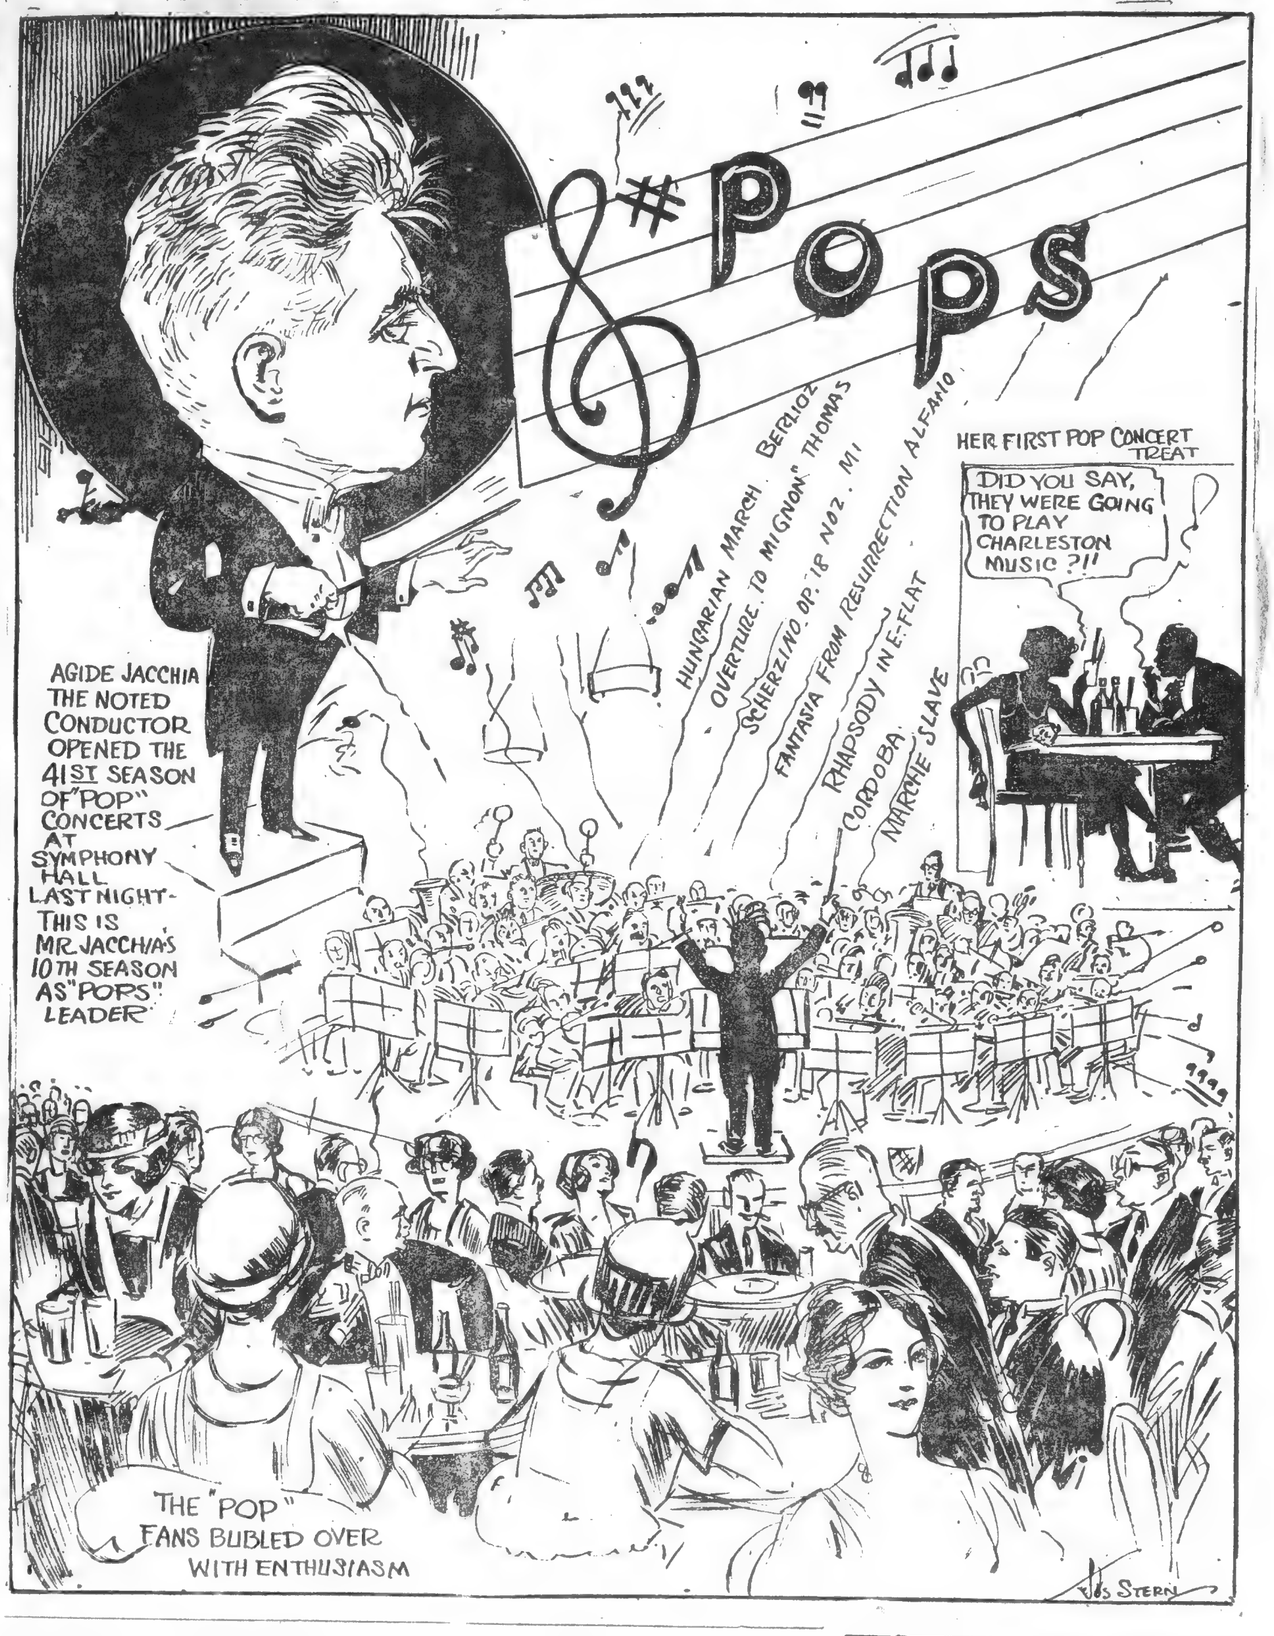
Last night, for instance, Mr. Jacchia offered a wealth of excellent music, all well worth the listening to, but little or none of it so exquisite that folk need scowl if one ventured a word to a neighbor. A concert, after all, where people eat and drink, is not the most fitting for music too subdued. Berlioz's March answers better, music of sonority and rhythm, which it takes more than a glass overturned or a spoon clattering on to the floor to damage.

Mr. Jacchia chose much such music, but he varied his program judiciously. The "Mignon" overture, after Berlioz, sounded delightful; how tastefully, when all is said, the fantasy from Alfano's opera pleased, as it hardly could fail to do, the climax swells so big; the music though seems poor enough. Mr. Jacchia's arrangement of the Brahms rhapsody made a stirring effect. And the Slavic march carried all before it. Tchaihovsky, after all, knew a thing or two about rythm and orchestral effect. As for the people who used to sniff at this march as vulgar, they failed to give Tchaihovsky credit for being 30 years ahead of his time. Mr. Jacchia read it stirringly.

So the program moved, good music of all kinds that would be in place, including a beautifully played solo by Mr. Theodorowicz. The concert gave great pleasure, so much was clear. No doubt all the concerts will. Long may they flourish!

R. R. G.

IN LIMELIGHT AS 41ST SEASON OF "POPS" START



AUDIENCE, COLORFUL

Thoroughly Enjoys Itself, but Remains Attentive

The melodious and informal "Pops" opened their 41st season at Symphony hall last night before a vociferously appreciative audience that filled every seat in the big auditorium and sardined itself around the rear of the balcony until it threatened to shoulder the plaster celestials out of their niches along the walls.

If there had been any question about the popularity of the "Pops," last evening dispelled the doubt. Agide Jacchia, master of ceremonies, whose name seems somehow to have become synonymous with these concerts, was met with a rising gust of applause that almost swept him from the platform when he first stepped to the conductor's dais—an ovation in which his musicians themselves joined. As the evening continued the response increased until when the finale was reached, it vibrated the house.

As early as 7:30 the early musical birds began to gather at the tables on the floor and in the balconies of a "temple of art" that had been transformed into a palm garden. The front of the platform was fringed with ferns and palms and just in front of the conductor's stand was a great cluster of gaily yellow forsythia. The old familiar tables and chairs, freshly varnished and dressed in geometric rows, lent a certain continental touch to the occasion.

The audience itself, while perhaps more serious and attentive than in former years, was unusually colorful. This, however, may have been an illusion which resulted from the contrast with the severe blacks and whites of the regular symphony crowds. The men last night, of course, were dressed in business suits, but the feminine contingent from a distance looked almost as irridescent as the Stadium at a football game or at a Harvard class day. Through the aura of tobacco smoke which hung above the tables the flash of orange, emerald, garnet and topaz gowns looked like a magnified tulip bed. More women added to the haze this year than in any past season.

At first those at the tables appeared a bit bashful about ordering the soft drinks and the sandwiches, which are an integral part of the series, but after a number or two the ice was broken and the gray-capped and scarlet-ribboned waitresses literally did a rushing business. One woman who had remarked, when she first entered, that cigarettes and tables in Symphony hall seemed like sacrilege, later observed, that "this is the way music really should be heard."

There is an easy informality about the "Pops" which to those who "know nothing about music except that they know what they like," is very comforting. One of this sort can honestly enjoy the program without having to agree solemnly for the sake of his self-respect that an utterly inexplicable complication of sounds was "wonderful"—as is sometimes necessary at concerts for more altitudinous brows.

Furthermore, the "Pops" are a godsend for May-struck lovers. There were many such last night. With their ladies sitting directly in front of them at the tables, the infatuated ones were able to lean forward until their chins touched shoulders. As each selection ended each one would sigh and lean back in his chair and wait patiently for Mr. Jacchia to pick up his baton again. It was a particularly attentive audience. Glasses and forks were lowered with great care and unlike ...

At the end of the program the audience stare at her coldly. She was missing when the next number began.

If the size and the enthusiasm last night count for anything the "Pops" series this year should be the most successful of any in the whole four decades.

"POPS" TONIGHT

The second "Pop" concert of the season in Symphony hall will take place tonight with a large representation of Simmons College. This and all other "Pop" concerts are open to the public. Program for tonight follows:

Pomp and Circumstance.....Elgar
Overture to "Sakuntala".....Goldmark
Fantasia, "L'Oracolo".....Leoni
College Songs
Suite, "Sleeping Beauty".....Tchaikovsky
a. Introduction: The Fairy of the Lilacs
b. Puss in Boots and the White Cat.
c. Valse.
Meditation from "Thais".....Massenet
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninov
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Selection, "Cavalleria Rusticana"
Mascagni
By the Waters of Minnetonka
Lieurance-Jacchia
Charge of the Hussars.....Spindler

THIS CLIPPING FROM TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
MAY 1 - 1926

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Play.

A concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast direct from the Symphony hall tonight through station WEEI, Boston, at 7:10 p. m. Serge Koussevitsky will direct the concert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
MAY 2 1926

Searching a little musical entertainment we went over to station WEEI expecting to find the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There was either a difference in times or program for a soprano sololst was in possession of the microphone.

Monitor — MAY 11

Tonight at the Pops

Northeastern University Night

Marche Militaire.....Saint-Saëns
Overture to "Orpheus"...Offenbach
Fantasia, "Carmen".....Bizet
Selections from Northeastern Show, 1926, "The Rajah of Kashmir"
A. F. Comstock '27
Rumanian Rhapsody.....Enesco

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LOWELL MASS.
COURIER-CITIZEN
MAY 5 - 1926

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, was given an enthusiastic send-off at the final concerts of the season last week. Whatever fault may have been found with his methods by captious critics, there is no denying that he has stimulated the orchestra to new achievements and stirred and maintained the public interest in a steadily increasing number of orchestral concerts. The extra Monday and Tuesday afternoon series have gained and held a new clientele. New York, which had been inclined to discount the excellencies of the Boston orchestra, has clearly been persuaded by Mr. Koussevitzky to sit up and take notice.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.
MAY 1 1926

WILL SEND OUT POP CONCERTS BY RADIO

Another important musical feature for the radio audience of New England will be the broadcasting of a series of nine Saturday evening Pop concerts direct from Symphony Hall, Boston. These broadcasts will begin at 8:05 o'clock the evening of May 8, and continue every Saturday night up to and including July 3.

W. S. Quimby of the W. S. Quinby Company, working in conjunction with the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the officials of WEEI, the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, has made possible this event, which will continue well into the summer the musical treat begun last January, when for the first time a concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra was put on the air.

At that time the broadcasting of Symphony was more or less of an experiment because of the unknown factor as to whether or not a large percentage of the radio audience would welcome Symphony music. The results have more than justified the efforts of those responsible for giving radio listeners as fine a quality of music as the world affords.

The Pops, as every one knows, are a distinct addition to the summer musical life of New England. While popular music is rendered, this music is of the best quality and is played in a thoroughly artistic manner. Many special features will be given during this series of concerts. Thousands of people at Symphony Hall will enjoy this beautiful orchestral music, but many thousands more, may, if they wish, enjoy the same privilege in their own homes.

At the broadcast of the final concert in the regular Symphony series at 8:10 tonight Mr. Quinby will speak to the radio audience about the coming Pops concerts. Then E.F.A., chief announcer at station WEEI, will give out over the air the concluding chapter of the Symphony instrumental story begun on the evening of February 20 and continued since at each Saturday evening's broadcast. The subject of this chapter is: "The percussion, harp, organ, and other special instruments of the Boston Symphony orchestra."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
TRENTON, N. J.
MAY 4 1926

Boston Will Have Beethoven Festival

It is announced that the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in addition to the four series of concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, next season, will give a special series of performances of Beethoven's works. This festival will be given in the Spring and will commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the master's death (March 26, 1827).

This gala series of Beethoven performances will exceed in scale any Beethoven celebration of the past in Boston. Serge Koussevitzky will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in all nine of the master's symphonies. An event of the festival will be the performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solennis," or mass in D minor, for orchestra, chorus and solo quartet.

In the performance of the "Missa Solennis" the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society. This project is of long duration, although only now announced. Dr. Archibald T. Davison, conductor of the Harvard and Radcliffe choruses, agreed last Autumn, before departing for his sabbatical year in Europe, to collaborate with Mr. Koussevitsky in the performance of the mass. Mr. Koussevitsky has already begun to train the choruses on this score.

The revival of the "Missa Solennis" is regarded as an event of considerable musical significance. It is infrequently performed, owing ... fifty and we...

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 1 1926

Will Radio "Pops" Saturday Evenings

W. S. Quinby to Announce Plans at Final Symphony Broadcast To-night

Another important musical feature for the radio audiences of New England will be the broadcasting of a series of nine Saturday evening Pop concerts direct from Symphony Hall, Boston.

These broadcasts will begin at five minutes past eight on the evening of May 8 and continue every Saturday night up to and including July 3.

Mr. W. S. Quinby of the W. S. Quinby Company, working in conjunction with the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the officials of WEEI, the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, has made possible this event which will continue well into the summer the unparalleled musical treat begun last January when, for the first time in history, a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was put on air.

During the previous years of its history, this illustrious orchestra had played almost exclusively for the comparatively few people so fortunate as to be able to personally attend the concerts. To extend this great musical privilege to millions of people at their own firesides was, therefore, a distinct innovation, the results of which, however, have more than justified the efforts of those responsible for giving radio listeners as fine a quality of music as the world affords.

In return for this privilege, thousands of people, in every walk of life, have by letter and otherwise given voice to the appreciation they have felt in their hearts. Parents have written of the wonderful educational value of these broadcasts to children. Helpless invalids, from their beds, have told of the inspiring and uplifting effects of this music that has come to them through the air. Messages of gratitude have come, too, from many snowbound homes in the isolated sections of New England. Everybody, it seems, from the great industrial captain down to those in the humblest positions, have appreciated the Symphony broadcast and gained something from them that has made their lives happier and more worth while.

These expressions of opinion, so unanimously favorable, have led Mr. Quinby, the orchestra trustees and WEEI to arrange for this summer broadcasting of the Pops Orchestra consisting of 80 regular Symphony players under the leadership of the famous conductor, Agide Jacchia, who is about to open his 10th season as Pops conductor.

At the broadcast of the final concert in the regular Symphony series at 8:10 to-night, Mr. Quinby will speak to the radio audience about the coming Pops concerts. Then E. F. A., chief announcer at station WEEI, will give out over the air the concluding chapter of the Symphony instrumental story begun on the evening of Feb. 20 and continued since at each Saturday evening's broadcast. The subject of this chapter is —"The percussion, harp, organ and other special instruments of the Boston Symphony Orchestra."

INFORMATION OBSCURED

POPS' OPENING PLEASES CROWD

41st Season Inaugurated Under Direction of Agide Jacchia

FINE PROGRAM HAS WEALTH OF VARIETY

SYMPHONY HALL—"Pops."

This was the program for last night's concert, the first of the "Pops":

Hungarian March.....Berloiz
Overture to "Mignon".....Thomas
Scherzino, Op. 18, No. 2.....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Fantasia from "Resurrection".....Alfano
Rhapsody in E-flat.....Brahms-Jacchia
Negro Dance.....Scott-Jacchia
Cordoba.....Albeniz-Jacchia
Marche Slave.....Tchaikovsky
Bacchanale from "Tannhauser".....Wagner
Pan, Op. 50, No. 2.....Godard-Jacchia
Fandango from "Capriccio Espagnol".....Godard-Jacchia, Rimsky-Korsakov

A vast audience greeted Mr. Jacchia, with a heartiness which told of admiration and friendly feeling, too. He richly deserved it, for he is a master-hand at planning programs which perfectly suit the occasion; and, as everybody knows, he is a conductor of both grace and authority.

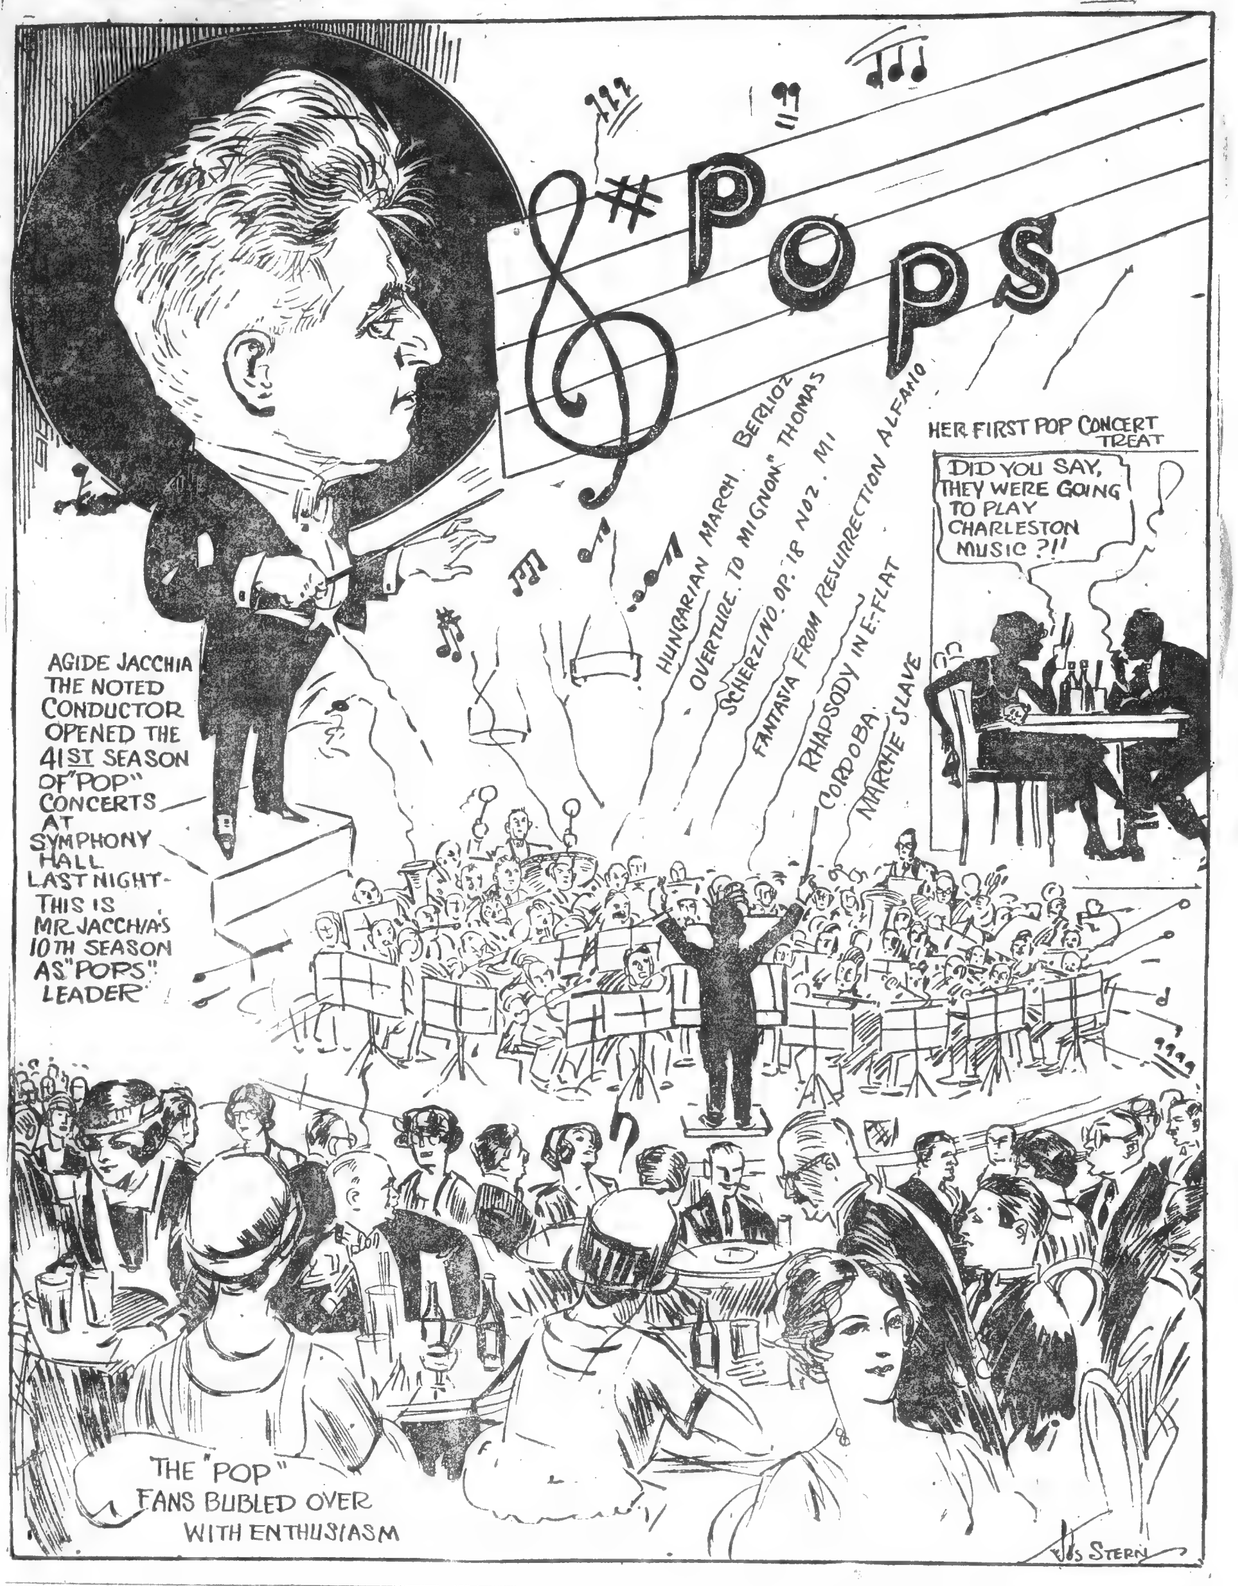
Last night, for instance, Mr. Jacchia offered a wealth of excellent music, all well worth the listening to, but little or none of it so exquisite that folk need scowl if one ventured a word to a neighbor. A concert, after all, where people eat and drink, is not the most fitting for music too subdued. Berlioz's March answers better, music of sonority and rhythm, which it takes more than a glass overturned or a spoon clattering on to the floor to damage.

Mr. Jacchia chose much such music, but he varied his program judiciously. The "Mignon" overture, after Berlioz, sounded delightful; how tastefully, when all is said, the fantasy from Alfano's opera pleased, as it hardly could fail to do, the climax swells so big; the music though seems poor enough. Mr. Jacchia's arrangement of the Brahms rhapsody made a stirring effect. And the Slavic march carried all before it. Tchaihovsky, after all, knew a thing or two about rythm and orchestral effect. As for the people who used to sniff at this march as vulgar, they failed to give Tchaihovsky credit for being 30 years ahead of his time. Mr. Jacchia read it stirringly.

So the program moved, good music of all kinds that would be in place, including a beautifully played solo by Mr. Theodorowicz. The concert gave great pleasure, so much was clear. No doubt all the concerts will. Long may they flourish!

R. R. G.

IN LIMELIGHT AS 41ST SEASON OF "POPS" START



AUDIENCE, COLORFUL

Thoroughly Enjoys Itself, but Remains Attentive

The melodious and informal "Pops" opened their 41st season at Symphony hall last night before a vociferously appreciative audience that filled every seat in the big auditorium and sardined itself around the rear of the balcony until it threatened to shoulder the plaster celestials out of their niches along the walls.

If there had been any question about the popularity of the "Pops," last evening dispelled the doubt. Agide Jacchia, master of ceremonies, whose name seems somehow to have become synonymous with these concerts, was met with a rising gust of applause that almost swept him from the platform when he first stepped to the conductor's dais—an ovation in which his musicians themselves joined. As the evening continued the response increased until when the finale was reached, it vibrated the house.

As early as 7:30 the early musical birds began to gather at the tables on the floor and in the balconies of a "temple of art" that had been transformed into a palm garden. The front of the platform was fringed with ferns and palms and just in front of the conductor's stand was a great cluster of palely yellow forsythia. The old familiar tables and chairs, freshly varnished and dressed in geometric rows, lent a certain continental touch to the occasion.

The audience itself, while perhaps more serious and attentive than in former years, was unusually colorful. This, however, may have been an illusion which resulted from the contrast with the severe blacks and whites of the regular symphony crowds. The men last night, of course, were dressed in business suits, but the feminine contingent from a distance looked almost as irridescent as the Stadium at a football game or at a Harvard class day. Through the aura of tobacco smoke which hung above the tables the flash of orange, emerald, garnet and topaz gowns looked like a magnified tulip bed. More women added to the haze this year than in any past season.

At first those at the tables appeared a bit bashful about ordering the soft drinks and the sandwiches, which are an integral part of the series, but after a number or two the ice was broken and the gray-capped and scarlet-ribboned waitresses literally did a rushing business. One woman who had remarked, when she first entered, that cigarettes and tables in Symphony hall seemed like sacrilege, later observed, that "this is the way music really should be heard."

There is an easy informality about the "Pops" which to those who "know nothing about music except that they know what they like," is very comforting. One of this sort can honestly enjoy the program without having to agree solemnly for the sake of his self-respect that an utterly inexplicable complication of sounds was "wonderful"—as is sometimes necessary at concerts for more altitudinous brows.

Furthermore, the "Pops" are a godsend for May-struck lovers. There were many such last night. With their ladies sitting directly in front of them at the tables, the infatuated ones were able to lean forward until their chins touched shoulders. As each selection ended each one would sigh and lean back in his chair and wait patiently for Mr. Jacchia to pick up his baton again.

It was a particularly attentive audience. Glasses and forks were lowered with great care and unlike some former concerts conversation almost ceased while the orchestra was playing. Once, in the middle of the sombre chords of the fantasia from Albeniz's "Resurrection," a waitress with incredibly squeaky shoes who marched along immediately under the platform made the conductor turn completely around and stare at her coldly. She was missing when the next number began.

If the size and the enthusiasm last night count for anything the "Pops" series this year should be the most successful of any in the whole four decades.

"POPS" TONIGHT

The second "Pop" concert of the season in Symphony hall will take place tonight with a large representation of Simmons College. This and all other "Pop" concerts are open to the public. Program for tonight follows:

Pomp and Circumstance.....Elgar
Overture to "Sakuntala".....Goldmark
Fantasia, "L'Oracolo".....Leoni
College Songs
Suite, "Sleeping Beauty".....Tchaikovsky
a. Introduction: The Fairy of the Lilacs
b. Puss in Boots and the White Cat.
c. Valse.
Meditation from "Thais".....Massenet
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninov
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Selection, "Cavalleria Rusticana".....Mascagni
By the Waters of Minnetonka.....Lieurance-Jacchia
Charge of the Hussars.....Spindler

Tonight at the Pops

Monitor — MAY 11

Northeastern University Night

Marche Militaire.....Saint-Saëns
Overture to "Orpheus"...Offenbach
Fantasia, "Carmen".....Bizet
Selections from Northeastern Show, 1926, "The Rajah of Kashmir"
A. F. Comstock '27
Rumanian Rhapsody.....Enesco
"Orientale".....Cui-Jacchia
"Whispering Flowers".....Blon
Finale from the Fourth Symphony.....Tchaikovsky
Afro-American Folk Songs
Arranged by Jacchia
Waltz, "Très Jolie".....Waldteufel
Northeastern Victory Song
C. J. Ginder '21

Monitor May 12

Tonight at the Pops

Cortège de Bacchus.....Delibes
Overture to "Oberon".....Weber
Fantasia, "Manon Lescaut"..Puccini
Harvard Freshman Glee Club—Four Folk Songs
Rhapsody, "España".....Chabrier
Prelude to "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor".....Borodin
Songs by Harvard Freshman Glee Club
"Fête Bohême".....Massenet
"Orientale".....Amani-Jacchia
Waltz, "Roses from the South".....Strauss

...Boston ...here was ...times or pro- ...ano soloist was in ...the microphone.

...the Boston Symphony orchestra, was given an enthusiastic send-off at the final concerts of the season last week. Whatever fault may have been found with his methods by captious critics, there is no denying that he has stimulated the orchestra to new achievements and stirred and maintained the public interest in a steadily increasing number of orchestral concerts. The extra Monday and Tuesday afternoon series have gained and held a new clientele. New York, which had been inclined to discount the excellencies of the Boston orchestra, has clearly been persuaded by Mr. Koussevitzky to sit up and take notice.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
TRENTON, N. J.

MAY 4 1926

Boston Will Have Beethoven Festival

It is announced that the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in addition to the four series of concerts in Symphony Hall, Boston, next season, will give a special series of performances of Beethoven's works. This festival will be given in the Spring and will commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the master's death (March 26, 1827).

This gala series of Beethoven performances will exceed in scale any Beethoven celebration of the past in Boston. Serge Koussevitzky will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in all nine of the master's symphonies. An event of the festival will be the performance of Beethoven's "Missa Solennis," or mass in D minor, for orchestra, chorus and solo quartet.

In the performance of the "Missa Solennis" the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society. This project is of long duration, although only now announced. Dr. Archibald T. Davison, conductor of the Harvard and Radcliffe choruses, agreed last Autumn, before departing for his sabbatical year in Europe, to collaborate with Mr. Koussevitsky in the performance of the mass. Mr. Koussevitsky has already begun to train the choruses on this score.

The revival of the "Missa Solennis" is regarded as an event of considerable musical significance. It is infrequently performed, owing to its great difficulty, and was last given in B[illegible]n by this orchestra at the dedica[illegible] of Symphony Hall, on October 15 [illegible] Wilhelm Gericke conducting. [illegible]ass bears the opus No. 123 ar[illegible]cupied a large part of the maste[illegible]ature years (1818-1823). Beeth[illegible]ot confine himself to the b[illegible] It is ranked among hi[illegible]

Wi[illegible]

W. S. [illegible] ance Plans a[illegible] ony Broade[illegible]nt

Another important musical feature for the radio audience of New England will be the broadcasting of a series of nine Saturday evening Pop concerts direct from Symphony Hall, Boston.

These broadcasts will begin at five minutes past eight on the evening of May 8 and continue every Saturday night up to and including July 3.

Mr. W. S. Quinby of the W. S. Quinby Company, working in conjunction with the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the officials of WEEI, the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, has made possible this event which will continue well into the summer the unparalleled musical treat begun last January when, for the first time in history, a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was put on air.

During the previous years of its history, this illustrious orchestra had played almost exclusively for the comparatively few people so fortunate as to be able to personally attend the concerts. To extend this great musical privilege to millions of people at their own firesides was, therefore, a distinct innovation, the results of which, however, have more than justified the efforts of those responsible for giving radio listeners as fine a quality of music as the world affords.

In return for this privilege, thousands of people, in every walk of life, have by letter and otherwise given voice to the appreciation they have felt in their hearts. Parents have written of the wonderful educational value of these broadcasts to children. Helpless invalids, from their beds, have told of the inspiring and uplifting effects of this music that has come to them through the air. Messages of gratitude have come, too, from many snowbound homes in the isolated sections of New England. Everybody, it seems, from the great industrial captain down to those in the humblest positions, have appreciated the Symphony broadcast and gained something from them that has made their lives happier and more worth while.

These expressions of opinion, so unanimously favorable, have led Mr. Quinby, the orchestra trustees and WEEI to arrange for this summer broadcasting of the Pops Orchestra consisting of 80 regular Symphony players under the leadership of the famous conductor, Agide Jacchia, who is about to open his 10th season as Pops conductor.

At the broadcast of the final concert in the regular Symphony series at 8:10 to-night, Mr. Quinby will speak to the radio audience about the coming Pops concerts. Then E. F. A., chief announcer at station WEEI, will give out over the air the concluding chapter of the Symphony instrumental story begun on the evening of Feb. 20 and continued since at each Saturday evening's broadcast. The subject of this chapter is—"The percussion, harp, organ and other special instruments of the Boston Symphony Orchestra."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.

MAY 2 1926

WILL SEND OUT POP CONCERTS BY RADIO

Another important musical feature for the radio audience of New England will be the broadcasting of a series of nine Saturday evening Pop concerts direct from Symphony Hall, Boston. These broadcasts will begin at 8:05 o'clock the evening of May 8, and continue every Saturday night up to and including July 3.

W. S. Quimby of the W. S. Quinby Company, working in conjunction with the trustees of the Boston Symphony orchestra and the officials of WEEI, the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, has made possible this event, which will continue well into the summer the musical treat begun last January, when for the first time a concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra was put on the air.

At that time the broadcasting of Symphony was more or less of an experiment because of the unknown factor as to whether or not a large percentage of the radio audience would welcome Symphony music. The results have more than justified the efforts of those responsible for giving radio listeners as fine a quality of music as the world affords.

The Pops, as every one knows, are a distinct addition to the summer musical life of New England. While popular music is rendered, this music is of the best quality and is played in a thoroughly artistic manner. Many special features will be given during this series of concerts. Thousands of people at Symphony Hall will enjoy this beautiful orchestral music, but many thousands more, may, if they wish, enjoy the same privilege in their own homes.

At the broadcast of the final concert in the regular Symphony series at 8:10 tonight Mr. Quinby will speak to the radio audience about the coming Pops concerts. Then E.F.A., chief announcer at station WEEI, will give out over the air the concluding chapter of the Symphony instrumental story begun on the evening of February 20 and continued since at each Saturday evening's broadcast. The subject of this chapter is: "The percussion, harp, organ, and other special instruments of the Boston Symphony orchestra."

MISSING
PAGE(S)

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 5 1926

MASONS ANTICIPATE INSPIRING REPORT

Campaign Solicitors to Make First Returns at Noon To-day.

CIVIC APPEAL BROADCAST

Letter Calls Attention of Non-Masons to Opportunity to Further City's Progress by Gifts Toward Auditorium Unit of Temple

An inspiring report is expected from the campaign teams in the $1,500,000 Masonic Temple building fund campaign, when the workers gather at Freemasons Hall at noon to-day to make the first returns of the soliciting campaign on which they started yesterday morning.

Unofficial reports received at campaign headquarters in Freemasons Hall throughout the day indicated much interest and a great deal of enthusiasm, not only among the workers, but among the prospects called upon. One of the most encouraging features of the campaign was the fact that the telephones at headquarters were kept busy all day long by non-Masons who asked that solicitors call on them for subscriptions to help build the auditorium feature of the building. One of these requests came from the management of a leading Providence theatre.

Howard Knight, Grand Master of Rhode Island, will be the principal speaker at the campaign meeting at noon to-day.

The civic committee, of which General Campaign Chairman William L. Sweet also is chairman and Benjamin P. Moulton is vice chairman, has sent a letter to a limited number of non-Masonic prospective givers, reading, in part, as follows:

"Cities are made great by those intangible values created by the spirit of unity among its people, its art and culture and its attractiveness to visitors. In the wake of these elements come industrial and commercial advantages that have a distinctly tangible value.

"'Providence is one of the great cities of America. A great city, to remain great, must progress. To stand still is to slip backwards.

"The difference between standing still and progress in Providence to-day is a civic auditorium.

"For the sake of its culture and art; for the sake of industrial and commercial advantage, Providence must have a civic auditorium in harmony with its prestige as one of the foremost communities in the country.

"This fact has been strikingly emphasized by the decision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to discontinue its concerts in Providence because of the absence of a suitable auditorium. For the same reason, Providence has heretofore been unable to invite large conventions to the city, or to enjoy other advantages dependant upon an adequate forum of this kind.

"A large auditorium, available to the public for concerts, opera, theatrical productions, entertainments, conventions and public gatherings of all kinds, is now proposed by the Masonic fraternity of Providence, to be built in connection with the new Masonic Temple at Francis, Brownell and Park streets. It will be a unit of itself, with its main entrances on Brownell street. The seating capacity will be between 2500 and 3000. The stage will be one of the largest to be found anywhere in the country, being exceeded only by that of the present Metropolitan Opera House in New York. There will be a large and beautiful foyer, parlors and other conveniences.

"This auditorium will be available for public use more than 300 days in the year.

"Two other features of the proposed new edifice commend themselves to public interest. Underneath the auditorium will be a large banquet hall, in which 2000 diners can be seated and served at one time. There is nothing in Providence to-day to equal this. This hall may also be used for expositions, a fact which will prove a big factor in bringing conventions to Providence.

"The location is ideal. Opposite the State Capitol, within five minutes' walk of Exchange place, it is easily accessible from all parts of the city.

"The Masons of Providence are about to engage in a campaign to raise $1,500,000 for the new Masonic Temple and Auditorium. The total cost of the venture is estimated at $2,500,000. One million dollars was raised in a campaign conducted nearly three years ago. The effort to obtain the balance, through outright gifts, will be made during the period from May 3 to 14, inclusive.

"Impressed with the civic aspect of the proposed auditorium, many non-Masons have requested of the campaign executive committee the privilege of contributing toward the erection of this unit of the Masonic Temple. Thus came into being the thought that the entire citizenry of Providence should be permitted to share with their Masonic fellow-citizens the task of building the auditorium. This idea received impetus through the interest shown by music lovers, the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and by officers and members of the Chamber of Commerce, who appreciate what a civic asset such an auditorium will be.

"The campaign executive committee therefore has decided to accept subscriptions from the community at large, Masons and non-Masons alike, for the building of the auditorium unit of the new Masonic Temple.

"And the committee takes this means of extending to you an invitation to be listed among the contributors to this important step in civic progress.

"There is another phase of the plans for the new Masonic Temple that should give the undertaking a city-wide appeal.

"The net proceeds of all income obtained from all departments of the new temple, including the auditorium, will be devoted to the city's charities. Except for the help that is extended to an occasional member of the fraternity in distress, Providence Masonry has no charities of its own. This policy, therefore, gives assurance that all charitable organizations in the city, regardless of race, color or creed, will benefit alike.

"If you are a music lover, you must be interested in the proposed auditorium because it offers the assurance of a continuance of symphony concerts and other musical events. If you like the drama, it offers the prospect of bringing to Providence the best in drama and spectacle. If you are a business man, you must be interested in the possibility of inviting large conventions and expositions to the city, for such gatherings and displays bring large numbers of people, who patronize the hotels, restaurants, the shops and amusements. If you are actuated by civic pride, you will want to see the auditorium built because it will be an important and essential step in civic progress.

"The Masons of Providence have ever proved loyal citizens, who have at all times shouldered their responsibilities towards the community in all things. Believing that the spirit of unity that helps to make a community truly great will be best served if their fellow- citizens assist in this project, they afford the non-Masons of Providence this opportunity to contribute toward the fund for building the auditorium.

"Subscriptions will be payable over a period of three years, in semi-annual installments, the first of which will be due Oct. 15, 1926.

"The Masonic Temple Trust, which will be in charge of the erection and management of the new temple and

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 1 1 1926

Koussevitzky Ends His Second Season

Boston Symphony Orchestra Conductor Sails to Give Paris Concerts

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso" and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer, and return to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on Oct. 8.

ing won national renown in his year in America, Serge Kousse has in his second year led this s orchestra through what proved me ways the most remarkable sea in its history. There has been unl admiration of the virtuoso quali f the Boston Symphony Orchestra he degree of eloquence and tonal which the Russian leader's baton spired.

ovation accorded conductor and tra at the closing concerts of the season indicates the attitude not only of Boston, but of New York and each city visited.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
MAY 1 2 1926

Providence is interested in the building of a Masonic Temple, which is to include an auditorium sorely needed. When the Boston Symphony goes to that city there is no fitting room for its performance. This applies also to many other events convening large numbers. The Masons themselves have pledged a million dollars, and the Journal appeals to citizens to complete the half million needed.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
BULLETIN
MAY 1 5 1926

New Symphony Offerings

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has given Boston a number of new and significant works during the past season. He has familiarized them with Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre and the American composers, Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

Of choral performances there were Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Brahm's "German Requiem"; Liszt's "Faust Symphony" and "Psalm XIII"; Prokofieff's "Sept, Ils Sont Sept," Ibert's "Chant de Folie," Ducasse's "Sarabande" and Borodin's dances from "Prince Igor."

But the composers most often played during the season were Beethoven and Brahms, with eight performances each.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
HERALD-TRIBUNE
MAY 1 6 1926

Koussevitzky to Give Paris Series; Back in October

Serge Koussevitzky, who completed his second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on May 1, sailed for Europe on the 5th, and will conduct his annual Paris series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe American scores, such as Copland's "Music for the Theater" and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," as well as other novelties given in his Boston season.

He will rest for the balance of the summer and return to open the Boston Symphony's forty-sixth season in Symphony Hall October 5.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 1 5 1926

SYMPHONY TICKETS ON SALE JUNE 15

Continuation of Concert Series Made Possible by Subscription of $6000.

DATES ARE ANNOUNCED

Orchestra Will Appear at Albee Theatre on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15

The sale of tickets for next season's series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be held at the E. F. Albee theatre as a result of the subscription of more than $6000 by public-spirited Providence citizens to cover a possible deficit, will be opened on June 15, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., a member of the Symphony Concert Committee.

This committee, which has been formed as a permanent organization, includes, besides Mrs. Gammell, Honorary Chairman President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, Chairman William L. Sweet, Mme. Avis Bliven Charbonnel, Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. George St. J. Sheffield and Mrs. Albert Fenner.

The concerts will be given on Tuesday evenings, Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

The following contributed to the Symphony Fund, the raising of which was essential to the continuance of the concert series next season:

Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., C. Prescott Knight, Monday Morning Musical Club, Albert Fenner, Hans Schneider, Mrs. Frederick Howe, Mrs. T. I. Hare Powel, Stephen O. Metcalf, Rhode Island Masons, Mary Bradford Child, Harry Parsons Cross, Ellen Sharpe, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Whitmarsh, Mary G. Annin, Chaminade Club, William Ely and Miss Maria L. Corliss.

There were two subscriptions signed "A Friend," and three from anonymous donors.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 1 5 1926

Tickets for Boston Symphony to Go on Sale

Sale of tickets for the series of concerts to be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Albee Theatre next season will open on June 15, it is announced by Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., a member of the committee. More than $6000 has been contributed by local music-lovers to cover a possible deficit, making the concert series possible.

President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University is honorary chairman of the committee, and William L. Sweet is chairman. Others on the committee are Mrs. Gammell, Mme. Avis Bliven Charbonnel, Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. George St. J. Sheffield and Mrs. Albert Fennerl.

How the Bands Stand As to Ages of Music

Chicago Leads in Older Works; Detroit Ahead in Nineteenth Century.

By W. K. KELSEY.

LAST week The News published an analysis of the programs of six of the country's great orchestras for the 1925-26 season according to the nationality of the composers.

Another study of some interest can be made with regard to the age of the music played. What orchestras are devoting chief attention to the classics? What orchestras are playing the music of today, and to what extent?

A study of the programs shows that the average date of composition of all works played during the season was as follows:

DETROIT	1857
BOSTON	1869
CHICAGO	1869
CLEVELAND	1874
NEW YORK	1872
PHILADELPHIA	1865

From this table it would appear that the Cleveland orchestra is most up-to-date. The real reason for the comparative modernity of the Cleveland orchestra's average date is, however, the small number of Eighteenth Century works which it played. In works of the present century it ranked below the Boston, Chicago and New York bands, and was only a fractional per cent ahead of Philadelphia.

In playing the older works, Mr. Stock's orchestra leads with 13.4 per cent, with Philadelphia a close second. For the Nineteenth Century, Mr. Gabrilowitsch is ahead—far ahead; while the Boston and Chicago orchestras bring up the rear. Mr. Koussevitzky's Boston orchestra led in Twentieth Century music, closely followed by Mr. Stock and Mr. Damrosch. The Detroit orchestra was last in this category.

The analytic table is as follows:

PERCENTAGES.

	1680-1800	19th Cent.	20th Cent.
DETROIT	10.6	71.2	18.2
BOSTON	12.1	47.3	40.6

TRANSCRIPT MAY 19

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of Amherst, Williams, Wesleyan.

Entrance of the Gladiators.....Fucik
Overture to the Operetta, "The Fair Galatea".....Suppé
Fantasia from the Opera, "Rigoletto".....Verdi
Second Suite from the Incidental Music to the Play, "L'Arlesienne".....Bizet
Canzona.....Westerhout
Overture to the Opera, "The Flying Dutchman".....Wagner
Rhapsody, "Espana".....Chabrier
A Song of India.....Rimsky-Korsakov
American Fantasia.....Herbert
Slavic March.....Chaikovsky

Conductor: A. Jacchia

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
Durham Me.
MAY 1 5 19

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR SAILS FOR SUMMER ABROAD

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copeland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony hall on Oct. 8.

The ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concerts of the season indicates the attitude not only of Boston, but of New York and each city visited.

In the Boston Herald, Saturday, May 1, Philip Hale said:

"We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid M. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended symphony concerts since the fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous, it was prolonged, it was enthusiastic, it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and in the hearts of his audience."

'POPS' BEGIN EVENTFUL WEEK

AMERICAN MAY 15

The perennial "Pops" will open the third week of their forty-first season Monday night in Symphony Hall. Agide Jacchia will conduct the orchestra of eighty Symphony players through exceptionally interesting programs, while the "Pops" audiences partake of refreshments at the tables which cover the floor.

On Monday, there will be songs by the Radcliffe Choral Society. On Tuesday, members of the Boston Conservatory of Music will be present. On Wednesday Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan colleges will be represented. Thursday will be Harvard Night, with numbers by the Harvard Glee Club. Friday will be Roxbury Latin School Night. These and all nights are open to the public. On Sunday, May 23, there will be given the second Sunday "Pop" concert of season, with a Wagner program.

Tonight's program will be as follows:

Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg from "Tannhauser".....Wagner
Overture to "The Barber of Seville".....Rossini
Humoresque, Op. 10, No. 2.....Tchaikovsky
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah".....Saint-Saens
Ancient Dances and Airs.....Respighi
a Gagliarda; b Villanella; c Passo Mezzo e Marcherada.
Ave Maria.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo, Violin, Harp, Organ, and Strings)

SIX TRANSCRIPT MAY 15

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

A Week of School and College "Nights"—Assisting Choruses—Fragments of Musical Plays Again—Other Items

FROM NEXT MONDAY through next Friday, it is the week of schools and colleges at The Pops, but with each concert open to the public. Monday will bring the evening of Radcliffe; Tuesday, of the Boston Conservatory; Wednesday, of Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan; Thursday, of Harvard; Friday, of the Roxbury Latin Schools. Such a schedule implies numbers by college singing societies or college songs, miscellaneously sung. Thus the Radcliffe Chorus is announced for Monday; and the Harvard Glee Club for Thursday. The Amherst - Williams - Wesleyan "night" gives room for college songs in triplicate as it were. Since Mr. Jacchia is the head of the Boston Conservatory, the program on Tuesday will abound in his arrangements for orchestra—five in all, familiar or unfamiliar. In the main, the lists of pieces keep to routine; but the better musical plays creep in with a "selection" from "The Student Prince" on Monday and from "The Vagabond King," operetta as yet unknown to Boston, on Friday. On Monday, Mr. Mager at the trumpet; on Wednesday, Mr. Speyer at the English horn; on Saturday, Mr. Langendoen at the violoncello, will be heard in solo-pieces. On Sunday week, May 23, comes a "Wagner Program," with numbers from "Rienzi," "Lohengrin," "Tannhäuser," "Tristan," "Die Meistersinger," "Rheingold," "Götterdämmerung" and "Die Walküre."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 5 1928

MASONS ANTICIPATE INSPIRING REPORT

Campaign Solicitors to Make First Returns at Noon To-day.

CIVIC APPEAL BROADCAST

Letter Calls Attention of Non-Masons to Opportunity to Further City's Progress by Gifts Toward Auditorium Unit of Temple

An inspiring report is expected from the campaign teams in the $1,500,000 Masonic Temple building fund campaign, when the workers gather at Freemasons Hall at noon to-day to make the first returns of the soliciting campaign on which they started yesterday morning.

Unofficial reports received at campaign headquarters in Freemasons Hall throughout the day indicated much interest and a great deal of enthusiasm, not only among the workers, but among the prospects called upon. One of the most encouraging features of the campaign was the fact that the telephones at headquarters were kept busy all day long by non-Masons who asked that solicitors call on them for subscriptions to help build the auditorium feature of the building. One of these requests came from the management of a leading Providence theatre.

Howard Knight, Grand Master of Rhode Island, will be the principal speaker at the campaign meeting at noon to-day.

The civic committee, of which General Campaign Chairman William L. Sweet also is chairman and Benjamin P. Moulton is vice chairman, has sent a letter to a limited number of non-Masonic prospective givers, reading, in part, as follows:

"Cities are made great by those intangible values created by the spirit of unity among its people, its art and culture and its attractiveness to visitors. In the wake of these elements come industrial and commercial advantages that have a distinctly tangible value.

"'Providence is one of the great cities of America. A great city, to remain great, must progress. To stand still is to slip backwards.

"The difference between standing still and progress in Providence to-day is a civic auditorium.

"For the sake of its culture and art; for the sake of industrial and commercial advantage, Providence must have a civic auditorium in harmony with its prestige as one of the foremost communities in the country.

"This fact has been strikingly emphasized by the decision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to discontinue its concerts in Providence because of the absence of a suitable auditorium. For the same reason, Providence has heretofore been unable to invite large conventions to the city, or to enjoy other advantages dependant upon an adequate forum of this kind.

"A large auditorium, available to the public for concerts, opera, theatrical productions, entertainments, conventions and public gatherings of all kinds, is now proposed by the Masonic fraternity of Providence, to be built in connection with the new Masonic Temple at Francis, Brownell and Park streets. It will be a unit of itself, with its main entrances on Brownell street. The seating capacity will be between 2500 and 3000. The stage will be one of the largest to be found anywhere in the country, being exceeded only by that of the present Metropolitan Opera House in New York. There will be a large and beautiful foyer, parlors and other conveniences.

"This auditorium will be available for public use more than 300 days in the year.

"Two other features of the proposed new edifice commend themselves to public interest. Underneath the auditorium will be a large banquet hall, in which 2000 diners can be seated and served at one time. There is nothing in Providence to-day to equal this. This hall may also be used for expositions, a fact which will prove a big factor in bringing conventions to Providence.

"The location is ideal. Opposite the State Capitol, within five minutes' walk of Exchange place, it is easily accessible from all parts of the city.

"The Masons of Providence are about to engage in a campaign to raise $1,500,000 for the new Masonic Temple and Auditorium. The total cost of the venture is estimated at $2,500,000. One million dollars was raised in a campaign conducted nearly three years ago. The effort to obtain the balance, through outright gifts, will be made during the period from May 3 to 14, inclusive.

"Impressed with the civic aspect of the proposed auditorium, many non-Masons have requested of the campaign executive committee the privilege of contributing toward the erection of this unit of the Masonic Temple. Thus came into being the thought that the entire citizenry of Providence should be permitted to share with their Masonic fellow-citizens the task of building the auditorium. This idea received impetus through the interest shown by music lovers, the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and by officers and members of the Chamber of Commerce, who appreciate what a civic asset such an auditorium will be.

"The campaign executive committee therefore has decided to accept subscriptions from the community at large, Masons and non-Masons alike, for the building of the auditorium unit of the new Masonic Temple.

"And the committee takes this means of extending to you an invitation to be listed among the contributors to this important step in civic progress.

"There is another phase of the plans for the new Masonic Temple that should give the undertaking a city-wide appeal.

"The net proceeds of all income obtained from all departments of the new temple, including the auditorium, will be devoted to the city's charities. Except for the help that is extended to an occasional member of the fraternity in distress, Providence Masonry has no charities of its own. This policy, therefore, gives assurance that all charitable organizations in the city, regardless of race, color or creed, will benefit alike.

"If you are a music lover, you must be interested in the proposed auditorium because it offers the assurance of a continuance of symphony concerts and other musical events. If you like the drama, it offers the prospect of bringing to Providence the best in drama and spectacle. If you are a business man, you must be interested in the possibility of inviting large conventions and expositions to the city, for such gatherings and displays bring large numbers of people, who patronize the hotels, restaurants, the shops and amusements. If you are actuated by civic pride, you will want to see the auditorium built because it will be an important and essential step in civic progress.

"The Masons of Providence have ever proved loyal citizens, who have at all times shouldered their responsibilities towards the community in all things. Believing that the spirit of unity that helps to make a community truly great will be best served if their fellow-citizens assist in this project, they afford the non-Masons of Providence this opportunity to contribute toward the fund for building the auditorium.

"Subscriptions will be payable over a period of three years, in semi-annual installments, the first of which will be due Oct. 15, 1926.

"The Masonic Temple Trust, which will be in charge of the erection and management of the new temple and

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 1 1928

Koussevitzky Ends His Second Season

Boston Symphony Orchestra Conductor Sails to Give Paris Concerts

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso" and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer, and return to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on Oct. 8.

ing won national renown in his year in America, Serge Kousse- y has in his second year led this us orchestra through what proved me ways the most remarkable sea- n its history. There has been uni- l admiration of the virtuoso quali f the Boston Symphony Orchestra he degree of eloquence and tonal y which the Russian leader's baton nspired.

ovation accorded conductor and stra at the closing concerts of the season indicates the attitude not only of Boston, but of New York and each city visited.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
MAY 1 2 1928

Providence is interested in the building of a Masonic Temple, which is to include an auditorium sorely needed. When the Boston Symphony goes to that city there is no fitting room for its performance. This applies also to many other events convening large numbers. The Masons themselves have pledged a million dollars, and the Journal appeals to citizens to complete the half million needed.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
BULLETIN
MAY 1 5 [illegible]

New Symphony Offerings

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has given Boston a number of new and significant works during the past season. He has familiarized them with Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre and the American composers, Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

Of choral performances there were Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Brahm's "German Requiem"; Liszt's "Faust Symphony" and "Psalm XIII"; Prokofieff's "Sept, Ils Sont Sept," Ibert's "Chant de Folie," Ducasse's "Sarabande" and Borodin's dances from "Prince Igor."

But the composers most often played during the season were Beethoven and Brahms, with eight performances each.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
HERALD-TRIBUNE
MAY 1 6 1928

Koussevitzky to Give Paris Series; Back in October

Serge Koussevitzky, who completed his second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on May 1, sailed for Europe on the 5th, and will conduct his annual Paris series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe American scores, such as Copland's "Music for the Theater" and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," as well as other novelties given in his Boston season.

He will rest for the balance of the summer and return to open the Boston Symphony's forty-sixth season in Symphony Hall October 5.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY [illegible] 1928

SYMPHONY TICKETS ON SALE JUNE 15

Continuation of Concert Series Made Possible by Subscription of $6000.

DATES ARE ANNOUNCED

Orchestra Will Appear at Albee Theatre on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15

The sale of tickets for next season's series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be held at the E. F. Albee theatre as a result of the subscription of more than $6000 by public-spirited Providence citizens to cover a possible deficit, will be opened on June 15, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., a member of the Symphony Concert Committee.

This committee, which has been formed as a permanent organization, includes, besides Mrs. Gammell, Honorary Chairman President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, Chairman William L. Sweet, Mme. Avis Bliven Charbonnel, Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. George St. J. Sheffield and Mrs. Albert Fenner.

The concerts will be given on Tuesday evenings, Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

The following contributed to the Symphony Fund, the raising of which was essential to the continuance of the concert series next season:

Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., C. Prescott Knight, Monday Morning Musical Club, Albert Fenner, Hans Schneider, Mrs. Frederick Howe, Mrs. T. I. Hare Powel, Stephen O. Metcalf, Rhode Island Masons, Mary Bradford Child, Harry Parsons Cross, Ellen Sharpe, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Whitmarsh, Mary G. Annin, Chaminade Club, William Ely and Miss Maria L. Corliss.

There were two subscriptions signed "A Friend," and three from anonymous donors.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 1 5 1928

Tickets for Boston Symphony to Go on Sale

Sale of tickets for the series of concerts to be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Albee Theatre next season will open on June 15, it is announced by Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., a member of the committee. More than $6000 has been contributed by local music-lovers to cover a possible deficit, making the concert series possible.

President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University is honorary chairman of the committee, and William L. Sweet is chairman. Others on the committee are Mrs. Gammell, Mme. Avis Bliven Charbonnel, Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. George St. J. Sheffield and Mrs. Albert Fennerl.

How the Bands Stand As to Ages of Music

Chicago Leads in Older Works; Detroit Ahead in Nineteenth Century.

By W. K. KELSEY.

LAST week The News published an analysis of the programs of six of the country's great orchestras for the 1925-26 season according to the nationality of the composers.

Another study of some interest can be made with regard to the age of the music played. What orchestras are devoting chief attention to the classics? What orchestras are playing the music of today, and to what extent?

A study of the programs shows that the average date of composition of all works played during the season was as follows:

DETROIT	1857
BOSTON	1860
CHICAGO	1860
CLEVELAND	1874
NEW YORK	1872
PHILADELPHIA	1865

From this table it would appear that the Cleveland orchestra is most up-to-date. The real reason for the comparative modernity of the Cleveland orchestra's average date is, however, the small number of Eighteenth Century works which it played. In works of the present century it ranked below the Boston, Chicago and New York bands, and was only a fractional per cent ahead of Philadelphia.

In playing the older works, Mr. Stock's orchestra leads with 13.4 per cent, with Philadelphia a close second. For the Nineteenth Century, Mr. Gabrilowitsch is ahead—far ahead: while the Boston and Chicago orchestras bring up the rear. Mr. Koussevitzky's Boston orchestra led in Twentieth Century music, closely followed by Mr. Stock and Mr. Damrosch. The Detroit orchestra was last in this category.

The analytic table is as follows:

PERCENTAGES.

	1680-1800	19th Cent.	20th Cent.
DETROIT	10.6	71.2	18.2
BOSTON	12.1	47.3	40.6

TRANSCRIPT MAY 19
At the Pops Tonight

Evening of Amherst, Williams, Wesleyan.

Entrance of the Gladiators.....Fucik
Overture to the Operetta, "The Fair Galatea".....Suppé
Fantasia from the Opera, "Rigoletto" Verdi
Second Suite from the Incidental Music to the Play, "L'Arlesienne".....Bizet
Canzona.....Westerhout
Overture to the Opera, "The Flying Dutchman".....Wagner
Rhapsody, "Espana".....Chabrier
A Song of India.....Rimsky-Korsakov
American Fantasia.....Herbert
Slavic March.....Chalkovsky

Conductor: A. Jacchia

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
MAY 1 5 19[illegible]

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR SAILS FOR SUMMER ABROAD

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copeland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony hall on Oct. 8.

The ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concerts of the season indicates the attitude not only of Boston, but of New York and each city visited.

In the Boston Herald, Saturday, May 1, Philip Hale said:

"We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid M. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended symphony concerts since the fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous, it was prolonged, it was enthusiastic, it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and in the hearts of his audience."

'POPS' BEGIN EVENTFUL WEEK

AMERICAN MAY 15

The perennial "Pops" will open the [illegible] week of their forty-first season Monday night in Symphony hall. Adolf Weidig will conduct the orchestra of eighty Symphony players through [illegible] while the "Pops" [illegible] numbers of [illegible] ments [illegible] floor. [illegible] will [illegible] songs [illegible] hall [illegible]. On Tuesday, [illegible] Boston Conservatory [illegible] will be present. [illegible] Amherst, Williams [illegible] colleges will be represented. Thursday will be Harvard night, with numbers by the Harvard Glee Club. Friday will be Roxbury Latin School Night. These [illegible] all nights are open to the public. On Sunday, May 23, there will be given the second Sunday [illegible] concert of season, with a Wagner program.

Tonight's program will be as follows:

Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg from "Tannhauser".....Wagner
Overture to "The Barber of Seville" Rossini
Humoresque, Op. 10, No. 2.....Tchaikovsky
Fantasia, "Samson and Dalilah" Saint-Saens
Ardent Dances [illegible].....Respighi
[illegible]
Ave Maria.....Schubert-Wilhelmj

SIX TRANSCRIPT MAY 15

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

A Week of School and College "Nights"—Assisting Choruses—Fragments of Musical Plays Again—Other Items

FROM NEXT MONDAY through next Friday, it is the week of schools and colleges at The Pops, but with each concert open to the public. Monday will bring the evening of Radcliffe; Tuesday, of the Boston Conservatory; Wednesday, of Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan; Thursday, of Harvard; Friday, of the Roxbury Latin Schools. Such a schedule implies numbers by college singing societies or college songs, miscellaneously sung. Thus the Radcliffe Chorus is announced for Monday; and the Harvard Glee Club for Thursday. The Amherst-Williams-Wesleyan "night" gives room for college songs in triplicate as it were. Since Mr. Jacchia is the head of the Boston Conservatory, the program on Tuesday will abound in his arrangements for orchestra—five in all, familiar or unfamiliar. In the main, the lists of pieces keep to routine; but the better musical plays creep in with a "selection" from "The Student Prince" on Monday and from "The Vagabond King," operetta as yet unknown to Boston, on Friday. On Monday, Mr. Mager at the trumpet; on Wednesday, Mr. Speyer at the English horn; on Saturday, Mr. Langendoen at the violoncello, will be heard in solo-pieces. On Sunday week, May 23, comes a "Wagner Program," with numbers from "Rienzi," "Lohengrin," "Tannhäuser," "Tristan," "Die Meistersinger," "Rheingold," "Götterdämmerung" and "Die Walküre."

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 5 1926

MASONS ANTICIPATE INSPIRING REPORT

Campaign Solicitors to Make First Returns at Noon To-day.

CIVIC APPEAL BROADCAST

Letter Calls Attention of Non-Masons to Opportunity to Further City's Progress by Gifts Toward Auditorium Unit of Temple

An inspiring report is expected from the campaign teams in the $1,500,000 Masonic Temple building fund campaign, when the workers gather at Freemasons Hall at noon to-day to make the first returns of the soliciting campaign on which they started yesterday morning.

Unofficial reports received at campaign headquarters in Freemasons Hall throughout the day indicated much interest and a great deal of enthusiasm, not only among the workers, but among the prospects called upon. One of the most encouraging features of the campaign was the fact that the telephones at headquarters were kept busy all day long by non-Masons who asked that solicitors call on them for subscriptions to help build the auditorium feature of the building. One of these requests came from the management of a leading Providence theatre.

Howard Knight, Grand Master of Rhode Island, will be the principal speaker at the campaign meeting at noon to-day.

The civic committee, of which General Campaign Chairman William L. Sweet also is chairman and Benjamin P. Moulton is vice chairman, has sent a letter to a limited number of non-Masonic prospective givers, reading, in part, as follows:

"Cities are made great by those intangible values created by the spirit of unity among its people, its art and culture and its attractiveness to visitors. In the wake of these elements come industrial and commercial advantages that have a distinctly tangible value.

"'Providence is one of the great cities of America. A great city, to remain great, must progress. To stand still is to slip backwards.

"The difference between standing still and progress in Providence to-day is a civic auditorium.

"For the sake of its culture and art; for the sake of industrial and commercial advantage, Providence must have a civic auditorium in harmony with its prestige as one of the foremost communities in the country.

"This fact has been strikingly emphasized by the decision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to discontinue its concerts in Providence because of the absence of a suitable auditorium. For the same reason, Providence has heretofore been unable to invite large conventions to the city, or to enjoy other advantages dependant upon an adequate forum of this kind.

"A large auditorium, available to the public for concerts, opera, theatrical productions, entertainments, conventions and public gatherings of all kinds, is now proposed by the Masonic fraternity of Providence, to be built in connection with the new Masonic Temple at Francis, Brownell and Park streets. It will be a unit of itself, with its main entrances on Brownell street. The seating capacity will be between 2500 and 3000. The stage will be one of the largest to be found anywhere in the country, being exceeded only by that of the present Metropolitan Opera House in New York. There will be a large and beautiful foyer, parlors and other conveniences.

"This auditorium will be available for public use more than 300 days in the year.

"Two other features of the proposed new edifice commend themselves to public interest. Underneath the auditorium will be a large banquet hall, in which 2000 diners can be seated and served at one time. There is nothing in Providence to-day to equal this. This hall may also be used for expositions, a fact which will prove a big factor in bringing conventions to Providence.

"The location is ideal. Opposite the State Capitol, within five minutes' walk of Exchange place, it is easily accessible from all parts of the city.

"The Masons of Providence are about to engage in a campaign to raise $1,500,000 for the new Masonic Temple and Auditorium. The total cost of the venture is estimated at $2,500,000. One million dollars was raised in a campaign conducted nearly three years ago. The effort to obtain the balance, through outright gifts, will be made during the period from May 3 to 14, inclusive.

"Impressed with the civic aspect of the proposed auditorium, many non-Masons have requested of the campaign executive committee the privilege of contributing toward the erection of this unit of the Masonic Temple. Thus came into being the thought that the entire citizenry of Providence should be permitted to share with their Masonic fellow-citizens the task of building the auditorium. This idea received impetus through the interest shown by music lovers, the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and by officers and members of the Chamber of Commerce, who appreciate what a civic asset such an auditorium will be.

"The campaign executive committee therefore has decided to accept subscriptions from the community at large, Masons and non-Masons alike, for the building of the auditorium unit of the new Masonic Temple.

"And the committee takes this means of extending to you an invitation to be listed among the contributors to this important step in civic progress.

"There is another phase of the plans for the new Masonic Temple that should give the undertaking a city-wide appeal.

"The net proceeds of all income obtained from all departments of the new temple, including the auditorium, will be devoted to the city's charities. Except for the help that is extended to an occasional member of the fraternity in distress, Providence Masonry has no charities of its own. This policy, therefore, gives assurance that all charitable organizations in the city, regardless of race, color or creed, will benefit alike.

"If you are a music lover, you must be interested in the proposed auditorium because it offers the assurance of a continuance of symphony concerts and other musical events. If you like the drama, it offers the prospect of bringing to Providence the best in drama and spectacle. If you are a business man, you must be interested in the possibility of inviting large conventions and expositions to the city, for such gatherings and displays bring large numbers of people, who patronize the hotels, restaurants, the shops and amusements. If you are actuated by civic pride, you will want to see the auditorium built because it will be an important and essential step in civic progress.

"The Masons of Providence have ever proved loyal citizens, who have at all times shouldered their responsibilities towards the community in all things. Believing that the spirit of unity that helps to make a community truly great will be best served if their fellow- citizens assist in this project, they afford the non-Masons of Providence this opportunity to contribute toward the fund for building the auditorium.

"Subscriptions will be payable over a period of three years, in semi-annual installments, the first of which will be due Oct. 15, 1926.

"The Masonic Temple Trust, which will be in charge of the erection and management of the new temple and auditorium, gives assurance that the auditor[illegible]n will be built at once.

"[illegible]terest of civic progress, [illegible]will be liste[illegible] among

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
MAY 1 2 1926

Providence is interested in the build[illegible]
Masonic Temple, which is to include [illegible] orium sorely needed. When the Bos[illegible]ther phony goes to that city there is no fit[illegible]es K for its performance. This applies als[illegible]; Mi other events convening large numb[illegible]ven,
Masons themselves have pledged a m[illegible]ofut
lars, and the Journal appeals to c[illegible]arrel, complete the half million needed.[illegible]heodo
[illegible]iss L
[illegible]d M
[illegible]tford

THIS CLIPPING FROM SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
BULLETIN
MAY 15 1926

New Symphony Offerings

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has given Boston a number of new and significant works during the past season. He has familiarized them with Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre and the American composers, Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

Of choral performances there were Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Brahm's "German Requiem"; Liszt's "Faust Symphony" and "Psalm XIII"; Prokofieff's "Sept, Ils Sont Sept," Ibert's "Chant de Folie," Ducasse's "Sarabande" and Borodin's dances from "Prince Igor."

But the composers most often played during the season were Beethoven and Brahms, with eight performances each.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE
MAY 16 1926

Koussevitzky to Give Paris Series; Back in October

Serge Koussevitzky, who completed his second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on May 1, sailed for Europe on the 5th, and will conduct his annual Paris series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe American scores, such as Copland's "Music for the Theater" and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," as well as other novelties given in his Boston season.

He will rest for the balance of the summer and return to open the Boston Symphony's forty-sixth season in Symphony Hall October 5.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 15 1926

SYMPHONY TICKETS ON SALE JUNE 15

Continuation of Concert Series Made Possible by Subscription of $6000.

DATES ARE ANNOUNCED

Orchestra Will Appear at Albee Theatre on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15

The sale of tickets for next season's series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be held at the E. F. Albee theatre as a result of the subscription of more than $6000 by public-spirited Providence citizens to cover a possible deficit, will be opened on June 15, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., a member of the Symphony Concert Committee.

This committee, which has been formed as a permanent organization, includes, besides Mrs. Gammell, Honorary Chairman President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, Chairman William L. Sweet, Mme. Avis Bliven Charbonnel, Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. George St. J. Sheffield and Mrs. Albert Fenner.

The concerts will be given on Tuesday evenings, Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

The following contributed to the Symphony Fund, the raising of which was essential to the continuance of the concert series next season:

Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., C. Prescott Knight, Monday Morning Musical Club, Albert Fenner, Hans Schneider, Mrs. Frederick Howe, Mrs. T. I. Hare Powel, Stephen O. Metcalf, Rhode Island Masons, Mary Bradford Child, Harry Parsons Cross, Ellen Sharpe, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Whitmarsh, Mary G. Annin, Chaminade Club, William Ely and Miss Maria L. Corliss.

There were two subscriptions signed "A Friend," and three from anonymous donors.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 15 1926

Tickets for Boston Symphony to Go on Sale

Sale of tickets for the series of concerts to be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Albee Theatre next season will open on June 15, it is announced by Mrs. William Gammell, Jr., a member of the committee. More than $6000 has been contributed by local music-lovers to cover a possible deficit, making the concert series possible.

President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University is honorary chairman of the committee, and William L. Sweet is chairman. Others on the committee are Mrs. Gammell, Mme. Avis Bliven Charbonnel, Mrs. Henry D. Sharpe, Mrs. George St. J. Sheffield and Mrs. Albert Fennerl.

Koussevitzky Ends His Second Season

Boston Symphony Orchestra Conductor Sails to Give Paris Concerts

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso" and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer, and return to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on Oct. 8.

Having won national renown in his first year in America, Serge Koussevitzky has in his second year led this famous orchestra through what proved in some ways the most remarkable season in its history. There has been universal admiration of the virtuoso qualities of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the degree of eloquence and tonal beauty which the Russian leader's baton has inspired.

The ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concerts of the season indicates the attitude not only of Boston, but of New York and each city visited.

How the Bands Stand As to Ages of Music

Chicago Leads in Older Works; Detroit Ahead in Nineteenth Century.

By W. K. KELSEY.

LAST week The News published an analysis of the programs of six of the country's great orchestras for the 1925-26 season according to the nationality of the composers.

Another study of some interest can be made with regard to the age of the music played. What orchestras are devoting chief attention to the classics? What orchestras are playing the music of today, and to what extent?

A study of the programs shows that the average date of composition of all works played during the season was as follows:

DETROIT	1857
BOSTON	1860
CHICAGO	1860
CLEVELAND	1874
NEW YORK	1872
PHILADELPHIA	1865

From this table it would appear that the Cleveland orchestra is most up-to-date. The real reason for the comparative modernity of the Cleveland orchestra's average date is, however, the small number of Eighteenth Century works which it played. In works of the present century it ranked below the Boston, Chicago and New York bands, and was only a fractional per cent ahead of Philadelphia.

In playing the older works, Mr. Stock's orchestra leads with 13.4 per cent, with Philadelphia a close second. For the Nineteenth Century, Mr. Gabrilowitsch is ahead—far ahead; while the Boston and Chicago orchestras bring up the rear. Mr. Koussevitzky's Boston orchestra led in Twentieth Century music, closely followed by Mr. Stock and Mr. Damrosch. The Detroit orchestra was last in this category.

The analytic table is as follows:

PERCENTAGES.

	1680-1800	19th Cent.	20th Cent.
DETROIT	10.6	71.2	18.2
BOSTON	12.1	47.3	40.6
CHICAGO	13.4	47.8	38.8
CLEVE.	6.7	64.0	29.3
NEW YORK	11.2	51.3	37.5
PHILA.	12.7	58.2	29.1

Verdi

"Rigoletto" [illegible]
Verdi
Second Suite from the Incidental Music to the Play, "L'Arlesienne" ..... Bizet
Canzona ..... Westerhout
Overture to the Opera, "The Flying Dutchman" ..... Wagner
Rhapsody, "Espana" ..... Chabrier
A Song of India ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
American Fantasia ..... Herbert
Slavic March ..... Chalkovsky

Conductor: A. Jacchia

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
Duluth Minn.
MAY 15 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR SAILS FOR SUMMER ABROAD

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copeland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony hall on Oct. 8.

The ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concerts of the season indicates the attitude not only of Boston, but of New York and each city visited.

In the Boston Herald, Saturday, May 1, Philip Hale said:

"We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid M. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended symphony concerts since the fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous, it was prolonged, it was enthusiastic, it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and in the hearts of his audience."

'POPS' BEGIN EVENTFUL WEEK

AMERICAN MAY 15

The perennial "Pops" will open the third week of their forty-first season Monday night in Symphony Hall. Agide Jacchia will conduct the orchestra of eighty Symphony players through exceptionally interesting programs, while the "Pops" audiences partake of refreshments at the tables which cover the floor.

On Monday, there will be songs by the Radcliffe Choral Society. On Tuesday, members of the Boston Conservatory of Music will be present. On Wednesday Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan colleges will be represented. Thursday will be Harvard Night, with numbers by the Harvard Glee Club. Friday will be Roxbury Latin School Night. These and all nights are open to the public. On Sunday, May 23, there will be given the second Sunday "Pop" concert of season, with a Wagner program.

Tonight's program will be as follows:

Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg from "Tannhauser" ..... Wagner
Overture to "The Barber of Seville" ..... Rossini
Humoresque, Op. 10, No. 2 ..... Tchaikovsky
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" ..... Saint-Saens
Ancient Dances and Airs ..... Respighi a Gagliarda; b Villanella; c Passo e Mezzo e Marcherada.
Ave Maria ..... Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
La Campanella ..... Handel
Overture to "The Bartered Bride" ..... Smetana
Irish Rhapsody ..... Herbert
Minuet ..... Boccherini
Hungarian Dance, No. 1 ..... Brahms

First Night

[illegible]
concert open to [illegible] bring the evening of Radcliffe; Tuesday, of the Boston Conservatory; Wednesday, of Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan; Thursday, of Harvard; Friday, of the Roxbury Latin Schools. Such a schedule implies numbers by college singing societies or college songs, miscellaneously sung. Thus the Radcliffe Chorus is announced for Monday; and the Harvard Glee Club for Thursday. The Amherst - Williams - Wesleyan "night" gives room for college songs in triplicate as it were. Since Mr. Jacchia is the head of the Boston Conservatory, the program on Tuesday will abound in his arrangements for orchestra—five in all, familiar or unfamiliar. In the main, the lists of pieces keep to routine; but the better musical plays creep in with a "selection" from "The Student Prince" on Monday and from "The Vagabond King," operetta as yet unknown to Boston, on Friday. On Monday, Mr. Mager at the trumpet; on Wednesday, Mr. Speyer at the English horn; on Saturday, Mr. Langendoen at the violoncello, will be heard in solo-pieces. On Sunday week, May 23, comes a "Wagner Program," with numbers from "Rienzi," "Lohengrin," "Tannhäuser," "Tristan," "Die Meistersinger," "Rheingold," "Götterdämmerung" and "Die Walküre."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVE. POST
MAY 15 1926

Serge Koussevitzky completed his second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra two weeks ago and sailed for Europe to conduct his series of concerts in Paris from May 22 to June 12, introducing such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre," Block's "Concerto Grosso" and other novelties of the Boston season. After that Mr. Koussevitzky will rest, returning to open his third season in Boston October 8.

[illegible] Russian pianist, will make

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
MAY 16 1926

Koussevitsky Sails.

Having completed his second season in America, Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has departed homeward. He will conduct his annual series in Paris, opening on May 12 and introdusing abroad Copeland's "Music for the Theatre," Bloch's "Concerto Grosso' 'and other novelties which he presented in his season here.

Following the close of his season in Paris on June 12, the conductor plans to take a vacation until his return in October for the 46th season of the Bostonians.

"Having won national renown in his first year in America," says the orchestra's announcement of the conductor's departure," Koussevitsky has in his second year led this famous orchestra through what has proved in some ways the most remarkable season in its history. There has been universal admiration of the virtuoso qualities of the orchestra, and the degree of eloquence and tonal beauty which the Russian leader's baton has inspired."

In this high-sounding praise we cannot agree for this is the only orchestra for whose playing we had to apologize during the season. One Friday evening, not so many months ago, we escorted another music lover to the Academy and suffered through a program at which Prohofieff was the soloist.

We admit the virtuoso possibilities and acknowledge the modern tendencies of the conductor, but we suggest that Mr. Toscanini be called to teach the strings the lessons he gave the Philharmonic earlier in the season. The band today is not the Bostonians of yore.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 16 1926

Praises American Interest in Music

Music has more real friends in America than in any other country in the world, in the opinion of Eugene Goosens, British composer and conductor, who appeared as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one of its concerts here this season. Mr. Goosens has just closed his season as conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, and he has appeared as guest conductor of the New York Symphony. Americans of wealth are instituting and supporting musical enterprises not for publicity but to enjoy the results obtainable, he believes.

"My first full season in America has been most interesting," Mr. Goosens said in a recent interview, "and has served to turn impressions of other seasons into a conviction. The generous enlightened support of music of all forms in this country is not paralleled anywhere in the world to-day. And this support is given not to display financial capacity, nor to gain personal publicity, but to secure artistic results.

"It is rather unusual that visiting musicians in America extol what they find here to the comparative belittling of similar conditions in their own lands. I have no desire to draw comparisons with the status of music in my own country, but I do honestly believe that more is being done for music in the United States and wisely done, than is being done anywhere else. Great orchestras are supported; the personnel is made the best obtainable; proper provision for rehearsals is made so that the conductor is enabled to give a performance that personally satisfies him.

"New York welcomes strangers pleasantly, but reserves its judgment. The success of a conductor there is likely to increase as he becomes known by his work. It is a pleasant remembrance that the six concerts which I conducted with the New York Symphony moved steadily to a climax of interest.

"In Boston one conducts one of the greatest orchestras of the day, before what is perhaps the most discriminating orchestral public of the day. This is a great public that by experience can and does discuss music and interpretation with a high degree of intelligence. It is inspiring to see Symphony Hall filled to capacity full five minutes before the time for beginning the concert with an audience one knows is as institutional as the orchestra itself.

"The contacts which my visits to New York and Boston made possible with professional colleagues and with many of those public-spirited supporters of music who are making great things possible were means of revelation to me which I highly prize.

Globe May 16

Third Week of Pops

The "Pop" concerts in Symphony Hall will open their third week tomorrow. Agide Jacchia and the "Pops" Orchestra of 80 Symphony players will present an attractive set of programs to audiences who partake of refreshments while they listen.

Monday there will be songs by the Radcliffe Choral Society. Tuesday members of the Boston Conservatory of Music will be present. On Wednesday Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan Colleges will be represented. Thursday will be Harvard Night, with numbers by the Harvard Glee Club. Friday will be Roxbury Latin School Night. These and all nights are open to the public. Sunday, May 23, there will be given the second Sunday "Pop" concert of the season, with a Wagner program.

The week's programs follow:

Monday, May 17—Overture to "Il Guarany," Gomez; "Cordoba," Albeniz; fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; Radcliffe songs; 14th Hungarian rhapsody, Liszt; "Birds at Dawn," Op. 20, No. 2, Dillon; prelude to "The Mastersingers," Wagner; Radcliffe songs; selection, "The Student Prince," Romberg; "Camellia Gavotte," Jacchia; waltz from "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky.

Tuesday, May 18—Marche Militaire, Schubert; overture to "William Tell," Rossini; "Eili, Eili," arranged by Jacchia; fantasia, "Lohengrin," Wagner; Rhapsody in E-flat, Brahms; "The Lark," Glinka; polonaise from "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky; Hymn to the Sun from "Iris," Mascagni; chorale and Minuet Gothique, Boellmann; "Guitarre," op 45, No. 2, Moszkovski; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel.

Wednesday, May 19—Entrance of the Gladiators, Fucik; overture to "The Beautiful Galatea," Suppe; fantasia, "Rigoletto," Verdi; suite "L'Arlesienne No 2," Bizet; Canzone, van Westerhout; overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Wagner; rhapsody, "Espana," Chabrier; Song of India, Rimsky-Korsakov; American fantasy, Herbert; Marche Slave, Tchaikovsky; college songs.

Thursday, May 20—Overture to "Poet and Peasant," Suppe; waltz, "Dornroeschen," Tchaikovsky; fantasia, "Carmen," Bizet; songs by Harvard Glee Club; "Capriccio Espagnol," Rimsky-Korsakov; fandango Asturiano; largo from "New World Symphony," Dvorak; "Procession of the Sardar," Ippolitov-Ivanov; songs by Harvard Glee Club; symphonic poem, "Danse Macabre," Saint-Saens; "Volga Bargemen's Song," arranged by Jacchia; march, "Veritas," Densmore.

Friday, May 21—"Stars and Stripes Forever," Sousa; overture to "Morning, Noon, and Night," Suppe; "Lotus Land," Scott; fantasia from "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo; suite "Peer Gynt," Grieg; "Music Box," Liadov; "Deep River," Burleigh-Jacchia; "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner; selection, "The Vagabond King," Friml; waltz, "Jolly Fellows," Vollstedt; Ouverture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky.

Saturday, May 22—Entrance of the Boyards, Halvorsen; Overture to "Phedre," Massenet; Tarantelle, Jacchia; Excerpts from Act III, "Mastersingers," Wagner; Suite, "L'Arlesienne, No 1," Bizet; Violoncello Solo: Larghetto, Mozart; Valse Triste, Sibelius; Bacchanale, "Samson and Delilah," Saint-Saens; "Dance of the Hours," Ponchielli; "Love's Dream after the Ball," Czibulka; "Fifth Hungarian Dance," Brahms.

Sunday, May 23, Wagner Program "Rienzi, Overture; "Lohengrin: a. Prelude; b. Introduction to Act III. "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," Prelude to Act III. "Tannhauser," Overture. "Tristan and Isolde," Prelude and Love-death. "Rhinegold," Entrance of the Gods into Walhalla. "Dusk of the Gods," Funeral Music of Siegfried. "The Valkyrie," (Act III); a. Ride of the Valkyries; b. Closing Scene: Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 16 1926

Dr. Koussevitzky Now in Paris

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will conduct the first concert in his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris next Saturday. The conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will introduce to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre," Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and other novelties, most of which figured in his concerts in America during the past season.

The Paris series ends on June 12, and after that Dr. Koussevitzky will rest until he returns to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on Oct. 8. The 1926 season promises to be an eventful one. There are waiting lists for each series including the four in Boston, one of which will be a continuation of the Tuesday afternoon series inaugurated last fall, and for the double series in New York. A fifth series is announced for Boston next spring in commemoration of the centennial of the death of Beethoven, at which the master's nine symphonies and Missa Solennis will be performed.

Having won national renown in his first year in America, Serge Koussevitzky in his second year led the Boston musicians through what proved in some ways the most remarkable season in the history of the organization. There has been universal admiration of the virtuoso qualities of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the degree of eloquence and tonal beauty which the leader's baton inspired.

Ovations which have not been equalled in the memory of many who have been symphony concert goers for more than a quarter of a century were accorded the conductor at the closing concerts in Boston and New York.

During the season just passed, Dr. Koussevitzky brought forth a number of new and significant works by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre and the American composers Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler. Although there was a considerable portion of new music, the composers most often represented were Beethoven and Brahms, with eight performances each.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
WASHINGTON, D. C.
STAR
MAY 16 19[illegible]

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed his second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra May 1, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts. Koussevitzky" in Paris from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the Summer, and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
CHRONICLE
MAY 16 1926

ments and in the key of G minor.

* * * *

A special Beethoven cycle, including the "Missa Solemnis" and the nine symphonies, will be conducted by Serge Koussevitzky, leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM EAGLE
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
MAY 16 1926

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
MAY 16 1926

MUSIC NOTES AFIELD.

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5. He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copeland's "Music for the Theatre," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended. Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the Summer, and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on Oct. 8.

Of the ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concerts of the season Mr. Philip Hale said in The Boston Herald: "We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended symphony concerts since the Fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous, it was prolonged; it was enthusiastic; it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and in the hearts of his audience."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EXAMINER
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
MAY 16 19[illegible]

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties, most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer, and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
FREE PRESS
DETROIT, MICH.
MAY 16 1926

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has sailed for Europe where he will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater" and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended. Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer, and return to open the 46th Orchestra in Symphony hall on October 8.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PORTLAND, ME.
TELEGRAM
MAY 16 1926

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater" and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended. Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer, and return to open the 46th Orchestra in Symphony hall on October 8.

An Extraordinary Season.

Having won national renown in his first year in America, Serge Koussevitzky has in his second year led this famous orchestra through what has proved in some ways the most remarkable season in its history. There has been universal admiration of the virtuoso qualities of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the degree of eloquence and tonal beauty which the Russian leader's baton has inspired.

The ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concerts of the season indicates the attitude not only of Boston, but of New York and each city visited.

Koussevitzky brought forth a number of new and significant works during the season past, by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre, and the American composers Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert, and Loeffler.

Despite the considerable portion of new music, it is evidence of the due emphasis upon the older masterpieces that the composers most often represented were Beethoven and Brahms with eight performances each.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
Duluth, Minn.
MAY 16 1926

New Home for Boston Symphony in 1927

The demolishment of the Infantry hall at Providence threatened the continuance of the Boston Symphony orchestra concerts. A group of Providence music lovers in a four days' campaign raised the money necessary to guarantee five performances at the Albee theater. Plans are being completed for the erection of a Masonic temple with a large auditorium but this building will not be ready for another year.

TRAVELER MAY 17

RADCLIFFE NIGHT AT POP CONCERT

At the Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight, Radcliffe College will congregate, but this like all other Pop concerts will be open to the public. Agide Jacchia will present the following program:

Overture to "Il Guarany".....Gomez
Cordoba .....Albeniz
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana"....Mascagni
Songs by Radcliffe Choral Society
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Birds at Dawn, Op. No. 2.....Dillon
Prelude to "The Mastersingers".....Wagner
Radcliffe Songs
Selection, "The Student Prince".....Romberg
Camellia Gavotte.....Jacchia
Waltz from "Eugen Onegin".....Tchaikovsky

Third Week of Pops

The 41st session of the "Pops" concerts in Symphony Hall has now reached its third week. Agide Jacchia and his orchestra of 80 Symphony players are presenting varied programs of musical favorites each night.

Tonight's program is typical of the manifold musical delights to be heard at the "Pops."

Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Eili, Eili.....Arranged by Jacchia
(Trumpet solo, Georges Mager)
Fantasia, "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat .....Brahms
The Lark.....Glinka
Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin"...Tchaikovsky
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris".....Mascagni
(Night—Dawn—Sunrise)
Chorale and Minuet Gothique.....Boellmann
(Organ solo, Albert W. Snow)
Guitarre, Op 45, No. 2.....Moszkovski
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

GLOBE MAY 17

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of the Boston Conservatory of Music

Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Eili, Eili.....Arranged by Jacchia
Fantasia from "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Rhapsody in E-flat.....Brahms
The Lark .....Glinka
Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin,"
Chaikovsky
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris".Mascagni
(Night—Dawn—Sunrise)
Chorale and Minuet Gothique,'
Boellmann
Guitarre .....Moszkovski
Waltz, "España" .....Waldteufel

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Soloists: Georges Mager
A. W. Snow

TRANSCRIPT MAY 18

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

TRANSCRIPT MAY 22

Tranquil Programs, Tranquil Orchestra, Tranquil Audience—Incidents and Programs of Next Week—"Wagner Night"

PLAINLY The Pops are running a tranquil course. Evidently the faithful take persistent pleasure in them. As the season lengthens, as the programs multiply, back come the old, familiar pieces, seemingly with an audience to welcome them. How many times, for example, has Chaikovsky's overture, "1812," been played "at these concerts?" Or how many Chabrier's "Espana," or the "Blue Danube" waltz or the arrangement of "Eili, Eili?" Enough that they are weekly or semi-weekly heard and clapped. It is prudent not to ask needless questions. After all, customs and habits make a stronghold sure. There is Mr. Jacchia leading as he has led these many years and no whit, for the usual audience, become an old story. There also is the orchestra, after a strenuous winter with Mr. Koussevitzky, decidedly taking its ease. So also does that loyal public at least two generations strong. What does it matter and who cares? Nobody but the nincompoops who would have everyone and everything always on the toes. Yes, my children, The Pops this spring are a peaceful place.

Next week soloists diversify the programs: On Monday evening, Isa Kremer, the variegated and light-tongued diseuse, for special occasion; on Wednesday and on Saturday evenings, Mr. Theodorowicz, the concert-master; on Friday evening, Mr. Langendoen, the violoncellist, and Professor Macdougall of Wellesley in an organ-piece. In turn the programs proffer for the most part well-tested pieces. Music of Jewish cast predominates on Monday; a "selection" from "Rose-Marie" re-enters on Wednesday; on the same evening Musorgsky's song, "Hopák," will be played in its original orchestral guise from the opera, "The Fair of Sorotchinsk"; on Thursday songs by the Wellesley Choir will diversify the evening of that college; the fantasia from Alfano's "Resurrection" freshens the program of Friday; on Saturday, a suite from Chaikovsky's ballet, "Sleeping Beauty," will be heard anew. Finally, to begin the week, Sunday evening brings a "Wagner Program. "Rienzi," "Lohengrin," "Tannhäuser," "Tristan," "Die Meistersinger," "Rheingold," "Die Walküre" and "Götterdämmerung" all contribute to it.

TRANSCRIPT MAY 20

At the Pops Tonight

Harvard Evening

Overture, "Poet and Peasant"...Suppe
Waltz, "Briar Rose".....Chaikovsky
Fantasia from the Opera, "Carmen,"
Bizet
Choral Numbers
Fandango from the "Spanish Caprice,"
Rimsky-Korsakov
Largo from the "New-World Symphony" .....Dvorák
Choral Numbers
Danse Macabre .....Saint-Saëns
Volga Bargemen's Song
March, "Veritas" .....Densmore

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Assisting
The Harvard Glee Club

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVE. POST
MAY 15 1928

Serge Koussevitzky completed his second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra two weeks ago and sailed for Europe to conduct his series of concerts in Paris from May 22 to June 12, introducing such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre," Block's Concerto Grosso" and other novelties of its Boston season. After that Mr. Koussevitzky will rest, returning to open his third season in Boston. October 8.

[illegible] Russian pianist, will make

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
MAY 16 1928

Koussevitsky Sails.

Having completed his second season in America, Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has departed homeward. He will conduct his annual series in Paris, opening on May 12 and introdusing abroad Copeland's "Music for the Theatre," Bloch's "Concerto Grosso' 'and other novelties which he presented in his season here.

Following the close of his season in Paris on June 12, the conductor plans to take a vacation until his return in October for the 46th season of the Bostonians.

"Having won national renown in his first year in America," says the orchestra's announcement of the conductor's departure," Koussevitsky has in his second year led this famous orchestra through what has proved in some ways the most remarkable season in its history. There has been universal admiration of the virtuoso qualities of the orchestra, and the degree of eloquence and tonal beauty which the Russian leader's baton has inspired."

In this high-sounding praise we cannot agree for this is the only orchestra for whose playing we had to apologize during the season. One Friday evening, not so many months ago, we escorted another music lover to the Academy and suffered through a program at which Prohofieff was the soloist.

We admit the virtuoso possibilities and acknowledge the modern tendencies of the conductor, but we suggest that Mr. Toscanini be called to teach the strings the lessons he gave the Philharmonic earlier in the season. The band today is not the Bostonians of yore.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 13 1928

Praises American Interest in Music

Music has more real friends in America than in any other country in the world, in the opinion of Eugene Goosens, British composer and conductor, who appeared as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one of its concerts here this season. Mr. Goosens has just closed his season as conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, and he has appeared as guest conductor of the New York Symphony. Americans of wealth are instituting and supporting musical enterprises not for publicity but to enjoy the results obtainable, he believes.

"My first full season in America has been most interesting," Mr. Goosens said in a recent interview, "and has served to turn impressions of other seasons into a conviction. The generous enlightened support of music of all forms in this country is not paralleled anywhere in the world to-day. And this support is given not to display financial capacity, nor to gain personal publicity, but to secure artistic results.

"It is rather unusual that visiting musicians in America extol what they find here to the comparative belittling of similar conditions in their own lands. I have no desire to draw comparisons with the status of music in my own country, but I do honestly believe that more is being done for music in the United States and wisely done, than is being done anywhere else. Great orchestras are supported; the personnel is made the best obtainable; proper provision for rehearsals is made so that the conductor is enabled to give a performance that personally satisfies him.

"New York welcomes strangers pleasantly, but reserves its judgment. The success of a conductor there is likely to increase as he becomes known by his work. It is a pleasant remembrance that the six concerts which I conducted with the New York Symphony moved steadily to a climax of interest.

"In Boston one conducts one of the greatest orchestras of the day, before what is perhaps the most discriminating orchestral public of the day. This is a great public that by experience can and does discuss music and interpretation with a high degree of intelligence. It is inspiring to see Symphony Hall filled to capacity full five minutes before the time for beginning the concert with an audience one knows is as institutional as the orchestra itself.

"The contacts which my visits to New York and Boston made possible with professional colleagues and with many of those public-spirited supporters of music who are making great things possible were means of revelation to me which I highly prize.

Globe May 16

Third Week of Pops

The "Pop" concerts in Symphony Hall will open their third week tomorrow. Agide Jacchia and the "Pops" Orchestra of 80 Symphony players will present an attractive set of programs to audiences who partake of refreshments while they listen.

Monday there will be songs by the Radcliffe Choral Society. Tuesday members of the Boston Conservatory of Music will be present. On Wednesday Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan Colleges will be represented. Thursday will be Harvard Night, with numbers by the Harvard Glee Club. Friday will be Roxbury Latin School Night. These and all nights are open to the public. Sunday, May 23, there will be given the second Sunday "Pop" concert of the season, with a Wagner program.

The week's programs follow:

Monday, May 17—Overture to "Il Guarany," Gomez; "Cordoba," Albeniz; fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; Radcliffe songs; 14th Hungarian rhapsody, Liszt; "Birds at Dawn," Op. 20, No. 2, Dillon; prelude to "The Mastersingers," Wagner; Radcliffe songs; selection, "The Student Prince," Romberg; "Camellia Gavotte," Jacchia; waltz from "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky.

Tuesday, May 18—Marche Militaire, Schubert; overture to "William Tell," Rossini; "Elli, Elli," arranged by Jacchia; fantasia, "Lohengrin," Wagner; Rhapsody in E-flat, Brahms; "The Lark," Glinka; polonaise from "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky; Hymn to the Sun from "Iris," Mascagni; chorale and Minuet Gothique, Boellmann; "Guitarre," op 45, No. 2, Moszkovski; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel.

Wednesday, May 19—Entrance of the Gladiators, Fucik; overture to "The Beautiful Galatea," Suppe; fantasia, "Rigoletto," Verdi; suite "L'Arlesienne No 2," Bizet; Canzone, van Westerhout; overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Wagner; rhapsody, "Espana," Chabrier; Song of India, Rimsky-Korsakov; American fantasy, Herbert; Marche Slave, Tchaikovsky; college songs.

Thursday, May 20—Overture to "Poet and Peasant," Suppe; waltz, "Dornroeschen," Tchaikovsky; fantasia, "Carmen," Bizet; songs by Harvard Glee Club; "Capriccio Espagnol," Rimsky-Korsakov; fandango Asturiano; largo from "New World Symphony," Dvorak; "Procession of the Sardar," Ippolitov-Ivanov; songs by Harvard Glee Club; symphonic poem, "Danse Macabre," Saint-Saens; "Volga Bargemen's Song," arranged by Jacchia; march, "Veritas," Densmore.

Friday, May 21—"Stars and Stripes Forever," Sousa; overture to "Morning, Noon, and Night," Suppe; "Lotus Land," Scott; fantasia from "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo; suite "Peer Gynt," Grieg; "Music Box," Liadov; "Deep River," Burleigh-Jacchia; "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner; selection, "The Vagabond King," Friml; waltz, "Jolly Fellows," Vollstedt; Ouverture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky.

Saturday, May 22—Entrance of the Boyards, Halvorsen; Overture to "Phedre," Massenet; Tarantelle, Jacchia; Excerpts from Act III, "Mastersingers," Wagner; Suite, "L'Arlesienne, No 1," Bizet; Violoncello Solo: Larghetto, Mozart; Valse Triste, Sibelius; Bacchanale, "Samson and Delilah," Saint-Saens; "Dance of the Hours," Ponchielli; "Love's Dream after the Ball," Czibulka; "Fifth Hungarian Dance," Brahms.

Sunday, May 23, Wagner Program "Rienzi, Overture; "Lohengrin: a. Prelude; b. Introduction to Act III, "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg," Prelude to Act III. "Tannhauser," Overture. "Tristan and Isolde," Prelude and Love-death. "Rhinegold," Entrance of the Gods into Walhalla. "Dusk of the Gods," Funeral Music of Siegfried. "The Valkyrie," (Act III); a. Ride of the Valkyries; b. Closing Scene: Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 16 1928

Dr. Koussevitzky Now in Paris

Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will conduct the first concert in his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris next Saturday. The conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will introduce to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theatre," Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and other novelties, most of which figured in his concerts in America during the past season.

The Paris series ends on June 12, and after that Dr. Koussevitzky will rest until he returns to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on Oct. 8. The 1928 season promises to be an eventful one. There are waiting lists for each series including the four in Boston, one of which will be a continuation of the Tuesday afternoon series inaugurated last fall, and for the double series in New York. A fifth series is announced for Boston next spring in commemoration of the centennial of the death of Beethoven, at which the master's nine symphonies and Missa Solennis will be performed.

Having won national renown in his first year in America, Serge Koussevitzky in his second year led the Boston musicians through what proved in some ways the most remarkable season in the history of the organization. There has been universal admiration of the virtuoso qualities of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the degree of eloquence and tonal beauty which the leader's baton inspired.

Ovations which have not been equalled in the memory of many who have been symphony concert goers for more than a quarter of a century were accorded the conductor at the closing concerts in Boston and New York.

During the season just passed, Dr. Koussevitzky brought forth a number of new and significant works by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre and the American composers Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler. Although there was a considerable portion of new music, the composers most often represented were Beethoven and Brahms, with eight performances each.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
WASHINGTON, D. C.
STAR

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed his second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra May 1, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts. Koussevitzky" in Paris from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the Summer, and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
CHRONICLE

ments and in the key of G minor.

* * * *

A special Beethoven cycle, including the "Missa Solemnis" and the nine symphonies, will be conducted by Serge Koussevitzky, leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM EAGLE
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties, most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES

MUSIC NOTES AFIELD.

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5. He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copeland's "Music for the Theatre," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended. Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the Summer, and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on Oct. 8.

Of the ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concerts of the season Mr. Philip Hale said in The Boston Herald: "We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended symphony concerts since the Fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous, it was prolonged; it was enthusiastic; it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and in the hearts of his audience."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EXAMINER
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
MAY 16 1928

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties, most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer, and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
FREE PRESS
DETROIT, MICH.
MAY 16 1928

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has sailed for Europe where he will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12. He will introduce to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater" and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended. Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer, and return to open the 46th Orchestra in Symphony hall on October 8.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PORTLAND, ME.
TELEGRAM

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, his second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5.

He will conduct his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's Music for the Theater," and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other notable novelties most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the Summer, and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall of October 8.

An Extraordinary Season.

Having won national renown in his first year in America, Serge Koussevitzky has in his second year led this famous orchestra through what has proved in some ways the most remarkable season in its history. There has been universal admiration of the virtuoso qualities of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the degree of eloquence and tonal beauty which the Russian leader's baton has inspired.

The ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concerts of the season indicates the attitude not only of Boston, but of New York and each city visited.

Koussevitzky brought forth a number of new and significant works during the season past, by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre, and the American composers Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert, and Loeffler.

Despite the considerable portion of new music, it is evidence of the due emphasis upon the older masterpieces that the composers most often represented were Beethoven and Brahms with eight performances each.

—o—

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
[illegible]
MAY 16 1928

New Home for Boston Symphony in 1927

The demolishment of the Infantry hall at Providence threatened the continuance of the Boston Symphony orchestra concerts. A group of Providence music lovers in a four days' campaign raised the money necessary to guarantee five performances at the Albee theater. Plans are being completed for the erection of a Masonic temple with a large auditorium but this building will not be ready for another year.

TRAVELER MAY 17

RADCLIFFE NIGHT AT POP CONCERT

At the Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight, Radcliffe College will congregate, but this like all other Pop concerts will be open to the public. Agide Jacchia will present the following program:

Overture to "Il Guarany".....Gomez
Cordoba ..... Albeniz
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana"....Mascagni
Songs by Radcliffe Choral Society
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody..... ....Liszt
Birds at Dawn, Op. No. 2.....Dillon
Prelude to "The Mastersingers".....Wagner
Radcliffe Songs
Selection, "The Student Prince".....Romberg
Camellia Gavotte.....Jacchia
Waltz from "Eugen Onegin".....Tchaikovsky

Third Week of Pops

The 41st session of the "Pops" concerts in Symphony Hall has now reached its third week. Agide Jacchia and his orchestra of 80 Symphony players are presenting varied programs of musical favorites each night.

Tonight's program is typical of the manifold musical delights to be heard at the "Pops."

Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Elli, Elli.....Arranged by Jacchia
(Trumpet solo, Georges Mager)
Fantasia, "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat .....Brahms
The Lark.....Glinka
Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin"...Tchaikovsky
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris".....Mascagni
(Night—Dawn—Sunrise)
Chorale and Minuet Gothique.....Boellmann
(Organ solo, Albert W. Snow)
Guitarre, Op 45, No. 2.....Moszkovski
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

GLOBE MAY 17

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of the Boston Conservatory of Music

Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Overture to "William Tell"....Rossini
Elli, Elli.....Arranged by Jacchia
Fantasia from "Lohengrin"....Wagner
Rhapsody in E-flat.....Brahms
The Lark .....Glinka
Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin."
Chaikovsky
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris".Mascagni
(Night—Dawn—Sunrise)
Chorale and Minuet Gothique,'
Boellmann
Guitarre .....Moszkovski
Waltz, "España" .....Waldteufel

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Soloists: Georges Mager
A. W. Snow

TRANSCRIPT MAY 18

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

TRANSCRIPT MAY 22

Tranquil Programs, Tranquil Orchestra, Tranquil Audience—Incidents and Programs of Next Week—"Wagner Night"

PLAINLY The Pops are running a tranquil course. Evidently the faithful take persistent pleasure in them. As the season lengthens, as the programs multiply, back come the old, familiar pieces, seemingly with an audience to welcome them. How many times, for example, has Chaikovsky's overture, "1812," been played "at these concerts?" Or how many Chabrier's "Espana," or the "Blue Danube" waltz or the arrangement of "Elli, Elli?" Enough that they are weekly or semi-weekly heard and clapped. It is prudent not to ask needless questions. After all, customs and habits make a stronghold sure. There is Mr. Jacchia leading as he has led these many years and no whit, for the usual audience, become an old story. There also is the orchestra, after a strenuous winter with Mr. Koussevitzky, decidedly taking its ease. So also does that loyal public at least two generations strong. What does it matter and who cares? Nobody but the nincompoops who would have everyone and everything always on the toes. Yes, my children, The Pops this spring are a peaceful place.

Next week soloists diversify the programs: On Monday evening, Isa Kremer, the variegated and light-tongued diseuse, for special occasion; on Wednesday and on Saturday evenings, Mr. Theodorowicz, the concert-master; on Friday evening, Mr. Langendoen, the violoncellist, and Professor Macdougall of Wellesley in an organ-piece. In turn the programs proffer for the most part well-tested pieces. Music of Jewish cast predominates on Monday; a "selection" from "Rose-Marie" re-enters on Wednesday; on the same evening Musorgsky's song, "Hopák," will be played in its original orchestral guise from the opera, "The Fair of Sorotchinsk"; on Thursday songs by the Wellesley Choir will diversify the evening of that college; the fantasia from Alfano's "Resurrection" freshens the program of Friday; on Saturday, a suite from Chaikovsky's ballet, "Sleeping Beauty," will be heard anew. Finally, to begin the week, Sunday evening brings a "Wagner Program. "Rienzi," "Lohengrin," "Tannhäuser," "Tristan," "Die Meistersinger," "Rheingold," "Die Walküre" and "Götterdämmerung" all contribute to it.

TRANSCRIPT MAY 20

At the Pops Tonight

Harvard Evening

Overture, "Poet and Peasant"...Suppe
Waltz, "Briar Rose".....Chaikovsky
Fantasia from the Opera, "Carmen."
Bizet
Choral Numbers
Fandango from the "Spanish Caprice."
Rimsky-Korsakov
Largo from the "New-World Symphony" .....Dvorák
Choral Numbers
Danse Macabre .....Saint-Saëns
Volga Bargemen's Song
March, "Veritas" .....Densmore

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Assisting
The Harvard Glee Club

PROGRAMS FOR NEXT WEEK

Herald — May 23

"Pops" Are Offering Interesting and Varied Selections

With tonight's Wagnerian program, the "Pop" concerts in Symphony hall will open the fourth week of the 41st season. Mr. Jacchia has made the following programs for the week, in which his orchestra of 80 Symphony players will be heard, while the audience partakes of refreshments at the tables in the usual "Pops" fashion:

SUNDAY, MAY 23

Rienzi, overture
Lohengrin,
(a) Prelude. (b) Introduction to Act III
The Mastersingers of Nuremberg,
Prelude to Act III
Tannhaeuser, overture
Tristan and Isolde, prelude and love-death
Rhinegold, entrance of the Gods into Walhalla
Dusk of the Gods, funeral music of Siegfried
The Valkyrie (act III).
(a) Ride of the Valkyries. (b) Closing scene: Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Music.

MONDAY

Overture to "Mignon".....Thomas
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca-Jacchia
(Arranged by Agide Jacchia)
Fantasia, "Fedora".....Giordano
Songs with piano by Isa Kremer
Eill, Eill.....Arr. by Jacchia
Minuet.....Bolzoni
Overture Solennelle, "1812".....Tchaikovsky
Songs with piano by Isa Kremer
Suite from "Shulamith".....Goldfaden
(a) Marsh to Jerusalem. (b) The Blessing.
(c) Raisins and Almonds. (d) Finale: In Beth Hamikdosh.
Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana,"
Mascagni
Ballet from "The Demon".....Rubinstein

TUESDAY

Coronation March.....Svendsen
Overture to "Egmont".....Beethoven
"Sometime".....Fiorito-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Mefistofele".....Boito
Capriccio—Burlesca.....Scarlatti
(Orchestrated by Jacchia)
Procession to the Cathedral, Act II,
"Lohengrin".....Wagner
Spanish Dance, "Panaderos".....Glazounov
Finale, Fourth Symphony.....Tchaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Indian Summer, An American Idyll....Herbert
Waltz, "Wine, Woman and Song".....Strauss

WEDNESDAY

Entrance of the Gladiators.....Fucik
Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri".....Rossini
Entr'acte Valse.....Hellmesberger
Fantasia, "Othello".....Verdi
Suite, "Coppelia".....DeHbes
a. Waltz of the Hours
b. Czardas
Hopak from "The Fair of Sorotchinsk"
Moussorgsky
The Lark.....Glinka-Jacchia
(Solo Violin: Mr. Theodorowicz.)
Capriccio Espagnod.....Rimsky-Korsakov
a. Alborada
b. Fandango Asturiano
Selection, "Rose Marie".....Friml-Stothart
Waltz, "La Barcarolle".....Waldteufel
Bacchanale from "Philemon and Baucis"
Gounod

THURSDAY

Overture to "Masaniello".....Auber
Waltz of the Flowers.....Tchaikovsky
Fantasia, "Madam Butterfly".....Puccini
Songs by Wellesley College Choir
Scenes Pittoresques.....Massenet
a. Air de Ballet
b. Fete Boheme
The Swan.....Saint-Saens
(Violoncello Solo: Mr. Langendoen.)
Rondo Capriccioso.....Mendelssohn
a. Organ Solo: Finale.....Lemmens
(Prof. Macdougall.)
b. Choir: Wellesley Medley
Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"..Wagner
Indian Lament.....Dvorak-Kreisler
Pomp and Circumstance.....Elgar

FRIDAY

Coronation march from "The Prophet"..
Meyerbeer
Overture, "Maxmilian Robespierre".....Litoiff
"Ave Maria".....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Fantasia, "Resurrection".....Alfano
Scenes Alsaciennes.....Massenet
(a) Sunday Morning. (b) Sunday Evening.
"March of the Toys".....Herbert
Entrance of the Knights into the Temple of the Grail from "Parsifal," Act I..Wagner
Rhapsody, "Espana".....Chabrier
Ballet suite, "Nutcracker".....Tschaikovsky
Miniature overture. Chinese dance. Trepak.
"En Badinant".....d'Ambrosio
March, "Semper Fidelis".....Sousa

SATURDAY

Overture to "Pique Dame".....Suppe
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube".Strauss
"Salut d'Amour".....Elgar
Fantasia, "The Valkyrie".....Wagner
Suite, "Sleeping Beauty".....Tchaikowsky
(a) Introduction, the Fairy of the Lilacs. (b) Puss in Boots and the White Cat. (c) Valse.
Violin solos—
"Lotus Land".....Scott-Kreisler
"Rondo".....Mozart-Kreisler
Mr. Theodorowics.
"Bolero".....Moszkovski
"Finlandia," Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
Ballet music from "The Cid".....Massenet
(a) Castiliane. (b) Andalouse. (c) Aragonaise.
Serenade, "Les Millions d'Arlequin".....Drigo
Third Slavonic Dance.....Dvorak

MONTEUX, WIFE IN LOVE ROW

American — May 24

Former Symphony Conductor and Mate Living Apart, Friends Learn

Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his wife, Mme. Monteux, are estranged and living apart.

Friends of the couple in Boston are amazed at this news which recently reached the Hub.

M. Monteux is living in Brussels, and Mme. Monteux and their three children are making their homes with Mme. Monteux's sister in Paris.

Whether divorce is contemplated is not known in Boston.

During their long residence in Boston M. and Mme. Monteux were noted for their apparent devotion to each other and to their two children, Denise and Claude. A third child was born to the couple in Paris after they left this country.

Reports in Boston state the estrangement dates back to the closing months of their residence in Boston. The Monteuxes returned to Paris in 1923, shortly after Mme. Monteux's mother died. When the conductor returned to Boston to complete his contract with the Symphony Orchestra, Mme. Monteux did not accompany him.

On the expiration of his contract here M. Monteux returned to Europe but did not join his family.

The news of the separation came in letters from Mme. Monteux to Boston friends.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of Symphony, visited Madame Monteux on his last trip abroad. They are old friends, and the present Symphony conductor had Monteux for his most ardent champion. He, however, did not bring back the news of the separation, which, although known to a few of the Monteux family here, has until now been carefully kept from the public.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PITTSBURGH, PA.
GAZETTE TIMES
MAY 23 1926

Muck Is Berlin Favorite.

For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Much was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

THIS CLIPPING FROM TOLEDO, OHIO
NEWS BEE
MAY 20 1926

9

Kansas Girl Weds Violinist

When Miss Alma Rosengran of Lindsborg, Kas., went to Europe a few months ago on a pleasure trip she unexpectedly met Anton Witek, Bohemian violinist and former concertmeister in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under whom she had formerly studied music. And now the two are married, spending their honeymoon in Czecho-Slovakia.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TELEGRAM
MAY 20 1926

The League of Composers.

An Interesting Program Is Predicted for the Coming Season—The Royal Swedish Navy Band in Concert.

By Pitts Sanborn.

A program admirably varied and the effective aid of the famous Pro-Arte Quartet of Belgium are promised by the League of Composers for next season. The League continues to profess its purpose of promoting the performance and criticism of modern music, without reference to school or tendency. Its official announcement runs in part as follows:—

"The opening concert of the season will be distinguished by the first American appearance of the famous Belgian organization, the Pro-Arte Quartet. This group of instrumentalists has an unrivalled reputation in Europe for ensemble playing, and in particular for lucid and clarifying interpretations of contemporary works. The League will present this quartet in a program of modern chamber music, which will be announced in detail early in the fall.

"Serge Koussevitzky has again received permission from the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to conduct a group of selected men from that organization in a concert of chamber orchestral works for the League. During the past season he made his first appearance outside the concerts of the Boston Symphony in a program of new works for the League. He is expected to present one large work and two smaller ones at the coming performance.

"In the middle of the season there will be an afternoon recital of new compositions by young American composers, at which the League will present both known and hitherto unknown men.

"Early in 1927 there will be an evening of new works in a musical dramatic form, which will be presented with novel stage investiture.

"The quarterly, Modern Music, which was begun as the League of Composers' Review three years ago, will continue to be published in the form which was established during the last season. Articles by Europeans and Americans, with portraits of leading composers, caricatures, and designs of new musical works for the stage will appear in its pages."

nounced in detail early in the fall.

Serge Koussevitzky has again received permission from the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to conduct a group of selected men from that organization in a concert of chamber orchestral works for the league. During the past season he made his first appearance outside the concerts of the Boston Symphony in a program of new works for the league. He is expected to present one large work and two smaller ones at the coming performance.

In the middle of the season there will be [illegible] recital of new

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
MAY 23 1926

CARL MUCK BACK IN BERLIN.

Former Boston Symphony Conductor Enthusiastically Received.

BERLIN, May 22 (AP).—For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. His Berlin performances of the Nibelungen Ring were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners on his return, and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

Fourth Week of the Pops

With tonight's Wagnerian program the "Pop" concerts in Symphony Hall will open the fourth week of their 41st season. Conductor Agide Jacchia has made the following programs for the week:

Sunday, May 23—Wagner program; "Rienzi," overture; "Lohengrin," a, prelude, b, introduction to Act 3; "The

GLOBE—MAY 23, 1926

LOANS

Mastersingers of Nuremberg," prelude to Act 3; "Tannhauser," Overture; "Tristan and Isolde," Prelude and Love-death; "Rhinegold," Entrance of the Gods Into Walhalla; "Dusk of the Gods," Funeral Music of Seigfried; "The Valkyrie" (Act 3); a, Ride of the Valkyries; b, Closing Scene: "Wotan's Farewell" and "Magic Fire Music."

Monday, May 24—Overture to "Mignon," Thomas; "Rachem," Mana-Zucca; Fantasia, "Fedora," Gioardano; songs with piano by Isa Kremer, "Eill, Eill," arranged by Jacchia; minuet, Bolzoni; overture, Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky; songs with piano by Isa Kremer; suite from "Shulamith," Goldfaden; intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni; ballet from "The Demon," Rubinstein.

Tuesday, May 25—"Coronation March," Svendsen; Overture to "Egmont," Beethoven; "Sometime," Fiorito-Jacchia; Fantasia, "Mefistofele," Boito; Capriccio—Burlesca, Scarlatti; Procession to the Cathedral, Act II "Lohengrin," Wagner; Spanish Dance, "Panaderos," Glazounov; Finale, Fourth Symphony, Tchaikovsky; Second Hungarian Rhapsody, Liszt; Indian Summer, "An American Idyll," Herbert; Waltz, "Wine, Woman and Song," Strauss.

Wednesday, May 26—"Entrance of the Gladiators," Fucik; Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Rossini; Entr'acte Valse, Hellmesberger; Fantasia, "Othello," Verdi; Suite, "Coppelia," Delibes; Hopak from "The Fair of Sorotchinsk," Fussorgsky; "The Lark," Glinka-Jacchia; "Capriccio Espagnol," Rimsky-Korsakov; Selection, "Rose Marie," Friml-Stothart; Waltz, "La Barcarolle," Waldteufel; Bacchanale from "Philemon and Baucis," Gounod.

Thursday, May 27—Overture to "Masaniello", Auber; Waltz of the Flowers, Tchaikovsky; Fantasia, "Madam Butterfly," Puccini; Songs by Wellesley College Choir. "Scenes Pittoresques," Massenet; "The Swan," Saint-Saens; Rondo Cappriccioso, Mendelssohn; organ Solo: Finale, Lemmens; Choir: Wellesley Medley, Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Wagner; "Indian Lament," Dvorak-Kreisler; "Pomp and Circumstance," Elgar.

Friday, May 28—Coronation March from "The Prophet," Meyerbeer; Overture, "Maximilian Robespierre," Litoff; "Ave Maria," Schubert-Wilhelmj; Fantasia, "Resurrection," Alfano; "Scenes Alsaciennes," Massenet; "March of the Toys," Herbert; "Entrance of the Knights into the Temple of the Grail" from "Parsifal" Act I, Wagner; Rhapsody, "Espana," Charbrier; Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker," Tchaikovsky; "En Badinant," d'Ambrosio; March "Semper Fidelis," Sousa.

Saturday, May 29—Overture to "Pique Dame," Suppe. Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," Strauss; "Salut d'Amour," Elgar; Fantasia, "The Valkyrie," Wagner; Suite, "Sleeping Beauty," Tchaikovsky; Violin Solo, Julius Theodorowicz: a, "Lotus Land," Scott-Kreisler; b, "Rondo," Mozart-Kreisler; Bolero, Moszkovski, "Finlandia," Symphonic poem, Sibelius; Ballet Music from "The Cid," Massenet; Serenade, "Les Millions d'Arlequin," Drigo; Third Slavonic Dance, Dvorak.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
SENTINAL
MAY 21 1926

MORE SYMPHONY

It seems that many radio listeners have been rather disappointed in the Boston Symphony Concerts that have been broadcast during the past winter. Some blamed this to the broadcasting while others "took it out on" the orchestra.

We all know that finer orchestras than the Boston Symphony are mighty few and far between. The engineering of the broadcasts was undertaken by communication experts of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. That end should have been at least passably good.

Since the first Pop Concert by the Symphony for this year, criticism has changed to approval and in many instances to enthusiasm. Whether this is due to the type of program selected by Mr. Koussevitsky or not is a matter too difficult for me to decide. However, the fact remains that the Pop Concerts are a decided improvement at the receiving end of the broadcast circuit. Tune in on WEEI at 8:10 Saturday evening for another Pop.

TRANSCRIPT May 22

At the Pops Tonight

Entrance of the Bevards.....Halvorsen
Overture to the Tragedy, "Phaedra"
Massenet
Tarantella.....Jacchia
Introduction, Apprentices' Dance, Homage to Sachs from Act III. of "Die Meistersinger".....Wagner
Prelude, Minuet and Carillon from the Incidental Music to the Play, "L'Arlesienne".....Bizet
Larghetto for Violencelle.....Mozart
Valse Triste.....Sibelius
Bacchanal from the Opera, "Samson and Delilah".....Saint-Saëns
Dance of the Hours.....Ponchielli
Love's Dream after the Ball...Czibulka
Fifth Hungarian Dance.....Brahms

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Soloist: J. Langedoen

At the Pops Tonight

March, "Stars and Stripes Forever"
Sousa
Overture, "Morning, Noon, and Night in Vienna".....Suppé
Lotus-Land.....Scott
Fantasia from the Opera, "Pagliacci"
Leoncavallo
Second Suite from the Incidental Music to "Peer Gynt".....Grieg
Music-Box.....Liadov
Deep River.....Burleigh-Jacchia
Ride of the Valkyrs.....Wagner
Selection from the Operetta, "The Vagabond King".....Friml
Waltz, "Jolly Fellows".....Vollstedt
Overture, "1812".....Chaikovsky

Conductor: A. Jacchia

TRANSCRIPT May 21

Boston Conservatory at the Pops Tonight

This is Boston Conservatory of Music Night at the Pops, but the concert will be open to the public. This is the program.

"Marche Militaire".....Schubert
Overture "William Tell".....Rossini
"Eill, Eill".....Arranged by Jacchia
(Trumpet solo, Georges Mager.)
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat.....Brahms
"The Lark".....Glinka
Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin".Tchaikovsky
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris".....Mascagni
Chorale and Minuet Gothique....Boellmann
(Organ solo, Albert W. Snow.)
Guitarre, Op. 45, No. 2.....Moszkovski
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

PROGRAMS FOR NEXT WEEK

Herald — May 23

"Pops" Are Offering Interesting and Varied Selections

With tonight's Wagnerian program, the "Pop" concerts in Symphony hall will open the fourth week of the 41st season. Mr. Jacchia has made the following programs for the week, in which his orchestra of 80 Symphony players will be heard, while the audience partakes of refreshments at the tables in the usual "Pops" fashion:

SUNDAY, MAY 23

Rienzi, overture
Lohengrin,
(a) Prelude. (b) Introduction to Act III
The Mastersingers of Nuremberg,
Prelude to Act III
Tannhaeuser, overture
Tristan and Isolde, prelude and love-death
Rhinegold, entrance of the Gods into Walhalla
Dusk of the Gods, funeral music of Siegfried
The Valkyrie (act III),
(a) Ride of the Valkyries. (b) Closing scene: Wotan's Farewell and Magic Fire Music.

MONDAY

Overture to "Mignon".....Thomas
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca-Jacchia
(Arranged by Agide Jacchia)
Fantasia, "Fedora".....Giordano
Songs with piano by Isa Kremer
Elli, Elli.....Arr. by Jacchia
Minuet.....Bolzoni
Overture Solennelle, "1812".....Tchaikovsky
Songs with piano by Isa Kremer
Suite from "Shulamith".....Goldfaden
(a) Marsh to Jerusalem. (b) The Blessing.
(c) Raisins and Almonds. (d) Finale: In Beth Hamikdosh.
Intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana."
Mascagni
Ballet from "The Demon".....Rubinstein

TUESDAY

Coronation March.....Svendsen
Overture to "Egmont".....Beethoven
"Sometime".....Fiorito-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Mefistofele".....Bolto
Capriccio—Burlesca.....Scarlatti
(Orchestrated by Jacchia)
Procession to the Cathedral, Act II,
"Lohengrin".....Wagner
Spanish Dance, "Panaderos".....Glazounov
Finale, Fourth Symphony.....Tchaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Indian Summer, An American Idyll....Herbert
Waltz, "Wine, Woman and Song".....Strauss

WEDNESDAY

Entrance of the Gladiators.....Fucik
Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri".....Rossini
Entr'acte Valse.....Hellmesberger
Fantasia, "Othello".....Verdi
Suite, "Coppelia".....Delibes
a. Waltz of the Hours
b. Czardas
Hopak from "The Fair of Sorotchinsk"
Moussorgsky
The Lark.....Glinka-Jacchia
(Solo Violin: Mr. Theodorowicz.)
Capriccio Espagnod.....Rimsky-Korsakov
a. Alborada
b. Fandango Asturiano
Selection, "Rose Marie".....Friml-Stothart
Waltz, "La Barcarolle".....Waldteufel
Bacchanale from "Philemon and Baucis"
Gounod

THURSDAY

Overture to "Masaniello".....Auber
Waltz of the Flowers.....Tchaikovsky
Fantasia, "Madam Butterfly".....Puccini
Songs by Wellesley College Choir
Scenes Pittoresques.....Massenet
a. Air de Ballet
b. Fete Boheme
The Swan.....Saint-Saens
(Violoncello Solo: Mr. Langendoen.)
Rondo Capriccioso.....Mendelssohn
a. Organ Solo: Finale.....Lemmens
(Prof. Macdougall.)
b. Choir: Wellesley Medley
Overture to "The Flying Dutchman"..Wagner
Indian Lament.....Dvorak-Kreisler
Pomp and Circumstance.....Elgar

FRIDAY

Coronation march from "The Prophet"..
Meyerbeer
Overture, "Maxmilian Robespierre".....Litolff
"Ave Maria".....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Fantasia, "Resurrection".....Alfano
Sceneg Alsaciennes.....Massenet
(a) Sunday Morning. (b) Sunday Evening.
"March of the Toys".....Herbert
Entrance of the Knights Into the Temple of the Grail from "Parsifal," Act I..Wagner
Rhapsody, "Espana".....Chabrier
Ballet suite, "Nutcracker".....Tschaikovsky
Miniature overture. Chinese dance. Trepak.
"En Badinant".....d'Ambrosio
March, "Semper Fidelis".....Sousa

SATURDAY

Overture to "Pique Dame".....Suppe
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube".Strauss
"Salut d'Amour".....Elgar
Fantasia, "The Valkyrie".....Wagner
Suite, "Sleeping Beauty".....Tchaikowsky
(a) Introduction, the Fairy of the Lilacs. (b) Puss in Boots and the White Cat. (c) Valse.
Violin solos—
"Lotus Land".....Scott-Kreisler
"Rondo".....Mozart-Kreisler
Mr. Theodorowicz.
"Bolero".....Moszkovski
"Finlandia," Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
Ballet music from "The Cid".....Massenet
(a) Castillane. (b) Andalouse. (c) Aragonaise.
Serenade, "Les Millions d'Arlequin".....Drigo
Third Slavonic Dance.....Dvorak

MONTEUX, WIFE IN LOVE ROW

American — May 24

Former Symphony Conductor and Mate Living Apart, Friends Learn

Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his wife, Mme. Monteux, are estranged and living apart.

Friends of the couple in Boston are amazed at this news which recently reached the Hub.

M. Monteux is living in Brussels, and Mme. Monteux and their three children are making their homes with Mme. Monteux's sister in Paris.

Whether divorce is contemplated is not known in Boston.

During their long residence in Boston M. and Mme. Monteux were noted for their apparent devotion to each other and to their two children, Denise and Claude. A third child was born to the couple in Paris after they left this country.

Reports in Boston state the estrangement dates back to the closing months of their residence in Boston. The Monteuxes returned to Paris in 1923, shortly after Mme. Monteux's mother died. When the conductor returned to Boston to complete his contract with the Symphony Orchestra, Mme. Monteux did not accompany him.

On the expiration of his contract here M. Monteux returned to Europe but did not join his family.

The news of the separation came in letters from Mme. Monteux to Boston friends.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of Symphony, visited Madame Monteux on his last trip abroad. They are old friends, and the present Symphony conductor had Monteux for his most ardent champion. He, however, did not bring back the news of the separation, which, although known to a few of the Monteux family here, has until now been carefully kept from the public.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PITTSBURGH, PA.
GAZETTE TIMES

Muck Is Berlin Favorite.

For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Much was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

THIS CLIPPING FROM TOLEDO, OHIO
NEWS BEE

9

MAY 20 1926

Kansas Girl Weds Violinist

When Miss Alma Rosengran of Lindsborg, Kas., went to Europe a few months ago on a pleasure trip she unexpectedly met Anton Witek, Bohemian violinist and former concertmeister in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under whom she had formerly studied music. And now the two are married, spending their honeymoon in Czecho-Slovakia.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TELEGRAM

The League of Composers.

An Interesting Program Is Predicted for the Coming Season—The Royal Swedish Navy Band in Concert.

By Pitts Sanborn.

A program admirably varied and the effective aid of the famous Pro-Arte Quartet of Belgium are promised by the League of Composers for next season. The League continues to profess its purpose of promoting the performance and criticism of modern music, without reference to school or tendency. Its official announcement runs in part as follows:—

"The opening concert of the season will be distinguished by the first American appearance of the famous Belgian organization, the Pro-Arte Quartet. This group of instrumentalists has an unrivalled reputation in Europe for ensemble playing, and in particular for lucid and clarifying interpretations of contemporary works. The League will present this quartet in a program of modern chamber music, which will be announced in detail early in the fall.

"Serge Koussevitzky has again received permission from the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to conduct a group of selected men from that organization in a concert of chamber orchestral works for the league. During the past season he made his first appearance outside the concerts of the Boston Symphony in a program of new works for the league. He is expected to present one large work and two smaller ones at the coming performance.

"In the middle of the season there will be an afternoon recital of new compositions by young American composers, at which the League will present both known and hitherto unknown men.

"Early in 1927 there will be an evening of new works in a musical dramatic form, which will be presented with novel stage investiture.

"The quarterly, Modern Music, which was begun as the League of Composers' Review three years ago, will continue to be published in the form which was established during the last season. Articles by Europeans and Americans, with portraits of leading composers, caricatures and designs of new musical works for the stage will appear in its pages."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES

MAY 23

CARL MUCK BACK IN BERLIN.

Former Boston Symphony Conductor Enthusiastically Received.

BERLIN, May 22 (AP).—For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. His Berlin performances of the Nibelungen Ring were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners on his return, and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

Fourth Week of the Pops

With tonight's Wagnerian Program, the "Pop" concerts in Symphony Hall will open the fourth week of their 41st season. Conductor Agide Jacchia has made the following programs for the week:

Sunday, May 23—Wagner program; "Rienzi," overture; "Lohengrin," a, prelude, b, introduction to Act 3; "The

GLOBE—MAY 23,

LOANS

Mastersingers of Nuremberg," prelude to Act 3; "Tannhauser," Overture; "Tristan and Isolde," Prelude and Love-death; "Rhinegold," Entrance of the Gods Into Walhalla; "Dusk of the Gods," Funeral Music of Seigfried; "The Valkyrie" (Act 3); a, Ride of the Valkyries; b, Closing Scene: "Wotan's Farewell" and "Magic Fire Music."

Monday, May 24—Overture to "Mignon," Thomas; "Rachem," Mana-Zucca; Fantasia, "Fedora," Gioardano; songs with piano by Isa Kremer, "Elli, Elli," arranged by Jacchia; minuet, Bolzoni; overture, Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky; songs with piano by Isa Kremer; suite from "Shulamith," Goldfaden; intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticara," Mascagni; ballet from "The Demon," Rubinstein.

Tuesday, May 25—"Coronation March," Svendsen; Overture to "Egmont," Beethoven; "Sometime," Fiorito-Jacchia; Fantasia, "Mefistofele," Boito; Capriccio—Burlesca, Scarlatti; Procession to the Cathedral, Act II "Lohengrin," Wagner; Spanish Dance, "Panaderos," Glazounov; Finale, Fourth Symphony, Tchaikovsky; Second Hungarian Rhapsody, Liszt; Indian Summer, "An American Idyll," Herbert; Waltz, "Wine, Woman and Song," Strauss.

Wednesday, May 26—"Entrance of the Gladiators," Fucik; Overture to "L'Italiana in Algeri," Rossini; Entr'acte Valse, Hellmesberger; Fantasia, "Othello," Verdi; Suite, "Coppelia," Delibes; Hopak from "The Fair of Sorotchinsk," Fussorgsky; "The Lark," Glinka-Jacchia; "Capriccio Espagnol," Rimsky-Korsakov; Selection, "Rose Marie," Friml-Stothart; Waltz, "La Barcarolle," Waldteufel; Bacchanale from "Philemon and Baucis" Gounod.

Thursday, May 27—Overture to "Masaniello", Auber; Waltz of the Flowers, Tchaikovsky; Fantasia, "Madam Butterfly," Puccini; Songs by Wellesley College Choir; "Scenes Pittoresques," Massenet; "The Swan," Saint-Saens; Rondo Capriccioso, Mendelssohn; organ Solo; Finale, Lemmens; Choir; Wellesley Medley, Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," Wagner; "Indian Lament," Dvorak-Kreisler; "Pomp and Circumstance," Elgar.

Friday, May 28—Coronation March from "The Prophet," Meyerbeer; Overture, "Maximilian Robespierre," Litolff; "Ave Maria," Schubert-Wilhelmj; Fantasia, "Resurrection," Alfano; "Scenes Alsaciennes," Massenet; "March of the Toys," Herbert; "Entrance of the Knights into the Temple of the Grail" from "Parsifal" Act I, Wagner; Rhapsody, "Espana," Charbrier; Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker," Tchaikovsky; "En Badinant," d'Ambrosio; March "Semper Fidelis," Sousa.

Saturday, May 29—Overture to "Pique Dame," Suppe. Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," Strauss; "Salut d'Amour," Elgar; Fantasia, "The Valkyrie," Wagner; Suite, "Sleeping Beauty," Tchaikovsky; Violin Solo, Julius Theodorowicz; a, "Lotus Land," Scott-Kreisler; b, "Rondo," Mozart-Kreisler; Bollero, Moszkovski, "Finlandia," Symphonic poem, Sibelius; Ballet Music from "The Cid," Massenet; Serenade, "Les Millions d'Arlequin," Drigo; Third Slavonic Dance, Dvorak.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SENTINAL

MAY 22 1926

MORE SYMPHONY

It seems that many radio listeners have been rather disappointed in the Boston Symphony Concerts that have been broadcast during the past winter. Some blamed this to the broadcasting while others "took it out on" the orchestra.

We all know that finer orchestras than the Boston Symphony are mighty few and far between. The engineering of the broadcasts was undertaken by communication experts of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. That end should have been at least passably good.

Since the first Pop Concert by the Symphony for this year, criticism has changed to approval and in many instances to enthusiasm. Whether this is due to the type of program selected by Mr. Koussevitsky or not is a matter too difficult for me to decide. However, the fact remains that the Pop Concerts are a decided improvement at the receiving end of the broadcast circuit. Tune in on WEEI at 8:10 Saturday evening for another Pop.

TRANSCRIPT May 22

At the Pops Tonight

Entrance of the Boyards.....Halvorsen
Overture to the Tragedy, "Phædra"
Massenet
Tarantella.....Jacchia
Introduction, Apprentices' Dance, Homage to Sachs from Act III. of "Die Meistersinger".....Wagner
Prelude, Minuet and Carillon from the Incidental Music to the Play, "L'Arlesienne".....Bizet
Larghetto for Violoncello.....Mozart
Valse Triste.....Sibelius
Bacchanal from the Opera, "Samson and Delilah".....Saint-Saëns
Dance of the Hours.....Ponchielli
Love's Dream after the Ball...Czibulka
Fifth Hungarian Dance.....Brahms

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Soloist: J. Langedoen

At the Pops Tonight

March, "Stars and Stripes Forever" Sousa
Overture, "Morning, Noon, and Night in Vienna".....Suppé
Lotus-Land.....Scott
Fantasia from the Opera, "Pagliacci" Leoncavallo
Second Suite from the Incidental Music to "Peer Gynt".....Grieg
Music-Box.....Liadov
Deep River.....Burleigh-Jacchia
Ride of the Valkyrs.....Wagner
Selection from the Operetta, "The Vagabond King".....Friml
Waltz, "Jolly Fellows".....Vollstedt
Overture, "1812".....Chaikovsky

Conductor: A. Jacchia

TRANSCRIPT May 21

Boston Conservatory at the Pops Tonight

This is Boston Conservatory of Music Night at the Pops, but the concert will be open to the public. This is the program.

"Marche Militaire".....Schubert
Overture "William Tell".....Rossini
"Eili, Eili".....Arranged by Jacchia
(Trumpet solo, Georges Mager.)
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat.....Brahms
"The Lark".....Glinka
Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin".....Tchaikovsky
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris".....Mascagni
Chorale and Minuet Gothique.....Boellmann
(Organ solo, Albert W. Snow.)
Guitarre, Op. 45, No. 2.....Moszkovski
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

THIS CLIPPING FROM INQUIRER
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
MAY 23 19

BERLIN HEARS WAGNER INTERPRETED BY MUCK

Conductor Returns to Capital First Time Since World War

BERLIN, May 22 (A. P.).—For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the centre of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
TRIBUNE

ANOTHER MUSICAL FEAST

"Pops" To Go On the Air At 8:10 This Evening

Another musical feast will be served to the radio audience to-night when the Pops go on the tair at 8:10 through Stations WEEI and WEAN. This is the third in a series of nine Pops broadcasts made possible by Mr. W. S. Quinby of the W. S. Quinby Compnay whose slogan is, "You might as well have the best."

A glance at the program, announced in another column, gives one a breath from nearly every musically prominent nation on earth. It is one of Mr. Jacchia's characteristically varied and interesting programs—the kind which keeps right on filling Symphony Hall to capacity. And then, for good measure, Mr. Jacchia will throw in plenty of light, airy, indescribably beautiful encores. He always does.

Among the radio audience there are of course thousands of people particularly responsive to the deep, rich and vibrant tone of a 'cello. For them Mr. Jacobus Langendoen is going to play to-night the Larghetto by Mozart. Mr. Langendoen is one of the distinguished 'cellists of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He is an artist of high attainments and has a musical message of particular beauty to deliver to the great audience who will be listening for him this evening.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 19 1926

THIRD "POP" CONCERT WILL BE BROADCAST

Interesting Programme to Be Heard Over WEAN, The Shepard Stores.

Another treat will be served to the radio audience to-night when the third of the series of nine "pop" concerts will be broadcast direct from Symphony Hall, Boston, through stations WEAN, The Shepard Stores, of this city, and WEEI, Boston, through the courtesy of W. S. Quimby, at 8:10.

This will be one of Mr. Jacchia's characteristically varied and interesting programmes, with plenty of light airy encores. Among the numbers will be "Larghetto," by Mozart, played by Jacobus Langendoen, one of the most distinguished 'cellists of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, an artist of high attainments.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.
MAY 23 1926

Full-Time Broadcasting

Joseph Knecht, formerly violinist with the Boston Symphony, later outstanding member of the Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra and for the past 15 years musical director of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, is now devoting all of his time to radio broadcasting. Knecht organized the Silvertown Cord Orchestra.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 22 1926

EX-BOSTON LEADER TRIUMPHS IN BERLIN

Dr. Carl Muck, Conductor of Symphony, Revives Wagner in German Return

Berlin, May 21.—For the first time since the war, Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the centre of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible, The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BUFFALO, N. Y.
ENQUIRER

Musican Mows Lawn at Jail

(By International News Service.)

Rumford, Me., May 21.—Gustav Heim, former trumpeter in the royal band of Berlin and former member of the famous Boston Symphony orchestra, was called on to mow the lawn of the Oxford county jail today as his first jail duty under a four months' sentence for manufacturing liquor at his summer camp in Lovell, patronized annually by scores of wealthy New Yorkers and professional folk.

Heim is being sued for divorce by his wife, linking his name with another woman's. She seeks the custody of her two children.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
MAY 22

Sergei Koussevitsky recently completed his second year as conductor of Boston Symphony orchestra. He sailed for Europe a few days ago and is now preparing for his series of "Concerts Koussevitsky" in Paris, which will be started to-morrow. He will introduce several new scores by American composers, including "Concerto Gross" by Ernest Bloch, and "Music for the Theater" by Copeland. He will also present several other American novelties which he used during his recent season in Boston. He will rest for the remainder of the summer and will return to this country in time for the opening of the forty-sixth season of the Boston orchestra on October 8. Philip Hale in the Boston Herald wrote as follows concerning the tribute paid to the conductor during the course of his concluding concert in that city: "We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday,

THIS CLIPPING FROM
DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
MAY 2[illegible]

Dr. Muck Resumes Baton.

For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE
MAY 23 1926

League of Composers To Give Four Concerts

Three Evenings, One Matinee Announced for 1926-'27; Magazine Continues

Three evening concerts and an afternoon recital are to be given by the League of Composers in 1926-'27, the fourth season of this organization, which announces for its purpose the promotion of the performance and criticism of modern music without restriction to any particular schools or tendencies.

The season's opening concert will be marked by the first American appearance of the Pro-Arte Quartet, a Belgian group, which will give a program of modern chamber music. This will be announced in detail early next fall.

Serge Koussevitzky again has received permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra's board of trustees to conduct a group of members of that organization in a concert of chamber orchestra works for the league. He is expected to offer one large work and two smaller ones. In the middle of the season there will be an afternoon recital of new works by young American composers, both known and so far unknown, and early in 1927 there will be an evening of new works in a musical dramatic form, to be given with novel stage investiture.

The quarterly "Modern Music," first known as "The League of Composers' Review," will continue in the form established last season, with articles by Europeans and Americans, portraits of leading composers, caricatures and designs of new musical works for the stage.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
BUFFALO, N. Y.

Dr. Muck Visits Scene of His Early Success

BERLIN, May 22.—For the first time since the war, Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners, and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
ALBANY, N. Y.
MAY 23 1926

DR. CARL MUCK SCORES TRIUMPH CONDUCTING ORCHESTRA AT BERLIN

Directs Series of Wagner Performances at the State Opera.

BERLIN, May 22 (AP).—For the first time since the war, Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin state opera.

Dr. Muck is considered in Germany the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SUN
BALTIMORE, MD.
MAY 2[illegible] 1926

WINS HIGH REPUTE.

For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them.

The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible.

The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

The movie craze, which started in Germany years later than in the United States, has fallen off a little.

The Association of Motion-Picture Theater Owners reported that gross receipts of the ninety largest theaters in Berlin were 250,000 marks a month less this year than for the corresponding period in 1925.

Even now Berliners spend 200,000,000 marks a year for movies. The association has appointed a committee to find out what the people want to see on the screen and to give it to them.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN CITIZEN
MAY 2[illegible]

Novelties Announced By League of Composers

A program of more than usual variety is announced by the League of Composers for its activities during the coming season. Next fall it will enter the fourth year of its organization, the purpose of which has been to promote the performance and criticism of modern music without being restricted to any particular schools or tendencies.

The opening concert of the season will be distinguished by the first American appearance of the famous Belgian organization, the Pro-Arte Quartet, in a program of modern chamber music.

Serge Koussevitzky has again received permission from the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to conduct a group of selected men from that organization in a concert of chamber orchestral works for the league.

THIS CLIPPING FROM TIMES UNION
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
MAY 22 1926

Koussevitzky Will Play American Scores At His Spring Concerts In Paris

Serge Koussevitzky, having completed on Saturday, May 1, the second season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, sailed for Europe on the Aquitania on May 5. He will conduct his annual season of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater" and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other novelties, most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8.

Of the ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concert of the season Philip Hale said in the Boston Herald:

"We do not recall a tribute paid by an audience to a conductor that was any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended symphony concerts since the fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous, it was prolonged; it was enthusiastic; it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiam after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and in the hearts of his audience."

WELLESLEY NIGHT AT POPS CONCERT

TRANS MAY 27

Wellesley College will come out in full forces to have its annual Wellesley night at the "Pops" in Symphony hall tonight. This, like all other nights, will be open to the public. The program follows:

Overture to "Masaniello" .....Auber
Waltz of the Flowers .....Tchaikovsky
Fantasia, "Madam Butterfly" .....Puccini
Songs by Wellesley College choir.
Scenes Pittoresques .....Massenet
a. Air de Ballet .... b. Fete Boheme
The Swan .....Saint-Saens
(Violoncello solo, Jacobus Langendoen)
Rondo Capriccioso .....Mendelssohn

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
MAY 24 1926

Muck Gives Wagner Series in Berlin

Berlin, May 23.—(Associated Press.)—For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

At the Pops Tonight

Coronation March from "The Prophet" Meyerbeer
Overture, "Robespierre" .....Litolff
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Fantasia from the Opera "Resurrection" Alfano
Sunday Morning and Sunday Evening from "Alsatian Scenes"....Massenet
March of The Toys from "Babes in Toyland" .....Herbert
Procession of the Grail-Knights from "Parsifal" .....Wagner
Rhapsody, "España" .....Chabrier
Overture, Chinese Dance, Trépak from the Ballet, "Nutcracker"..Chaikovsky
En Badinant .....d'Ambrosio
March, "Semper Fidelis".....Sousa

Conductor: A. Jacchia

TRANS MAY 28

TRANSCRIPT MAY 25

At the Pops Tonight

Coronation March .....Svendsen
Overture to Goethe's Play, "Egmont," Beethoven
Sometime .....Fiorito-Jacchia
Fantasia from the Opera, "Mefistofele" .....Boito
Capriccio and Burlesca..Scarlatti-Jacchia
Procession to the Minster from "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Spanish Dance, "Panaderos"...Glazunov
Finale from Fourth Symphony, Chaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Waltz, "Wine, Woman and Song," J. Strauss

Conductor: A. Jacchia

Incidents and Prospects

Not until June 1 will the allotted time expire for the renewal of subscriptions to the three series of concerts by the Symphony Orchestra. As the signs go, these renewals and the waiting lists will exhaust every available place for the season of 1926-27. To newcomers, the five matinees on Tuesdays promise best.

Mr. Koussevitzky has again agreed to conduct late next autumn at a concert in New York for the League of Composers. For it he will assemble a chamber orchestra from his forces at Symphony Hall. Modernist music will fill the program—one long piece and two or three briefer and less exacting.

TRANS MAY 25

UNION
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
MAY 30 1926

EACH year, beginning in May, the Boston Symphony gives a series of "Pops," as they are termed, in the Hub city. Their popularity is enhanced somewhat by the serving of refreshments during the rendition of the programme. The reign of Volsteadism has put a crimp in their former joviality, however; so I've been told.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM INQUIRER
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
MAY 23 192[illegible]

BERLIN HEARS WAGNER INTERPRETED BY MUCK

Conductor Returns to Capital First Time Since World War

BERLIN, May 22 (A. P.).—For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the centre of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
TRIBUNE

ANOTHER MUSICAL FEAST

"Pops" To Go On the Air At 8:10 This Evening

Another musical feast will be served to the radio audience to-night when the Pops go on the air at 8:10 through Stations WEEI and WEAN. This is the third in a series of nine Pops broadcasts made possible by Mr. W. S. Quinby of the W. S. Quinby Compnay whose slogan is, "You might as well have the best."

A glance at the program, announced in another column, gives one a breath from nearly every musically prominent nation on earth. It is one of Mr. Jacchia's characteristically varied and interesting programs—the kind which keeps right on filling Symphony Hall to capacity. And then, for good measure, Mr. Jacchia will throw in plenty of light, airy, indescribably beautiful encores. He always does.

Among the radio audience there are of course thousands of people particularly responsive to the deep, rich and vibrant tone of a 'cello. For them Mr. Jacobus Langendoen is going to play to-night the Larghetto by Mozart. Mr. Langendoen is one of the distinguished 'cellists of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He is an artist of high attainments and has a musical message of particular beauty to deliver to the great audience who will be listening for him this evening.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 2[illegible] 1926

THIRD "POP" CONCERT WILL BE BROADCAST

Interesting Programme to Be Heard Over WEAN, The Shepard Stores.

Another treat will be served to the radio audience to-night when the third of the series of nine "pop" concerts will be broadcast direct from Symphony Hall, Boston, through stations WEAN, The Shepard Stores, of this city, and WEEI, Boston, through the courtesy of W. S. Quimby, at 8:10.

This will be one of Mr. Jacchia's characteristically varied and interesting programmes, with plenty of light airy encores. Among the numbers will be "Larghetto," by Mozart, played by Jacobus Langendoen, one of the most distinguished 'cellists of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, an artist of high attainments.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.
MAY 23 1926

Full-Time Broadcasting

Joseph Knecht, formerly violinist with the Boston Symphony, later outstanding member of the Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra and for the past 15 years musical director of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, is now devoting all of his time to radio broadcasting. Knecht organized the Silvertown Cord Orchestra.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
MAY 22 1926

EX-BOSTON LEADER TRIUMPHS IN BERLIN

Dr. Carl Muck, Conductor of Symphony, Revives Wagner in German Return

Berlin, May 21.—For the first time since the war, Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the centre of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BUFFALO, N. Y.
ENQUIRER
MAY [illegible]

Musican Mows Lawn at Jail

(By International News Service)

Rumford, Me., May 21.—Gustav Heim, former trumpeter in the royal band of Berlin and former member of the famous Boston Symphony orchestra, was called on to mow the lawn of the Oxford county jail today as his first jail duty under a four months' sentence for manufacturing liquor at his summer camp in Lovell, patronized annually by scores of wealthy New Yorkers and professional folk.

Heim is being sued for divorce by his wife, linking his name with another woman's. She seeks the custody of her two children.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
MAY 22 192[illegible]

Sergei Koussevitsky recently completed his second year as conductor of Boston Symphony orchestra. He sailed for Europe a few days ago and is now preparing for his series of "Concerts Koussevitsky" in Paris, which will be started to-morrow. He will introduce several new scores by American composers, including "Concerto Gross'" by Ernest Bloch, and "Music for the Theater" by Copeland. He will also present several other American novelties which he used during his recent season in Boston. He will rest for the remainder of the summer and will return to this country in time for the opening of the forty-sixth season of the Boston orchestra on October 8. Philip Hale in the Boston Herald wrote as follows concerning the tribute paid to the conductor during the course of his concluding concert in that city: "We do not recall a tribute paid by the audience to a conductor that was in any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended symphony concerts since the Fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous, it was prolonged; it was enthusiastic; it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiasm after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and in the hearts of his audience."

* * *

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE
MAY 23 192[illegible]

League of Composers To Give Four Concerts

Three Evenings, One Matinee Announced for 1926-'27; Magazine Continues

Three evening concerts and an afternoon recital are to be given by the League of Composers in 1926-'27, the fourth season of this organization, which announces for its purpose the promotion of the performance and criticism of modern music without restriction to any particular schools or tendencies.

The season's opening concert will be marked by the first American appearance of the Pro-Arte Quartet, a Belgian group, which will give a program of modern chamber music. This will be announced in detail early next fall.

Serge Koussevitzky again has received permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra's board of trustees to conduct a group of members of that organization in a concert of chamber orchestra works for the league. He is expected to offer one large work and two smaller ones. In the middle of the season there will be an afternoon recital of new works by young American composers, both known and so far unknown, and early in 1927 there will be an evening of new works in a musical dramatic form, to be given with novel stage investiture.

The quarterly "Modern Music," first known as "The League of Composers' Review," will continue in the form established last season, with articles by Europeans and Americans, portraits of leading composers, caricatures and designs of new musical works for the stage.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
BUFFALO, N. Y.
MAY 23 192[illegible]

Dr. Muck Visits Scene of His Early Success

BERLIN, May 22.—For the first time since the war, Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners, and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
ALBANY, N. Y.
MAY 23 192[illegible]

DR. CARL MUCK SCORES TRIUMPH CONDUCTING ORCHESTRA AT BERLIN

Directs Series of Wagner Performances at the State Opera.

BERLIN, May 22 (AP).—For the first time since the war, Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin state opera.

Dr. Muck is considered in Germany the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SUN
BALTIMORE, MD.
MAY 23 192[illegible]

WINS HIGH REPUTE.

For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them.

The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible.

The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

The movie craze, which started in Germany years later than in the United States, has fallen off a little.

The Association of Motion-Picture Theater Owners reported that gross receipts of the ninety largest theaters in Berlin were 250,000 marks a month less this year than for the corresponding period in 1925.

Even now Berliners spend 200,000,000 marks a year for movies. The association has appointed a committee to find out what the people want to see on the screen and to give it to them.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN CITIZEN
MAY 23 192[illegible]

Novelties Announced By League of Composers

A program of more than usual variety is announced by the League of Composers for its activities during the coming season. Next fall it will enter the fourth year of its organization, the purpose of which has been to promote the performance and criticism of modern music without being restricted to any particular schools or tendencies.

The opening concert of the season will be distinguished by the first American appearance of the famous Belgian organization, the Pro-Arte Quartet, in a program of modern chamber music.

Serge Koussevitzky has again received permission from the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to conduct a group of selected men from that organization in a concert of chamber orchestral works for the league.

In the middle of the season there will be an afternoon recital of new compositions by young American composers.

Early in 1927 there will be an evening of new works in a musical dramatic form, with novel stage investiture.

Orchestra, sailed [illegible] the Aquitania on May 5. He will conduct his annual season of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, from May 22 to June 12, introducing to Europe such American scores as Copland's "Music for the Theater" and Bloch's "Concerto Grosso," and likewise other novelties, most of which figured in his concerts of the season now ended.

Koussevitzky will rest for the remainder of the summer and return to open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8.

Of the ovation accorded conductor and orchestra at the closing concert of the season Philip Hale said in the Boston Herald:

"We do not recall a tribute paid by an audience to a conductor that was any way comparable to that paid Mr. Koussevitzky yesterday, and deservedly, when he came on the stage, and we have attended symphony concerts since the fall of 1889. The applause was not only spontaneous, it was prolonged; it was enthusiastic; it had a certain indefinable quality. This greeting and the enthusiam after the symphony showed how firm is the hold of Mr. Koussevitzky on the minds and in the hearts of his audience."

WELLESLEY NIGHT AT POPS CONCERT

TRAV 7/24/27

Wellesley College will come out in full forces to have its annual Wellesley night at the "Pops" in Symphony hall tonight. This, like all other nights, will be open to the public. The program follows:

Overture to "Masaniello" .....Auber
Waltz of the Flowers .....Tchaikovsky
Fantasia, "Madam Butterfly" .....Puccini
Songs by Wellesley College choir.
Scenes Pittoresques .....Massenet
a. Air de Ballet .. .. b. Fete Boheme
The Swan .....Saint-Saens
(Violoncello solo, Jacobus Langendoen)
Rondo Capriccioso .....Mendelssohn

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
MAY 24 1926

Muck Gives Wagner Series in Berlin

Berlin, May 23.—(Associated Press.)—For the first time since the war Dr. Carl Muck, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has returned to the scene of his triumphs of earlier days and conducted a series of Wagner performances at the Berlin State Opera.

Dr. Muck is regarded in Germany as the greatest living interpreter of Wagnerian scores as Richard Wagner himself played them. The Berlin performances of the Nibelungenring, which formed the center of Muck's conduction, were made as nearly like the historical Bayreuth productions as possible. The orchestra was increased to 100 musicians to comply with Bayreuth standards.

Muck was enthusiastically received by Berliners and arrangements are pending for an annual Wagner series conducted by him.

At the Pops Tonight

Coronation March from "The Prophet" Myerbeer
Overture, "Robespierre" .....Litolff
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Fantasia from the Opera "Resurrection" Alfano
Sunday Morning and Sunday Evening from "Alsatian Scenes"....Massenet
March of The Toys from "Babes in Toyland" .....Herbert
Procession of the Grail-Knights from "Parsifal" .....Wagner
Rhapsody, "España" .....Chabrier
Overture, Chinese Dance, Trépak from the Ballet, "Nutcracker"..Chaikovsky
En Badinant .....d'Ambrosio
March, "Semper Fidelis".....Sousa

Conductor: A. Jacchia

TRANS MAY 28

TRANSCRIPT MAY 25

At the Pops Tonight

Coronation March .....Svendsen
Overture to Goethe's Play, "Egmont," Beethoven
Sometime .....Fiorito-Jacchia
Fantasia from the Opera, "Mefistofele" .....Boito
Capriccio and Burlesca..Scarlatti-Jacchia
Procession to the Minster from "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Spanish Dance, "Panaderos"...Glazunov
Finale from Fourth Symphony, Chaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Waltz, "Wine, Woman and Song," J. Strauss

Conductor: A. Jacchia

Incidents and Prospects

Not until June 1 will the allotted time expire for the renewal of subscriptions to the three series of concerts by the Symphony Orchestra. As the signs go, these renewals and the waiting lists will exhaust every available place for the season of 1926-27. To newcomers, the five matinees on Tuesdays promise best.

Mr. Koussevitzky has again agreed to conduct late next autumn at a concert in New York for the League of Composers. For it he will assemble a chamber orchestra from his forces at Symphony Hall. Modernist music will fill the program—one long piece and two or three briefer and less exacting.

TRANS MAY 25

UNION
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
MAY 30 1926

EACH year, beginning in May, the Boston Symphony gives a series of "Pops," as they are termed, in the Hub city. Their popularity is enhanced somewhat by the serving of refreshments during the rendition of the programme. The reign of Volsteadism has put a crimp in their former joviality, however; so I've been told.

* * *

PROGRAMS FOR THIS WEEK

HERALD — MAY 30

"Pops" Are Offering Varied and Interesting Numbers for Coming Week

With a holiday program tomorrow night, the "Pop" concerts in Symphony hall will open the fifth week of their 45st season. Events of the week will be the first Boston performance of Rachmaninov's Cantata "Springtide," on Thursday; annual Tech night on Friday; a Weber centennial program on Saturday, June 5, which will be exactly 100 years after the death of the German composer, and a symphonic program, now an established favorite of the Pops, for the third Sunday concert of the season, on June 6. The programs of the week follow:

MONDAY

Stars and Stripes Forever.....Sousa
Overture to "La Forza del Destino".Verdi
Prelude to "The Deluge".....Saint-Saens
(Violin solo: Julius Theodorowicz)
Fantasia "Tosca".....Puccini

AMERICA

Spanish Caprice.....Rimsky-Korsakov
Alborada—Fandango Asturiano
Dance of the Sylphs.....Berlioz
Deep River.....Burleigh-Jacchia
Ballet of the Hours from "La Gioconda" Ponchielli

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER

Selection, "Mlle. Modiste".....Herbert
Narcissus .....Nevin
American Patrol.....Meacham

TUESDAY

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "Figaro".....Mozart
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saens
Boston Square and Compass Club Male Choir
Suite from "Platee" and "Fetes d'Hebe" Rameau-Motti
Minuet—Musette—Tambourin
Intermezzo from "Pagliacci".Leoncavallo
Marche Slave.....Tchaikovsky
Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust".....Gounod
Afro-American Folk Songs arranged by Jacchia
You May Bury Me in de Eas'—MusieuBanjo
Nobudy Knows de Trubble I've Seen
Waltz, "Waves of the Danube"..Ivanovici
March, "Boston Commandery"....Carter

WEDNESDAY

Overture to "La Gazza Ladra"....Rossini
Valse Bluette.....Drigo
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Suite, "Peer Gynt".....Grieg
a. Morning Mood. b. Aase's Death.
c. In the Troll King's Grotto.
Song Without Words.....Tchaikovsky
Russian Folk Song, "Dubinushka"..... Arranged by Jacchia
"Finlandia," Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
Selection, "The Student Prince"..Romberg
Intermezzo from "L'Amico Fritz".Mascagni
Waltz, "Miners' Light".....Zeller

THURSDAY

Overture to "La Belle Helene"...Offenbach
Minuet of the Will-o'-the-Wisps...Berlioz
Fantasia, "Aida".....Verdi
a. Folk Song, "Lied fun a Feigele"
b. Psalm CL.....Lewandowski-Jacchia
(Conducted by Henry Gideon)
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Scherzino .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Springtide, Cantata.....Rachmaninov
(For baritone solo, chorus and orchestra)
(Baritone, Henry Jackson Warren)
From Cradle to Chuppe—Three Folk Songs .....Gideon-Jacchia
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

FRIDAY

ANNUAL TECHNOLOGY NIGHT
(Open to the Public)

SATURDAY

Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin". Wagner
Valse des Fleurs.....Tchaikovsky
Ave Maria .....Bach-Gounod
(Violin—Harp—Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana"..... Mascagni
Overture to "Der Freischuts".....
First Movement from Concert No. 1 for Clarinet.....
(Clarinet, Paul Mimart)
Invitation to the Dance.....
(Orchestrated by Berlioz)
Overture of "Oberon".....
C. M. Weber, Dec. 18, 1786-June 5, 1826
Suite, "Coppelia".....Delibes
a. Waltz of the Hours. b. Csardas
Intermezzo, Act III "Jewels of the Madonna" .....Wolf-Ferrari
Sixth Hungarian Dance.....Brahms

SUNDAY

Symphony No. 2 in D major (London), first movement: Adagio; Allegro Haydn
Overture to Goethe's "Egmont" Beethoven
Scherzo from the incidental music of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream.....Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhauser"...Wagner
Rhapsody in E-flat, op. 119.....Brahms
(Orchestrated by Agide Jacchia)

Overture, "The Roman Carnival," op. 9 Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," second movement (Largo) Dvorak
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, third movement: Scherzo; Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro.....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor" Borodin

SOME STATISTICS ON "POP" CONCERTS

A count of the pieces new and old played at the "Pops" this season reveals the following interesting statistics:

The programs played or announced for the first six weeks contain 314 different pieces, of which 28 are new to the "Pops."

In addition to these novelties, there are 10 not hitherto played in Agide Jacchia's term. The conductor has a number of new pieces of interest which are still to be played in the course of the season, and which is expected will bring the total repertory of the season to more than 400 different pieces.

Events of the fifth week of the Pops season will be a holiday program for Memorial day; special choral numbers on Thursday, June 3, which will include Rachmaninov's cantata "Springtide," to be conducted by Henry Gideon and then to be heard for the first time in Boston; Technology night on June 4 (which will be open to the public), and a Weber centennial program for Saturday, June 5, which marks to a day the 100th anniversary of the death of the great composer. Four numbers from Weber will be on this program. Sunday, June 6, will bring the third Sunday Pop concert of the season with a Symphonic program.

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

TRANSCRIPT — MAY 29

Programs for Another Week—Honors for Weber, a New Jewish Choir, for the First Time a Charleston — Mr. Cherkassy Substitute Conductor

THE HOLIDAY of Monday first diversifies the course of The Pops through the fifth week of the current season. It brings the usual patriotic airs and this and that piece from American composers. There is room also for operatic Verdi and Rimsky-Korsakov a l'Espagnole. On Tuesday, partsongs by the men's choir of the Square and Compass Club will lend variety; while the program also arrays numbers from Mozart, Saint-Saens and Chaikovsky. On Wednesday Mr. Jacchia begins with an overture to an elder Italian opera—Rossini's for "La Gazza Ladra." Nowhere but at The Pops may these pieces in true form be heard nowadays in Boston. On Thursday the new chorus of the Young Men's Hebrew Association will sing for the first time in public. Mr. Gideon leads it; Mr. Warren, the baritone, will assist it; their piece is Rakhmaninov's cantata, "Springtide." The program is also the better for Offenbach's overture to "La Belle Helene."

On Friday, by exception, Mr. Jacchia will take a holiday, with Mr. Cherkassy of the string choir for substitute. In Russia he gained experience in such work. One of his numbers is the upswinging March Movement from Chaikovsky's "Pathetic Sympathy." Friday also is the night of the Institute of Technology To mark the occasion one of the students will "do a Charleston" probably for the first time—balls aside—in Symphony Hall. Saturday the anniversary of Weber's death a hundred years ago in London brings four of his pieces: the overtures to "Der Freischuetz" and to "Oberon"—first and last of his surviving operas; Berlioz's orchestral arrangement of "The Invitation to the Dance," originally piano-piece; the first movement of a concerto for clarinet, or Weber as virtuoso composer. For the concert of Sunday week, June 6, Mr. Jacchia will assemble the symphonic fragments of the current repertory: Finale of Chaikovsky, Allegro of Haydn, Largo of Dvorak. Around them stand Beethoven's overture, "Egmont"; Berlioz's overture, "Roman Carnival"; the Bacchanel from "Tannhauser," the Tartar dances from "Prince Igor." Even Brahms looks in.

Post — MAY 29

Intercollegiate Night Features Pops Concert

Graduates of 29 American colleges whose delegates are visiting Boston for the Intercollegiate track meet at Harvard today may listen in on Intercollegiate night at the Pops through WEEI. This arrangement has just been completed, according to an announcement yesterday.

The management at Symphony Hall, co-operating with William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, and Stanley deJ. Osborne, manager of the Harvard Athletic Association, have placed a table at the disposal of each of the 29 competing colleges. This invitation has been accepted officially for the colleges by Mr. Osborne.

The radio audience will be given an opportunity to listen in on this special programme through the kindness of Mr. W. S. Quinby. A special popular programme will be given during th's concert, and many college songs and marches of the principal colleges will also be added by Agide Jacchia, the Pops conductor.

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

After the intercollegiate track meet, the guests and athletes from 29 colleges will assemble at the Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight, where they will be honored by special numbers, including the songs of the principal colleges, which will be performed by the orchestra.

The revised program follows:

March, "Maine to California".....Sousa
Overture to 'Pique Dame".....Suppe
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube" Strauss
Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
Procession of Bacchus.....Delibes
Violin solos:
(a) Lotus Land.....Scott-Kreisler
(b) Rondo .....Mozart-Kreisler
Julius Theodorowicz.
Bolero .....Moszkov...
Overture to "Tannhauser".....Wa...
Selection, "Tales of Hofman".....Offe...ch
Serenade .....Rach...inov
Waltz, "Estudiantina".....W...teufel

TRAVELER — MAY 29

PLAN "POPS" REQUEST WEEK NEXT SEASON

The management of the Symphony Hall Pops concerts has announced that it is considering the inauguration next year of a request week, so great has been the public interest in the request night idea instituted this season.

If the plans now under consideration are adopted, an entire week will be set aside during the latter part of the season next summer for programs based on the favorite numbers of the audiences. A vote will be taken each night for several weeks, as was done this year, and the compositions receiving the highest number of votes in the total count will be used for the request week program.

This year's process was followed through to determine the program of request night, which was last Monday, June 21. The ticket office was beseiged with applicants, and nearly 2000 persons had to be turned away for lack of accommodations. In an attempt to give the disappointed patrons a chance to hear the popular program, the request night concert will be repeated next Thursday night.

PRAISE BESTOWED, CRISIS DISCUSSED, REPROOF ENDURED

FINAL CONCERT-CHRONICLE OF THE SEASON

Mr. Koussevitzky's Notable Programs for Paris—Bostonian Ear-Marks Plain Upon Them—Miss Leginska, the People's Orchestra and the New Philharmonic—Diversity or Monotony at The Pops—Efficient Retort from Symphony Hall—Weber to Be Honored

TO SYMPHONY HALL Mr. Koussevitzky sends the several programs for his concerts this spring at the Opera in Paris. The first was printed yesterday in this place. The second, to be heard this evening, stands:

Sonata in G major.....Galliard
(Arranged by M. Steinberg)
Open-Air Games.....Tailleferre
Concerto for Piano with Orchestra....Tansman
(Pianist: The Composer)
Symphony, No. 1, in C minor.....Brahms

The third, "all-Russian," announced for the evening of Thursday, June 3, lists:

Song of the Nightingale.....Stravinsky
Chout (Ballet).....Prokoviev
Preface to the Book of Life.....Oboukhov
Symphony, No. 4, in F minor.....Chaikovsky

The series will end on Saturday afternoon, June 12, with these pieces:

Symphony, No. 6, in G major, ("Surprise"). Haydn
Concerto for Orchestra.....Hindemith
Symphonic Movement, "Pacific, 231".Honegger
Concerto Grosso for Strings with Piano Obbligato .....Bloch
Suite, No. 2, from the Ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe" .....Ravel

Plainly Mr. Koussevitzky is taking his courage in his hands, since here are programs sure to stir the bile of the Parisian reviewers and of French conservatives among his audiences. Both seldom hear, both dislike flatly, the symphonies of Brahms. No oftener do they listen to symphonies by Chaikovsky, and frankly despise them. The twentieth-century Italians fare not too well in Parisian concert-halls or opera houses—and Mr. Koussevitzky "presents" (on the first program) Respighi's "Pini di Roma." Worse still, he treats living German composers "like people." As yet Parisian conductors are returning gingerly to Strauss—and this Russo-Bostonian announces "Til Eulenspiegel" (on the first program) as a matter of course. To the post-war German generation he even opens arms; for the first time Paris will hear an orchestral piece by young Hindemith of Frankfort. Fortunately for Mr. Koussevitzky, his concerts assemble a cosmopolitan rather than a strictly Parisian audience. In the press, however, there are sure to be explosions. Roussel, Ravel, Honegger, may not stifle them.

Except the new Concerto by Mr. Tansman, the arrangement as tone-poem of Prokoviev's ballet of clowns, "Chout," and the prologue of the unknown Russian, Oboukhov, all the pieces proposed by Mr. Koussevitzky for Paris, were heard from his hands last season in Boston. One and another of them—the symphonies of Brahms and Chaikovsky, Stravinsky's "Song of the Nightingale," the suite from Ravel's ballet—he brought to masterly performance. Respighi's tone-poem was "the piece of the year" in American concert-halls. Mr. Copland's "Music for The Theater" admirably represents not only an individual ability, but the youngest generation of American composers. Mr. Bloch has not yet attained his international deserts. Hindemith's Concerto is modernism a l' outrance. So onward, item by item. Yet what most impresses is the catholicity of these eighteen pieces, the first program (Vivaldi, Copland, Strauss, Roussel, Respighi) included. Ancients—Vivaldi, Galliard, Haydn; a classic—Brahms; a romantic—Chaikovsky; established moderns—Strauss, Ravel, Stravinsky; ascending modernists—Tansman, Copland, Hindemith, Honegger, all have place. German, Austrian, French, English, Italian, Russian, Polish, Swiss, American, are the arrayed nationalities. Hardly before has Mr. Koussevitzky proffered the Parisians such catholic and cosmopolitan programs by two centuries bounded. The honorable tradition, the distinctive standard, of the Symphony Concerts, which ordain such free and ranging choice, have seeped in two seasons into Mr. Koussevitzky. From the second term of Mr. Gericke no conductor has escaped them. Each, rather, has established them more firmly.

Those Published Wee...

AT THE POPS TONIGHT

The following program will be heard at the Pop concert in Symphony Hall tonight, under the direction of Agide Jacchia:

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "Figaro".....Mozart
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saens
Boston Square and Compass club male choir.
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Intermezzo from "Pagliacci...Leoncavallo
Marche Slave.....Tchaikowsky
Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust"....Gounod
Afro-American folk songs.
Arranged by Jacchia
You May Bury Me in de Eas'—Musieu Banjo—Nobody Knows de Trubble I've Seen.
Waltz, "Waves of the Danube" Ivanovici
March, "Boston Commandery.....Carter

HERALD — JUNE 1

Information and Reproof

On Saturday last this department (which is evidently suffering from spring restlessness and chafing, no doubt, for its summer holiday) intimated, as politely as may be, that the programs at The Pops could be more diversified and that sundry pieces recurred too often—say, Chaikovsky's "1812," or Chabrier's "Espana" or the "Blue Danube" waltz of Strauss, by the Jewish liturgical tune "Eili, Eili." The ground for the intimation was the weekly scrutiny of the programs for summary in these columns. Touched upon what proves a sensitive spot, the management at Symphony Hall forthwith opened its files and sharpened its pencil. It now reports that in the six weeks for which programs have been made—that is through Saturday, June 12—314 different pieces will have been played, college songs and the like not included. Of those pieces twenty-eight are new to the repertory of The Pops, viz.:

Albeniz—Cordoba. Op. 232.
Alfano—Selection from "Resurrection."
Amani—Orientale. Op. 7, No. 2.
Beethoven—Minuet in G.
Boellman—Chorale and Minuet Gothique. Op. 25.
Brahms—Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.
Converse—Scarecrow Sketches.
Dillon—Birds at Dawn, Op. 20.
Fiorito—Sometime.
Friml—Selection from "The Vagabond King."
Glazunov—Prelude in G-flat.
Godard—Pan from "The Magic Lantern."
Handel—La Campanella.
Levenson—Hebrew Fantasy; Russian Scherzo.
Liszt—Love-Dream.
Moszkowski—Scherzino, Op. 18; Guitarre, Op. 45.
Rakhmaninov—Serenade, Op. 3.
Ondricek—"In the Village" from Slovakian Sketches.
Romberg—Selection from "The Student Prince."
Sauer—Music-Clock.
Scott—Danse Negre; Lotus-Land.
Schumann—Suite from "Carnaval."
Chaikowsky—Suite from "The Seasons"; Humoresque.
Von Doenhoff—Preghiera.

Furthermore: ten pieces, put by at the end of previous seasons, have been taken from the shelves, viz.:

Beethoven—Overture to "The Ruins of Athens."
Brahms—Hungarian aDnce, No. 18.
Haydn—First Movement from Symphony, No. 2.
Mendelssohn—Rupeltanz.
Mozart—Larghetto for Violoncello.
Soderman—Swedish Wedding March.
Chaikovsky—Italian Caprice.
Wagner—Introduction to Act III, "Die Meistersinger"; Funeral March from "Goetterdaemmerung."
Weber—First Movement from Concerto for Clarinet.

To complete the rout, the overture, "1812," will have been played but five times in six weeks; "Espana" but four; "Eili, Eili" but three; the "Blue Danube" waltz but two. There is no resisting this barrage of titles and figures; but as The Transcript turns to flee, it soothes its discomfiture with the reflections that many of those twenty-eight additions to the repertory are lesser, rather than larger, numbers; that the revivals make an ampler showing musically; that to play the overture, "1812," any time or anywhere, except on a fete-day in Tsarist Russia, is to play it once too often. Besides, while thirty-six programs for The Pops do disclose, item by item, no small diversity, they bear also a perceptible family resemblance. Inevitable, desirable, they will say at Symphony Hall and with reason. Not for nothing are these concerts forty seasons old.

Incidents and Prospects

Weber, thrusting death away with one hand while he finished "Oberon" with the other, died in London on June 5, 1826. Many theaters and a few concert-halls in Europe will mark the hundredth anniversary; since it was Weber, above any other composer, who changed the face of opera from classic to romantic cast. Here in America orchestras and opera companies will be for the most part silent. In Boston, however, Mr. Jacchia remembers, and will seize occasion. On the program of the Pops for Saturday, June 5, stand the overtures to "Der Freischuetz" and "Oberon"; Berlioz's orchestral version of the "Invitation to the Dance"; the first division of the clarinet-concerto.

On Monday, June 7, Mr. Richard Burgin, concert-master of the Symphony Orchestra, will try his fortunes in Paris as violinist. In a concert of his own at the Salle Gaveau, with the Lamoureux Orchestra assisting, he will play the Concertos of Mendelssohn, Brahms and Prokoviev.

At the Pop Concert of Thursday, June 3, the new chorus of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, conducted by Mr. Gideon, will sing for the first time publicly in Boston. Its principal number will be Rakhmaninov's cantata, "Springtide," hitherto unheard here. H. T. P.

JUNE 3

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

Special choral numbers including the first Boston performance of Rachmaninov's cantata, "Springtide," will be a feature of the Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight. Program follows:

Overture to "Zampa".....Herold
Minuet of the Will-o'-the-Wisps..Berlioz
Fantasia, "Aida".....Verdi
a. Folk Song, "Lied fun a Feigele"
b. Psalm CL.....Lewandowski-Jacchia
(Conducted by Henry Gideon)
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Scherzino .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Ride of Valkyries.....Wagner
Springtide, Cantata.....Rachmaninov
(For baritone solo, chorus and orchestra)
(Baritone—Henry Jackson Warren)
From Cradle to Chuppe—Three Folk Songs .....Gideon-Jacchia
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

"The Boston Job"

A Naive Note from Mahler to Mengelberg

THE letters of Mahler have been collected and lately published in Vienna. Among them is a note written in 1908 to Mr. Mengelberg about "the Boston job"—that is to say, the conductorship of the Symphony Orchestra. Mahler was then in New York on the staff of the Metropolitan Opera House. Dr. Muck was ending his first term as conductor at Symphony Hall. Rumor ran that Mr. Mengelberg would be called from Amsterdam to succeed him, though the choice subsequently fell upon the inferior Mr. Fiedler. At this juncture Mahler wrote to his friend, as translated by Ernest Newman in The New York Evening Post:

The Boston position is the finest imaginable for a musician. It is the first and highest on the whole continent. An orchestra of the first rank. Unlimited sovereign power. A social standing such as the musician cannot obtain in Europe. A public of whose keenness to learn and whose gratitude the European can form no conception. After your New York experiences you cannot have any idea of this. In New York the theater is the central point of interest, and concerts the affair only of a small minority.

TRANSCRIPT
TUES MAY 19 21

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

MAY 1 0 '28

KOUSSEVITZKY GOES ABROAD TO SPEND SUMMER

Boston Symphony Orchestra Leader Will Return to Open Its 46th Season in October. Five Appearances Here Now Appear Assured.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the past two seasons, is on his way to Europe, where he will spend the summer. He will return to this country to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Symphony Hall, Boston, Oct. 8.

His second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was eminently successful and the closing concerts of the series in various cities were like a triumphal tour for Koussevitsky and his men. At the last Saturday night concert of the season in Boston, May 1, the audience cheered conductor and orchestra to the echo.

When the orchestra played for the last time at Infantry Hall here in March seats for the concert were sold out on the first day of the ticket sale. Funds have been subscribed to secure the Albee Theatre for five nights next season so that the orchestra may play there and so that the city will not be deprived of its infrequent opportunities to hear the famous musicians.

Final steps in the negotiations to obtain the use of the theatre had not been completed late last week, but supporters of the plan were then confident that the details could be satisfactorily arranged.

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

The Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight will have the following programme to be heard from the Pops Symphony orchestra, under Agide Jacchia:

Overture to "La Gazza Ladra".....Rossini
Valse Bluette.....Drigo
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Suite, "Peer Gynt"; (a) Morning Mood, (b) Aase's Death, (c) In the Troll King's Grotto.....Grieg
Song Without Words.....Tchaikovsky
Russian Folk Song, "Dubinushka" Arranged by Jacchia
"Finlandia," Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
...berg
...agni
...ller

PAGE NINETEEN

b. Psalm CL.....Lewandowski-Jacchia
(Conducted by Henry Gideon)
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Scherzino .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Ride of Valkyries.....Wagner
Springtide, Cantata.....Rachmaninov
(For baritone solo, chorus and orchestra)
(Baritone—Henry Jackson Warren)
From Cradle to Chuppe—Three Folk Songs .....Gideon-Jacchia
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

PROGRAMS FOR THIS WEEK

HERALD — MAY 30

"Pops" Are Offering Varied and Interesting Numbers for Coming Week

With a holiday program tomorrow night, the "Pop" concerts in Symphony hall will open the fifth week of their 45st season. Events of the week will be the first Boston performance of Rachmaninov's Cantata "Springtide," on Thursday; annual Tech night on Friday; a Weber centennial program on Saturday, June 5, which will be exactly 100 years after the death of the German composer, and a symphonic program, now an established favorite of the Pops, for the third Sunday concert of the season, on June 6. The programs of the week follow:

MONDAY

Stars and Stripes Forever.....Sousa
Overture to "La Forza del Destino".Verdi
Prelude to "The Deluge".....Saint-Saens
(Violin solo: Julius Theodorowicz)
Fantasia "Tosca".....Puccini

AMERICA
Spanish Caprice.....Rimsky-Korsakov
Alborada—Fandango Asturiano
Dance of the Sylphs.....Berlioz
Deep River.....Burleigh-Jacchia
Ballet of the Hours from "La Gioconda" Ponchielli

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER
Selection, "Mlle. Modiste".....Herbert
Narcissus .....Nevin
American Patrol.....Meacham

TUESDAY

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "Figaro".....Mozart
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saens
Boston Square and Compass Club Male Choir
Suite from "Platee" and "Fetes d'Hebe" Rameau-Mottl
Minuet—Musette—Tambourin
Intermezzo from "Pagliacci"..Leoncavallo
Marche Slave.....Tchaikovsky
Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust".....Gounod
Afro-American Folk Songs arranged by Jacchia
You May Bury Me in de Eas'—MusieuBanjo
Nobudy Knows de Trubble I've Seen
Waltz, "Waves of the Danube"..Ivanovici
March, "Boston Commandery"....Carter

WEDNESDAY

Overture to "La Gazza Ladra"....Rossini
Valse Bluette.....Drigo
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Grieg
Suite, "Peer Gynt".....
a. Morning Mood. b. Aase's Death.
c. In the Troll King's Grotto.
Song Without Words.....Tchaikovsky
Russian Folk Song, "Dubinushka"....
Arranged by Jacchia
"Finlandia," Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
Selection, "The Student Prince"..Romberg
Intermezzo from "L'Amico Fritz".Mascagni
Waltz, "Miners' Light".....Zeller

THURSDAY

Overture to "La Belle Helene"...Offenbach
Minuet of the Will-o'-the-Wisps...Berlioz
Fantasia, "Aida".....Verdi
a. Folk Song, "Lied fun a Feigele"
b. Psalm CL.....Lewandowski-Jacchia
(Conducted by Henry Gideon)
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Scherzino .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Springtide, Cantata.....Rachmaninov
(For baritone solo, chorus and orchestra)
(Baritone, Henry Jackson Warren)
From Cradle to Chuppe—Three Folk Songs .....Gideon-Jacchia
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

FRIDAY
ANNUAL TECHNOLOGY NIGHT
(Open to the Public)

SATURDAY

Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin". Wagner
Valse des Fleurs.....Tchaikovsky
Ave Maria .....Bach-Gounod
(Violin—Harp—Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana"..... Mascagni
Overture to "Der Freischutz".....
First Movement from Concert No. 1 for Clarinet.....
(Clarinet, Paul Mimart)
Invitation to the Dance.....
(Orchestrated by Berlioz)
Overture of "Oberon".....
C. M. Weber, Dec. 18, 1786-June 5, 1826
Suite, "Coppelia".....Delibes
a. Waltz of the Hours. b. Csardas
Intermezzo, Act III "Jewels of the Madonna" .....Wolf-Ferrari
Sixth Hungarian Dance.....Brahms

SUNDAY

Symphony No. 2 in D major (London), first movement: Adagio; Allegro Haydn
Overture to Goethe's "Egmont" Beethoven
Scherzo from the incidental music of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream.....Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhauser"...Wagner
Rhapsody in E-flat, op. 119.....Brahms
(Orchestrated by Agide Jacchia)

Overture, "The Roman Carnival," op. 9 Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," second movement (Largo) Dvorak
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, third movement: Scherzo; Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro.....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor" Borodin

SOME STATISTICS ON "POP" CONCERTS

A count of the pieces new and old played at the "Pops" this season reveals the following interesting statistics:

The programs played or announced for the first six weeks contain 314 different pieces, of which 28 are new to the "Pops."

In addition to these novelties, there are 10 not hitherto played in Agide Jacchia's term. The conductor has a number of new pieces of interest which are still to be played in the course of the season, and which is expected will bring the total repertory of the season to more than 400 different pieces.

Events of the fifth week of the Pops season will be a holiday program for Memorial day; special choral numbers on Thursday, June 3, which will include Rachmaninov's cantata "Springtide," to be conducted by Henry Gideon and then to be heard for the first time in Boston; Technology night on June 4 (which will be open to the public), and a Weber centennial program for Saturday, June 5, which marks to a day the 100th anniversary of the death of the great composer. Four numbers from Weber will be on this program. Sunday, June 6, will bring the third Sunday Pop concert of the season with a Symphonic program.

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

TRANSCRIPT — MAY 29

Programs for Another Week—Honors for Weber, a New Jewish Choir, for the First Time a Charleston — Mr. Cherkassy Substitute Conductor

THE HOLIDAY of Monday first diversifies the course of The Pops through the fifth week of the current season. It brings the usual patriotic airs and this and that piece from American composers. There is room also for operatic Verdi and Rimsky-Korsakov a l'Espagnole. On Tuesday, partsongs by the men's choir of the Square and Compass Club will lend variety; while the program also arrays numbers from Mozart, Saint-Saens and Chaikovsky. On Wednesday Mr. Jacchia begins with an overture to an elder Italian opera—Rossini's for "La Gazza Ladra." Nowhere but at The Pops may these pieces in true form be heard nowadays in Boston. On Thursday the new chorus of the Young Men's Hebrew Association will sing for the first time in public. Mr. Gideon leads it; Mr. Warren, the baritone, will assist it; their piece is Rakhmaninov's cantata, "Springtide." The program is also the better for Offenbach's overture to "La Belle Helene."

On Friday, by exception, Mr. Jacchia will take a holiday, with Mr. Cherkassy of the string choir for substitute. In Russia he gained experience in such work. One of his numbers is the upswinging March Movement from Chaikovsky's "Pathetic Sympathy." Friday also is the night of the Institute of Technology To mark the occasion one of the students will "do a Charleston" probably for the first time—balls aside—in Symphony Hall. Saturday the anniversary of Weber's death a hundred years ago in London brings four of his pieces: the overtures to "Der Freischuetz" and to "Oberon"—first and last of his surviving operas; Berlioz's orchestral arrangement of "The Invitation to the Dance," originally piano-piece; the first movement of a concerto for clarinet, or Weber as virtuoso composer. For the concert of Sunday week, June 6, Mr. Jacchia will assemble the symphonic fragments of the current repertory: Finale of Chaikovsky, Allegro of Haydn, Largo of Dvorak. Around them stand Beethoven's overture, "Egmont"; Berlioz's overture, "Roman Carnival"; the Bacchanel from "Tannhauser," the Tartar dances from "Prince Igor." Even Brahms looks in.

Post — MAY 29

Intercollegiate Night Features Pops Concert

Graduates of 29 American colleges whose delegates are visiting Boston for the Intercollegiate track meet at Harvard today may listen in on Intercollegiate night at the Pops through WEEI. This arrangement has just been completed, according to an announcement yesterday.

The management at Symphony Hall, co-operating with William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, and Stanley deJ. Osborne, manager of the Harvard Athletic Association, have placed a table at the disposal of each of the 29 competing colleges. This invitation has been accepted officially for the colleges by Mr. Osborne.

The radio audience will be given an opportunity to listen in on this special programme through the kindness of Mr. W. S. Quinby. A special popular programme will be given during th's concert, and many college songs and marches of the principal colleges will also be added by Agide Jacchia, the Pops conductor.

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

After the intercollegiate track meet, the guests and athletes from 29 colleges will assemble at the Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight, where they will be honored by special numbers, including the songs of the principal colleges, which will be performed by the orchestra.

The revised program follows:

March, "Maine to California".....Sousa
Overture to 'Pique Dame".....Suppe
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube" Strauss
Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
Procession of Bacchus.....Delibes
Violin solos:
(a) Lotus Land.....Scott-Kreisler
(b) Rondo .....Mozart-Kreisler
Julius Theodorowicz.
Bolero .....Moszkov
Overture to "Tannhauser".....Wa
Selection, "Tales of Hofman".....Offe ach
Serenade .....Rachmaninov
Waltz, "Estudiantina" .....Waldteufel

TRAVELER — MAY 29

PLAN "POPS" REQUEST WEEK NEXT SEASON

The management of the Symphony Hall Pops concerts has announced that it is considering the inauguration next year of a request week, so great has been the public interest in the request night idea instituted this season.

If the plans now under consideration are adopted, an entire week will be set aside during the latter part of the season next summer for programs based on the favorite numbers of the audiences. A vote will be taken each night for several weeks, as was done this year, and the compositions receiving the highest number of votes in the total count will be used for the request week program.

This year's process was followed through to determine the program of request night, which was last Monday, June 21. The ticket office was beseiged with applicants, and nearly 2000 persons had to be turned away for lack of accommodations. In an attempt to give the disappointed patrons a chance to hear the popular program, the request night concert will be repeated next Thursday night.

PRAISE BESTOWED, CRISIS DISCUSSED, REPROOF ENDURED

FINAL CONCERT-CHRONICLE OF THE SEASON

Mr. Koussevitzky's Notable Programs for Paris—Bostonian Ear-Marks Plain Upon Them—Miss Leginska, the People's Orchestra and the New Philharmonic—Diversity or Monotony at The Pops—Efficient Retort from Symphony Hall—Weber to Be Honored

TO SYMPHONY HALL Mr. Koussevitzky sends the several programs for his concerts this spring at the Opera in Paris. The first was printed yesterday in this place. The second, to be heard this evening, stands:

Sonata in G major.....Galliard
(Arranged by M. Steinberg)
Open-Air Games.....Tailleferre
Concerto for Piano with Orchestra....Tansman
(Pianist: The Composer)
Symphony, No. 1, in C minor.....Brahms

The third, "all-Russian," announced for the evening of Thursday, June 3, lists:

Song of the Nightingale.....Stravinsky
Chout (Ballet).....Prokoviev
Preface to the Book of Life.....Oboukhov
Symphony, No. 4, in F minor.....Chaikovsky

The series will end on Saturday afternoon, June 12, with these pieces:

Symphony, No. 6, in G major ("Surprise"), Haydn
Concerto for Orchestra.....Hindemith
Symphonic Movement, "Pacific 231"..Honegger
Concerto Grosso for Strings with Piano Obbligato .....Bloch
Suite, No. 2, from the Ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe" .....Ravel

Plainly Mr. Koussevitzky is taking his courage in his hands, since here are programs sure to stir the bile of the Parisian reviewers and of French conservatives among his audiences. Both seldom hear, both dislike flatly, the symphonies of Brahms. No oftener do they listen to symphonies by Chaikovsky, and frankly despise them. The twentieth-century Italians fare not too well in Parisian concert-halls or opera houses—and Mr. Koussevitzky "presents" (on the first program) Respighi's "Pini di Roma." Worse still, he treats living German composers "like people." As yet Parisian conductors are returning gingerly to Strauss—and this Russo-Bostonian announces "Til Eulenspiegel" (on the first program) as a matter of course. To the post-war German generation he even opens arms; for the first time Paris will hear an orchestral piece by young Hindemith of Frankfort. Fortunately for Mr. Koussevitzky, his concerts assemble a cosmopolitan rather than a strictly Parisian audience. In the press, however, there are sure to be explosions. Roussel, Ravel, Honegger, may not stifle them.

Except the new Concerto by Mr. Tansman, the arrangement as tone-poem of Prokoviev's ballet of clowns, "Chout," and the prologue of the unknown Russian, Oboukhov, all the pieces proposed by Mr. Koussevitzky for Paris, were heard from his hands last season in Boston. One and another of them—the symphonies of Brahms and Chaikovsky, Stravinsky's "Song of the Nightingale," the suite from Ravel's ballet—he brought to masterly performance. Respighi's tone-poem was "the piece of the year" in American concert-halls. Mr. Copland's "Music for The Theater" admirably represents not only an individual ability, but the youngest generation of American composers. Mr. Bloch has not yet attained his international deserts. Hindemith's Concerto is modernism a l' outrance. So onward, item by item. Yet what most impresses is the catholicity of these eighteen pieces, the first program (Vivaldi, Copland, Strauss, Roussel, Respighi) included. Ancients—Vivaldi, Galliard, Haydn; a classic—Brahms; a romantic—Chaikovsky; established moderns—Strauss, Ravel, Stravinsky; ascending modernists—Tansman, Copland. Hindemith, Honegger, all have place. German, Austrian, French, English, Italian, Russian, Polish, Swiss, American, are the arrayed nationalities. Hardly before has Mr. Koussevitzky proffered the Parisians such catholic and cosmopolitan programs by two centuries bounded. The honorable tradition, the distinctive standard, of the Symphony Concerts, which prdain such free and ranging choice, have seeped in two seasons into Mr. Koussevitzky. From the second term of Mr. Gericke no conductor has escaped them. Each, rather, has established them more firmly.

Those Booked Where

AT THE POPS TONIGHT

The following program will be heard at the Pop concert in Symphony Hall tonight, under the direction of Agide Jacchia:

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "Figaro".....Mozart
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saens
Boston Square and Compass club male choir.
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Intermezzo from "Pagliacci"...Leoncavallo
Marche Slave.....Tchaikowsky
Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust"....Gounod
Afro-American folk songs.
Arranged by Jacchia
You May Bury Me in de Eas'—Musieu Banjo—Nobody Knows de Trubble I've Seen.
Waltz, "Waves of the Danube" Ivanovici
March, "Boston Commandery.....Carter

HERALD JUNE 1

Information and Reproof

On Saturday last this department (which is evidently suffering from spring restlessness and chafing, no doubt, for its summer holiday) intimated, as politely as may be, that the programs at The Pops could be more diversified and that sundry pieces recurred too often—say, Chaikovsky's "1812," or Chabrier's "Espana" or the "Blue Danube" waltz of Strauss, by the Jewish liturgical tune "Eili, Eili." The ground for the intimation was the weekly scrutiny of the programs for summary in these columns. Touched upon what proves a sensitive spot, the management at Symphony Hall forthwith opened its files and sharpened its pencil. It now reports that in the six weeks for which programs have been made—that is through Saturday, June 12—314 different pieces will have been played, college songs and the like not included. Of those pieces twenty-eight are new to the repertory of The Pops, viz.:

Albeniz—Cordoba, Op. 232.
Alfano—Selection from "Resurrection."
Amani—Orientale, Op. 7, No. 2.
Beethoven—Minuet in G.
Boellman—Chorale and Minuet Gothique, Op. 25.
Brahms—Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.
Converse—Scarecrow Sketches.
Dillon—Birds at Dawn, Op. 20.
Fiorito—Sometime.
Friml—Selection from "The Vagabond King."
Glazunov—Prelude in G-flat.
Godard—Pan from "The Magic Lantern."
Handel—La Campanella.
Levenson—Hebrew Fantasy; Russian Scherzo.
Liszt—Love-Dream.
Moszkowski—Scherzino, Op. 18; Guitarre, Op. 45.
Rakhmaninov—Serenade, Op. 3.
Ondricek—"In the Village" from Slovakian Sketches.
Romberg—Selection from "The Student Prince."
Sauer—Music-Clock.
Scott—Danse Negre; Lotus-Land.
Schumann—Suite from "Carnaval."
Chaikowsky—Suite from "The Seasons"; Humoresque.
Von Doenhoff—Preghiera.

Furthermore: ten pieces, put by at the end of previous seasons, have been taken from the shelves, viz.:

Beethoven—Overture to "The Ruins of Athens."
Brahms—Hungarian aDnce, No. 18.
Haydn—First Movement from Symphony, No. 2.
Mendelssohn—Rupeltanz.
Mozart—Larghetto for Violoncello.
Soderman—Swedish Wedding March.
Chaikovsky—Italian Caprice.
Wagner—Introduction to Act III, "Die Meistersinger"; Funeral March from "Goetterdaemmerung."
Weber—First Movement from Concerto for Clarinet.

To complete the rout, the overture, "1812," will have been played but five times in six weeks; "Espana" but four; "Eili, Eili" but three; the "Blue Danube" waltz but two. There is no resisting this barrage of titles and figures; but as The Transcript turns to flee, it soothes its discomfiture with the reflections that many of those twenty-eight additions to the repertory are lesser, rather than larger, numbers; that the revivals make an ampler showing musically; that to play the overture, "1812," any time or anywhere, except on a fete-day in Tsarist Russia, is to play it once too often. Besides, while thirty-six programs for The Pops do disclose, item by item, no small diversity, they bear also a perceptible family resemblance. Inevitable, desirable, they will say at Symphony Hall and with reason. Not for nothing are these concerts forty seasons old.

Incidents and Prospects

Weber, thrusting death away with one hand while he finished "Oberon" with the other, died in London on June 5, 1826. Many theaters and a few concert-halls in Europe will mark the hundredth anniversary; since it was Weber, above any other composer, who changed the face of opera from classic to romantic cast. Here in America orchestras and opera companies will be for the most part silent. In Boston, however, Mr. Jacchia remembers, and will seize occasion. On the program of the Pops for Saturday, June 5, stand the overtures to "Der Freischuetz" and "Oberon"; Berlioz's orchestral version of the "Invitation to the Dance"; the first division of the clarinet-concerto.

On Monday, June 7, Mr. Richard Burgin, concert-master of the Symphony Orchestra, will try his fortunes in Paris as violinist. In a concert of his own at the Salle Gaveau, with the Lamoureux Orchestra assisting, he will play the Concertos of Mendelssohn, Brahms and Prokoviev.

At the Pop Concert of Thursday, June 3, the new chorus of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, conducted by Mr. Gideon, will sing for the first time publicly in Boston. Its principal number will be Rakhmaninov's cantata, "Springtide," hitherto unheard here. H. T. P.

JUNE 3

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

Special choral numbers including the first Boston performance of Rachmaninov's cantata, "Springtide," will be a feature of the Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight. Program follows:

Overture to "Zampa".....Herold
Minuet of the Will-o'-the-Wisps..Berlioz
Fantasia, "Aida".....Verdi
a. Folk Song, "Lied fun a Feigele"
b. Psalm CL.....Lewandowski-Jacchia
(Conducted by Henry Gideon)
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Scherzino .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Ride of Valkyries.....Wagner
Springtide, Cantata.....Rachmaninov
(For baritone solo, chorus and orchestra)
(Baritone—Henry Jackson Warren)
From Cradle to Chuppe—Three Folk Songs .....Gideon-Jacchia
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

"The Boston Job"

A Naive Note from Mahler to Mengelberg

THE letters of Mahler have been collected and lately published in Vienna. Among them is a note written in 1908 to Mr. Mengelberg about "the Boston job"—that is to say, the conductorship of the Symphony Orchestra. Mahler was then in New York on the staff of the Metropolitan Opera House. Dr. Muck was ending his first term as conductor at Symphony Hall. Rumor ran that Mr. Mengelberg would be called from Amsterdam to succeed him, though the choice subsequently fell upon the inferior Mr. Fiedler. At this juncture Mahler wrote to his friend, as translated by Ernest Newman in The New York Evening Post:

> The Boston position is the finest imaginable for a musician. It is the first and highest on the whole continent. An orchestra of the first rank. Unlimited sovereign power. A social standing such as the musician cannot obtain in Europe. A public of whose keenness to learn and whose gratitude the European can form no conception. After your New York experiences you cannot have any idea of this. In New York the theater is the central point of interest, and concerts the affair only of a small minority.

TRANSCRIPT — TUES MAY 19 71

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

KOUSSEVITZKY GOES ABROAD TO SPEND SUMMER

Boston Symphony Orchestra Leader Will Return to Open Its 46th Season in October. Five Appearances Here Now Appear Assured.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the past two seasons, is on his way to Europe, where he will spend the summer. He will return to this country to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Symphony Hall, Boston, Oct. 8.

His second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was eminently successful and the closing concerts of the series in various cities were like a triumphal tour for Koussevitsky and his men. At the last Saturday night concert of the season in Boston, May 1, the audience cheered conductor and orchestra to the echo.

When the orchestra played for the last time at Infantry Hall here in March seats for the concert were sold out on the first day of the ticket sale. Funds have been subscribed to secure the Albee Theatre for five nights next season so that the orchestra may play there and so that the city will not be deprived of its infrequent opportunities to hear the famous musicians.

Final steps in the negotiations to obtain the use of the theatre had not been completed late last week, but supporters of the plan were then confident that the details could be satisfactorily arranged.

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

The Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight will have the following programme to be heard from the Pops Symphony orchestra, under Agide Jacchia:

Overture to "La Gazza Ladra".....Rossini
Valse Bluette.....Drigo
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Suite, "Peer Gynt"; (a) Morning Mood, (b) Aase's Death, (c) In the Troll King's Grotto.....Grieg
Song Without Words.....Tchaikovsky
Russian Folk Song, "Dubinushka" Arranged by Jacchia
"Finlandia," Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
...berg
...agni
...ller

b. Psalm CL.....Lewandowski-Jacchia
(Conducted by Henry Gideon)
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Scherzino .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Ride of Valkyries.....Wagner
Springtide, Cantata.....Rachmaninov
(For baritone solo, chorus and orchestra)
(Baritone—Henry Jackson Warren)
From Cradle to Chuppe—Three Folk Songs .....Gideon-Jacchia
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

PROGRAMS FOR THIS WEEK

HERALD — MAY 30

"Pops" Are Offering Varied and Interesting Numbers for Coming Week

With a holiday program tomorrow night, the "Pop" concerts in Symphony hall will open the fifth week of their 45st season. Events of the week will be the first Boston performance of Rachmaninov's Cantata "Springtide," on Thursday; annual Tech night on Friday; a Weber centennial program on Saturday, June 5, which will be exactly 100 years after the death of the German composer, and a symphonic program, now an established favorite of the Pops, for the third Sunday concert of the season, on June 6. The programs of the week follow:

MONDAY

Stars and Stripes Forever.....Sousa
Overture to "La Forza del Destino".Verdi
Prelude to "The Deluge".....Saint-Saens
(Violin solo: Julius Theodorewicz)
Fantasia "Tosca".....Puccini

AMERICA

Spanish Caprice.....Rimsky-Korsakov
Alborada—Fandango Asturiano
Dance of the Sylphs.....Berlioz
Deep River.....Burleigh-Jacchia
Ballet of the Hours from "La Gioconda" Ponchielli

THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER

Selection, "Mlle. Modiste".....Herbert
Narcissus .....Nevin
American Patrol.....Meacham

TUESDAY

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "Figaro".....Mozart
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saens
Boston Square and Compass Club Male Choir
Suite from "Platee" and "Fetes d'Hebe" Rameau-Motti
Minuet—Musette—Tambourin
Intermezzo from "Pagliacci"..Leoncavallo
Marche Slave.....Tchaikovsky
Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust".....Gounod
Afro-American Folk Songs arranged by Jacchia
You May Bury Me in de Eas'—MusieuBanjo
Nobudy Knows de Trubble I've Seen
Waltz, "Waves of the Danube"..Ivanovici
March, "Boston Commandery".....Carter

WEDNESDAY

Overture to "La Gazza Ladra"....Rossini
Valse Bluette.....Drigo
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Suite, "Peer Gynt".....Grieg
a. Morning Mood. b. Aase's Death.
c. In the Troll King's Grotto.
Song Without Words.....Tchaikovsky
Russian Folk Song, "Dubinushka"....
Arranged by Jacchia
"Finlandia," Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
Selection, "The Student Prince"..Romberg
Intermezzo from "L'Amico Fritz".Mascagni
Waltz, "Miners' Light".....Zeller

THURSDAY

Overture to "La Belle Helene"...Offenbach
Minuet of the Will-o'-the-Wisps...Berlioz
Fantasia, "Aida".....Verdi
a. Folk Song, "Lied fun a Feigele"
b. Psalm CL.....Lewandowski-Jacchia
(Conducted by Henry Gideon)
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Scherzino .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Springtide, Cantata.....Rachmaninov
(For baritone solo, chorus and orchestra)
(Baritone, Henry Jackson Warren)
From Cradle to Chuppe—Three Folk Songs .....Gideon-Jacchia
Rachem (Invocation).....Mana-Zucca
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

FRIDAY
ANNUAL TECHNOLOGY NIGHT
(Open to the Public)

SATURDAY

Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin". Wagner
Valse des Fleurs.....Tchaikovsky
Ave Maria .....Bach-Gounod
(Violin—Harp—Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana"..... Mascagni
Overture to "Der Freischutz".....
First Movement from Concert No. 1 for Clarinet.....
(Clarinet, Paul Mimart)
Invitation to the Dance.....
(Orchestrated by Berlioz)
Overture of "Oberon".....
C. M. Weber, Dec. 18, 1786-June 5, 1826
Suite, "Coppelia".....Delibes
a. Waltz of the Hours. b. Czardas
Intermezzo, Act III "Jewels of the Madonna" .....Wolf-Ferrari
Sixth Hungarian Dance.....Brahms

SUNDAY

Symphony No. 2 in D major (London), first movement: Adagio; Allegro Haydn
Overture to Goethe's "Egmont" Beethoven
Scherzo from the incidental music of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream.....Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhauser"...Wagner
Rhapsody in E-flat, op. 119.....Brahms
(Orchestrated by Agide Jacchia)

Overture, "The Roman Carnival," op. 9 Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," second movement (Largo) Dvorak
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, third movement: Scherzo; Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro.....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor" Borodin

SOME STATISTICS ON "POP" CONCERTS

A count of the pieces new and old played at the "Pops" this season reveals the following interesting statistics:

The programs played or announced for the first six weeks contain 314 different pieces, of which 28 are new to the "Pops."

In addition to these novelties, there are 10 not hitherto played in Agide Jacchia's term. The conductor has a number of new pieces of interest which are still to be played in the course of the season, and which is expected will bring the total repertory of the season to more than 400 different pieces.

Events of the fifth week of the Pops season will be a holiday program for Memorial day; special choral numbers on Thursday, June 3, which will include Rachmaninov's cantata "Springtide," to be conducted by Henry Gideon and then to be heard for the first time in Boston; Technology night on June 4 (which will be open to the public), and a Weber centennial program for Saturday, June 5, which marks to a day the 100th anniversary of the death of the great composer. Four numbers from Weber will be on this program. Sunday, June 6, will bring the third Sunday Pop concert of the season with a Symphonic program.

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

TRANSCRIPT — MAY 29

Programs for Another Week—Honors for Weber, a New Jewish Choir, for the First Time a Charleston — Mr. Cherkassy Substitute Conductor

THE HOLIDAY of Monday first diversifies the course of The Pops through the fifth week of the current season. It brings the usual patriotic airs and this and that piece from American composers. There is room also for operatic Verdi and Rimsky-Korsakov a l'Espagnole. On Tuesday, partsongs by the men's choir of the Square and Compass Club will lend variety; while the program also arrays numbers from Mozart, Saint-Saens and Chaikovsky. On Wednesday Mr. Jacchia begins with an overture to an elder Italian opera—Rossini's for "La Gazza Ladra." Nowhere but at The Pops may these pieces in true form be heard nowadays in Boston. On Thursday the new chorus of the Young Men's Hebrew Association will sing for the first time in public. Mr. Gideon leads it; Mr. Warren, the baritone, will assist it; their piece is Rakhmaninov's cantata, "Springtide." The program is also the better for Offenbach's overture to "La Belle Helene."

On Friday, by exception, Mr. Jacchia will take a holiday, with Mr. Cherkassy of the string choir for substitute. In Russia he gained experience in such work. One of his numbers is the upswinging March Movement from Chaikovsky's "Pathetic Sympathy." Friday also is the night of the Institute of Technology To mark the occasion one of the students will "do a Charleston" probably for the first time—balls aside—in Symphony Hall. Saturday the anniversary of Weber's death a hundred years ago in London brings four of his pieces: the overtures to "Der Freischuetz" and to "Oberon"—first and last of his surviving operas; Berlioz's orchestral arrangement of "The Invitation to the Dance," originally piano-piece; the first movement of a concerto for clarinet, or Weber as virtuoso composer. For the concert of Sunday week, June 6, Mr. Jacchia will assemble the symphonic fragments of the current repertory: Finale of Chaikovsky, Allegro of Haydn, Largo of Dvorak. Around them stand Beethoven's overture, "Egmont"; Berlioz's overture, "Roman Carnival"; the Bacchanel from "Tannhauser," the Tartar dances from "Prince Igor." Even Brahms looks in.

Post — MAY 29

Intercollegiate Night Features Pops Concert

Graduates of 29 American colleges whose delegates are visiting Boston for the Intercollegiate track meet at Harvard today may listen in on Intercollegiate night at the Pops through WEEI. This arrangement has just been completed, according to an announcement yesterday.

The management at Symphony Hall, co-operating with William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, and Stanley deJ. Osborne, manager of the Harvard Athletic Association, have placed a table at the disposal of each of the 29 competing colleges. This invitation has been accepted officially for the colleges by Mr. Osborne.

The radio audience will be given an opportunity to listen in on this special programme through the kindness of Mr. W. S. Quinby. A special popular programme will be given during this concert, and many college songs and marches of the principal colleges will also be added by Agide Jacchia, the Pops conductor.

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

After the intercollegiate track meet, the guests and athletes from 29 colleges will assemble at the Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight, where they will be honored by special numbers, including the songs of the principal colleges, which will be performed by the orchestra.

The revised program follows:

March, "Maine to California".....Sousa
Overture to 'Pique Dame".....Suppe
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube" Strauss
Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
Procession of Bacchus.....Delibes
Violin solos:
(a) Lotus Land.....Scott-Kreisler
(b) Rondo .....Mozart-Kreisler
Julius Theodorowicz.
Bolero .....Moszkovski
Overture to "Tannhauser".....Wagner
Selection, "Tales of Hofman".....Offenbach
Serenade .....Rachmaninov
Waltz, "Estudiantina".....Waldteufel

TRAVELER — MAY 29

PLAN "POPS" REQUEST WEEK NEXT SEASON

The management of the Symphony Hall Pops concerts has announced that it is considering the inauguration next year of a request week, so great has been the public interest in the request night idea instituted this season.

If the plans now under consideration are adopted, an entire week will be set aside during the latter part of the season next summer for programs based on the favorite numbers of the audiences. A vote will be taken each night for several weeks, as was done this year, and the compositions receiving the highest number of votes in the total count will be used for the request week program.

This year's process was followed through to determine the program of request night, which was last Monday, June 21. The ticket office was beseiged with applicants, and nearly 2000 persons had to be turned away for lack of accommodations. In an attempt to give the disappointed patrons a chance to hear the popular program, the request night concert will be repeated next Thursday night.

PRAISE BESTOWED, CRISIS DISCUSSED, REPROOF ENDURED

FINAL CONCERT-CHRONICLE OF THE SEASON

Mr. Koussevitzky's Notable Programs for Paris—Bostonian Ear-Marks Plain Upon Them—Miss Leginska, the People's Orchestra and the New Philharmonic—Diversity or Monotony at The Pops—Efficient Retort from Symphony Hall—Weber to Be Honored

TO SYMPHONY HALL Mr. Koussevitzky sends the several programs for his concerts this spring at the Opera in Paris. The first was printed yesterday in this place. The second, to be heard this evening, stands:

Sonata in G major.....Galliard
(Arranged by M. Steinberg)
Open-Air Games.....Tailleferre
Concerto for Piano with Orchestra....Tansman
(Pianist: The Composer)
Symphony, No. 1, in C minor.....Brahms

The third, "all-Russian," announced for the evening of Thursday, June 3, lists:

Song of the Nightingale.....Stravinsky
Chout (Ballet).....Prokoviev
Preface to the Book of Life.....Oboukhov
Symphony, No. 4, in F minor.....Chaikovsky

The series will end on Saturday afternoon, June 12, with these pieces:

Symphony, No. 6, in G major ("Surprise"), Haydn
Concerto for Orchestra.....Hindemith
Symphonic Movement, "Pacific, 231"..Honegger
Concerto Grosso for Strings with Piano Obbligato .....Bloch
Suite, No. 2, from the Ballet, "Daphnis and Chloe" .....Ravel

Plainly Mr. Koussevitzky is taking his courage in his hands, since here are programs sure to stir the bile of the Parisian reviewers and of French conservatives among his audiences. Both seldom hear, both dislike flatly, the symphonies of Brahms. No oftener do they listen to symphonies by Chaikovsky, and frankly despise them. The twentieth-century Italians fare not too well in Parisian concert-halls or opera houses—and Mr. Koussevitzky "presents" (on the first program) Respighi's "Pini di Roma." Worse still, he treats living German composers "like people." As yet Parisian conductors are returning gingerly to Strauss—and this Russo-Bostonian announces "Til Eulenspiegel" (on the first program) as a matter of course. To the post-war German generation he even opens arms; for the first time Paris will hear an orchestral piece by young Hindemith of Frankfort. Fortunately for Mr. Koussevitzky, his concerts assemble a cosmopolitan rather than a strictly Parisian audience. In the press, however, there are sure to be explosions. Roussel, Ravel, Honegger, may not stifle them.

Except the new Concerto by Mr. Tansman, the arrangement as tone-poem of Prokoviev's ballet of clowns, "Chout," and the prologue of the unknown Russian, Oboukhov, all the pieces proposed by Mr. Koussevitzky for Paris, were heard from his hands last season in Boston. One and another of them—the symphonies of Brahms and Chaikovsky, Stravinsky's "Song of the Nightingale," the suite from Ravel's ballet—he brought to masterly performance. Respighi's tone-poem was "the piece of the year" in American concert-halls. Mr. Copland's "Music for The Theater" admirably represents not only an individual ability, but the youngest generation of American composers. Mr. Bloch has not yet attained his international deserts. Hindemith's Concerto is modernism a l' outrance. So onward, item by item. Yet what most impresses is the catholicity of these eighteen pieces, the first program (Vivaldi, Copland, Strauss, Roussel, Respighi) included. Ancients—Vivaldi, Galliard, Haydn; a classic—Brahms; a romantic—Chaikovsky; established moderns—Strauss, Ravel, Stravinsky; ascending modernists—Tansman, Copland, Hindemith, Honegger, all have place. German, Austrian, French, English, Italian, Russian, Polish, Swiss, American, are the arrayed nationalities. Hardly before has Mr. Koussevitzky proffered the Parisians such catholic and cosmopolitan programs by two centuries bounded. The honorable tradition, the distinctive standard, of the Symphony Concerts, which ordain such free and ranging choice, have seeped in two seasons into Mr. Koussevitzky. From the second term of Mr. Gericke no conductor has escaped them. Each, rather, has established them more firmly.

Those Received Warm

AT THE POPS TONIGHT

The following program will be heard at the Pop concert in Symphony Hall tonight, under the direction of Agide Jacchia:

Cortege from "The Queen of Sheba" Gounod
Overture to "Figaro".....Mozart
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saens
Boston Square and Compass club male choir.
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Intermezzo from "Pagliacci...Leoncavallo
Marche Slave.....Tchaikowsky
Soldiers' Chorus from "Faust"....Gounod
Afro-American folk songs.
Arranged by Jacchia
You May Bury Me in de Eas'—Musieu Banjo—Nobody Knows de Trubble I've Seen.
Waltz, "Waves of the Danube" Ivanovici
March, "Boston Commandery.....Carter

HERALD — JUNE 1

Information and Reproof

On Saturday last this department (which is evidently suffering from spring restlessness and chafing, no doubt, for its summer holiday) intimated, as politely as may be, that the programs at The Pops could be more diversified and that sundry pieces recurred too often—say, Chaikovsky's "1812," or Chabrier's "Espana" or the "Blue Danube" waltz of Strauss, by the Jewish liturgical tune "Eili, Eili." The ground for the intimation was the weekly scrutiny of the programs for summary in these columns. Touched upon what proves a sensitive spot, the management at Symphony Hall forthwith opened its files and sharpened its pencil. It now reports that in the six weeks for which programs have been made—that is through Saturday, June 12—314 different pieces will have been played, college songs and the like not included. Of those pieces twenty-eight are new to the repertory of The Pops, viz.:

Albeniz—Cordoba, Op. 232.
Alfano—Selection from "Resurrection."
Amani—Orientale, Op. 7, No. 2.
Beethoven—Minuet in G.
Boellman—Chorale and Minuet Gothique, Op. 25.
Brahms—Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.
Converse—Scarecrow Sketches.
Dillon—Birds at Dawn, Op. 20.
Fiorito—Sometime.
Friml—Selection from "The Vagabond King."
Glazunov—Prelude in G-flat.
Godard—Pan from "The Magic Lantern."
Handel—La Campanella.
Levenson—Hebrew Fantasy; Russian Scherzo.
Liszt—Love-Dream.
Moszkowski—Scherzino, Op. 18; Guitarre, Op. 45.
Rakhmaninov—Serenade, Op. 3.
Ondricek—"In the Village" from Slovakian Sketches.
Romberg—Selection from "The Student Prince."
Sauer—Music-Clock.
Scott—Danse Negre; Lotus-Land.
Schumann—Suite from "Carnaval."
Chaikowsky—Suite from "The Seasons"; Humoresque.
Von Doenhoff—Preghiera.

Furthermore: ten pieces, put by at the end of previous seasons, have been taken from the shelves, viz.:

Beethoven—Overture to "The Ruins of Athens."
Brahms—Hungarian aDnce, No. 18.
Haydn—First Movement from Symphony, No. 2.
Mendelssohn—Rupeltanz.
Mozart—Larghetto for Violoncello.
Soderman—Swedish Wedding March.
Chaikovsky—Italian Caprice.
Wagner—Introduction to Act III, "Die Meistersinger"; Funeral March from "Goetterdaemmerung."
Weber—First Movement from Concerto for Clarinet.

To complete the rout, the overture, "1812," will have been played but five times in six weeks; "Espana" but four; "Eili, Eili" but three; the "Blue Danube" waltz but two. There is no resisting this barrage of titles and figures; but as The Transcript turns to flee, it soothes its discomfiture with the reflections that many of those twenty-eight additions to the repertory are lesser, rather than larger, numbers; that the revivals make an ampler showing musically; that to play the overture, "1812," any time or anywhere, except on a fete-day in Tsarist Russia, is to play it once too often. Besides, while thirty-six programs for The Pops do disclose, item by item, no small diversity, they bear also a perceptible family resemblance. Inevitable, desirable, they will say at Symphony Hall and with reason. Not for nothing are these concerts forty seasons old.

Incidents and Prospects

'Weber, thrusting death away with one hand while he finished "Oberon" with the other, died in London on June 5, 1826. Many theaters and a few concert-halls in Europe will mark the hundredth anniversary; since it was Weber, above any other composer, who changed the face of opera from classic to romantic cast. Here in America orchestras and opera companies will be for the most part silent. In Boston, however, Mr. Jacchia remembers, and will seize occasion. On the program of the Pops for Saturday, June 5, stand the overtures to "Der Freischuetz" and "Oberon"; Berlioz's orchestral version of the "Invitation to the Dance"; the first division of the clarinet-concerto.

On Monday, June 7, Mr. Richard Burgin, concert-master of the Symphony Orchestra, will try his fortunes in Paris as violinist. In a concert of his own at the Salle Gaveau, with the Lamoureux Orchestra assisting, he will play the Concertos of Mendelssohn, Brahms and Prokoviev.

At the Pop Concert of Thursday, June 3, the new chorus of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, conducted by Mr. Gideon, will sing for the first time publicly in Boston. Its principal number will be Rakhmaninov's cantata, "Springtide," hitherto unheard here. H. T. P.

Illinois Power & L
First & Refunding
Due Decem
This Corporation render

"The Boston Job"

A Naive Note from Mahler to Mengelberg

THE letters of Mahler have been collected and lately published in Vienna. Among them is a note written in 1908 to Mr. Mengelberg about "the Boston job"—that is to say, the conductorship of the Symphony Orchestra. Mahler was then in New York on the staff of the Metropolitan Opera House. Dr. Muck was ending his first term as conductor at Symphony Hall. Rumor ran that Mr. Mengelberg would be called from Amsterdam to succeed him, though the choice subsequently fell upon the inferior Mr. Fiedler. At this juncture Mahler wrote to his friend, as translated by Ernest Newman in The New York Evening Post:

> The Boston position is the finest imaginable for a musician. It is the first and highest on the whole continent. An orchestra of the first rank. Unlimited sovereign power. A social standing such as the musician cannot obtain in Europe. A public of whose keenness to learn and whose gratitude the European can form no conception. After your New York experiences you cannot have any idea of this. In New York the theater is the central point of interest, and concerts the affair only of a small minority.

TRANSCRIPT — TUES MAY 19th

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

KOUSSEVITZKY GOES ABROAD TO SPEND SUMMER

Boston Symphony Orchestra Leader Will Return to Open Its 46th Season in October. Five Appearances Here Now Appear Assured.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the past two seasons, is on his way to Europe, where he will spend the summer. He will return to this country to open the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Symphony Hall, Boston, Oct. 8.

His second season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was eminently successful and the closing concerts of the series in various cities were like a triumphal tour for Koussevitsky and his men. At the last Saturday night concert of the season in Boston, May 1, the audience cheered conductor and orchestra to the echo.

When the orchestra played for the last time at Infantry Hall here in March seats for the concert were sold out on the first day of the ticket sale. Funds have been subscribed to secure the Albee Theatre for five nights next season so that the orchestra may play there and so that the city will not be deprived of its infrequent opportunities to hear the famous musicians.

Final steps in the negotiations to obtain the use of the theatre had not been completed late last week, but supporters of the plan were then confident that the details could be satisfactorily arranged.

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

The Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight will have the following programme to be heard from the Pops Symphony orchestra, under Agide Jacchia:

Overture to "La Gazza Ladra".....Rossini
Valse Bluette.....Drigo
Orientale .....Amani-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
Suite, "Peer Gynt"; (a) Morning Mood, (b) Aase's Death, (c) In the Troll King's Grotto.....Grieg
Song Without Words.....Tchaikovsky
Russian Folk Song, "Dubinushka" Arranged by Jacchia
"Finlandia," Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
Selection, "The Student Prince"..Romberg
Intermezzo from "L'Amico Fritz" Mascagni
Waltz, "Miners' Lights".....Zeller

HERALD — JUNE 2

Wed May 26 AT POPS The Tech

WHEN the Corporation arranged to have Arthur Whiting give a series of concerts at the Institute this spring there was doubt in many minds as to whether the experiment would pay—whether a sufficient number of M. I. T. students were interestd in music to make such a series of concerts worth while. The result may be considered to have justified the experiment; while the auditorium was not overcrowded, there was a rather large attendance.

For those who are really fond of good music, those concerts were enjoyable but scarcely satisfying. They were given an opportunity to hear chamber music, but of course it was impossible to present symphonic music in room 10-250.

In Boston there is an opportunity to hear symphonic music played by one of the ablest groups of musicians in America. The Pops concerts are programs of popular classics played by an orchestra made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of the head of the foremost music school in the United States. (Agide Jacchia of the New England Conservatory of Music).

The concerts are given every night, and the public is admitted even on the "special" nights. Admission charges are low. And the music is always good and the execution always admirable. Then too, we have our own "Tech Night at Pops" next week. It is under the auspices of the Senior Week Committee but it should draw a representative attendance from the rest of the undergraduate body.

Globe Pops JUNE 2

Mary G., Jamaica Plain—The usual explanation given for the name of the "Pops" is that it is the abbreviation of popular. The players are members of the Symphony orchestra. The symphony season closes early and in order to give the men employment a series of concerts at popular prices and playing popular music was instituted. They were advertised as Popular Concerts, which speedily became shortened to Pops.

TECH NIGHT AT POPS

The Institute of Technology will have its annual Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight. This concert, which is open to the public, will be conducted by Paul Cherkassky. Program:

Prelude to "Carmen".....Bizet
Waltz, "Vienna Blood".....Strauss
Overture to "Rienzi".....Wagner
Technology Melodies
Finale of "Scheherazade"
Rimsky-Korsakov
Volga Bargemen's Song
Arranged by Jacchia
Third movement from the "Pathetic" Symphony .....Tchaikovsky
Charleston Specialty..C. E. Richheimer '28
Medley, "Too Many Brothers"
Tech Show 1926
Ave Maria.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo violin, harp, organ and strings)
First Hungarian Dance.....Brahms
A Stein song

Herald JUNE 4

PAUL CHERKASSKY CONDUCTS A POPS

Paul Cherkassky, Russian violinist and conductor, made his American debut in the latter capacity last night at the Pops. Mr Cherkassky, already known here as a solo violinist, and since 1923 a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has had considerable experience as a conductor in Russia and Finland.

He showed last night that he has ideas about music and some ability at getting a large group of players to follow them. It is fortunate to have in the orchestra someone so obviously able to take Mr Jacchia's place if need be.

Last night was "Technology Night," though the general public was largely represented in the audience. College songs, Tech cheers, confetti throwing, and a medley from this year's "Tech Show," seen at the Boston Opera House in April, diversified the evening. O. B. Denison, prominent in M. I. T. alumni activities, was pianist and cheer leader. The class banner of 1926 was presented to David Shepard, president of the senior class. The announced "Charleston specialty" was omitted, because the dancer, C. E. Richheimer, '28, has sprained his ankle.

The "Stein Song," of course, ended the program. Tech has not yet adopted an anthem more suited to this age of Volstead and anti-Volstead. It is doubtful if one with words and music of equal artistic value could be had.

Mr Cherkassky's dramatic sense was shown in Wagner's "Rienzi" overture. One was grateful to him for avoiding the excessive sentimentality that too often mars performances of Schubert's "Ave Maria." One especially liked his vivid and personal readings of the Volga Bargemen's Song and of the third movement of Tchaikovsky's "Pathetic Symphony."

His catholicity of taste was proved by performances of Irving Berlin's "Always" and of Meacham's "American Patrol." Nor should an excellent performance, as Pops performances go, of the finale from "Scheherazade," be overlooked.

Last night's tryout, for it was so intended, proved Mr Cherkassky a conductor of parts, able to improve such opportunities as may be granted him. One would be interested to hear him again.

P. R.

Globe JUNE 5

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

Transcript JUNE 5

The Usual Course with Pleasing Variations — A Symphonic Sunday — Novel Numbers from Mr. Converse—Chaikovsky's Music for "The Months"

THE NEW WEEK at the Pops begins on Sunday evening with a "symphonic program" before an audience that must be content to look and listen as at any other concert. From Haydn's Symphony in D major comes an Introduction and Allegro; from Dvorak's "New World" Symphony the familiar Largo; from Chaikovsky's Fourth Symphony the Scherzo for plucked strings. Symphonic music as well are Beethoven's Overture to "Egmont" and Berlioz's Overture, "Roman Carnival." Symphonic music of the theater are the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's accompaniment to "A Mid-summer Night's Dream," the Tartar Dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor," the Venusberg music from "Tannhauser."

To more usual courses the concerts will return on Monday when the Boston College Quartet will be heard in songs and other pieces pleasing to remembering alumni. From the "Slovakian Sketches" of Mr. Ondricek a Village-Dance will also be played. On Tuesday, when the Daughters of Zion have taken the whole house, the concert will be closed to the public. On Wednesday, for experiment, Mr. Jacchia will play in succession the three entr'actes from "Carmen," fine-grained or highly-colored music. On the same evening, he will also add to the repertory two numbers—"Romance" and "Witch Dance"—from Mr. Converse's music to Percy Mackaye's filmed play of Colonial New England, "The Scarecrow." The program for Thursday favors familiar courses. Dances from an eighteenth-century opera by Gretry flavor the I.s. to Friday; while on Saturday, the conductor will proffer a genuine novelty. In his earlier years Chaikovsky wrote twelve piano-pieces, half-technical and half-moody; named them "The Months"; subtitled them accordingly. Mr. Jacchia has lately scored three for orchestra: April, "Snowdrops"; June, "Barcarolle"; November, "Troika." Now he will try them, as the word goes, upon an audience. So much for the sixth week of the series—the institutional Pops with variations.

Koussevitzky Opens New Paris Concerts

Adv

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has opened the first of his new concerts in Paris with practically the same orchestra which served to make him famous in the French capital before he came to the Hub.

Koussevitzky shared honors with the young New York composer, Aaron Copland, whose "Music for the Theatre," first heard at a Boston Symphony concert last season, was the outstanding novelty on the program. Copland was called to the stage to respond to the applause.

THE POPS TONIGHT

Entrance of the Gladiators.....Fucik
Overture, "L'Italiana in Algeri".....Rossini
Entr'acte Valse.....Hellmesberger
Fantasia, "Othello".....Verdi
Suite, "Coppelia".....Delibes
Hopak, from "Fair of Sorochinsk"
Moussorgsky
The Lark.....Glinka-Jacchia
(Solo Violin: Julius Theodorowics)
Capriccio Espagnol.....Rimsky-Korsakov
Selection, "Rose Marie".....Friml-Stothart
Waltz, "La Barcarolle".....Waldteufel
Bacchanale, from "Philemon and Baucis".....Gounod
Conductor, Agide Jacchia.

MUSIC

Monitor JUNE 7

Symphonic Night at Pops

The third Sunday concert of the Symphony Hall Pops, season was given last night with a "cymphonic program" which traversed the first movement of Haydn's "London" Symphony in D, Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture, the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" music, the Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," Brahm's E flat Rhapsody, Berlioz's "Roman Carnival" Overture, the Largo from the "New World" Symphony, the Pizzicato movement from Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, and the Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor." It was interesting to observe again that the better music calls out greater efforts on the part of the performers. The Haydn and Beethoven items were particularly well interpreted last night.

All the concerts of this week are open to the public except that of tomorrow evening, for which the entire house has been taken by the Daughters of Zion.

The fourth Sunday concert is scheduled for June 20, with a program of Russian music.

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

Tonight's program at the Pops in Symphony hall will celebrate the centennial of the death of Weber, with special numbers by this composer, while the program for tomorrow, at which the third Sunday concert of the season will be played, will consist of symphonic music. Program follows:

Introduction to Act III "Lohengrin"
Wagner
Valse des Fleurs.....Tchaikovsky
Ave Maria.....Bach-Gounod
(Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana"
Mascagni
Overture to "Der Freischutz", first movement from Concerto No. 1 for Clarinet (clarinet, Paul Mimart) Invitation to the Dance (orchestrated by Berlioz), Overture to "Oberon."
C. M. Weber, Dec. 18, 1786, June 5, 1826
Suite, "Coppelia"; a, Waltz of the Hours; b, Czardas.....Delibes
Intermezzo, Act III "Jewels of the Madonna".....Wolf-Ferrari
Sixth Hungarian Dance.....Brahms

Times JUNE 5 Herald

PAUL CHERKASSKY CONDUCTS A POPS

Paul Cherkassky, Russian violinist and conductor, made his American debut in the latter capacity last night at the Pops. Mr Cherkassky, already known here as a solo violinist, and since 1923 a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has had considerable experience as a conductor in Russia and Finland.

He showed last night that he has ideas about music and some ability at getting a large group of players to follow them. It is fortunate to have in the orchestra someone so obviously able to take Mr Jacchia's place if need be.

Last night was "Technology Night," though the general public was largely represented in the audience. College songs, Tech cheers, confetti throwing, and a medley from this year's "Tech Show," seen at the Boston Opera House in April, diversified the evening. O. B. Denison, prominent in M. I. T. alumni activities, was pianist and cheer leader. The class banner of 1926 was presented to David Shepard, president of the senior class. The announced "Charleston specialty" was omitted, because the dancer, C. E. Richheimer, '28, has sprained his ankle.

Mr Cherkassky's dramatic sense was shown in Wagner's "Rienzi" overture. One was grateful to him for avoiding the excessive sentimentality that too often mars performances of Schubert's "Ave Maria." One especially liked his vivid and personal readings of the Volga Bargemen's Song and of the third movement of Tchaikovsky's "Pathetic Symphony."

His catholicity of taste was proved by performances of Irving Berlin's "Always" and of Meacham's "American Patrol." Nor should an excellent performance, as Pops performances go, of the finale from "Scheherazade," be overlooked.

Last night's tryout, for it was so intended, proved Mr Cherkassky a conductor of parts, able to improve such opportunities as may be granted him. One would be interested to hear him again.

P. R.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
JUN 6 1926

KOUSSEVITZKY IN PARIS.

The first of the annual Spring series of the Concerts Koussevitzky took place at the Paris Opéra House May 22. Serge Koussevitzky conducted his own orchestra, introducing Aaron Copland's "Music for the Theatre." The young composer was warmly applauded by a packed audience.

CHERKASSKY AT HEAD OF POPS

Post June 5 26

Violinist Proves His Mastery of Conductor's Art

BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Affording Mr. Jacchia a well-earned respite from his nightly duties, Paul Cherkassky, of the first violin section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted last evening's Pop concert, incidentally, making his first public appearance in this country as orchestral director. But Mr. Cherkassky, who came to our orchestra from his native Russia in 1923, is by no means a novice at conducting. In the opera house of Petrograd he served both as concert master and as conductor, and he has practiced the art of the baton in the theatres of Pskov and Seratov and in Helsingfors, Finland, whither, by the way, he is bound for more conducting this summer.

Youthful of aspect, slender, tall and straight, Mr. Cherkassky conducts as one thoroughly at home upon the podium. His motions of arms and body are graceful and unforced, informing, yet free from extravagance. And last evening his orchestra gave him generous and dependable support. The first measures of the Prelude to "Carmen" with which the concert began, disclosed Mr. Cherkassky's fine rhythmic sense, while Strauss' "Vienna Blood" which followed had the true verve and swing of the Viennese waltz.

Turning to the "Rienzi" Overature Mr. Cherkassky proved that he could shape and sustain a broad melodic line, and he "set off" admirably Wagner's dramatic strokes.

As it chanced, last evening was Technology Night, and as the concert wore on it became increasingly difficult to pay proper heed to the orchestra; for although there was no boisterousness, there was a growing undertone of conversation. Nevertheless, it could be observed that Mr. Cherkassky and the orchestra were acquitting themselves well in the Finale of Rimsky's "Scheherazade" and in the third movement of Tchaikovsky's "Pathetic" Symphiny. And for once at a Pop concert the Song of the Volga Boatmen suggested not a funeral dirge but a sailors' chantey.

Jones. Times June 6

KOUSSEVITZKY IN PARIS.

The first of the annual Spring series of the Concerts Koussevitzky took place at the Paris Opéra House May 22. Serge Koussevitzky conducted his own orchestra, introducing Aaron Copland's "Music for the Theatre." The young composer was warmly applauded by a packed audience.

CHERKASSKY AT HEAD OF POPS

Post JUNE 5

Violinist Proves His Mastery of Conductor's Art

BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Affording Mr. Jacchia a well-earned respite from his nightly duties, Paul Cherkassky, of the first violin section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted last evening's Pop concert, incidentally, making his first public appearance in this country as orchestral director. But Mr. Cherkassky, who came to our orchestra from his native Russia in 1923, is by no means a novice at conducting. In the opera house of Petrograd he served both as concert master and as conductor, and he has practiced the art of the baton in the theatres of Pskov and Seratov and in Helsingfors, Finland, whither, by the way, he is bound for more conducting this summer.

Youthful of aspect, slender, tall and straight, Mr. Cherkassky conducts as one thoroughly at home upon the podium. His motions of arms and body are graceful and unforced, informing, yet free from extravagance. And last evening his orchestra gave him generous and dependable support. The first measures of the Prelude to "Carmen" with which the concert began, disclosed Mr. Cherkassky's fine rhythmic sense, while Strauss' "Vienna Blood" which followed had the true verve and swing of the Viennese waltz.

Turning to the "Rienzi" Overature Mr. Cherkassky proved that he could shape and sustain a broad melodic line, and he "set off" admirably Wagner's dramatic strokes.

As it chanced, last evening was Technology Night, and as the concert wore on it became increasingly difficult to pay proper heed to the orchestra; for although there was no boisterousness, there was a growing undertone of conversation. Nevertheless, it could be observed that Mr. Cherkassky and the orchestra were acquitting themselves well in the Finale of Rimsky's "Scheherazade" and in the third movement of Tchaikovsky's "Pathetic" Symphiny. And for once at a Pop concert the Song of the Volga Boatmen suggested not a funeral dirge but a sailors' chantey.

CLASSIC PROGRAM AT POPS TONIGHT

Classic symphonic numbers with a popular appeal will comprise the program to be given at the third Sunday Pop concert of the season in Symphony Hall tonight. The program follows:

Symphony No. 2 in D major (London) First Movement: Adagio, Allegro
Haydn
Overture to Goethe's "Egmont"..Beethoven
Scherzo from the incidental music to Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream".....Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhauser".....Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.....Brahms
(Orchestrated by Agide Jacchia.)
Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Op. 9
Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," second movement (Largo)
Dvorak
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, third movement: Scherzo; Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro.....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor"
Borodin

Advertiser JUNE 6

CHERKASSKY AT HEAD OF POPS

Monitor Week-End JUNE 5 Concerts

TONIGHT

Weber Centennial Program

Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
"Valse des Fleurs"....Tchaikovsky
"Ave Maria".....Bach-Gounod
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni
Overture to "Der Freischütz"
First Movement from Concerto No. 1 for Clarinet (Clarinet: Paul Mimart)
"Invitation to the Dance" (Orchestrated by Berlioz)
Overture to "Oberon"
C. M. Weber Dec. 18, 1786–June 5, 1826
Suite, "Coppélia".....Delibes
Intermezzo, Act III, "Jewels of the Madonna".....Wolf-Ferrari
Sixth Hungarian Dance....Brahms

SUNDAY EVENING

Symphonic Program

Symphony No. 2 in D major ("London"), First Movement: Adagio; Allegro.....Haydn
Overture to Goethe's "Egmont," Beethoven
Scherzo from the Incidental Music to Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream".....Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.Brahms
Overture to "The Roman Carnival," Op. .....Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," Second Movement (Largo).....Dvořák
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Third Movement: Scherzo, Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro.....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor".....Borodin

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of the Zionists

Wedding March.....Mendelssohn
Kammenoi Ostrow.....Rubinstein
Bacchanale from "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saëns
Songs by Cantor Isadore Adelsman
Volga Bargeman's Song
Kalinka.....Arr. by Jacchia
Kol Nidrei
Overture, "1812".....Chaikovsky
Songs by Cantor Isadore Adelsman
Suite from "Shulamith" Goldfaden-Jacchia
Barcarolle from "The Tales of Hoffman".....Offenbach
Coronation March from "The Prophet" Meyerbeer

Conductor: A. Jacchia

[Contrary to previous announcement, a few seats for this concert will be available to the general public.]

Transcript JUNE 8

PROGRAM FOR POPS TONIGHT

Traveler JUNE 10

Agide Jacchia announces the following program for the Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight:

Overture to "The Magic Flute"...Mozart
Waltz, "Dornroeschen" (Briar Rose) Tchaikovsky
Carry Me Back to Old Virginny Bland-Jacchia
Fantasia, "L'Oracolo".....Leoni
Rhapsody, "Espana".....Chabrier
Harp solo: Prelude.....Kovarovic
(Alfred Holy)
Polish Dance.....Scharwenka
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris"...Mascagni
Night Dawn Sunrise
Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg".....Wagner
Sizilietta.....Blon
March, "Lorraine".....Ganne

Boston Symphony Season.

Announcement comes from the management of the Boston Symphony orchestra of an unusually large response from the Providence subscribers in their renewals for next season. It is further stated that the superiority to Infantry Hall in seating capacity and convenience of the E. F. Albee Theatre, in which these concerts are to be given, makes it possible to offer good seats at all prices to prospective new subscribers. Any who are interested are invited to apply for detailed information to W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony Hall, Boston. Payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn.

Times THE PAWTUCKET June 12

The engagement of the Albee Theatre comes as a gratifying solution to the problem raised by the demolishing of Infantry Hall, which has housed the Boston Symphony in Providence for many years. This use of the Albee Theatre was made possible through the generous activities of a numbre of Providence citizens, which gives eloquent evidence of the public support of Providence to New England's great orchestra.

Koussevitzky is now in Europe conducting with much success his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. After resting for the remainder of the summer, he will return to America in the autumn to open the Boston Symphony season in Boston next October. The Providence concerts will be given on the following five Tuesday evenings: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

PROGRAM FOR POPS TONIGHT

The Pops Symphony Orchestra, under Agide Jacchia's direction, will be heard in the following program in Symphony hall tonight:

Marche Militaire.....Schubert
Overture to "The Sicilian Vespers" Verdi
Largo.....Handel
(Solo violin, harp, organ and strings)
Fantasia, "The Tales of Hoffmann" Offenbach
"Cephale et Procris" Tambourin Gipue.....Gretry-Mottl
Loin du Ball.....Gillet
Love Dream.....Liszt-Herbert
Overture to "Tannhauser".....Wagner
Hungarian March.....Berlioz
Intermezzo from "Naila".....Delibes
Procession of the Sardar Ippolitov-Ivanov

Traveler June 14

Wed May 26 AT POPS The Tech

WHEN the Corporation arranged to have Arthur Whiting give a series of concerts at the Institute this spring there was doubt in many minds as to whether the experiment would pay—whether a sufficient number of M. I. T. students were interestd in music to make such a series of concerts worth while. The result may be considered to have justified the experiment; while the auditorium was not overcrowded, there was a rather large attendance.

For those who are really fond of good music, those concerts were enjoyable but scarcely satisfying. They were given an opportunity to hear chamber music, but of course it was impossible to present symphonic music in roor 10-250.

In Boston there is an opportunity to hear symphonic music played by one of the ablest groups of musicians in America. The Pops concerts are programs of popular classics played by an orchestra made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of the head of the foremost music school in the United States. (Agide Jacchia of the New England Conservatory of Music).

The concerts are given every night, and the public is admitted even on the "special" nights. Admission charges are low. And the music is always good and the execution always admirable. Then too, we have our own "Tech Night at Pops" next week. It is under the auspices of the Senior Week Committee but it should draw a representative attendance from the rest of the undergraduate body.

Globe Pops JUNE 2

Mary G., Jamaica Plain—The usual explanation given for the name of the "Pops" is that it is the abbreviation of popular. The players are members of the Symphony orchestra. The symphony season closes early and in order to give the men employment a series of concerts at popular prices and playing popular music was instituted. They were advertised as Popular Concerts, which speedily became shortened to Pops.

TECH NIGHT AT POPS

The Institute of Technology will have its annual Pop concert in Symphony hall tonight. This concert, which is open to the public, will be conducted by Paul Cherkassky. Program:

Prelude to "Carmen".....Bizet
Waltz, "Vienna Blood".....Strauss
Overture to "Rienzi".....Wagner
Technology Melodies
Finale of "Scheherazade"
Rimsky-Korsakov
Volga Bargemen's Song
Arranged by Jacchia
Third movement from the "Pathetic" Symphony .....Tchaikovsky
Charleston Specialty..C. E. Richheimer '28
Medley, "Too Many Brothers"
Tech Show 1926
Ave Maria.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo violin, harp, organ and strings)
First Hungarian Dance.....Brahms
A Stein song.

HERALD JUNE 4

PAUL CHERKASSKY CONDUCTS A POPS

Paul Cherkassky, Russian violinist and conductor, made his American debut in the latter capacity last night at the Pops. Mr Cherkassky, already known here as a solo violinist, and since 1923 a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has had considerable experience as a conductor in Russia and Finland.

He showed last night that he has ideas about music and some ability at getting a large group of players to follow them. It is fortunate to have in the orchestra someone so obviously able to take Mr Jacchia's place if need be.

Last night was "Technology Night," though the general public was largely represented in the audience. College songs, Tech cheers, confetti throwing, and a medley from this year's "Tech Show," seen at the Boston Opera House in April, diversified the evening. O. B. Denison, prominent in M. I. T. alumni activities, was pianist and cheer leader. The class banner of 1926 was presented to David Shepard, president of the senior class. The announced "Charleston specialty" was omitted, because the dancer, C. E. Richheimer, '28, has sprained his ankle.

The "Stein Song," of course, ended the program. Tech has not yet adopted an anthem more suited to this age of Volstead and anti-Volstead. It is doubtful if one with words and music of equal artistic value could be had.

Mr Cherkassky's dramatic sense was shown in Wagner's "Rienzi" overture. One was grateful to him for avoiding the excessive sentimentality that too often mars performances of Schubert's "Ave Maria." One especially liked his vivid and personal readings of the Volga Bargemen's Song and of the third movement of Tchaikovsky's "Pathetic Symphony."

His catholicity of taste was proved by performances of Irving Berlin's "Always" and of Meacham's "American Patrol." Nor should an excellent performance, as Pops performances go, of the finale from "Scheherezade," be overlooked.

Last night's tryout, for it was so intended, proved Mr Cherkassky a conductor of parts, able to improve such opportunities as may be granted him. One would be interested to hear him again.

P. R.

Globe JUNE 5

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

Transcript JUNE 5

The Usual Course with Pleasing Variations — A Symphonic Sunday — Novel Numbers from Mr. Converse—Chaikovsky's Music for "The Months"

THE NEW WEEK at the Pops begins on Sunday evening with a "symphonic program" before an audience that must be content to look and listen as at any other concert. From Haydn's Symphony in D major comes an Introduction and Allegro; from Dvorak's "New World" Symphony the familiar Largo; from Chaikovsky's Fourth Symphony the Scherzo for plucked strings. Symphonic music as well are Beethoven's Overture to "Egmont" and Berlioz's Overture, "Roman Carnival." Symphonic music of the theater are the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's accompaniment to "A Mid-summer Night's Dream," the Tartar Dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor," the Venusberg music from "Tannhauser."

To more usual courses the concerts will return on Monday when the Boston College Quartet will be heard in songs and other pieces pleasing to remembering alumni. From the "Slovakian Sketches" of Mr. Ondricek a Village-Dance will also be played. On Tuesday, when the Daughters of Zion have taken the whole house, the concert will be closed to the public. On Wednesday, for experiment, Mr. Jacchia will play in succession the three entr'actes from "Carmen," fine-grained or highly-colored music. On the same evening, he will also add to the repertory two numbers—"Romance" and "Witch Dance"—from Mr. Converse's music to Percy Mackaye's filmed play of Colonial New England, "The Scarecrow." The program for Thursday favors familiar courses. Dances from an eighteenth-century opera by Gretry flavor the last to Friday; while on Saturday, the conductor will proffer a genuine novelty. In his earlier years Chaikovsky wrote twelve piano-pieces, half-technical and half-moody; named them "The Months"; subtitled them accordingly. Mr. Jacchia has lately scored three for orchestra: April, "Snowdrops"; June, "Barcarolle"; November, "Troika." Now he will try them, as the word goes, upon an audience. So much for the sixth week of the series—the institutional Pops with variations.

Koussevitzky Opens New Paris Concerts

Adv

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has opened the first of his new concerts in Paris with practically the same orchestra which served to make him famous in the French capital before he came to the Hub.

Koussevitzky shared honors with the young New York composer, Aaron Copland, whose "Music for the Theatre," first heard at a Boston Symphony concert last season, was the outstanding novelty on the program. Copland was called to the stage to respond to the applause.

THE POPS TONIGHT

Entrance of the Gladiators .....Fucik
Overture, "L'Italiana in Algeri"....Rossini
Entr'acte Valse ..... Hellmesberger
Fantasia, "Othello" ..... Verdi
Suite, "Coppelia" ..... Delibes
Hopak, fror "Fair of Sorotchinsk"
Moussorgsky
The Lark ..... Glinka-Jacchia
(Solo Violin: Julius Theodorowicz)
Capriccio Espagnol ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Selection, "Rose Marie" .....Friml-Stothart
Waltz, "La Barcarolle" ..... Waldteufel
Bacchanale, from "Philemon and Baucis" ..... Gounod
Conductor, Agide Jacchia.

PAUL CHERKASSKY CONDUCTS A POPS

Paul Cherkassky, Russian violinist and conductor, made his American debut in the latter capacity last night at the Pops. Mr Cherkassky, already known here as a solo violinist, and since 1923 a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has had considerable experience as a conductor in Russia and Finland.

He showed last night that he has ideas about music and some ability at getting a large group of players to follow them. It is fortunate to have in the orchestra someone so obviously able to take Mr Jacchia's place if need be.

Last night was "Technology Night," though the general public was largely represented in the audience. College songs, Tech cheers, confetti throwing, and a medley from this year's "Tech Show," seen at the Boston Opera House in April, diversified the evening. O. B. Denison, prominent in M. I. T. alumni activities, was pianist and cheer leader. The class banner of 1926 was presented to David Shepard, president of the senior class. The announced "Charleston specialty" was omitted, because the dancer, C. E. Richheimer, '28, has sprained his ankle.

The "Stein Song," of course, ended the program. Tech has not yet adopted an anthem more suited to this age of Volstead and anti-Volstead. It is doubtful if one with words and music of equal artistic value could be had.

Mr Cherkassky's dramatic sense was shown in Wagner's "Rienzi" overture. One was grateful to him for avoiding the excessive sentimentality that too often mars performances of Schubert's "Ave Maria." One especially liked his vivid and personal readings of the Volga Bargemen's Song and of the third movement of Tchaikovsky's "Pathetic Symphony."

His catholicity of taste was proved by performances of Irving Berlin's "Always" and of Meacham's "American Patrol." Nor should an excellent performance, as Pops performances go, of the finale from "Scheherezade," be overlooked.

Last night's tryout, for it was so intended, proved Mr Cherkassky a conductor of parts, able to improve such opportunities as may be granted him. One would be interested to hear him again.

P. R.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
JUNE 6 1926

KOUSSEVITZKY IN PARIS.

The first of the annual Spring series of the Concerts Koussevitzky took place at the Paris Opéra House May 22. Serge Koussevitzky conducted his own orchestra, introducing Aaron Copland's "Music for the Theatre." The young composer was warmly applauded by a packed audience.

MUSIC

Monitor JUNE 7

Symphonic Night at Pops

The third Sunday concert of the Symphony Hall Pops, season was given last night with a "symphonic program" which traversed the first movement of Haydn's "London" Symphony in D, Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture, the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" music, the Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," Brahm's E flat Rhapsody, Berlioz's "Roman Carnival" Overture, the Largo from the "New World" Symphony, the Pizzicato movement from Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, and the Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor." It was interesting to observe again that the better music calls out greater efforts on the part of the performers. The Haydn and Beethoven items were particularly well interpreted last night.

All the concerts of this week are open to the public except that of tomorrow evening, for which the entire house has been taken by the Daughters of Zion.

The fourth Sunday concert is scheduled for June 20, with a program of Russian music.

TONIGHT AT THE POPS

Tonight's program at the Pops in Symphony hall will celebrate the centennial of the death of Weber, with special numbers by this composer, while the program for tomorrow, at which the third Sunday concert of the season will be played, will consist of symphonic music. Program follows:

Introduction to Act III "Lohengrin"
Wagner
Valse des Fleurs.....Tchaikovsky
Ave Maria.....Bach-Gounod
(Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana"
Mascagni
Overture to "Der Freischutz", first movement from Concerto No. 1 for Clarinet (clarinet, Paul Mimart) Invitation to the Dance (orchestrated by Berlioz), Overture to "Oberon."
C. M. Weber, Dec. 18, 1786, June 5, 1826
Suite, "Coppelia"; a, Waltz of the Hours; b, Czardas.....Delibes
Intermezzo, Act III "Jewels of the Madonna" ..... Wolf-Ferrari
Sixth Hungarian Dance.....Brahms

JUNE 5 HERALD

CHERKASSKY AT HEAD OF POPS

Post JUNE 5

Violinist Proves His Mastery of Conductor's Art

BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Affording Mr. Jacchia a well-earned respite from his nightly duties, Paul Cherkassky, of the first violin section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted last evening's Pop concert, incidentally, making his first public appearance in this country as orchestral director. But Mr. Cherkassky, who came to our orchestra from his native Russia in 1923, is by no means a novice at conducting. In the opera house of Petrograd he served both as concert master and as conductor, and he has practiced the art of the baton in the theatres of Pskov and Seratov and in Helsingfors, Finland, whither, by the way, he is bound for more conducting this summer.

Youthful of aspect, slender, tall and straight, Mr. Cherkassky conducts as one thoroughly at home upon the podium. His motions of arms and body are graceful and unforced, informing, yet free from extravagance. And last evening his orchestra gave him generous and dependable support. The first measures of the Prelude to "Carmen" with which the concert began, disclosed Mr. Cherkassky's fine rhythmic sense, while Strauss' "Vienna Blood" which followed had the true verve and swing of the Viennese waltz.

Turning to the "Rienzi" Overature Mr. Cherkassky proved that he could shape and sustain a broad melodic line, and he "set off" admirably Wagner's dramatic strokes.

As it chanced, last evening was Technology Night, and as the concert wore on it became increasingly difficult to pay proper heed to the orchestra; for although there was no boisterousness, there was a growing undertone of conversation. Nevertheless, it could be observed that Mr. Cherkassky and the orchestra were acquitting themselves well in the Finale of Rimsky's "Scheherezade" and in the third movement of Tchaikovsky's "Pathetic" Symphiny. And for once at a Pop concert the Song of the Volga Boatmen suggested not a funeral dirge but a sailors' chantey.

CHERKASSKY AT HEAD OF POPS

Post June 5 '26

Violinist Proves His Mastery of Conductor's Art

BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Affording Mr. Jacchia a well-earned respite from his nightly duties, Paul Cherkassky, of the first violin section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted last evening's Pop concert, incidentally, making his first public appearance in this country as orchestral director. But Mr. Cherkassky, who came to our orchestra from his native Russia in 1923, is by no means a novice at conducting. In the opera house of Petrograd he served both as concert master and as conductor, and he has practiced the art of the baton in the theatres of Pskov and Seratov and in Helsingfors, Finland, whither, by the way, he is bound for more conducting this summer.

Youthful of aspect, slender, tall and straight, Mr. Cherkassky conducts as one thoroughly at home upon the podium. His motions of arms and body are graceful and unforced, informing, yet free from extravagance. And last evening his orchestra gave him generous and dependable support. The first measures of the Prelude to "Carmen" with which the concert began, disclosed Mr. Cherkassky's fine rhythmic sense, while Strauss' "Vienna Blood" which followed had the true verve and swing of the Viennese waltz.

Turning to the "Rienzi" Overature Mr. Cherkassky proved that he could shape and sustain a broad melodic line, and he "set off" admirably Wagner's dramatic strokes.

As it chanced, last evening was Technology Night, and as the concert wore on it became increasingly difficult to pay proper heed to the orchestra; for although there was no boisterousness, there was a growing undertone of conversation. Nevertheless, it could be observed that Mr. Cherkassky and the orchestra were acquitting themselves well in the Finale of Rimsky's "Scheherezade" and in the third movement of Tchaikovsky's "Pathetic" Symphiny. And for once at a Pop concert the Song of the Volga Boatmen suggested not a funeral dirge but a sailors' chantey.

Jones.

TIMES JUNE 6

KOUSSEVITZKY IN PARIS.

The first of the annual Spring series of the Concerts Koussevitzky took place at the Paris Opéra House May 22. Serge Koussevitzky conducted his own orchestra, introducing Aaron Copland's "Music for the Theatre." The young composer was warmly applauded by a packed audience.

CLASSIC PROGRAM AT POPS TONIGHT

Classic symphonic numbers with a popular appeal will comprise the program to be given at the third Sunday Pop concert of the season in Symphony Hall tonight. The program follows:

Symphony No. 2 in D major (London) First Movement: Adagio, Allegro
Haydn
Overture to Goethe's "Egmont"..Beethoven
Scherzo from the incidental music to Shakespear's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" .....Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhauser".....Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.....Brahms
(Orchestrated by Agide Jachia.)
Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Op. 9
Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," second movement (Largo)
Dvorak
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, third movement: Scherzo; Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro .....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor"
Borodin

Advertiser JUNE 6

Monitor JUNE 5
Week-End Concerts

TONIGHT

Weber Centennial Program

Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
"Valse des Fleurs"....Tchaikovsky
"Ave Maria" .....Bach-Gounod
Fantasia, "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni
Overture to "Der Freischütz" | First Movement from Concerto No. 1 for Clarinet (Clarinet: Paul Mimart) | "Invitation to the Dance" (Orchestrated by Berlioz) | Overture to "Oberon" — C. M. Weber Dec. 18, 1786–June 5, 1826
Suite, "Coppélia" .....Delibes
Intermezzo, Act III, "Jewels of the Madonna" .....Wolf-Ferrari
Sixth Hungarian Dance....Brahms

SUNDAY EVENING

Symphonic Program

Symphony No. 2 in D major ("London"), First Movement: Adagio; Allegro .....Haydn
Overture to Goethe's "Egmont," Beethoven
Scherzo from the Incidental Music to Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream".....Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser," Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.Brahms
Overture to "The Roman Carnival," Op. .....Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," Second Movement (Largo) .....Dvořák
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, Third Movement: Scherzo, Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro.....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor" .....Borodin

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of the Zionists

Wedding March.....Mendelssohn
Kammenoi Ostrow.....Rubinstein
Bacchanale from "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saëns
Songs by Cantor Isadore Adelsman
Volga Bargeman's Song
Kalinka.....Arr. by Jacchia
Kol Nidrei
Overture, "1812".....Chaikovsky
Songs by Cantor Isadore Adelsman
Suite from "Shulamith" Goldfaden-Jacchia
Barcarolle from "The Tales of Hoffman" .....Offenbach
Coronation March from "The Prophet" Meyerbeer

Conductor: A. Jacchia

[Contrary to previous announcement, a few seats for this concert will be available to the general public.]

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 8

PROGRAM FOR POPS TONIGHT

Traveler JUNE 10

The Pops Symphony Orchestra, under Agide Jacchia's direction, will be heard in the following program in Symphony hall tonight:

Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Overture to "The Sicilian Vespers" Verdi
Largo .....Handel
(Solo violin, harp, organ and strings)
Fantasia, "The Tales of Hoffmann" Offenbach
"Cephale et Procris" .....Gretry-Mottl
Tambourin Gipue.
Loin du Ball .....Gillet
Love Dream .....Liszt-Herbert
Overture to "Tannhauser" .....Wagner
Hungarian March .....Berlioz
Intermezzo from "Naila" .....Delibes
Procession of the Sardar Ippolitov-Ivanov

Traveler JUNE 11

Boston Symphony Season.

Announcement comes from the management of the Boston Symphony orchestra of an unusually large response from the Providence subscribers in their renewals for next season. It is further stated that the superiority to Infantry Hall in seating capacity and convenience of the E. F. Albee Theatre, in which these concerts are to be given, makes it possible to offer good seats at all prices to prospective new subscribers. Any who are interested are invited to apply for detailed information to W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony Hall, Boston. Payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn.

The engagement of the Albee Theatre comes as a gratifying solution to the problem raised by the demolishing of Infantry Hall, which has housed the Boston Symphony in Providence for many years. This use of the Albee Theatre was made possible through the generous activities of a numbre of Providence citizens, which gives eloquent evidence of the public support of Providence to New England's great orchestra.

Koussevitzky is now in Europe conducting with much success his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. After resting for the remainder of the summer, he will return to America in the autumn to open the Boston Symphony season in Boston next October. The Providence concerts will be given on the following five Tuesday evenings: Oct. 26, Nov. 2[illegible], Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

TIMES JUNE 12 THE PAWTUCK

PROGRAM FOR POPS TONIGHT

The Pops Symphony Orchestra, under Agide Jacchia's direction, will be heard in the following program in Symphony hall tonight:

Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Overture to "The Sicilian Vespers" Verdi
Largo .....Handel
(Solo violin, harp, organ and strings)
Fantasia, "The Tales of Hoffmann" Offenbach
"Cephale et Procris" .....Gretry-Mottl
Tambourin Gipue.
Loin du Ball .....Gillet
Love Dream .....Liszt-Herbert
Overture to "Tannhauser" .....Wagner
Hungarian March .....Berlioz
Intermezzo from "Naila" .....Delibes
Procession of the Sardar Ippolitov-Ivanov

Traveler JUNE 11

THIS CLIPPING FROM
SUN
BALTIMORE, MD.
JUN 6 1925

Are Offering Varied Program

HERALD JUNE 6

"Pop" Concerts for This Week Include Many Novelties

Mr. Jacchia has prepared the following programs for the sixth week of the Pop concerts at Symphony hall which begins tonight with the last Sunday concert but one, and a symphonic programme. For Tuesday, June 8, the entire house has been taken by the Daughters of Zion. All other nights are open to the public.

SUNDAY

Symphony No. 2 in D major (London), Haydn
Overture to "Egmont".....Beethoven
Scherzo from the Incidental Music to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhaeuser"..Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.....Brahms
(Orchestrated by Agide Jacchia.)
Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Op. 9, Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," second movement (Largo), Dvorak
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, third movement: Scherzo; Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro .....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor." Borodin

MONDAY

Military Polonaise.....Chopin
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings.)
Excerpts from 'Stabat Mater".....Rossini
Boston College quartet.
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
In the Village (A Dance) from "Slovakian Sketches".....Ondricek
Finale, Fourth Symphony....Tchaikovsky
Boston College songs.
Selection, "The Vagabond King"....Friml
March of the Toys.....Herbert
Waltz, "Gold and Silver".....Lehar

TUESDAY

Entire house taken by the Daughters of Zion, all other nights open to the public.

WEDNESDAY

Preamble from "Carnaval," Schumann-Jacchia
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Liebesfreud .....Kreisler
Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
Scarecrow Sketches .....Converse
a. Romance b. Witch Dance
Polonaise from "Christmas Eve," Rimsky-Korsakov
Indian Dirge .....Seydel
Ouverture Solennelle "1812"..Tchaikovsky
Entr'actes II, III and IV from "Carmen," Bizet
Waltzes from "Der Rosenkavalier," R. Strauss
Pomp and Circumstance.....Elgar

THURSDAY

Overture to "The Magic Flute".....Mozart
Waltz, "Dornroeschen" (Briar Rose), Tchaikovsky
Carry Me Back to Old Virginny, Bland-Jacchia
Fantasia, "L'Oracolo".....Leoni
Rhapsody, "Espana" .....Chabrier
Harp solo, Prelude.....Kovarovic
(Mr. Holy.)
Polish Dance .....Scharwenka
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris"....Mascagni
Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg" .....Wagner
Sizilietta .....Blon
March, "Lorraine" .....Ganne

FRIDAY

Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Overture to "The Sicilian Vespers".....Verdi
Largo .....Handel
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "The Tales of Hoffmann," Offenbach
"Cephale et Procris".....Gretry-Mottl
Tambourin Gigue
Loin du Bal.....Gillet
Love Dream .....Liszt-Herbert
Overture to "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
Hungarian March.....Berlioz
Waltz, "Tales from the Vienna Woods," Strauss
Procession of the Sardar..Ippolitov-Ivanov

SATURDAY

First Slavonic Dance.....Dvorak
Overture, "Fingal's Cave"...Mendelssohn
Waltz, "Artist's Life".....Strauss
Fantasia, "Carmen" .....Bizet
Suite from "The Seasons," Tchaikovsky-Jacchia
a. April: "Snowdrops"
b. June: "Barcarolle"
c. November: "The Troika"
Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde," Wagner
Serenade .....Pierne
Twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Overture to "Mignon".....Thomas
Entr'acte Valse .....Hellmesberger
Charge of the Hussars.....Spindler

Suite, "Platee et Fetes d'Hebe"..Rameau-Mottl
Dreams .....Wagner
(Solo Violin: Mr. Gerardi)
Rhapsody in Blue .....Gershwin
(Solo Piano: Mr. Sanroma)
Largo from "The New World Symphony" Dvorak
Spanish Dance .....Rollins-Jacchia
Procession of the Sardar.....Ippolitov-Ivanov

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 12

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

A Scandinavian Evening—Chaikovsky for a Final Sunday Program—Saxophones and Patriotic Airs

A SINGLE evening's concert—Monday's, June 14—will not be open to the usual public of the Pops next week. On that night the entire house has been reserved in the name of Boston University. Tickets will be available at the box office for all other evenings, however, even such as bear "special" titles. Tuesday's program is predominantly Scandinavian. Grieg, Bull, Svendsen and Soederman are immediately representative. Wagner suggests the Norse background of his mythical music-dramas. Sibelius contributes "Finlandia," as if from over the border. On Wednesday the program, otherwise miscellaneous, includes a few numbers by the Boston Saxophone Orchestra. Thursday's concert suggests, as is fitting, Bunker Hill Day. A military march from Saint-Saens, Suppe's "Light Cavalry" overture, Herbert's "American Fantasy" give voice to martial brasses. Friday's selections, though beginning with the immemorial "Sambre et Meuse," quickly take on a quieter air with bits from Drigo, Leoni, Nicolai and Waldteufel, besides Wagner and Liszt. Saturday falls back on old favorites: the "Largo" from "Xeres"; "Marche Slave"; the Berceuse from "Jocelyn." Sunday, June 20, brings the final Sunday concert, though not, of course, the final concert of the season. Rimsky, Balakirev, Glinka, Chaikovsky all, its length

"Concerts Koussevitzky" Success In Paris

One of the principal musical events of the Paris season is said to be the annual spring series of "Concerts Koussevitzky," which opened May 22 in the Paris Opera House. Serge Koussevitzky conducted his own orchestra which he assembles there each year and which he is now directing in the interval between his second season, recently ended, as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his third season, which is to begin next October.

A feature of the first Paris concert was the introduction there of Aaron Copland's "Music for the Theater," which was given its first American performances by Koussevitzky last season. The young Brooklyn composer was called to the stage and warmly applauded by the audience which filled to overflowing the auditorium.

PROGRAMS FOR COMING WEEK

Variety Still the Key Note of Selections of "Pop" Concerts

HERALD JUNE 20

The Pop concerts in Symphony Hall will begin their last week but one of the season tonight with the closing Sunday concert and a Russian-Tchaikovsky program. Tomorrow will be annual request night for which the program has been chosen entirely by ballots of the Pops public. For Tuesday Mr. Jacchia has made a program of the most popular numbers by eleven great composers —a new experiment in special programs. On Wednesday there will be an Italian program. It is to be noted that Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," so successfully introduced last week, will be repeated on Saturday, June 26.

The programs of the week follow:

SUNDAY, JUNE 20

Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla"...Glinka
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninov
Violin Solo: Souvenir of Moscow....Wieniavsky
(Mr. Kassman)
Russian Scherzo .....Levenson
Third Movement, "Scheherazade" Rimsky-Korsakov
The Prince and the Princess
Islamey, Orental Fantasy.....Balakirev-Casella
Capriccio Italien
Andante Cantabile
Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker" Tchaikovsky
a. Miniature Overture
b. Dance of the Sugar Fairy
c. Chinese Dance
d. Waltz of the Flowers
Ouverture Solennelle. "1812"

MONDAY

Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin"..Wagner
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube".. Strauss
Largo .....Handel
(Solo, Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Fedora" .....Giordano
(Solo, piano, Mr. Sanroma)
Finale of "Scheherazade.....Rimsky-Korsakov
Deep River .....Arranged by Jacchia
Indian Dirge .....Seydel
Ouverture Solennelle, "1812".....Tchaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Pomp and Circumstance.....Elgar
Encores
Song of the Volga Bargemen..Arr. by Jacchia
Kammenoi Ostrow .....Rubinstein
Flight of the Bumble Bee....Rimsky-Korsakov
March of the Toys.....Herbert
Barcarolle .....Offenbach

TUESDAY

Berlioz .....Hungarian March, "Rakoczy"
Weber .....Overture to "Oberon"
Handel .....Largo
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ, and Strings)
Verdi .....Fantasia, "Aida"
Beethoven
Scherzo from the Third Symphony, "Eroica"
Shumann .....
Sibelius .....Valse Triste
Wagner .....Overture to "Taunhaeuser"
Tchaikovsky ..... "1812"
Schubert ..5.....Moment Musicale
Brahms .....Fifth Hungarian Dance

WEDNESDAY

Introduction to "Otello," "The Tempest".. Verdi
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Capriccio .....Scarlatti-Jacchia
Fantasia, "La Boheme".....Puccini
Prelude and Siciliana,
"Cavalleria Rusticana".....Mascagni
(Solo horn, Mr. Valkenier)
Danze Piemontesi .....Sinigaglia
En Badinant .....d'Ambrosio
Rhapsody, "Italia" .....Casella
Selection, "Pagliacci".....Leoncavallo
Intermezzo, Act II,
"The Jewels of the Madonna"..Wolf-Ferrari
Furlana from "La Gioconda".....Ponchielli

THURSDAY

Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg, "Tannhaeuser" .....Wagner
Overture to "Raymond...".....Thomas
Evening in Venice.....Dunham
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah"..Saint-Saens
Suite from "Carnaval".....Schumann-Jacchia
Preamble Pierrot Chopin
Reconnaissance Sphinxes
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ, and Strings)
Guitarre .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Irish Rhapsody .....Herbert
Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda"... Ponchielli
Humoresque .....Dvorak
Waltz, "Girls of Baden".....Komyak

FRIDAY

Prelude to "Carmen".....Bizet
Overture to "Pique Dame".....Suppe
Nocturne, Op 37, No. 1.....Chopin-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Tosca".....Puccini
Ancient Dances and Airs.....Respighi
Gagliarda. Passo Mezzo e Mascherada
Prelude to "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Love-Dream .....Liszt-Herbert
Rhapsody, "Espana" .....Chabrier
Suite, "Sylvia" .....Delibes
The Huntresses Procession of Bacchus
Salut d'Amour .....Elgar
March, "Father of Victory".....Ganne

SATURDAY

Overture to "Poet and Peasant.....Suppe
Waltz from "Eugen Onegin".....Tchaikovsky
The Lark .....Glinka-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Fedora" .....Giordano

MONITOR The Pops JUNE 14

The Symphony Hall Pops enter today on another busy seven-day period. For tonight the entire house has been taken over by Boston University, but all other nights will be open to the public. Tomorrow night music by Scandinavian composers will be featured. The Boston Saxophone Club, Abdon Laus, conductor, will supply a part of the program Wednesday evening. There will be a holiday program on Thursday night, with Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue as feature, J. M. Sanroma playing the piano part. The last Sunday concert of the season falls next Sunday evening, with a program made up of works by Tchaikovsky and other Russian composers.

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 16

At the Pops Tonight

Evening of the Saxophones

Triumphal March from "Aida"...Verdi
Overture, "Jubilee".....Weber
Fantasia, "Eugen Onegin"..Chaikovsky
Boston Saxophone Orchestra
a—March from "Tannhäuser".Wagner
b—Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
c—Carry Me Back to Old Virginny Bland-Laus
Rumanian Rhapsody.....Enesco
Dance of the Priestesses of Dagon, from "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saëns
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Boston Saxophone Orchestra
a—The Lost Chord.....Sullivan-Laus
b—Hawaiian Waltz, "Kilama Wailana" .....Lua-Kalli
c—Indian Love Lyric, "Temple Bells" .....Finden
d—Fast Asleep in Poppyland.....Gay
Ballet of the Hours, from "La Gioconda" .....Ponchielli
Prelude No. 6.....Chopin-Jacchia
Indian War Dance.....Skilton
Conductor: A. Jacchia

Conductor for the Saxophone Orchestra: A. F. Laus

the Government.

POPS ORCHESTRA TO PLAY FOR DISABLED VETERANS

Agide Jacchia and the "Pops" orchestra is to visit the United States Army Hospital 44 Spring st, West Roxbury, Monday afternoon, and give a concert for the disabled veterans of the World War.

Groups of these veterans have been guests at the Pops on several occasions during the season now ending, but about 200 of the nerve and shell-shock cases are unable to leave the hospital.

The concert was arranged through the Community Service Bureau, and the suggestion of Miss Elenora Snelling, its vice-chairman, was met with immediate acquiescence by Conductor Jacchia.

Globe JUNE 22

PLAY JAZZ AT POP CONCERTS

JUNE 8 TRAVELER

Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" Performed—To Be Repeated

Super-jazz, represented by George Gershwin's famous "Rhapsody in Blue," was the feature of the Bunker Hill day program at the Symphony Hall Pops.

Although the Pops' audiences have long beer accustomed to hearing popular music of the operetta, ballad and waltz varieties, this was the first real jazz to crash into Symphony hall since Paul Whiteman's appearance there.

It was Whiteman who introduced the "Rhapsody in Blue" at his first jazz concert in Symphony hall two years ago. At that time the young composer played the piano part. This time the Pops orchestra, made up of Boston Symphony players and conducted by Agide Jacchia, used the version scored for symphony orchestra, and Jesus Sanroma, pianist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, was soloist.

The "Rhapsody" is a synthetitc sort of music, aimed to bridge the gap between jazz and classical music. Gershwin, known as the gifted composer of many popular hits, has combined jazz tunes and rhythms with classical form. This was his first ambitious undertaking—he has since written a jazz concerto for symphony orchestra—and it has made more of a hit with highbrows than with the most jazz, at first hearing, seems complex.

Last Two Weeks of Pops

The Pop concerts in Symphony Hall, now in their last week but one of their 41st season, offer several special programs of interest. Tonight there will be a program of favorites by the master composers, a new departure at the Pops. Wednesday there will be the annual Italian program, featuring operatic and other numbers. Saturday, Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" will be repeated, and next Monday will bring the last Wagner program.

Last night the "Pops" orchestra played its first request program, made up in accordance with a popular vote by the audiences, and the patrons bore down on the box office in such numbers that hundreds were turned away.

So much did the demand for tickets exceed the supply that the management announced that it would repeat the request program on Thursday evening, July 1.

PROGRAMS FOR COMING WEEK

HERALD JUNE 13

Varied and Interesting Numbers for "Pop" Concerts

Several special programs will be given in the coming week of Pop concerts, Mr. Jacchia, director, in Symphony hall, which is the seventh of the season.

Tomorrow's concert has been taken over by Boston University, but all other nights are open to the public. Programs follow:

(Featuring Scandinavian Music.)

TUESDAY, JUNE 15

Entrance of the Guests into the Warburg, from "Tannhuser".....Wagner
Overture to "Poet and Peasant".....Suppe
Prelude in C sharp minor.....Rachmaninov
Fantasia, "Aida".....Verdi
Suit "Sigurd Jorsalfar" .....Grieg
a In the Hall of the King
b Festival March
Saeterjentens Sondag (Solitude on the Mountain) .....Bull-Svendsen
Swedish Wedding March.....Soderman
Second Norwegian Rhapsody.....Svendsen
Finlandia, Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
Humoresque .....Tchaikovsky-Jacchia
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube" Strauss

WEDNESDAY

Triumphal March from "Aida".....Verdi
Overture, "Jubilee".....Weber
Fantasia, "Eugen Onegin".....Tchaikovsky
Boston Saxophone Orchestra
(Abdon F. Laus, Conductor)
a March from "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
b Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
c Carry Me Back to Old Virginny.Bland-Laus
Rumanian Rhapsody.....Enesco
Dance of the Priestesses of Dagon, from "Samson and Delilah".....Saint-Saens
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Boston Saxophone Orchestra
a The Lost Chord.....Sullivan-Laus
b Hawaiian Waltz, "Kilama Wailana" Lau-Kaili
c Indian Love Lyric, "Temple Bells".Finden
d Fast asleep in Poppyland (Chinese Story) .....Gay
Ballet of the Hours, from "La Gioconda" Ponchielli
Prelude No. 6.....Chopin-Jacchia
Indian War Dance.....Skilton

THURSDAY—BUNKER HILL DAY

Marche Militaire.....Saint-Saens
Overture to "Light Cavalry".....Suppe
Serenade, "Trastullo" .....Langendoen
Fantasia, "Madam Butterfly".....Puccini
Suite, "Peer Gynt".....Grieg
Morning mood—In the Troll King's Grotto.
Ave Maria from "Otello".....Verdi
Rhapsody in Blue.....Gershwin
(Piano solo, Mr. Sanroma.)
Ballet from "The Cid" .....Massenet
Castillane—Andalouse—Aragonaise.
Aubade Printaiere.....Lacombe
American Fantasy.....Herbert

FRIDAY

March, "Sambre et Meuse"..Planquette-Turlet
Overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" .....Nicolai
Serenade .....Drigo
Fantasia, L'Oracolo.....Leoni
Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin".Wagner
La Campanella.....Handel-Jacchia
Freshiera.....Von Doenhoff-Press
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Suite, "Nutcracker".....Tchaikovsky
Arabian dance, "Dance of the Penny Whistles" .....Trepak
Cordoba .....Albeniz-Jacchia
Waltz, "Pomona".....Waldteufel

SATURDAY

March, "El Capitan".....Sousa
Overture to "Orpheus".....Offenbach
Largo from "Xerxes".....Handel
Fantasia, "Il Trovatore".....Verdi
Marche Slave .....Tchaikovsky
Legend .....Holy
Prelude in D flat.....Glazounov-Jacchia
Overture to "Rienzi".....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor".Borodin
Berceuse from "Jocelyn".....Godard
(Solo 'cello, Mr. Laugendoen.)
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM—LAST SUNDAY CONCERT- June 20

Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla".....Glinka
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninov
(Mr. Kassman.)
Violin solo, Souvenir of Moscow....Wieniavsky
Scherzo.....Levenson

NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JUN 12 192

GOOD SEATS FOR SYMPHONY SEASON

Orchestra to Use Albee Theatre for Five Appearances Next Winter

Announcement comes from the management of the Boston Symphony orchestra of an unusually large response fro mProvidence subscribers in renewals for next season. It is further stated that the seating capacity and convenience of the E. F. Albee theatre, in which these concerts are to be given, makes it possible to offer good seats at all prices to prospective new subscribers. Dealled information can be obtained from W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony hall, Boston. Payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn.

Leader Koussevitzky is now in Europe conducting with much success his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. He will return to America in the autumn to open the Boston symphony season next October. The Providence concerts will be given on Tuesday evenings, Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

MEANING OF 'POPS' SIMPLE

Is Just Contraction of Popular Concerts

Thousands of enquiries have been received by the management of the Symphony Hall "Pops" as to just what is the derivation of the word "Pops." Many answers have been set forth, including the "popping" of corks that was so popular during the pre-prohibition days.

But the real reason and the real answer is none other than that the word "Pops" is a shortened term for the words "popular concerts." In the olden days, these concerts were known as popular concerts, but as this was a common term used of concerts in general, the idea of abbreviating it was hit upon and the word "Pops" came into use. This word met with immediate approval and has ever since been used to designate these entertaining musical programmes.

"RHAPSODY IN BLUE" HEARD AT THE POPS

Globe JUNE 18

George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," played last night for the first time at the Pops, is the first jazz piece to figure on a Pop concert program. If the rousing reception given it by a capacity audience is any test, jazz will henceforth find a regular place in the Pops repertory, as other American popular music such as Sousa's marches and old-style musical comedy pieces have long since done.

The "Rhapsody in Blue," first played here two years ago by Paul Whiteman's orchestra, with Gershwin himself taking the tremendously difficult piano part, has won much favorable comment from musicians and writers about music. It is perhaps "highbrow jazz," too complicated for the careless listener to follow with ease. But its originality and vitality are so great that it would not be out of place on a Symphony concert program.

Gershwin, as a result of the success of this "Rhapsody," has since written by request of the New York Symphony Orchestra a piano concerto, which was played at Symphony concerts last Winter in New York and elsewhere.

Jesus Sanroma acquitted himself very creditably last night in the piano solo, though one wished he had played with a more sustained yet varied rhythmic energy.

Mr Jacchia and the orchestra seemed a bit constrained, not yet thoroughly at home in what for most of them is a new musical field. The Rhapsody has been rescored for ordinary orchestral instruments, some of them muted, which alters its tone color a bit.

The programs last night announced a repetition of Gershwin's piece for June 26.

P. R.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Symphony to Use the Albee Theatre

The management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is pleased to announce a record response from the Providence subscribers to these concerts in the renewals for next season. Since the E. F. Albee Theatre is larger than Infantry Hall, the former auditorium now being demolished, and the seating conveniences much superior, it will be possible for any who wish to become subscribers to obtain excellent seats at all prices. Those interested are invited to apply for specific information to Symphony Hall, Boston.

The use of the Albee Theatre comes as a gratifying solution to the predicament caused by the loss of Infantry Hall which has housed these concerts for years. The engagement of the theatre, made possible by the generous activities of a group of Providence citizens, is evidence of the kind of support which New England's great orchestra enjoys in this city.

An eventful and enjoyable season is anticipated. The concerts will be given on five Tuesday evenings, as usual, by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 musicians in what will be the third season of Serge Koussevitzky, the celebrated Russian conductor.

Koussevitzky is now in Paris conducting his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" there. Reports come of the crowded audiences and demonstrations at each concert. The conductor will consult with European composers and the music publishers regarding new scores, and after spending the remainder of the summer in well earned rest in provincial France, will return in the early autumn to open the Boston Symphony season in Boston, in October. The Providence series will be given on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SUN
BALTIMORE, MD.
JUN 6 1925

Are Offering Varied Program

HERALD JUNE 6

"Pop" Concerts for This Week Include Many Novelties

Mr. Jacchia has prepared the following programs for the sixth week of the Pop concerts at Symphony hall which begins tonight with the last Sunday concert but one, and a symphonic programme. For Tuesday, June 8, the entire house has been taken by the Daughters of Zion. All other nights are open to the public.

SUNDAY

Symphony No. 2 in D major (London), Haydn
Overture to "Egmont".....Beethoven
Scherzo from the Incidental Music to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Mendelssohn
Bacchanale from "Tannhaeuser"..Wagner
Rhapsody in E flat, Op. 119.....Brahms
(Orchestrated by Agide Jacchia.)
Overture, "The Roman Carnival," Op. 9, Berlioz
Symphony No. 5 "From the New World," second movement (Largo), Dvorak
Symphony No. 4 in F minor, third movement: Scherzo; Pizzicato ostinato: Allegro .....Tchaikovsky
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor." Borodin

MONDAY

Military Polonaise.....Chopin
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings.)
Excerpts from 'Stabat Mater".....Rossini
Boston College quartet.
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
In the Village (A Dance) from "Slovakian Sketches".....Ondricek
Finale, Fourth Symphony....Tchaikovsky
Boston College songs.
Selection, "The Vagabond King"....Friml
March of the Toys.....Herbert
Waltz, "Gold and Silver".....Lehar

TUESDAY

Entire house taken by the Daughters of Zion, all other nights open to the public.

WEDNESDAY

Preamble from "Carnaval," Schumann-Jacchia
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Liebesfreud .....Kreisler
Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
Scarecrow Sketches .....Converse
a. Romance b. Witch Dance
Polonaise from "Christmas Eve," Rimsky-Korsakov
Indian Dirge .....Seydel
Ouverture Solennelle "1812"..Tchaikovsky
Entr'actes II, III and IV from "Carmen," Bizet
Waltzes from "Der Rosenkavalier," R. Strauss
Pomp and Circumstance.....Elgar

THURSDAY

Overture to "The Magic Flute".....Mozart
Waltz, "Dornroeschen" (Briar Rose), Tchaikovsky
Carry Me Back to Old Virginny, Bland-Jacchia
Fantasia, "L'Oracolo".....Leoni
Rhapsody, "Espana" .....Chabrier
Harp solo, Prelude.....Kovarovic
(Mr. Holy.)
Polish Dance .....Scharwenka
Hymn to the Sun from "Iris"....Mascagni
Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg" .....Wagner
Sizilietta .....Blon
March, "Lorraine" .....Ganne

FRIDAY

Marche Militaire .....Schubert
Overture to "The Sicilian Vespers".....Verdi
Largo .....Handel
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "The Tales of Hoffmann," Offenbach
"Cephale et Procris".....Gretry-Mottl
Tambourin Gigue
Loin du Bal.....Gillet
Love Dream .....Liszt-Herbert
Overture to "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
Hungarian March.....Berlioz
Waltz, "Tales from the Vienna Woods," Strauss
Procession of the Sardar..Ippolitov-Ivanov

SATURDAY

First Slavonic Dance.....Dvorak
Overture, "Fingal's Cave"...Mendelssohn
Waltz, "Artist's Life".....Strauss
Fantasia, "Carmen" .....Bizet
Suite from "The Seasons," Tchaikovsky-Jacchia
a. April: "Snowdrops"
b. June: "Barcarolle"
c. November: "The Troika"
Love-Death from "Tristan and Isolde," Wagner
Serenade .....Pierne
Twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Overture to "Mignon".....Thomas
Entr'acte Valse .....Hellmesberger
Charge of the Hussars.....Spindler

Suite, "Platee et Fetes d'Hebe"..Rameau-Mottl
Dreams .....Wagner
(Solo Violin: Mr. Gerardi)
Rhapsody in Blue .....Gershwin
(Solo Piano: Mr. Sanroma)
Largo from "The New World Symphony" Dvorak
Spanish Dance .....Rollins-Jacchia
Procession of the Sardar.....Ippolitov-Ivanov

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 12

A Scandinavian Evening—Chaikovsky for a Final Sunday Program—Saxophones and Patriotic Airs

A SINGLE evening's concert—Monday's, June 14—will not be open to the usual public of the Pops next week. On that night the entire house has been reserved in the name of Boston University. Tickets will be available at the box office for all other evenings, however, even such as bear "special" titles. Tuesday's program is predominantly Scandinavian. Grieg, Bull, Svendsen and Soederman are immediately representative. Wagner suggests the Norse background of his mythical music-dramas. Sibelius contributes "Finlandia," as if from over the border. On Wednesday the program, otherwise miscellaneous, includes a few numbers by the Boston Saxophone Orchestra. Thursday's concert suggests, as is fitting, Bunker Hill Day. A military march from Saint-Saens, Suppe's "Light Cavalry" overture, Herbert's "American Fantasy" give voice to martial brasses. Friday's selections, though beginning with the immemorial "Sambre et Meuse," quickly take on a quieter air with bits from Drigo, Leoni, Nicolai and Waldteufel, besides Wagner and Liszt. Saturday falls back on old favorites: the "Largo" from "Xerxes"; "Marche Slave"; the Berceuse from "Jocelyn." Sunday, June 20, brings the final Sunday concert, though not, of course, the final concert of the season. Rimsky, Balakirev, Glinka, Chaikovsky all, its length

"Concerts Koussevitzky" Success In Paris

One of the principal musical events of the Paris season is said to be the annual spring series of "Concerts Koussevitzky," which opened May 22 in the Paris Opera House. Serge Koussevitzky conducted his own orchestra which he assembles there each year and which he is now directing in the interval between his second season, recently ended, as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his third season, which is to begin next October.

A feature of the first Paris concert was the introduction there of Aaron Copland's "Music for the Theater," which was given its first American performances by Koussevitzky last season. The young Brooklyn composer was called to the stage and warmly applauded by the audience which filled to overflowing the auditorium.

PROGRAMS FOR COMING WEEK

Variety Still the Key Note of Selections of "Pop" Concerts

HERALD JUNE 20

The Pop concerts in Symphony Hall will begin their last week but one of the season tonight with the closing Sunday concert and a Russian-Tchaikovsky program. Tomorrow will be annual request night for which the program has been chosen entirely by ballots of the Pops public. For Tuesday Mr. Jacchia has made a program of the most popular numbers by eleven great composers—a new experiment in special programs. On Wednesday there will be an Italian program. It is to be noted that Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," so successfully introduced last week, will be repeated on Saturday, June 26.

The programs of the week follow:

SUNDAY, JUNE 20

Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla"...Glinka
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninov
Violin Solo: Souvenir of Moscow....Wieniavsky
(Mr. Kassman)
Russian Scherzo .....Levenson
Third Movement, "Scheherazade" Rimsky-Korsakov
The Prince and the Princess
Islamey, Oriental Fantasy.....Balakirev-Casella
Capriccio Italien
Andante Cantabile
Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker" Tchaikovsky
a. Miniature Overture
b. Dance of the Sugar Fairy
c. Chinese Dance
d. Waltz of the Flowers
Ouverture Solennelle. "1812"

MONDAY

Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin"..Wagner
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube".. Strauss
Largo .....Handel
(Solo, Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Fedora" .....Giordano
(Solo, piano, Mr. Sanroma)
Finale of "Scheherazade.....Rimsky-Korsakov
Deep River .....Arranged by Jacchia
Indian Dirge .....Seydel
Ouverture Solennelle, "1812".....Tchaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
Pomp and Circumstance.....Elgar
Encores
Song of the Volga Bargemen..Arr. by Jacchia
Kammenoi Ostrow .....Rubinstein
Flight of the Bumble Bee....Rimsky-Korsakov
March of the Toys.....Herbert
Barcarolle .....Offenbach

TUESDAY

Berlioz .....Hungarian March, "Rakoczy"
Weber .....Overture to "Oberon"
Handel .....Largo
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ, and Strings)
Verdi .....Fantasia, "Aida"
Beethoven
Scherzo from the Third Symphony, "Eroica"
Shumann .....
Sibelius .....Valse Triste
Wagner .....Overture to "Tannhaeuser"
Tchaikovsky .....1812"
Schubert ..5.....Moment Musicale
Brahms .....Fifth Hungarian Dance

WEDNESDAY

Introduction to "Otello," "The Tempest".. Verdi
Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
Capriccio .....Scarlatti-Jacchia
Fantasia, "La Boheme".....Puccini
Prelude and Siciliana,
"Cavalleria Rusticana".....Mascagni
(Solo horn, Mr. Valkenier)
Danze Piemontesi .....Sinigaglia
En Badinant .....d'Ambrosio
Rhapsody, "Italia" .....Casella
Selection, "Pagliacci".....Leoncavallo
Intermezzo, Act II,
"The Jewels of the Madonna"..Wolf-Ferrari
Furlana from "La Gioconda".....Ponchielli

THURSDAY

Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg, "Tannhaeuser" .....Wagner
Overture to "Raymond...".....Thomas
Evening in Venice.....Dunham
Fantasia, "Samson and Delilah"..Saint-Saens
Suite from "Carnaval".....Schumann-Jacchia
Preamble Pierrot Chopin
Reconnaissance Sphinxes
Ave Maria .....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ, and Strings)
Guitarre .....Moszkovski-Jacchia
Irish Rhapsody .....Herbert
Dance of the Hours from "La Gioconda"... Ponchielli
Humoresque .....Dvorak
Waltz, "Girls of Baden".....Komyak

FRIDAY

Prelude to "Carmen".....Bizet
Overture to "Pique Dame".....Suppe
Nocturne, Op 37, No. 1.....Chopin-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Tosca".....Puccini
Ancient Dances and Airs.....Respighi
Gagliarda. Passo Mezzo e Mascherada
Prelude to "Lohengrin" .....Wagner
Love-Dream .....Liszt-Herbert
Rhapsody, "Espana" .....Chabrier
Suite, "Sylvia" .....Delibes
The Huntresses Procession of Bacchus
Salut d'Amour .....Elgar
March, "Father of Victory".....Ganne

SATURDAY

Overture to "Poet and Peasant.....Suppe
Waltz from "Eugen Onegin".....Tchaikovsky
The Lark .....Glinka-Jacchia
Fantasia, "Fedora" .....Giordano

The Pops

Monitor JUNE 14

The Symphony Hall Pops enter today on another busy seven-day period. For tonight the entire house has been taken over by Boston University, but all other nights will be open to the public. Tomorrow night music by Scandinavian composers will be featured. The Boston Saxophone Club, Abdon Laus, conductor, will supply a part of the program Wednesday evening. There will be a holiday program on Thursday night, with Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue as feature, J. M. Sanroma playing the piano part. The last Sunday concert of the season falls next Sunday evening, with a program made up of works by Tchaikovsky and other Russian composers.

At the Pops Tonight

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 16

Evening of the Saxophones

Triumphal March from "Aida"...Verdi
Overture, "Jubilee".....Weber
Fantasia, "Eugen Onegin"..Chaikovsky
Boston Saxophone Orchestra
a—March from "Tannhäuser".Wagner
b—Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
c—Carry Me Back to Old Virginny Bland-Laus
Rumanian Rhapsody.....Enesco
Dance of the Priestesses of Dagon, from "Samson and Delilah" Saint-Saëns
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Boston Saxophone Orchestra
a—The Lost Chord.....Sullivan-Laus
b—Hawaiian Waltz, "Kilama Wailana" .....Lua-Kaili
c—Indian Love Lyric, "Temple Bells" .....Finden
d—Fast Asleep in Poppyland.....Gay
Ballet of the Hours, from "La Gioconda" .....Ponchielli
Prelude No. 6.....Chopin-Jacchia
Indian War Dance.....Skilton
Conductor: A. Jacchia

Conductor for the Saxophone Orchestra: A. F. Laus

POPS ORCHESTRA TO PLAY FOR DISABLED VETERANS

Globe JUNE 22

Agide Jacchia and the "Pops" orchestra is to visit the United States Army Hospital, 44 Spring st, West Roxbury, Monday afternoon, and give a concert for the disabled veterans of the World War.

Groups of these veterans have been guests at the Pops on several occasions during the season now ending, but about 200 of the nerve and shell-shock cases are unable to leave the hospital.

The concert was arranged through the Community Service Bureau, and the suggestion of Miss Elenora Snelling, its vice-chairman, was met with immediate acquiescence by Conductor Jacchia.

PROGRAMS FOR COMING WEEK

HERALD JUNE 13

Varied and Interesting Numbers for "Pop" Concerts

Several special programs will be given in the coming week of Pop concerts, Mr. Jacchia, director, in Symphony hall, which is the seventh of the season.

Tomorrow's concert has been taken over by Boston University, but all other nights are open to the public. Programs follow:

(Featuring Scandinavian Music.)

TUESDAY, JUNE 15

Entrance of the Guests into the Warburg, from "Tannhuser".....Wagner
Overture to "Poet and Peasant".....Suppe
Prelude in C sharp minor.....Rachmaninov
Fantasia, "Aida".....Verdi
Suit "Sigurd Jorsalfar" .....Grieg
a In the Hall of the King
b Festival March
Saeterjentens Sondag (Solitude on the Mountain) .....Bull-Svendsen
Swedish Wedding March.....Soderman
Second Norwegian Rhapsody.....Svendsen
Finlandia, Symphonic Poem.....Sibelius
Humoresque .....Tchaikovsky-Jacchia
Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube" Strauss

WEDNESDAY

Triumphal March from "Aida".....Verdi
Overture, "Jubilee".....Weber
Fantasia, "Eugen Onegin".....Tchaikovsky
Boston Saxophone Orchestra
(Abdon F. Laus, Conductor)
a March from "Tannhaeuser".....Wagner
b Fantasia, "Faust".....Gounod
c Carry Me Back to Old Virginny.Bland-Laus
Rumanian Rhapsody.....Enesco
Dance of the Priestesses of Dagon, from "Samson and Delilah".....Saint-Saens
Ride of the Valkyries.....Wagner
Boston Saxophone Orchestra
a The Lost Chord.....Sullivan-Laus
b Hawaiian Waltz, "Kilama Wailana" Lau-Kaili
c Indian Love Lyric, "Temple Bells".Finden
d Fast asleep in Poppyland (Chinese Story) .....Gay
Ballet of the Hours, from "La Gioconda" Ponchielli
Prelude No. 6.....Chopin-Jacchia
Indian War Dance.....Skilton

THURSDAY—BUNKER HILL DAY

Marche Militaire.....Saint-Saens
Overture to "Light Cavalry".....Suppe
Serenade, "Trastullo" .....Langendoen
Fantasia, "Madam Butterfly".....Puccini
Suite, "Peer Gynt".....Grieg
Morning mood—In the Troll King's Grotto.
Ave Maria from "Otbello".....Verdi
Rhapsody in Blue.....Gershwin
(Piano solo, Mr. Sanroma.)
Ballet from "The Cid".....Massenet
Castillane Andalouse—Aragonaise.
Aubade Printaiere.....Lacombe
American Fantasy.....Herbert

FRIDAY

March, "Sambre et Meuse"..Planquette-Turlet
Overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" .....Nicolai
Serenade .....Drigo
Fantasia, L'Oracolo.....Leoni
Introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin"..Wagner
La Campanella.....Handel-Jacchia
Preghiera.....Von Doenhoff-Press
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
Suite, "Nutcracker".....Tchaikovsky
Arabian dance, "Dance of the Penny Whistles" .....Trepak
Cordoba .....Albeniz-Jacchia
Waltz, "Pomone".....Waldteufel

SATURDAY

March, "El Capitan".....Sousa
Overture to "Orpheus".....Offenbach
Largo from "Xerxes".....Handel
Fantasia, "Il Trovatore".....Verdi
Marche Slave .....Tchaikovsky
Legend .....Holy
Prelude in D-flat.....Glazounov-Jacchia
Overture to "Rienzi".....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor".Borodin
Berceuse from "Jocelyn".....Godard
(Solo 'cello, Mr. Laugendoen.)
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

RUSSIAN-TCHAIKOVSKY PROGRAM—LAST SUNDAY CONCERT—June 20

Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla"....Glinka
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninov
(Mr. Kassman.)
Violin solo, Souvenir of Moscow.....Wieniavsky
Russian Scherzo.....Levenson
Third Movement, "Scheherazade" Rimsky-Korsakov
(The Prince and the Princess.)
Islamey, Oriental Fantasy....Balakirev-Casella
Capriccio Italien.....Tchaikovsky
Andante Cantabile.....Tchaikovsky
Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker" (a) Miniature Overture; (b) The Sugar Fairy; (c) Chinese Dance; (d) Waltz of the Flowers .....Tchaikovsky
Ouverture Solennelle, "1812".....Tchaikovsky

PLAY JAZZ AT POP CONCERTS

JUNE 15 TRAVELER

Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" Performed—To Be Repeated

Super-jazz, represented by George Gershwin's famous "Rhapsody in Blue," was the feature of the Bunker Hill day program at the Symphony Hall Pops.

Although the Pops' audiences have long been accustomed to hearing popular music of the operetta, ballad and waltz varieties, this was the first real jazz to crash into Symphony hall since Paul Whiteman's appearance there.

It was Whiteman who introduced the "Rhapsody in Blue" at his first jazz concert in Symphony hall two years ago. At that time the young composer played the piano part. This time the Pops orchestra, made up of Boston Symphony players and conducted by Agide Jacchia, used the version scored for symphony orchestra, and Jesus Sanroma, pianist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, was soloist.

The "Rhapsody" is a synthetitc sort of music, aimed to bridge the gap between jazz and classical music. Gershwin, known as the gifted composer of many popular hits, has combined jazz tunes and rhythms with classical form. This was his first ambitious undertaking—he has since written a jazz concerto for symphony orchestra—and it has made quite a hit with highbrows than with lowbrows, since unlike most jazz, at first hearing it seems complex.

Last Two Weeks of Pops

The Pop concerts in Symphony Hall, now in their last week but one of their 41st season, offer several special programs of interest. Tonight there will be a program of favorites by the master composers, a new departure at the Pops. Wednesday there will be the annual Italian program, featuring operatic and other numbers. Saturday, Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" will be repeated, and next Monday will bring the last Wagner program.

Last night the "Pops" orchestra played its first request program, made up in accordance with a popular vote by the audiences, and the patrons bore down on the box office in such numbers that hundreds were turned away.

So much did the demand for tickets exceed the supply that the management announced that it would repeat the request program on Thursday evening, July 1. Globe JUNE 22

MEANING OF 'POPS' SIMPLE

Post JUNE 13

Is Just Contraction of Popular Concerts

Thousands of enquiries have been received by the management of the Symphony Hall "Pops" as to just what is the derivation of the word "Pops." Many answers have been set forth, including the "popping" of corks that was so popular during the pre-prohibition days.

But the real reason and the real answer is none other than that the word "Pops" is a shortened term for the words "popular concerts." In the olden days, these concerts were known as popular concerts, but as this was a common term used of concerts in general, the idea of abbreviating it was hit upon and the word "Pops" came into use. This word met with immediate approval and has ever since been used to designate these entertaining musical programmes.

"RHAPSODY IN BLUE" HEARD AT THE POPS

Globe JUNE 18

George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," played last night for the first time at the Pops, is the first jazz piece to figure on a Pop concert program. If the rousing reception given it by a capacity audience is any test, jazz will henceforth find a regular place in the Pops repertory, as other American popular music such as Sousa's marches and old-style musical comedy pieces have long since done.

The "Rhapsody in Blue," first played here two years ago by Paul Whiteman's orchestra, with Gershwin himself taking the tremendously difficult piano part, has won much favorable comment from musicians and writers about music. It is perhaps "highbrow jazz," too complicated for the careless listener to follow with ease. But its originality and vitality are so great that it would not be out of place on a Symphony concert program.

Gershwin, as a result of the success of this "Rhapsody," has since written by request of the New York Symphony Orchestra a piano concerto, which was played at Symphony concerts last Winter in New York and elsewhere.

Jesus Sanroma acquitted himself very creditably last night in the piano solo, though one wished he had played with a more sustained yet varied rhythmic energy.

Mr Jacchia and the orchestra seemed a bit constrained, not yet thoroughly at home in what for most of them is a new musical field. The Rhapsody has been rescored for ordinary orchestral instruments, some of them muted, which alters its tone color a bit.

The programs last night announced a repetition of Gershwin's piece for June 26. P. R.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

JUN

Symphony to Use the Albee Theatre

The management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is pleased to announce a record response from the Providence subscribers to these concerts in the renewals for next season. Since the E. F. Albee Theatre is larger than Infantry Hall, the former auditorium now being demolished, and the seating conveniences much superior, it will be possible for any who wish to become subscribers to obtain excellent seats at all prices. Those interested are invited to apply for specific information to Symphony Hall, Boston.

The use of the Albee Theatre comes as a gratifying solution to the predicament caused by the loss of Infantry Hall which has housed these concerts for years. The engagement of the theatre, made possible by the generous activities of a group of Providence citizens, is evidence of the kind of support which New England's great orchestra enjoys in this city.

An eventful and enjoyable season is anticipated. The concerts will be given on five Tuesday evenings, as usual, by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 musicians in what will be the third season of Serge Koussevitzky, the celebrated Russian conductor.

Koussevitzky is now in Paris conducting his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" there. Reports come of the crowded audiences and demonstrations at each concert. The conductor will consult with European composers and the music publishers regarding new scores, and after spending the remainder of the summer in well earned rest in provincial France, will return in the early autumn to open the Boston Symphony season in Boston, in October. The Providence series will be given on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

Next Winter

Announcement comes from the management of the Boston Symphony orchestra of an unusually large response fro mProvidence subscribers in renewals for next season. It is further stated that the seating capacity and convenience of the E. F. Albee theatre, in which these concerts are to be given, makes it possible to offer good seats at all prices to prospective new subscribers. Dealed information can be obtained from W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony hall, Boston. Payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn.

Leader Koussevitzky is now in Europe conducting with much success his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. He will return to America in the autumn to open the Boston symphony season next October. The Providence concerts will be given on Tuesday evenings, Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Globe June 13

Boston Saxophone Orchestra

The Boston Saxophone Orchestra, Abdon Laus, conductor, will play two groups of numbers at the Pop concert Wednesday. Mr Laus, bassoon player in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has assembled a group of about 50 men and women interested in the saxophone, divided them into the requisite groups playing the different forms of that versatile instrument so as to have the saxophone equivalents of the soprano, alto, tenor, and bass of a chorus, and achieved interesting results. This orchestra gave a concert last Winter at Symphony Hall which extraordinarily bad weather prevented many people from attending.

The saxophone nowadays is commonly thought of only as an instrument indispensable in jazz bands. But it has a long and not ignoble history independent of jazz. The inventor, Sax, hoped to see his instrument firmly established as a member of the usual symphony orchestra. Although several serious composers, whom posterity has decided to call great, have written orchestral and operatic works with parts scored for saxophones, the instrument has not become a member of the orchestral family, because its possibilities have not sufficiently interested composers and conductors.

Mr Laus believes strongly in the possibilities of the saxophone as applied to standard music. He is not especially interested in its use in jazz. So Wednesday night the Pops audience will hear the march from "Tannhauser," excerpts from "Faust," arrangements of "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," and of "The Lost Chord," performed by the saxophone orchestra. It would be interesting if Mr Jacchia and the Pops orchestra would play the original version of the "Tannhauser" march so that the saxophone version might be readily compared with it.

Jazz at the Pops

The Boston Saxophone Orchestra at its concert last Winter was assisted by a few strings, chiefly double basses, and by kettle drums, not to mention the organ for "The Lost Chord." There is a contra bass saxophone of huge proportions, but giving forth a tone not capable of serving as a firm foundation for the harmony. The bass part in any concerted piece of music is, of course, quite as important as the soprano, because upon it the harmony depends.

Mr Laus may offer the audience a little jazz among the encores. He plans to give several pieces of the type of Amy Woodford Finden's "Temple Bells," sentimental salon pieces.

There ought, of course, to be a good deal of jazz at the Pops if they are to make any pretense of representing American popular music. It is far from certain that the orchestra could play much jazz effectively, because, for one thing, it does not contain the right instruments for jazz. But this fault could be remedied.

Certainly George Gershwin and Irving Berlin have written music which is far more representative of America and far better, more alive, more attractive, than the work of such composers as Nevin and Cadman, or Hadley and Horatio Parker. Of the older music that can be called American and in any sense popular, only the work of Stephen Foster and of Sousa seems as much alive today as Gershwin and Berlin. Hence it is good news that Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" will be played Thursday night.

It is a pity to have a saxophone orchestra that does not play jazz. It is probably an even greater pity to have the saxophone restricted to the sort of thing that it does in amateur jazz bands. But the saxophones in Whiteman's orchestra certainly justify their artistic existence.

Mr Laus, an excellent musician, ought to be able to get his saxophone orchestra to play some of the best jazz effectively, as well as to continue his interesting experiments in rescoring standard music for saxophone. What he would doubtless like would be a composer who would write for saxophone orchestra. But that is Utopian.

Meanwhile persons interested in new and experimental phases of music ought not to overlook the interesting performance and the often highly attractive musical effects secured by Mr Laus and his Boston Saxophone Orchestra.

Seventh Week of the Pops

There is no Pop concert tonight at Symphony Hall, and the concert Monday night is not open to the general public. Programs for the rest of the week are announced as follows: Tuesday, June 15—Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg, from "Tannhauser," Wagner; Overture to "Poet and Peasant," Suppe; Prelude in C-sharp minor, Rachmaninov; Fantasia, "Aida," Verdi; Suite, "Sigurd Jorsalfar," Grieg; "Solitude on the Mountain," Bull-Svendsen; "Swedish Wedding March," Soderman; Second Norwegian Rhapsody, Svendsen; "Finlandia," Symphonic Poem, Sibelius; Humoresque, Tchaikovsky-Jacchia; Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," Strauss.

Wednesday, June 16—Triumphal March from "Aida," Verdi; Overture, "Jubilee," Weber; Fantasia, "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky; Boston Saxophone Orchestra, Abdon F. Laus, conductor; "Rumanian Rhapsody," Enesco; Dance of the Priestesses of Dagon, from "Samson and Delilah," Saint-Saens; "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner; Boston Saxophone Orchestra; Ballet of the Hours, from "La Gioconda," Ponchielli; Prelude No. 6, Chopin-Jacchia; "Indian War Dance," Skilton.

Thursday, June 17—"Marche Militaire," Saint-Saens; Overture to "Light Cavalry," Suppe; serenade, "Trastullo," Langendoen; fantasia, "Madam Butterfly," Puccini; suite, "Peer Gynt," Grieg; Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky; "Ave Maria" from "Othello," Verdi; "Rhapsody in Blue," piano solo, Jesus Sanroma, Gershwin; ballet from "The Cid," Massenet; "Aubade Printaniere," Lacombe; "American Fantasy," Herbert.

Friday, June 18—March, "Sambre et Meuse," Planquette-Turlet; overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Nicolai; serenade, Drigo; fantasia, L. Oracolo, Leoni; introduction to Act III. "Lohengrin," Wagner; "La Campanella," Handel-Jacchia; "Preghiera," Von Doenhoff-Press; "Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody," Liszt; suite, "Nutcracker," Tchaikovsky; "Cordoba," Albeniz-Jacchia; waltz, "Pomone," Waldteufel.

Saturday, June 19—March, "El Capitan," Sousa; overture to "Orpheus," Offenbach; Largo from "Xerxes," Handel; fantasia, "Il Trovatore," Verdi; "Marche Slave," Tchaikovsky; "Legend," Holy; prelude in D flat, Glazounor-Jacchia; overture to "Rienzi," Wagner; Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin; Beceuse from "Jocelyn," Godard; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel.

Last Sunday Concert, June 20—Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Glinka; Serenade, Op 3, No. 5, Rachmaninov; violin solo, "Souvenir of Moscow," Wieniavsky; Russian Scherzo, Levenson; Third Movement "Scheherazade," Rimsky-Korsakov; Islamey, Oriental fantasy, Balakirev-Casella; Capriccio Italien, Andante Cantabile, ballet suite "Nutcracker," and Overture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky.

Music Notes and Comment

There is no Pop concert tonight, as the players will take their fortnightly evening off. Tomorrow night the entire hall has been taken by Boston University. There will be a Russian-Tchaikovsky program at the last of the Sunday concerts next Sunday night. Mr Jacchia's programs for the rest of the week are as usual attractive minglings of salon, operatic and standard music. Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" to be given Thursday night with Jesus Sanroma taking the very difficult piano part, is a notable musical event of the week. Comment on Mr Laus' Boston Saxophone Orchestra, to be heard Wednesday night, will be found elsewhere in this department today.

Albert Spalding has sailed for Europe for a season in Belgium, Holland and Paris, returning Oct 2 to resume his American tour in Detroit. Marie Kurenko, Russian soprano, has sailed for a Summer season in the Scandinavian countries, returning to begin her second American season Oct 11 in Detroit. Josef Hofmann has sailed for London to open his season there June 18. He begins his American tour Nov 8 in Detroit.

Leopold Godowsky, pianist-composer, has returned to New York from a tour of 14 countries of the Near East and Europe, during which he played at more than 60 concerts. He will return to Europe in August for another season of concerts. Mr Godowsky found music in Southern Europe and in Poland at a standstill. He noted intensive musical activity in Palestine. He will return to America in 1927, bringing a sonata in E minor that he considers decidedly advanced and modern in form.

Next season the New York Symphony Orchestra will play a symphony by George Antheil, who was born in Trenton, N J, and who now lives in Paris. This was one of the manuscripts Mr Damrosch brought home

FREE PRESS
DETROIT, MICH.
JUN 13 192

feature of a recent Paris con- t was the introduction there of ron Copland's "Music for the eater," which Koussevitzky, con- ctor of the Boston symphony ve its first American performan- ces last season. The young ooklyn composer was called to e stage of the Paris opera house, d warmly applauded by the audi- ice which filled to overflowing the istoric auditorium. The program ikewise included a concerto of Vivaldi in E minor, Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel," Roussel's "Padmavati" and Respighi's "Pines of Rome." The remaining concerts will take place on May 27, June 3 and June 12.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BILLBOARD
JUN 19 1926

Pierre Monteux, French conductor, formerly of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been engaged to conduct concerts in Moscow, Leningrad, Stockholm and Berlin.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JUN 12 192

SALE OF SEATS FOR BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS TO BEGIN

The sale of seats for the five concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be given in the Albee Theatre during the coming season, starts in Boston at Symphony Hall on Monday. Tickets will not be sold here until one week before the concert series opens. Information regarding the seats is available through W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony Hall, Boston, who announces that payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn

The orchestra management is greatly elated over the engagement of the Albee Theatre for the concert series, following the loss of Infantry Hall, which had been the orchestra's home here for many years, according to Mr. Brennan. The use of the Albee was made possible through the generosity of a number of persons here, and that generosity, combined with the flood of applications for tickets already experienced, attests the popularity of the orchestra in Providence.

Serge Koussevitzky, who has had Providence at his feet, is now conducting his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. Following this series, he will rest during the remainder of the summer and will return to America in the fall, to open the season at Symphony Hall. The Providence concerts will be given on the following five Tuesday evenings: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15. Seats will not be on sale in Providence until the week before the first concert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JUN 13 192

There has been a record response from Providence subscribers for the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series here next season, according to the management. In view of the fact that the Albee Theatre, where the orchestra will play next year, is larger than Infantry Hall, it is still possible for subscribers to obtain seats in any part of the theatre. The concerts will be given on five Tuesday evenings, Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan 18 and Feb. 15, and it will be Serge Koussevitzky's third season as conductor of the orchestra.

The celebrated Russian musician is now in Paris conducting his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky." He will consult European composers and music publishers about new scores, and, after spending the remainder of the summer resting in France, will return to open the Boston Symphony season next October.

* * *

TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.
JUN 12 1926

Boston Symphony Season.

Announcement comes from the management of the Boston Symphony orchestra of an unusually large response from the Providence subscribers in their renewals for next season. It is further stated that the superiority to Infantry Hall in seating capacity and convenience of the E. F. Albee Theatre, in which these concerts are to be given, makes it possible to offer good seats at all prices to prospective new subscribers. Any who are interested are invited to apply for detailed information to W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony Hall, Boston. Payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn.

The engagement of the Albee Theatre comes as a gratifying solution to the problem raised by the demolishing of Infantry Hall, which has housed the Boston Symphony in Providence for many years. This use of the Albee Theatre was made possible through the generous activities of a numbre of Providence citizens, which gives eloquent evidence of the public support of Providence to New England's great orchestra.

Koussevitzky is now in Europe conducting with much success his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. After resting for the remainder of the summer, he will return to America in the autumn to open the Boston Symphony season in Boston next October. The Providence concerts will be given on the following five Tuesday evenings: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PHILADELPHIA
PUBLIC LEDGER
JUN 13 1926

GOOSSENS SAYS ORCHESTRA HERE IS WORLD'S BEST

Famous Conductor Praises Philadelphia Symphony on Return to England

SAYS STOKOWSKI HAS RARE GIFT IN "ATTACK"

Britain Has Much to Learn About Music From America, He Asserts

Public Ledger Foreign Service

Copyright, 1926, by Public Ledger

London, June 12.—"I have no hesitation in saying that the Philadelphia Orchestra is the finest orchestra in the world today," said Eugene Goossens, the English conductor, just returned here from his fourth visit to America, to your correspondent in an interview. "The Boston Symphony, which I conducted as a guest during the last season, has a string tone that is probably unsurpassed, but there are just a few more inches of finish on the Philadelphia all round.

"Its precision is nothing short of wonderful, and for this Leopold Stokowski is resonsible. He has the rare gift of 'attack,' which is rare even in great conductors—that gift of a definite beat which makes every man in the orchestra breathe more freely because he feels secure. With such a conductor there can be no roughness, and no uncertainty.

LAST SUNDAY 'POPS' BILL TOMORROW

American June 19

A popular program will be given by Agide Jacchia and his "Pops" orchestra at Symphony Hall tonight. Tomorrow there will be given the last Sunday concert of the season with a Russian-Tchaikovsky program.

The two programs are.

SATURDAY

March, "El Capitan".....Sousa
Overture to "Orpheus".....Offenbach
Largo from "Xerxes".....Handel
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Il Trovatore".....Verdi
Marche Slave.....Tchaikovsky
Legend.....Holy
Prelude in D-flat.....Glazounov-Jacchia
Overture to "Rienzi".....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor".....Borodin
Berceuse from "Jocelyn".....Godard
(Solo 'Cello—Jacobus Langendoen)
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

SUNDAY

Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Glinka
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Raohmaninov
Violin Solo: Souvenir of Moscow, Wieniavsky
(Nicholai Kassman)
Russian Scherzo.....Levenson
Third Movement, "Scheherazade," Rimsky-Korsakov
The Prince and the Princess
Islamey, Oriental Fantasy.....Balakirev
(Orchestrated by A. Casella)
Capriccio Italien; Andante Cantabile; Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker"; a, Miniature Overture; b, Dance of the Sugar Fairy; c, Chinese Dance; d, Waltz of the Flowers; Ouverture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky.

— — — —

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Globe JUNE 13

Boston Saxophone Orchestra

The Boston Saxophone Orchestra, Abdon Laus, conductor, will play two groups of numbers at the Pop concert Wednesday. Mr Laus, bassoon player in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has assembled a group of about 50 men and women interested in the saxophone, divided them into the requisite groups playing the different forms of that versatile instrument so as to have the saxophone equivalents of the soprano, alto, tenor, and bass of a chorus, and achieved interesting results. This orchestra gave a concert last Winter at Symphony Hall which extraordinarily bad weather prevented many people from attending.

The saxophone nowadays is commonly thought of only as an instrument indispensable in jazz bands. But it has a long and not ignoble history independent of jazz. The inventor, Sax, hoped to see his instrument firmly established as a member of the usual symphony orchestra. Although several serious composers, whom posterity has decided to call great, have written orchestral and operatic works with parts scored for saxophones, the instrument has not become a member of the orchestral family, because its possibilities have not sufficiently interested composers and conductors.

Mr Laus believes strongly in the possibilities of the saxophone as applied to standard music. He is not especially interested in its use in jazz. So Wednesday night the Pops audience will hear the march from "Tannhauser," excerpts from "Faust," arrangements of "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," and of "The Lost Chord," performed by the saxophone orchestra. It would be interesting if Mr Jacchia and the Pops orchestra would play the original version of the "Tannhauser" march so that the saxophone version might be readily compared with it.

Jazz at the Pops

The Boston Saxophone Orchestra at its concert last Winter was assisted by a few strings, chiefly double basses, and by kettle drums, not to mention the organ for "The Lost Chord." There is a contra bass saxophone of huge proportions, but giving forth a tone not capable of serving as a firm foundation for the harmony. The bass part in any concerted piece of music is, of course, quite as important as the soprano, because upon it the harmony depends.

Mr Laus may offer the audience a little jazz among the encores. He plans to give several pieces of the type of Amy Woodford Finden's "Temple Bells," sentimental salon pieces.

There ought, of course, to be a good deal of jazz at the Pops if they are to make any pretense of representing American popular music. It is far from certain that the orchestra could play much jazz effectively, because, for one thing, it does not contain the right instruments for jazz. But this fault could be remedied.

Certainly George Gershwin and Irving Berlin have written music which is far more representative of America and far better, more alive, more attractive, than the work of such composers as Nevin and Cadman, or Hadley and Horatio Parker. Of the older music that can be called American and in any sense popular, only the work of Stephen Foster and of Sousa seems as much alive today as Gershwin and Berlin. Hence it is good news that Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" will be played Thursday night.

It is a pity to have a saxophone orchestra that does not play jazz. It is probably an even greater pity to have the saxophone restricted to the sort of thing that it does in amateur jazz bands. But the saxophones in Whiteman's orchestra certainly justify their artistic existence.

Mr Laus, an excellent musician, ought to be able to get his saxophone orchestra to play some of the best jazz effectively, as well as to continue his interesting experiments in rescoring standard music for saxophone. What he would doubtless like would be a composer who would write for saxophone orchestra. But that is Utopian.

Meanwhile persons interested in new and experimental phases of music ought not to overlook the interesting performance and the often highly attractive musical effects secured by Mr Laus and his Boston Saxophone Orchestra.

Seventh Week of the Pops

There is no Pop concert tonight at Symphony Hall, and the concert Monday night is not open to the general public. Programs for the rest of the week are announced as follows: Tuesday, June 15—Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg, from "Tannhauser," Wagner; Overture to "Poet and Peasant," Suppe; Prelude in C-sharp minor, Rachmaninov; Fantasia, "Aida," Verdi; Suite, "Sigurd Jorsalfar," Grieg; "Solitude on the Mountain," Bull-Svendsen; "Swedish Wedding March," Soderman; Second Norwegian Rhapsody, Svendsen; "Finlandia," Symphonic Poem, Sibelius; Humoresque, Tchaikovsky-Jacchia; Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," Strauss.

Wednesday, June 16—Triumphal March from "Aida," Verdi; Overture, "Jubilee," Weber; Fantasia, "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky; Boston Saxophone Orchestra, Abdon F. Laus, conductor; "Rumanian Rhapsody," Enesco; Dance of the Priestesses of Dagon, from "Samson and Delilah," Saint-Saens; "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner; Boston Saxophone Orchestra; Ballet of the Hours, from "La Gioconda," Ponchielli; Prelude No. 6, Chopin-Jacchia; "Indian War Dance," Skilton.

Thursday, June 17—"Marche Militaire," Saint-Saens; Overture to "Light Cavalry," Suppe; serenade, "Trastullo," Langendoen; fantasia, "Madam Butterfly," Puccini; suite, "Peer Gynt," Grieg; Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky; "Ave Maria" from "Othello," Verdi; "Rhapsody in Blue," piano solo, Jesus Sanroma, Gershwin; ballet from "The Cid," Massenet; "Aubade Printaniere," Lacombe; "American Fantasy," Herbert.

Friday, June 18—March, "Sambre et Meuse," Planquette-Turlet; overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Nicolai; serenade, Drigo; fantasia, L. Oracolo, Leoni; introduction to Act III, "Lohengrin," Wagner; "La Campanella," Handel-Jacchia; "Preghiera," Von Doenhoff-Press; "Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody," Liszt; suite, "Nutcracker," Tchaikovsky; "Cordoba," Albeniz-Jacchia; waltz, "Pomone," Waldteufel.

Saturday, June 19—March, "El Capitan," Sousa; overture to "Orpheus," Offenbach; Largo from "Xerxes," Handel; fantasia, "Il Trovatore," Verdi; "Marche Slave," Tchaikovsky; "Legend," Holy; prelude in D flat, Glazounor-Jacchia; overture to "Rienzi," Wagner; Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin; Berceuse from "Jocelyn," Godard; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel.

Last Sunday Concert, June 20—Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Glinka; Serenade, Op 3, No. 5, Rachmaninov; violin solo, "Souvenir of Moscow," Wieniavsky; Russian Scherzo, Levenson; Third Movement "Scheherazade," Rimsky-Korsakov; Islamey, Oriental fantasy, Balakirev-Casella; Capriccio Italien, Andante Cantabile, ballet suite "Nutcracker," and Overture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky.

Music Notes and Comment

There is no Pop concert tonight, as the players will take their fortnightly evening off. Tomorrow night the entire hall has been taken by Boston University. There will be a Russian-Tchaikovsky program at the last of the Sunday concerts next Sunday night. Mr Jacchia's programs for the rest of the week are as usual attractive minglings of salon, operatic and standard music. Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" to be given Thursday night with Jesus Sanroma taking the very difficult piano part, is a notable musical event of the week. Comment on Mr Laus' Boston Saxophone Orchestra, to be heard Wednesday night, will be found elsewhere in this department today.

Albert Spalding has sailed for Europe for a season in Belgium, Holland and Paris, returning Oct 2 to resume his American tour in Toronto. Marie Kurenko, Russian soprano, has sailed for a Summer season in the Scandinavian countries, returning to begin her second American season Oct 11 in Detroit. Josef Hofmann has sailed for London to open his season there June 18. He begins his American tour Nov 8 in Detroit.

Leopold Godowsky, pianist-composer, has returned to New York from a tour of 14 countries of the Near East and Europe, during which he played at more than 60 concerts. He will return to Europe in August for another season of concerts. Mr Godowsky found music in Southern Europe and in Poland at a standstill. He noted intensive musical activity in Palestine. He will return to America in 1927, bringing a sonata in E minor that he considers decidedly advanced and modern in form.

Next season the New York Symphony Orchestra will play a symphony by George Antheil, who was born in Trenton, N J, and who now lives in Paris. This was one of the manuscripts Mr Damrosch brought home

FREE PRESS
DETROIT, MICH.

JUN 13 1926

A feature of a recent Paris con- it was the introduction there of ron Copland's "Music for the eater," which Koussevitzky, con- ctor of the Boston symphony ve its first American performces last season. The young ooklyn composer was called to e stage of the Paris opera house, d warmly applauded by the audi- ice which filled to overflowing the istoric auditorium. The program likewise included a concerto of Vivaldi in E minor, Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel," Roussel's "Padmavati" and Respighi's "Pines of Rome." The remaining concerts will take place on May 27, June 3 and June 12.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BILLBOARD

JUN 19 1926

Pierre Monteux, French conductor, formerly of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been engaged to conduct concerts in Moscow, Leningrad, Stockholm and Berlin.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

JUN 12 1926

SALE OF SEATS FOR BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS TO BEGIN

The sale of seats for the five concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be given in the Albee Theatre during the coming season, starts in Boston at Symphony Hall on Monday. Tickets will not be sold here until one week before the concert series opens. Information regarding the seats is available through W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony Hall, Boston, who announces that payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn

The orchestra management is greatly elated over the engagement of the Albee Theatre for the concert series, following the loss of Infantry Hall, which had been the orchestra's home here for many years, according to Mr. Brennan. The use of the Albee was made possible through the generosity of a number of persons here, and that generosity, combined with the flood of applications for tickets already experienced, attests the popularity of the orchestra in Providence.

Serge Koussevitzky, who has had Providence at his feet, is now conducting his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. Following this series, he will rest during the remainder of the summer and will return to America in the fall, to open the season at Symphony Hall. The Providence concerts will be given on the following five Tuesday evenings: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15. Seats will not be on sale in Providence until the week before the first concert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

There has been a record response from Providence subscribers for the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series here next season, according to the management. In view of the fact that the Albee Theatre, where the orchestra will play next year, is larger than Infantry Hall, it is still possible for subscribers to obtain seats in any part of the theatre. The concerts will be given on five Tuesday evenings, Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan 18 and Feb. 15, and it will be Serge Koussevitzky's third season as conductor of the orchestra.

The celebrated Russian musician is now in Paris conducting his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky." He will consult European composers and music publishers about new scores, and, after spending the remainder of the summer resting in France, will return to open the Boston Symphony season next October.

* * *

TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.

JUN 12 1926

Boston Symphony Season.

Announcement comes from the management of the Boston Symphony orchestra of an unusually large response from the Providence subscribers in their renewals for next season. It is further stated that the superiority to Infantry Hall in seating capacity and convenience of the E. F. Albee Theatre, in which these concerts are to be given, makes it possible to offer good seats at all prices to prospective new subscribers. Any who are interested are invited to apply for detailed information to W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony Hall, Boston. Payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn.

The engagement of the Albee Theatre comes as a gratifying solution to the problem raised by the demolishing of Infantry Hall, which has housed the Boston Symphony in Providence for many years. This use of the Albee Theatre was made possible through the generous activities of a numbre of Providence citizens, which gives eloquent evidence of the public support of Providence to New England's great orchestra.

Koussevitzky is now in Europe conducting with much success his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. After resting for the remainder of the summer, he will return to America in the autumn to open the Boston Symphony season in Boston next October. The Providence concerts will be given on the following five Tuesday evenings: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PHILADELPHIA
PUBLIC LEDGER

JUN 13 1926

GOOSSENS SAYS ORCHESTRA HERE IS WORLD'S BEST

Famous Conductor Praises Philadelphia Symphony on Return to England

SAYS STOKOWSKI HAS RARE GIFT IN "ATTACK"

Britain Has Much to Learn About Music From America, He Asserts

Public Ledger Foreign Service

Copyright, 1926, by Public Ledger

London, June 12.—"I have no hesitation in saying that the Philadelphia Orchestra is the finest orchestra in the world today," said Eugene Goossens, the English conductor, just returned here from his fourth visit to America, to your correspondent in an interview. "The Boston Symphony, which I conducted as a guest during the last season, has a string tone that is probably unsurpassed, but there are just a few more inches of finish on the Philadelphia all round.

"Its precision is nothing short of wonderful, and for this Leopold Stokowski is resonsible. He has the rare gift of 'attack,' which is rare even in great conductors—that gift of a definite beat which makes every man in the orchestra breathe more freely because he feels secure. With such a conductor there can be no roughness, and no uncertainty.

LAST SUNDAY 'POPS' BILL TOMORROW

AMERICAN JUNE 19

A popular program will be given by Agide Jacchia and his "Pops" orchestra at Symphony Hall tonight. Tomorrow there will be given the last Sunday concert of the season with a Russian-Tchaikovsky program.

The two programs are.

SATURDAY

March, "El Capitan".....Sousa
Overture to "Orpheus".....Offenbach
Largo from "Xerxes".....Handel
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Il Trovatore".....Verdi
Marche Slave.....Tchaikovsky
Legend.....Holy
Prelude in D-flat.....Glazounov-Jacchia
Overture to "Rienzi".....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor"
Borodin
Berceuse from "Jocelyn".....Godard
(Solo 'Cello—Jacobus Langendoen)
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

SUNDAY

Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Glinka
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninov
Violin Solo: Souvenir of Moscow, Wieniavsky
(Nicholai Kassman)
Russian Scherzo.....Levenson
Third Movement, "Scheherazade,"
Rimsky-Korsakov
The Prince and the Princess
Islamey, Oriental Fantasy.....Balakirev
(Orchestrated by A. Casella)
Capriccio Italien; Andante Cantabile; Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker": a, Miniature Overture; b, Dance of the Sugar Fairy; c, Chinese Dance; d, Waltz of the Flowers; Ouverture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky.

Mr. Dupree.

15,000 ATTEND POPS EVERY WEEK

Announcement is made by the "Pops" management at Symphony Hall that the present season, the 41st annual, is proving the greatest ever, with an average weekly attendance of 15,000 men, women and children. Provided the present stream of music lovers of hear the nightly pro-

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 16

At the Pops Tomorrow

Evening of Bunker Hill

Military March.....Saint-Saëns
Overture, "Light Cavalry".....Suppé
Serenade, "Trastullo".....Langendoen
Fantasia, "Madama Butterfly"..Puccini
Suite, "Peer Gynt".....Grieg
Morning Mood—In the Troll King's Grotto
Ave Maria from "Othello".....Verdi
Rhapsody in Blue.....Gershwin
Ballet from "The Cid".....Massenet
Castillane—Andalouse—Aragonaise
Aubade Printanière.....Lacombe
American Fantasy.....Herbert

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Pianist: J. Sanromá

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
HERALD-TRIBUNE

JUN 23 1926

Louis Svecenski, Noted Violist, Dies in Hospital

Was a Member of Kneisel Quartet for Thirty-two Years

Louis Svecenski, Jugo-Slavian violist, for thirty-two years a member of the Kneisel Quartet, died in Lenox Hill Hospital yesterday after a long illness.

He was sixty-two years old. He was a life long friend of Franz Kneisel, who died two months ago.

Svecenski was born in Esseg November 6, 1864. He was educated at the University of Agram and was a classmate of Fritz Kreisler. He came to America in 1885 and became a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

He had been a teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its foundation in 1904. He also was the founder of the class of chamber music at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia.

He was one of the founders and a member of the board of governors of The Bohemians, Inc. He also was vice-president of the Beethoven Society. His wife and two daughters survive.

Funeral services will be held at the Campbell Funeral Chapel, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, on Monday at 10 o'clock.

Post June 23

926

JAZZ FOR POPS

Jesus Sanroma, piano soloist, to feature at the Pops Symphony renditions of Gershwin's famous "Rhapsody in Blue."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
AMERICAN

Musicians to Honor Louis Szecenski

Many persons prominent in the musical world will attend funeral services tomorrow morning for Louis Szecenski, noted violinist and former member of the Kneisel Quartet, who died Friday in the Lenox Hill Hospital.

Louis Svecenski.

The services will be conducted at 10 o'clock in the Funeral Church and will be characterized by an elaborate musical programme under the direction of Rubin Goldmark, the well known musician and composer. Among those who will render selections are a number of Mr. Ezecenski's pupils.

Members of the Beethoven Association, of which Mr. Szecenski was vice-president, and the Bohemians, of which he was a founder and member of the board of governors, will attend in a body.

Mr. Szecenski came to this country in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Later he became associated with the Kneisel Quartette. He had been a member of the faculty of the Institute of Musical Art since its foundation in 1904. He resided at No. 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Globe June 13

Boston Saxophone Orchestra

The Boston Saxophone Orchestra, Abdon Laus, conductor, will play two groups of numbers at the Pop concert Wednesday. Mr Laus, bassoon player in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has assembled a group of about 50 men and women interested in the saxophone, divided them into the requisite groups playing the different forms of that versatile instrument so as to have the saxophone equivalents of the soprano, alto, tenor, and bass of a chorus, and achieved interesting results. This orchestra gave a concert last Winter at Symphony Hall which extraordinarily bad weather prevented many people from attending.

The saxophone nowadays is commonly thought of only as an instrument indispensable in jazz bands. But it has a long and not ignoble history independent of jazz. The inventor, Sax, hoped to see his instrument firmly established as a member of the usual symphony orchestra. Although several serious composers, whom posterity has decided to call great, have written orchestral and operatic works with parts scored for saxophones, the instrument has not become a member of the orchestral family, because its possibilities have not sufficiently interested composers and conductors.

Mr Laus believes strongly in the possibilities of the saxophone as applied to standard music. He is not especially interested in its use in jazz. So Wednesday night the Pops audience will hear the march from "Tannhauser," excerpts from "Faust," arrangements of "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," and of "The Lost Chord," performed by the saxophone orchestra. It would be interesting if Mr Jacchia and the Pops orchestra would play the original version of the "Tannhauser" march so that the saxophone version might be readily compared with it.

Jazz at the Pops

The Boston Saxophone Orchestra at its concert last Winter was assisted by a few strings, chiefly double basses, and by kettle drums, not to mention the organ for "The Lost Chord." There is a contra bass saxophone of huge proportions, but giving forth a tone not capable of serving as a firm foundation for the harmony. The bass part in any concerted piece of music is, of course, quite as important as the soprano, because upon it the harmony depends.

Mr Laus may offer the audience a little jazz among the encores. He plans to give several pieces of the type of Amy Woodford Finden's "Temple Bells," sentimental salon pieces.

There ought, of course, to be a good deal of jazz at the Pops if they are to make any pretense of representing American popular music. It is far from certain that the orchestra could play much jazz effectively, because, for one thing, it does not contain the right instruments for jazz. But this fault could be remedied.

Certainly George Gershwin and Irving Berlin have written music which is far more representative of America and far better, more alive, more attractive, than the work of such composers as Nevin and Cadman, or Hadley and Horatio Parker. Of the older music that can be called American and in any sense popular, only the work of Stephen Foster and of Sousa seems as much alive today as Gershwin and Berlin. Hence it is good news that Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" will be played Thursday night.

It is a pity to have a saxophone orchestra that does not play jazz. It is probably an even greater pity to have the saxophone restricted to the sort of thing that it does in amateur jazz bands. But the saxophones in Whiteman's orchestra certainly justify their artistic existence.

Mr Laus, an excellent musician, ought to be able to get his saxophone orchestra to play some of the best jazz effectively, as well as to continue his interesting experiments in rescoring standard music for saxophone. What he would doubtless like would be a composer who would write for saxophone orchestra. But that is Utopian.

Meanwhile persons interested in new and experimental phases of music ought not to overlook the interesting performance and the often highly attractive musical effects secured by Mr Laus and his Boston Saxophone Orchestra.

Seventh Week of the Pops

There is no Pop concert tonight at Symphony Hall, and the concert Monday night is not open to the general public. Programs for the rest of the week are announced as follows: Tuesday, June 15—Entrance of the Guests into the Wartburg, from "Tannhauser," Wagner; Overture to "Poet and Peasant," Suppe; Prelude in C-sharp minor, Rachmaninov; Fantasia, "Aida," Verdi; Suite, "Sigurd Jorsalfar," Grieg; "Solitude on the Mountain," Bull-Svendsen; "Swedish Wedding March," Soderman; Second Norwegian Rhapsody, Svendsen; "Finlandia," Symphonic Poem, Sibelius; Humoresque, Tchaikovsky-Jacchia; Waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," Strauss.

Wednesday, June 16—Triumphal March from "Aida," Verdi; Overture, "Jubilee," Weber; Fantasia, "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky; Boston Saxophone Orchestra, Abdon F. Laus, conductor; "Rumanian Rhapsody," Enesco; Dance of the Priestesses of Dagon, from "Samson and Delilah," Saint-Saens; "Ride of the Valkyries," Wagner; Boston Saxophone Orchestra; Ballet of the Hours, from "La Gioconda," Ponchielli; Prelude No. 6, Chopin-Jacchia; "Indian War Dance," Skilton.

Thursday, June 17—"Marche Militaire," Saint-Saens; Overture to "Light Cavalry," Suppe; serenade, "Trastullo," Langendoen; fantasia, "Madam Butterfly," Puccini; suite, "Peer Gynt," Grieg; Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin," Tchaikovsky; "Ave Maria" from "Othello," Verdi; "Rhapsody in Blue," piano solo, Jesus Sanroma, Gershwin; ballet from "The Cid," Massenet; "Aubade Printaniere," Lacombe; "American Fantasy," Herbert.

Friday, June 18—March, "Sambre et Meuse," Planquette-Turlet; overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor," Nicolai; serenade, Drigo; fantasia, L. Oracolo, Leoni; introduction to Act III. "Lohengrin," Wagner; "La Campanella," Handel-Jacchia; "Preghiera," Von Doenhoff-Press; "Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody," Liszt; suite, "Nutcracker," Tchaikovsky; "Cordoba," Albeniz-Jacchia; waltz, "Pomone," Waldteufel.

Saturday, June 19—March, "El Capitan," Sousa; overture to "Orpheus," Offenbach; Largo from "Xerxes," Handel; fantasia, "Il Trovatore," Verdi; "Marche Slave," Tchaikovsky; "Legend," Holy; prelude in D flat, Glazounor-Jacchia; overture to "Rienzi," Wagner; Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," Borodin; Berceuse from "Jocelyn," Godard; waltz, "Espana," Waldteufel.

Last Sunday Concert, June 20—Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Glinka; Serenade, Op 3, No. 5, Rachmaninov; violin solo, "Souvenir of Moscow," Wieniavsky; Russian Scherzo, Levenson; Third Movement "Scheherazade," Rimsky-Korsakov; Islamey, Oriental fantasy, Balakirev-Casella; Capriccio Italien, Andante Cantabile, ballet suite "Nutcracker," and Overture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky.

Music Notes and Comment

There is no Pop concert tonight, as the players will take their fortnightly evening off. Tomorrow night the entire hall has been taken by Boston University. There will be a Russian-Tchaikovsky program at the last of the Sunday concerts next Sunday night. Mr Jacchia's programs for the rest of the week are as usual attractive minglings of salon, operatic and standard music. Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" to be given Thursday night with Jesus Sanroma taking the very difficult piano part, is a notable musical event of the week. Comment on Mr Laus' Boston Saxophone Orchestra, to be heard Wednesday night, will be found elsewhere in this department today.

Albert Spalding has sailed for Europe for a season in Belgium, Holland and Paris, returning Oct 2 to resume his American tour in [illegible]. Marie Kurenko, Russian soprano, has sailed for a Summer season in the Scandinavian countries, returning to begin her second American season Oct 11 in Detroit. Josef Hofmann has sailed for London to open his season there June 18. He begins his American tour Nov 8 in Detroit.

Leopold Godowsky, pianist-composer, has returned to New York from a tour of 14 countries of the Near East and Europe, during which he played at more than 60 concerts. He will return to Europe in August for another season of concerts. Mr Godowsky found music in Southern Europe and in Poland at a standstill. He noted intensive musical activity in Palestine. He will return to America in 1927, bringing a sonata in E minor that he considers decidedly advanced and modern in form.

Next season the New York Symphony Orchestra will play a symphony by George Antheil, who was born in Trenton, N J, and who now lives in Paris. This was one of the manuscripts Mr Damrosch brought home

FREE PRESS
DETROIT, MICH.
JUN 18 192[illegible]

[illegible] feature of a recent Paris con- [illegible] t was the introduction there of [illegible]ron Copland's "Music for the [illegible]eater," which Koussevitzky, con- [illegible]ctor of the Boston symphony [illegible]ve its first American performance last season. The young [illegible]ooklyn composer was called to [illegible]e stage of the Paris opera house, [illegible]d warmly applauded by the audi- [illegible]ce which filled to overflowing the [illegible]istoric auditorium. The program [illegible]ikewise included a concerto of Vivaldi in E minor, Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel," Roussel's "Padmavati" and Respighi's "Pines of Rome." The remaining concerts will take place on May 27, June 3 and June 12.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BILLBOARD
JUN 19 1926

Pierre Monteux, French conductor, formerly of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been engaged to conduct concerts in Moscow, Leningrad, Stockholm and Berlin.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JUN 12 1926

SALE OF SEATS FOR BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS TO BEGIN

The sale of seats for the five concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be given in the Albee Theatre during the coming season, starts in Boston at Symphony Hall on Monday. Tickets will not be sold here until one week before the concert series opens. Information regarding the seats is available through W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony Hall, Boston, who announces that payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn

The orchestra management is greatly elated over the engagement of the Albee Theatre for the concert series, following the loss of Infantry Hall, which had been the orchestra's home here for many years, according to Mr. Brennan. The use of the Albee was made possible through the generosity of a number of persons here, and that generosity, combined with the flood of applications for tickets already experienced, attests the popularity of the orchestra in Providence.

Serge Koussevitzky, who has had Providence at his feet, is now conducting his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. Following this series, he will rest during the remainder of the summer and will return to America in the fall, to open the season at Symphony Hall. The Providence concerts will be given on the following five Tuesday evenings: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15. Seats will not be on sale in Providence until the week before the first concert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JUN 13 1926

There has been a record response from Providence subscribers for the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series here next season, according to the management. In view of the fact that the Albee Theatre, where the orchestra will play next year, is larger than Infantry Hall, it is still possible for subscribers to obtain seats in any part of the theatre. The concerts will be given on five Tuesday evenings, Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan 18 and Feb. 15, and it will be Serge Koussevitzky's third season as conductor of the orchestra.

The celebrated Russian musician is now in Paris conducting his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky." He will consult European composers and music publishers about new scores, and, after spending the remainder of the summer resting in France, will return to open the Boston Symphony season next October.

* * *

TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.
JUN 12 1926

Boston Symphony Season.

Announcement comes from the management of the Boston Symphony orchestra of an unusually large response from the Providence subscribers in their renewals for next season. It is further stated that the superiority to Infantry Hall in seating capacity and convenience of the E. F. Albee Theatre, in which these concerts are to be given, makes it possible to offer good seats at all prices to prospective new subscribers. Any who are interested are invited to apply for detailed information to W. H. Brennan, manager, Symphony Hall, Boston. Payment for season tickets is not due until next autumn.

The engagement of the Albee Theatre comes as a gratifying solution to the problem raised by the demolishing of Infantry Hall, which has housed the Boston Symphony in Providence for many years. This use of the Albee Theatre was made possible through the generous activities of a numbre of Providence citizens, which gives eloquent evidence of the public support of Providence to New England's great orchestra.

Koussevitzky is now in Europe conducting with much success his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris. After resting for the remainder of the summer, he will return to America in the autumn to open the Boston Symphony season in Boston next October. The Providence concerts will be given on the following five Tuesday evenings: Oct. 26, Nov. [illegible] Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PHILADELPHIA
PUBLIC LEDGER
JUN 13 1926

GOOSSENS SAYS ORCHESTRA HERE IS WORLD'S BEST

Famous Conductor Praises Philadelphia Symphony on Return to England

SAYS STOKOWSKI HAS RARE GIFT IN "ATTACK"

Britain Has Much to Learn About Music From America, He Asserts

Public Ledger Foreign Service

Copyright, 1926, by Public Ledger

London, June 12.—"I have no hesitation in saying that the Philadelphia Orchestra is the finest orchestra in the world today," said Eugene Goossens, the English conductor, just returned here from his fourth visit to America, to your correspondent in an interview. "The Boston Symphony, which I conducted as a guest during the last season, has a string tone that is probably unsurpassed, but there are just a few more inches of finish on the Philadelphia all round.

"Its precision is nothing short of wonderful, and for this Leopold Stokowski is resonsible. He has the rare gift of 'attack,' which is rare even in great conductors—that gift of a definite beat which makes every man in the orchestra breathe more freely because he feels secure. With such a conductor there can be no roughness, and no uncertainty.

LAST SUNDAY 'POPS' BILL TOMORROW

American June 19

A popular program will be given by Agide Jacchia and his "Pops" orchestra at Symphony Hall tonight. Tomorrow there will be given the last Sunday concert of the season with a Russian-Tchaikovsky program.

The two programs are.

SATURDAY

March, "El Capitan".....Sousa
Overture to "Orpheus".....Offenbach
Largo from "Xerxes".....Handel
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Fantasia, "Il Trovatore".....Verdi
Marche Slave.....Tchaikovsky
Legend.....Holy
Prelude in D-flat.....Glazounov-Jacchia
Overture to "Rienzi".....Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor"
Borodin
Berceuse from "Jocelyn".....Godard
(Solo 'Cello—Jacobus Langendoen)
Waltz, "Espana".....Waldteufel

SUNDAY

Overture to "Russian and Ludmilla," Glinka
Serenade, Op. 3, No. 5.....Rachmaninov
Violin Solo: Souvenir of Moscow, Wieniavsky
(Nicholai Kassman)
Russian Scherzo.....Levenson
Third Movement, "Scheherazade,"
Rimsky-Korsakov
The Prince and the Princess
Islamey, Oriental Fantasy.....Balakirev
(Orchestrated by A. Casella)
Capriccio Italien; Andante Cantabile; Ballet Suite, "Nutcracker"; a. Miniature Overture; b. Dance of the Sugar Fairy; c. Chinese Dance; d. Waltz of the Flowers; Ouverture Solennelle, "1812," Tchaikovsky.

[illegible] Duprey.

15,000 ATTEND POPS EVERY WEEK

Announcement is made by the "Pops" management at Symphony Hall that the present season, the 41st annual, is proving the greatest ever, with an average weekly attendance of 15,000 men, women and children. Provided the present stream of music lovers of all ages flow to hear the nightly programme it is certain that more than 150,000 persons will be entertained by the artists under the leadership of Conductor Agide Jacchia this summer.

The management also makes known for the first time that fully 5,000,000 persons have attended the "Pops" concerts since they were inaugurated in 1885.

[illegible] Is in Session

[illegible] Meeting of New England [illegible]

[illegible] dustry in the East, but is not offering [illegible] co-operation to its mill interests, [illegible] cording to Edmund Schwarz, Massachusetts mill owner, who asserts that heavy taxation has been a serious burden to the plants. This is confirmed by other manufacturers. One points out that a tax of $4600 on a 100 narrow-loom plant averages more than 80c per day, which coupled with other costs burdens the mills to the extent of forcing small plants out of business.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
HERALD-TRIBUNE
JUN 13 1926

Louis Svecenski, Noted Violist, Dies in Hospital

Was a Member of Kneisel Quartet for Thirty-two Years

Louis Svecenski, Jugo-Slavian violist, for thirty-two years a member of the Kneisel Quartet, died in Lenox Hill Hospital yesterday after a long illness.

He was sixty-two years old. He was a life long friend of Franz Kneisel, who died two months ago.

Svecenski was born in Esseg November 6, 1864. He was educated at the University of Agram and was a classmate of Fritz Kreisler. He came to America in 1885 and became a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

He had been a teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its foundation in 1904. He also was the founder of the class of chamber music at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia.

He was one of the founders and a member of the board of governors of The Bohemians, Inc. He also was vice-president of the Beethoven Society. His wife and two daughters survive.

Funeral services will be held at the Campbell Funeral Chapel, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, on Monday at 10 o'clock.

Post June 23

926

JAZZ FOR POPS

Jesus Sanroma, piano soloist, to feature at the Pops Symphony renditions of Gershwin's famous "Rhapsody in Blue."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
AMERICAN
JUN 20 192[illegible]

Musicians to Honor Louis Szecenski

Many persons prominent in the musical world will attend funeral services tomorrow morning for Louis Szecenski, noted violinist and former member of the Kneisel Quartet, who died Friday in the Lenox Hill Hospital.

Louis Svecenski.

The services will be conducted at 10 o'clock in the Funeral Church and will be characterized by an elaborate musical programme under the direction of Rubin Goldmark, the well known musician and composer. Among those who will render selections are a number of Mr. Ezecenski's pupils.

Members of the Beethoven Association, of which Mr. Szecenski was vice-president, and the Bohemians, of which he was a founder and member of the board of governors, will attend in a body.

Mr. Szecenski came to this country in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Later he became associated with the Kneisel Quartette. He had been a member of the faculty of the Institute of Musical Art since its foundation in 1904. He resided at No. 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

15,000 ATTEND POPS EVERY WEEK

Announcement is made by the "Pops" management at Symphony Hall that the present season, the 41st annual, is proving the greatest ever, with an average weekly attendance of 15,000 men, women and children. Provided the present stream of music lovers of all ages flow to hear the nightly programme it is certain that more than 150,000 persons will be entertained by the artists under the leadership of Conductor Agide Jacchia this summer.

The management also makes known for the first time that fully 5,000,000 persons have attended the "Pops" concerts since they were inaugurated in 1885.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

LOUIS SVECENSKI

Goldmark Will Conduct Services for Member of Boston Symphony

Funeral services for Louis Svecenski, for thirty years a viola player of the Kneisel Quartette and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are to be held on Monday forenoon at the Campbell Funeral Church. Mr. Svecenski died at the Lenox Hospital after an illness of more than a year.

The musician was born in Crotia, November 6, 1862 and won distinction abroad as a violin player. With the late Franz Kneisel, he founded the quartette in which he played the viola. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the musical services at the funeral. Mr. Svecenski is survived by his wife and two daughters.

At the Pops Tonight

Request Night

Introduction to Act III., "Lohengrin" ..... Wagner
On the Beautiful Blue Danube.. Strauss
Largo ..... Handel
Fantasia, "Fedora" ..... Giordano
Finale, "Scheherazade" ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Deep River ..... Arr. by Jacchia
Indian Dirge ..... Seydel
Overture, "1812" ..... Chaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody ..... Liszt
Ave Maria ..... Schubert-Wilhelmj
Pomp and Circumstance ..... Elgar

Encores

Song of the Volga Bargemen ..... Arr. by Jacchia
Kammenoi Ostrow ..... Rubinstein
Flight of the Bumble Bee ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
March of the Toys ..... Herbert
Barcarolle ..... Offenbach

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Pianist: J. Sanroma

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 21

AUDIENCES BETTER

HERALD JUNE 20

Agide Jacchia, "Pops" Conductor, Finds People Quieter and More Appreciative

This is an age of jazz bands, hilarious merry-making, disregard and contempt for the more subtle and sensitive beauties of life—or is it? Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Symphony "Pops," for the last 10 years, points out a little fact which tends to throw some doubt on the justifiability of the current pessimism concerning the moderns.

It is this: Year by year audiences at the Pops concerts have become quieter and quieter. Musicians know what that means. It means that year by year the audiences have been appreciating the music more and more. And the Pops orchestra is certainly far removed from a jazz band.

It was not so many years ago, Mr. Jacchia told an interviewer, when a concert had to be abandoned because the audience—a college audience—became so noisy that the musicians were unable to compete with them. Nothing like that happens now. College nights are sprinkled liberally through the season's programme each year, and they are counted as among the feature nights, for the orchestra as well as for the audience.

Nor can the reason for this increasing quiet be found in the diminishing of the size of the audience, for the audiences have been increasing in size as well as in good behaviour. There is only one answer, and that is that good music is being appreciated.

All this is, of course, very pleasing to Mr. Jacchia. Not that he is easily ruffled, for he is singularly even-tempered as compared with the temperamental person usually pictured in the popular imagination as a typical musician. Yet he is a serious and sincere musician, and therefore it pleases him to find his audiences appreciating music.

Of course one does not expect a Pops audience to maintain the utter stillness that prevails at regular Symphony concerts. The Pops are lighter matter. Yet, after all, these musicians who play at the Pops are the same who play at the regular Symphony concerts—or part of the same—and the person who pays attention is due to hear some fine music.

Handel's Largo Most Popular Pop Number

Patrons of the Pop Concerts, in a voting contest conducted for the annual "request concert," which is to be held next Monday, have decided that Handel's Largo is the most popular number with Pops' audiences.

The Largo was, however, closely pressed for first honors, receiving 4723 votes as against Schubert's "Ave Maria," which received 4709 votes. Tchaikovsky's Overture, "1812," won third place. An American number, Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys," won a place on the request programme. The ballots were dropped into the hopper at the entrance to the hall. A total of 15,000 ballots was cast.

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 20

In These Mellow'd Middle Years

Agide Jacchia

Fresh Likeness, by Bachrach, of the Still Diligent and Alert Conductor of the Pops

At the Pops Tonight

March, "El Capitan" ..... Sousa
Overture to "Orpheus" ..... Offenbach
Largo from "Xerxes" ..... Handel
Fantasia, "Il Trovatore" ..... Verdi
Marche Slave ..... Chaikovsky
Legend ..... Holy
Prelude in D-flat ..... Glazounov-Jacchia
Overture to "Rienzi" ..... Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," ..... Borodin
Berceuse from "Jocelyn" ..... Godard
Waltz, "Espafia" ..... Waldteufel

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Solo 'Cello: J. Langendoen

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

The Final Fortnight of These Concerts—From the Russians to the Rhapsody in Blue—Italians, Too

WITH the Russian program of tomorrow evening the Pops for 1926 will pass to their final fortnight. A variety of music fills the coming week. Chaikovsky naturally holds the whip tomorrow. His Italian Caprice, the sensuous Andante Cantabile, four dances from the "Nutcracker" suite, the thrice-familiar "1812" all find a place. Besides these, there are bits from Glinka and Rakhmaninov, Wieniavsky, Levenson, Rimsky and Balakirev. Monday's program is the annual compilation of "requests." As always, these include the "Largo," the "1812" again, "Pomp and Circumstance" and "The Beautiful Blue Danube." The fantasia from Giordano's "Fedora" is less to have been expected however, as is also the finale from "Scheherezade." Tuesday's list includes "Scheherazade." Tuesday's list includes favorite snatches from eleven master composers: Berlioz, Weber, Handel, Verdi, Beethoven, Schumann, Sibelius, Wagner, Chaikovsky, Schubert and Brahms. Wednesday is Italian night. The choice ranges from "Otello" to "La Gioconda" and from Mascagni to Casella. Thursday brings, most notably, Mr. Jacchia's orchestrations of a suite from Schumann's "Carnaval." Friday runs a not too-familiar gamut. Saturday's program includes a repetition of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Mr. Sanroma again at the piano—perhaps the most noteworthy innovation of this season's concerts.

CHORAL MUSIC AT POP CONCERT

Gideon Conducts Rachmaninoff's "Spring"

Quite exceptionally the Pops became last evening the source of novel choral music in the shape of Rachmaninoff's short cantata "Spring," sung by the chorus of the Y. M. H. A., under Henry Gideon, accompanied by the Pops orchestra and assisted by Henry Jackson Warren, baritone.

This cantata, which bears the opus number 20, is not exactly "new" as far as the date of composition is concerned. Like all of Rachmaninoff's music it bears the subtle imprint of his personality and musical style. The orchestral portion is richly if somewhat thickly scored, and in the main the harmonies and melodies stand, in the Rachmaninoffian manner, midway between lushness and sombreness. There is a brooding, poetic introduction, a jubilant choral close, and a quiet orchestral postlude.

The two passages for baritone solo, intrinsically less effective than the rest of the piece and none too grateful for the singer, were none the less admirably sung by Mr. Warren. And considering the scanty time allowed for full rehearsal, the whole performance, choral and orchestral, was remarkably smooth and well balanced. Mr. Gideon has more than once demonstrated his exceptional gifts as a choral conductor.

NEW YORK WORLD
JUNE 15

L. SVECENSKI DIES; KNEISEL VIOLINIST

Succumbs Two Months After Quartet Leader, His Friend Over 32 Years

BOTH PLAYED FOR BRAHMS

Studied Together in the Vienna Music Conservatory

Louis Svecenski, sixty-two, for thirty-two years a member of the Kneisel Quartet, died early yesterday in the Lenox Hill Hospital. He had been ill several months. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Music at the services will be by an orchestra composed of Mr. Svecenski's former pupils. Rubin Goldmark, composer, will conduct.

Mr. Svecenski was born in Jugo-Slavia. He was educated at the University of Agram. He won a Government scholarship and was sent to the Vienna Conservatory of Music. In his class were Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. Mr. Kneisel died two months ago and Mr. Svecenski is said to have grieved for his friend to such an extent that melancholy developed and hastened his own death. With Kneisel Mr. Svecenski had played Brahms's compositions under the direction [illegible]

He [illegible]
1885 [illegible]
phon[illegible]
struc[illegible]
Art, [illegible]
chief [illegible]
class [illegible]
niqu[illegible]

A [illegible]
They [illegible]
Stree[illegible]

NEW YORK TIMES

LOUIS SVECENSKI, VIOLINIST, IS DEA[illegible]

Was With Boston Symphony 1[illegible] Years and Viola Player for Kneisel Quartet 32 Years.

HE STUDIED AT VIENN[illegible]

His Gifts Attracted Attention o[illegible] Gericke, Who Brought Him Here [illegible] 1885—Taught In Two Institutes.

Louis Svecenski, who for thirty-two years was a viola player of the Kneisel Quartet and for many years a violinist of the Boston Symphony, died at the Lenox Hill Hospital early yesterday morning. Mr. Svecenski had been suffering from liver trouble with complications for more than a year. He had undergone three operations in an effort to check the disease.

Funeral services will be held on Monday at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the musical services, at which many of Mr. Svecenski's former students will assist. Mr. Svecenski is survived by his widow and two daughters. Their home is at 327 West Eighty-fifth Street.

Mr. Svecenski was born in Croatia, Nov. 6, 1862. He took academic courses as a youth and his talent won him a scholarship to study music at Vienna, the conditions of the scholarship including an agreement to return to his home after completing his work and teach in the district where he was born. Mr. Svecenski was enrolled in the Vienna Conservatory in 1881 and remained there until 1885. He was a pupil of J. Grun for the violin and J. Hellmesberger for composition. His brilliant gifts attracted the attention of Wilhelm Gericke, then perfecting the personnel of the recently founded Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Gericke obtained for Mr. Svecenski release from his governmental obligation and permission to come to America.

From 1885 to 1903 Mr. Svecenski played the violin in the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the same year the Kneisel Quartet was founded and Mr. Svecenski remained the viola player for that organization as long as it existed. He and Franz Kneisel were the permanent members of the famous string quartet from its beginnings in 1885 to its final concerts in 1917, and his death follows that of Kneisel by only a few weeks.

Since 1917 Mr. Svecenski was occupied with his duties as teacher of violin at the Institute of Musical Art, where he had taught since its founding in 1904, and in various other musical capacities in and near

15,000 ATTEND POPS EVERY WEEK

Announcement is made by the "Pops" management at Symphony Hall that the present season, the 41st annual, is proving the greatest ever, with an average weekly attendance of 15,000 men, women and children. Provided the present stream of music lovers of all ages flow to hear the nightly programme it is certain that more than 150,000 persons will be entertained by the artists under the leadership of Conductor Agide Jacchia this summer.

The management also makes known for the first time that fully 5,000,000 persons have attended the "Pops" concerts since they were inaugurated in 1885.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

LOUIS SVECENSKI

Goldmark Will Conduct Services for Member of Boston Symphony

Funeral services for Louis Svecenski, for thirty years a viola player of the Kneisel Quartette and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are to he held on Monday forenoon at the Campbell Funeral Church. Mr. Svecenski died at the Lenox Hospital after an illness of more than a year.

The musician was born in Crotia, November 6, 1862 and won distinction abroad as a violin player. With the late Franz Kneisel, he founded the quartette in which he played the viola. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the musical services at the funeral. Mr. Svecenski is survived by his wife and two daughters.

At the Pops Tonight

Request Night

Introduction to Act III., "Lohengrin" ..... Wagner
On the Beautiful Blue Danube ..... Strauss
Largo ..... Handel
Fantasia, "Fedora" ..... Giordano
Finale, "Scheherazade" ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Deep River ..... Arr. by Jacchia
Indian Dirge ..... Seydel
Overture, "1812" ..... Chaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody ..... Liszt
Ave Maria ..... Schubert-Wilhelmj
Pomp and Circumstance ..... Elgar

Encores

Song of the Volga Bargemen ..... Arr. by Jacchia
Kammenoi Ostrow ..... Rubinstein
Flight of the Bumble Bee ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
March of the Toys ..... Herbert
Barcarolle ..... Offenbach

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Pianist: J. Sanroma

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 21

In These Mellow'd Middle Years

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 20

Agide Jacchia

Fresh Likeness, by Bachrach, of the Still Diligent and Alert Conductor of the Pops

At the Pops Tonight

March, "El Capitan" ..... Sousa
Overture to "Orpheus" ..... Offenbach
Largo from "Xerxes" ..... Handel
Fantasia, "Il Trovatore" ..... Verdi
Marche Slave ..... Chaikovsky
Legend ..... Holy
Prelude in D-flat ..... Glazounov-Jacchia
Overture to "Rienzi" ..... Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," ..... Borodin
Berceuse from "Jocelyn" ..... Godard
Waltz, "Espafia" ..... Waldteufel

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Solo 'Cello: J. Langendoen

AUDIENCES BETTER

HERALD JUNE 20

Agide Jacchia, "Pops" Conductor, Finds People Quieter and More Appreciative

This is an age of jazz bands, hilarious merry-making, disregard and contempt for the more subtle and sensitive beauties of life—or is it? Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Symphony "Pops," for the last 10 years, points out a little fact which tends to throw some doubt on the justifiability of the current pessimism concerning the moderns.

It is this: Year by year audiences at the Pops concerts have become quieter and quieter. Musicians know what that means. It means that year by year the audiences have been appreciating the music more and more. And the Pops orchestra is certainly far removed from a jazz band.

It was not so many years ago, Mr. Jacchia told an interviewer, when a concert had to be abandoned because the audience—a college audience—became so noisy that the musicians were unable to compete with them. Nothing like that happens now. College nights are sprinkled liberally through the season's program each year, and they are counted as among the feature nights, for the orchestra as well as for the audience.

Nor can the reason for this increasing quiet be found in the diminishing of the size of the audience, for the audiences have been increasing in size as well as in good behaviour. There is only one answer, and that is that good music is being appreciated.

All this is, of course, very pleasing to Mr. Jacchia. Not that he is easily ruffled, for he is singularly even-tempered as compared with the temperamental person usually pictured in the popular imagination as a typical musician. Yet he is a serious and sincere musician, and therefore it pleases him to find his audiences appreciating music.

Of course one does not expect a Pops audience to maintain the utter stillness that prevails at regular Symphony concerts. The Pops are lighter matter. Yet, after all, these musicians who play at the Pops are the same who play at the regular Symphony concerts—or part of the same—and the person who pays attention is due to hear some fine music.

Handel's Largo Most Popular Pop Number

Patrons of the Pop Concerts, in a voting contest conducted for the annual "request concert," which is to be held next Monday, have decided that Handel's Largo is the most popular number with Pops' audiences.

The Largo was, however, closely pressed for first honors, receiving 4723 votes as against Schubert's "Ave Maria," which received 4709 votes. Tchaikovsky's Overture, "1812," won third place. An American number, Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys," won a place on the request programme. The ballots were dropped into the hopper at the entrance to the hall. A total of 15,000 ballots was cast.

CHORAL MUSIC AT POP CONCERT

Gideon Conducts Rachmaninoff's "Spring"

Quite exceptionally the Pops became last evening the source of novel choral music in the shape of Rachmaninoff's short cantata "Spring," sung by the chorus of the Y. M. H. A., under Henry Gideon, accompanied by the Pops orchestra and assisted by Henry Jackson Warren, baritone.

This cantata, which bears the opus number 20, is not exactly "new" as far as the date of composition is concerned. Like all of Rachmaninoff's music it bears the subtle imprint of his personality and musical style. The orchestral portion is richly if somewhat thickly scored, and in the main the harmonies and melodies stand, in the Rachmaninoffian manner, midway between lushness and sombreness. There is a brooding, poetic introduction, a jubilant choral close, and a quiet orchestral postlude.

The two passages for baritone solo, intrinsically less effective than the rest of the piece and none too grateful for the singer, were none the less admirably sung by Mr. Warren. And considering the scanty time allowed for full rehearsal, the whole performance, choral and orchestral, was remarkably smooth and well balanced. Mr. Gideon has more than once demonstrated his exceptional gifts as a choral conductor.

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

The Final Fortnight of These Concerts—From the Russians to the Rhapsody in Blue—Italians, Too

WITH the Russian program of tomorrow evening the Pops for 1926 will pass to their final fortnight. A variety of music fills the coming week. Chaikovsky naturally holds the whip tomorrow. His Italian Caprice, the sensuous Andante Cantabile, four dances from the "Nutcracker" suite, the thrice-familiar "1812" all find a place. Besides these, there are bits from Glinka and Rakhmaninov, Wieniavsky, Levenson, Rimsky and Balakirev. Monday's program is the annual compilation of "requests." As always, these include the "Largo," the "1812" again, "Pomp and Circumstance" and "The Beautiful Blue Danube." The fantasia from Giordano's "Fedora" is less to have been expected however, as is also the finale from "Scheherazade." Tuesday's list includes favorite snatches from eleven master composers: Berlioz, Weber, Handel, Verdi, Beethoven, Schumann, Sibelius, Wagner, Chaikovsky, Schubert and Brahms. Wednesday is Italian night. The choice ranges from "Otello" to "La Gioconda" and from Mascagni to Casella. Thursday brings, most notably, Mr. Jacchia's orchestrations of a suite from Schumann's "Carnaval." Friday runs a not too-familiar gamut. Saturday's program includes a repetition of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Mr. Sanroma again at the piano—perhaps the most noteworthy innovation of this season's concerts.

NEW YORK WORLD
JUNE 15

L. SVECENSKI DIES; KNEISEL VIOLINIST

Succumbs Two Months After Quartet Leader, His Friend Over 32 Years

BOTH PLAYED FOR BRAHMS

Studied Together in the Vienna Music Conservatory

Louis Svecenski, sixty-two, for thirty-two years a member of the Kneisel Quartet, died early yesterday in the Lenox Hill Hospital. He had been ill several months. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Music at the services will be by an orchestra composed of Mr. Svecenski's former pupils, Rubin Goldmark, composer, will conduct.

Mr. Svecenski was born in Jugo-Slavia. He was educated at the University of Agram. He won a Government scholarship and was sent to the Vienna Conservatory of Music. In his class were Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. Mr. Kneisel died two months ago and Mr. Svecenski is said to have grieved for his friend to such an extent that melancholy developed and hastened his own death. With Kneisel Mr. Svecenski had played Brahms's compositions under the direction [illegible]

He [illegible]
1885 [illegible]
phon[illegible]
struc[illegible]
Art, [illegible]
chief[illegible]
class[illegible]
niqu[illegible]
A [illegible]
They [illegible]
Stree[illegible]

NEW YORK TIMES

LOUIS SVECENSKI, VIOLINIST, IS DEA

Was With Boston Symphony 1 Years and Viola Player for Kneisel Quartet 32 Years.

HE STUDIED AT VIENN

His Gifts Attracted Attention o Gericke, Who Brought Him Here in 1885—Taught in Two Institutes.

Louis Svecenski, who for thirty-two years was a viola player of the Kneisel Quartet and for many years a violinist of the Boston Symphony, died at the Lenox Hill Hospital early yesterday morning. Mr. Svecenski had been suffering from liver trouble with complications for more than a year. He had undergone three operations in an effort to check the disease.

Funeral services will be held on Monday at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the musical services, at which many of Mr. Svecenski's former students will assist. Mr. Svecenski is survived by his widow and two daughters. Their home is at 227 West Eighty-fifth Street.

Mr. Svecenski was born in Croatia, Nov. 6, 1862. He took academic courses as a youth and his talent won him a scholarship to study music at Vienna, the conditions of the scholarship including an agreement to return to his home after completing his work and teach in the district where he was born. Mr. Svecenski was enrolled in the Vienna Conservatory in 1881 and remained there until 1885. He was a pupil of J. Grun for the violin and J. Hellmesberger for composition. His brilliant gifts attracted the attention of Wilhelm Gericke, then perfecting the personnel of the recently founded Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Gericke obtained for Mr. Svecenski release from his governmental obligation and permission to come to America.

From 1885 to 1903 Mr. Svecenski played the violin in the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the same year the Kneisel Quartet was founded and Mr. Svecenski remained the viola player for that organization as long as it existed. He and Franz Kneisel were the permanent members of the famous string quartet from its beginnings in 1885 to its final concerts in 1917, and his death follows that of Kneisel by only a few weeks.

Since 1917 Mr. Svecenski was occupied with his duties as teacher of violin at the Institute of Musical Art, where he had taught since its founda[illegible] in 1904, and in various other [illegible] capacities in and near [illegible]

15,000 ATTEND POPS EVERY WEEK

Announcement is made by the "Pops" management at Symphony Hall that the present season, the 41st annual, is proving the greatest ever, with an average weekly attendance of 15,000 men, women and children. Provided the present stream of music lovers of all ages flow to hear the nightly programme it is certain that more than 150,000 persons will be entertained by the artists under the leadership of Conductor Agide Jacchia this summer.

The management also makes known for the first time that fully 5,000,000 persons have attended the "Pops" concerts since they were inaugurated in 1885.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

LOUIS SVECENSKI

Goldmark Will Conduct Services for Member of Boston Symphony

Funeral services for Louis Svecenski, for thirty years a viola player of the Kneisel Quartette and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are to he held on Monday forenoon at the Campbell Funeral Church. Mr. Svecenski died at the Lenox Hospital after an illness of more than a year.

The musician was born in Crotia, November 6, 1862 and won distinction abroad as a violin player. With the late Franz Kneisel, he founded the quartette in which he played the viola. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the musical services at the funeral. Mr. Svecenski is survived by his wife and two daughters.

At the Pops Tonight

Request Night

Introduction to Act III., "Lohengrin" ..... Wagner
On the Beautiful Blue Danube.. Strauss
Largo ..... Handel
Fantasia, "Fedora" ..... Giordano
Finale, "Scheherazade" ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Deep River ..... Arr. by Jacchia
Indian Dirge ..... Seydel
Overture, "1812" ..... Chaikovsky
Second Hungarian Rhapsody ..... Liszt
Ave Maria ..... Schubert-Wilhelmj
Pomp and Circumstance ..... Elgar

Encores

Song of the Volga Bargemen ..... Arr. by Jacchia
Kammenoi Ostrow ..... Rubinstein
Flight of the Bumble Bee ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
March of the Toys ..... Herbert
Barcarolle ..... Offenbach

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Pianist: J. Sanroma

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 21

In These Mellow'd Middle Years

TRANSCRIPT JUNE 20

Agide Jacchia

Fresh Likeness, by Bachrach, of the Still Diligent and Alert Conductor of the Pops

At the Pops Tonight

March, "El Capitan" ..... Sousa
Overture to "Orpheus" ..... Offenbach
Largo from "Xerxes" ..... Handel
Fantasia, "Il Trovatore" ..... Verdi
Marche Slave ..... Chaikovsky
Legend ..... Holy
Prelude in D-flat ..... Glazounov-Jacchia
Overture to "Rienzi" ..... Wagner
Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor," ..... Borodin
Berceuse from "Jocelyn" ..... Godard
Waltz, "España" ..... Waldteufel

Conductor: A. Jacchia
Solo 'Cello: J. Langendoen

AUDIENCES BETTER

HERALD JUNE 20

Agide Jacchia, "Pops" Conductor, Finds People Quieter and More Appreciative

This is an age of jazz bands, hilarious merry-making, disregard and contempt for the more subtle and sensitive beauties of life—or is it? Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Symphony "Pops," for the last 10 years, points out a little fact which tends to throw some doubt on the justifiability of the current pessimism concerning the moderns.

It is this: Year by year audiences at the Pops concerts have become quieter and quieter. Musicians know what that means. It means that year by year the audiences have been appreciating the music more and more. And the Pops orchestra is certainly far removed from a jazz band.

It was not so many years ago, Mr. Jacchia told an interviewer, when a concert had to be abandoned because the audience—a college audience—became so noisy that the musicians were unable to compete with them. Nothing like that happens now. College nights are sprinkled liberally through the season's program each year, and they are counted as among the feature nights, for the orchestra as well as for the audience.

Nor can the reason for this increasing quiet be found in the diminishing of the size of the audience, for the audiences have been increasing in size as well as in good behaviour. There is only one answer, and that is that good music is being appreciated.

All this is, of course, very pleasing to Mr. Jacchia. Not that he is easily ruffled, for he is singularly even-tempered as compared with the temperamental person usually pictured in the popular imagination as a typical musician. Yet he is a serious and sincere musician, and therefore it pleases him to find his audiences appreciating music.

Of course one does not expect a Pops audience to maintain the utter stillness that prevails at regular Symphony concerts. The Pops are lighter matter. Yet, after all, these musicians who play at the Pops are the same who play at the regular Symphony concerts—or part of the same—and the person who pays attention is due to hear some fine music.

Handel's Largo Most Popular Pop Number

Patrons of the Pop Concerts, in a voting contest conducted for the annual "request concert," which is to be held next Monday, have decided that Handel's Largo is the most popular number with Pops' audiences.

The Largo was, however, closely pressed for first honors, receiving 4723 votes as against Schubert's "Ave Maria," which received 4709 votes. Tchaikovsky's Overture, "1812," won third place. An American number, Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys," won a place on the request programme. The ballots were dropped into the hopper at the entrance to the hall. A total of 15,000 ballots was cast.

CHORAL MUSIC AT POP CONCERT

Gideon Conducts Rachmaninoff's "Spring"

Quite exceptionally the Pops became last evening the source of novel choral music in the shape of Rachmaninoff's short cantata "Spring," sung by the chorus of the Y. M. H. A., under Henry Gideon, accompanied by the Pops orchestra and assisted by Henry Jackson Warren, baritone.

This cantata, which bears the opus number 20, is not exactly "new" as far as the date of composition is concerned. Like all of Rachmaninoff's music it bears the subtle imprint of his personality and musical style. The orchestral portion is richly if somewhat thickly scored, and in the main the harmonies and melodies stand, in the Rachmaninoffian manner, midway between lushness and sombreness. There is a brooding, poetic introduction, a jubilant choral close, and a quiet orchestral postlude.

The two passages for baritone solo, intrinsically less effective than the rest of the piece and none too grateful for the singer, were none the less admirably sung by Mr. Warren. And considering the scanty time allowed for full rehearsal, the whole performance, choral and orchestral, was remarkably smooth and well balanced. Mr. Gideon has more than once demonstrated his exceptional gifts as a choral conductor.

PROGRESS OF THE POPS

The Final Fortnight of These Concerts—From the Russians to the Rhapsody in Blue—Italians, Too

WITH the Russian program of tomorrow evening the Pops for 1926 will pass to their final fortnight. A variety of music fills the coming week. Chaikovsky naturally holds the whip tomorrow. His Italian Caprice, the sensuous Andante Cantabile, four dances from the "Nutcracker" suite, the thrice-familiar "1812" all find a place. Besides these, there are bits from Glinka and Rakhmaninov, Wieniavsky, Levenson, Rimsky and Balakirev. Monday's program is the annual compilation of "requests." As always, these include the "Largo," the "1812" again, "Pomp and Circumstance" and "The Beautiful Blue Danube." The fantasia from Giordano's "Fedora" is less to have been expected, however, as is also the finale from "Scheherazade." Tuesday's list includes "Scheherazade." Tuesday's list includes favorite snatches from eleven master composers: Berlioz, Weber, Handel, Verdi, Beethoven, Schumann, Sibelius, Wagner, Chaikovsky, Schubert and Brahms. Wednesday is Italian night. The choice ranges from "Otello" to "La Gioconda" and from Mascagni to Casella. Thursday brings, most notably, Mr. Jacchia's orchestrations of a suite from Schumann's "Carnaval." Friday runs a not too-familiar gamut. Saturday's program includes a repetition of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Mr. Sanroma again at the piano—perhaps the most noteworthy innovation of this season's concerts.

NEW YORK WORLD
15

L. SVECENSKI DIES; KNEISEL VIOLINIST

Succumbs Two Months After Quartet Leader, His Friend Over 32 Years

BOTH PLAYED FOR BRAHMS

Studied Together in the Vienna Music Conservatory

Louis Svecenski, sixty-two, for thirty-two years a member of the Kneisel Quartet, died early yesterday in the Lenox Hill Hospital. He had been ill several months. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Music at the services will be by an orchestra composed of Mr. Svecenski's former pupils. Rubin Goldmark, composer, will conduct.

Mr. Svecenski was born in Jugo-Slavia. He was educated at the University of Agram. He won a Government scholarship and was sent to the Vienna Conservatory of Music. In his class were Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. Mr. Kneisel died two months ago and Mr. Svecenski is said to have grieved for his friend to such an extent that melancholy developed and hastened his own death. With Kneisel Mr. Svecenski had played Brahms's compositions under the direction of the composer.

He came to the United States in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He became an instructor in the Institute of Musical Art, founded in 1904, and soon was chief teacher. Then he founded a class in chamber music on the technique of the violin.

A wife and two daughters survive. They reside at No. 327 West 85th Street.

HE ST[illegible]

His Gifts Att[illegible] ...n o Gericke, Who Bro[illegible] ...n Here Ir 1885—Taught In T[illegible] Institutes.

Louis Svecenski, who for thirty-two years was a viola player of the Kneisel Quartet and for many years a violinist of the Boston Symphony, died at the Lenox Hill Hospital early yesterday morning. Mr. Svecenski had been suffering from liver trouble with complications for more than a year. He had undergone three operations in an effort to check the disease.

Funeral services will be held on Monday at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the musical services, at which many of Mr. Svecenski's former students will assist. Mr. Svecenski is survived by his widow and two daughters. Their home is at 327 West Eighty-fifth Street.

Mr. Svecenski was born in Croatia, Nov. 6, 1862. He took academic courses as a youth and his talent won him a scholarship to study music at Vienna, the conditions of the scholarship including an agreement to return to his home after completing his work and teach in the district where he was born. Mr. Svecenski was enrolled in the Vienna Conservatory in 1881 and remained there until 1885. He was a pupil of J. Grun for the violin and J. Hellmesberger for composition. His brilliant gifts attracted the attention of Wilhelm Gericke, then perfecting the personnel of the recently founded Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Gericke obtained for Mr. Svecenski release from his governmental obligation and permission to come to America. From 1885 to 1903 Mr. Svecenski played the violin in the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the same year the Kneisel Quartet was founded and Mr. Svecenski remained the viola player for that organization as long as it existed. He and Franz Kneisel were the permanent members of the famous string quartet from its beginnings in 1885 to its final concerts in 1917, and his death follows that of Kneisel by only a few weeks.

Since 1917 Mr. Svecenski was occupied with his duties as teacher of violin at the Institute of Musical Art, where he had taught since its founding in 1904, and in various other musical capacities in and near

Symphony Players Give Pops Concert for Disabled Veterans

GUESTS AND SPONSOR AT VETERANS' HOSPITAL CONCERT

More than 250 convalescent World war veterans were made happy yesterday when, upon the invitation of Miss Elenora Snelling, they heard the Symphony players give a pop concert. In the group are, left to right: Miss O'Brien, Dante Bacci, a veteran; Mrs. Roland Lyman and Miss Snelling.

The hearts of more than 250 convalescent World war veterans were lightened and their spirits buoyed high at the United States Veterans' Hospital, West Roxbury, yesterday afternoon when upon invitation of Miss Elenora Snelling 65 Symphony players, with Agide Jacchia conducting, gave a regular Symphony Pops concert.

Members of the orchestra were grouped beneath the shade of the trees in the quadrangle where the concert was held and seated at tables in front, with a typical Pops atmosphere, were the recuperating veterans. As is conventional in Symphony Hall, ginger ale was served to the boys yesterday afternoon at the tables. By virtue of holding the entertainment in the quadrangle, it was made possible for those in the medical ward who were unable to appear to enjoy the musical renditions from their cots.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK SUN Saturday Theatre Review-

JUN1 9 1926

LOUIS SVENCENSKI, VIOLINIST, DIES

Was Long a Member of the Kneisel Quartet.

Louis Svecenski, Jugoslavian violinist, who for thirty-two years was a member of the famed Kneisel Quartet, died early to-day in the Lenox Hil Hospital after a long illness. He was 62 years old.

Funeral services will be held on Monday at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the ceremonies with music by many of Svecenski's pupils now well known.

The violinist was born in Esseg. Educated at the University of Agram, he won the Government scholarship for music and attended the Vienna Conservatory. He was a classmate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. The latter's death two months ago is said to have hastened his own. He and Kneisel had played Brahms compositions under the composer's direction.

He first came to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its founding in 1904. A class in chamber music was founded by him at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. He was the author of many books on violin technique.

A widow and twd oaughters survive him. The Svecenski home is at 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

LOUIS SVECENSKI TO BE BURIED MONDAY

Famous Violinist was Member of Kneisel Quartet For Thirty Years

The funeral of Louis Svecenski, the violinist who for thirty years has played with the Kneisel Quartet, will be held on Monday from Campbell's Funeral Church.

The violinist was born in Esseg. Educated at the University of Agram, he won the Government scholarship for music and attended the Vienna Conservatory. He was a classmate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. The latters' death two months ago is said to have hastened his own. He and Kneisel had played Brahms compositions under the composer's direction.

He first came to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its founding in 1904. A class in chamber music was founded by him at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. He was the author of many books on violin technique.

A widow and two daughters survive him. The Svecenski home is at 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

JUN27 1926

Koussevitzky Antics.

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony Orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux Orchestra.

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of tone which marks our best organizations. In the wood-winds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimar Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

Even less effective was the Paris Philharmonic orchestra (or a consid-

ALICE GENTLE.

Contralto, will sing with the Ravina Opera Company during the annual ten week season which opened June 26.

put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

The Lamoureux Orchestra.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of one which marks our best organizations. In the wood-winds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimar Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

Even less effective was the Paris Philharmonic orchestra (or a consid-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.

JUN27 1926

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony orchestra leader stepping before a fair-sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux orchestra.

But it was not an inspiriting effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of tone which marks our best organizations. In the woodwinds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimir Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

Even less effective was the Paris Philharmonic orchestra (or a consid-

NEWS
CLEVELAND, OHIO

7 1926

WHAT more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux orchestra.

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the mater of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was not need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

A NEW 'CELLISTE.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
SEATTLE, WASH.

JUL 1 - 1926

THIS CLIPPING FROM BEE
OMAHA, NEB.

JUL 1 - 1926

by the other nears.

Quits "Pop Concerts."

Boston, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season, because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM

MOURNING HASTENS SVECENSKI'S DEATH

Viola Player Had Grieved Over Kneisel's Passing.

Louis Svecenski, viola player of the Kneisel Quartet during the entire thirty-two years of its history and one of the best known musicians of this city, died today in Lenox Hospital, after an illnes of fifteen months with liver trouble and complications. His death, friends said, was hastened by the passing away of Franz Kneisel, famous violinist and composer, his life long friend, who died two months ago.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning at the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth street, when Rubin Goldmark, musician, will conduct the ceremonies with many of Svecenski's pupils furnishing music.

Svecenski was born in Jugoslavia and was sixty-two years old. He was educated at the University of Agram, winning the government scholarship for music and attending the Vienna Conservatory. He was a class mate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. He was induced to come to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and later [illegible] with Kneisel.

Svecenski was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its foundation [illegible]. He was also the founder of the class of chamber music at the Curtis Institute at Philadelphia. He was one of the founders and a member of the board of governors of the Bohemians, Inc. He was also vice president and a founder of the Beethoven Society. His widow, Mrs. Bertha Svecenski and two daughters survive him. He lived at No. 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

Boston College Men at the Pops Tonight

The following program will be played by the Pops Symphony Orchestra under Agide Jacchia, in Symphony Hall tonight, with the Boston College quartet assisting:

Military Polonaise.....Chopin
Ave Maria.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Excerpts from "Stabat Mater".....Rossini
Boston College Quartet
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
In the Village (A Dance).....Ondricek
Finale, Fourth Symphony.....Tchaikovsky
Boston College Quartet
Selection "The Vagabond King".....Friml
March of the Toys.....Herbert
Waltz, "Gold and Silver".....Lehar

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
CHICAGO, ILL.

JUL 1 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY HEAD QUITS

Conductor Offended Because Number of Musicians Is Reduced

BOSTON, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN EAGLE

JUL 1 1926

His Orchestra Cut, Boston Symphony Director Quits

Boston, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow

THIS CLIPPING FROM
CALL
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

JUL 1 - 1926

SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR QUITS

BOSTON, July 1 (AP).—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert.

Symphony Players Give Pops Concert for Disabled Veterans

GUESTS AND SPONSOR AT VETERANS' HOSPITAL CONCERT

More than 250 convalescent World war veterans were made happy yesterday when, upon the invitation of Miss Elenora Snelling, they heard the Symphony players give a pop concert. In the group are, left to right: Miss O'Brien, Dante Bacci, a veteran; Mrs. Roland Lyman and Miss Snelling.

The hearts of more than 250 convalescent World war veterans were lightened and their spirits buoyed high at the United States Veterans' Hospital, West Roxbury, yesterday afternoon when upon invitation of Miss Elenora Snelling 65 Symphony players, with Agide Jacchia conducting, gave a regular Symphony Pops concert.

Members of the orchestra were grouped beneath the shade of the trees in the quadrangle where the concert was held and seated at tables in front, with a typical Pops atmosphere, were the recuperating veterans. As is conventional in Symphony Hall, ginger ale was served to the boys yesterday afternoon at the tables. By virtue of holding the entertainment in the quadrangle, it was made possible for those in the medical ward who were unable to appear to enjoy the musical renditions from their cots.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK SUN Saturday Theatre Review-

JUN1 9 1926

LOUIS SVENCENSKI, VIOLINIST, DIES

Was Long a Member of the Kneisel Quartet.

Louis Svecenski, Jugoslavian violinist, who for thirty-two years was a member of the famed Kneisel Quartet, died early to-day in the Lenox Hil Hospital after a long illness. He was 62 years old.

Funeral services will be held on Monday at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the ceremonies with music by many of Svecenski's pupils now well known.

The violinist was born in Esseg. Educated at the University of Agram, he won the Government scholarship for music and attended the Vienna Conservatory. He was a classmate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. The latter's death two months ago is said to have hastened his own. He and Kneisel had played Brahms compositions under the composer's direction.

He first came to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its founding in 1904. A class in chamber music was founded by him at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. He was the author of many books on violin technique.

A widow and twd oaughters survive him. The Svecenski home is at 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

LOUIS SVECENSKI TO BE BURIED MONDAY

Famous Violinist was Member of Kneisel Quartet For Thirty Years

The funeral of Louis Svecenski, the violinist who for thirty years has played with the Kneisel Quartet, will be held on Monday from Campbell's Funeral Church.

The violinist was born in Esseg. Educated at the University of Agram, he won the Government scholarship for music and attended the Vienna Conservatory. He was a classmate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. The latters' death two months ago is said to have hastened his own. He and Kneisel had played Brahms compositions under the composer's direction.

He first came to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its founding in 1904. A class in chamber music was founded by him at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. He was the author of many books on violin technique.

A widow and two daughters survive him. The Svecenski home is at 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

JUN27 1926

Koussevitzky Antics.

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony Orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux Orchestra.

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of tone which marks our best organizations. In the wood-winds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimar Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

Even less effective was the Paris Philharmonic orchestra (or a consid-

ALICE GENTLE.

Contralto, will sing with the Ravina Opera Company during the annual ten week season which opened June 26.

put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

The Lamoureux Orchestra.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of one which marks our best organizations. In the wood-winds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimir Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN EAGLE

His Orchestra Cut, Boston Symphony Director Quits

Boston, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.

JUN27 1926

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony orchestra leader stepping before a fair-sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux orchestra.

But it was not an inspiriting effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of tone which marks our best organizations. In the wood-winds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimar Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

Even less effective was the Paris Philharmonic orchestra (or a consid-

NEWS
CLEVELAND, OHIO

WHAT more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux orchestra.

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the mater of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was not need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

NEW 'CELLISTE.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
SEATTLE, WASH.

JUL 1 -

THIS CLIPPING FROM
CALL
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

JUL 1 - 1926

SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR QUITS

BOSTON, July 1 (AP).—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BEE
OMAHA, NEB.

JUL 1 - 1926

by the other news.

Quits "Pop Concerts."

Boston, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season, because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians.

NEW YORK TELEGRAM

MOURNING HASTENS SVECENSKI'S DEATH

Viola Player Had Grieved Over Kneisel's Passing.

Louis Svecenski, viola player of the Kneisel Quartet during the entire thirty-two years of its history and one of the best known musicians of this city, died today in Lenox Hospital, after an illnes of fifteen months with liver trouble and complications. His death, friends said, was hastened by the passing away of Franz Kneisel, famous violinist and composer, his life long friend, who died two months ago.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning at the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth street, when Rubin Goldmark, musician, will conduct the ceremonies with many of Svecenski's pupils furnishing music.

Svecenski was born in Jugoslavia and was sixty-two years old. He was educated at the University of Agram, winning the government scholarship for music and attending the Vienna Conservatory. He was a class mate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. He was induced to come to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and later collaborated with Kneisel.

Svecenski was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its foundation in 1904. He was also the founder of the class of chamber music at the Curtis Institute at Philadelphia. He was one of the founders and a member of the board of governors of the Bohemians, Inc. He was also vice president and a founder of the Beethoven Society. His widow, Mrs. Bertha Svecenski and two daughters survive him. He lived at No. 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

Boston College Men at the Pops Tonight

The following program will be played by the Pops Symphony Orchestra under Agide Jacchia, in Symphony Hall tonight, with the Boston College quartet assisting:—

Military Polonaise.....Chopin
Ave Marta.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Excerpts from "Stabat Mater".....Rossini
Boston College Quartet
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
In the Village (A Dance).....Ondricek
Finale, Fourth Symphony.....Tchaikowsky
Boston College Quartet
Selection "The Vagabond King".....Friml
March of the Toys.....Herbert
Waltz, "Gold and Silver".....Lehar

BOSTON SYMPHONY HEAD QUITS

Conductor Offended Because Number of Musicians Is Reduced

BOSTON, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

Symphony Players Give Pops Concert for Disabled Veterans

GUESTS AND SPONSOR AT VETERANS' HOSPITAL CONCERT

More than 250 convalescent World war veterans were made happy yesterday when, upon the invitation of Miss Elenora Snelling, they heard the Symphony players give a pop concert. In the group are, left to right: Miss O'Brien, Dante Bacci, a veteran; Mrs. Roland Lyman and Miss Snelling.

The hearts of more than 250 convalescent World war veterans were lightened and their spirits buoyed high at the United States Veterans' Hospital, West Roxbury, yesterday afternoon when upon invitation of Miss Elenora Snelling 65 Symphony players, with Agide Jacchia conducting, gave a regular Symphony Pops concert.

Members of the orchestra were grouped beneath the shade of the trees in the quadrangle where the concert was held and seated at tables in front, with a typical Pops atmosphere, were the recuperating veterans. As is conventional in Symphony Hall, ginger ale was served to the boys yesterday afternoon at the tables. By virtue of holding the entertainment in the quadrangle, it was made possible for those in the medical ward who were unable to appear to enjoy the musical renditions from their cots.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM

MOURNING HASTENS SVECENSKI'S DEATH

Viola Player Had Grieved Over Kneisel's Passing.

Louis Svecenski, viola player of the Kneisel Quartet during the entire thirty-two years of its history and one of the best known musicians of this city, died today in Lenox Hospital, after an illnes of fifteen months with liver trouble and complications. His death, friends said, was hastened by the passing away of Franz Kneisel, famous violinist and composer, his life long friend, who died two months ago.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning at the Campbell Funeral Church, Broadway and Sixty-sixth street, when Rubin Goldmark, musician, will conduct the ceremonies with many of Svecenski's pupils furnishing music.

Svecenski was born in Jugoslavia and was sixty-two years old. He was educated at the University of Agram, winning the government scholarship for music and attending the Vienna Conservatory. He was a class mate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. He was induced to come to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and later collaborated with Kneisel.

Svecenski was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its foundation in 1904. He was also the founder of the class of chamber music at the Curtis Institute at Philadelphia. He was one of the founders and a member of the board of governors of the Bohemians, Inc. He was also vice president and a founder of the Beethoven Society. His widow, Mrs. Bertha Svecenski and two daughters survive him. He lived at No. 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK SUN Saturday Theatre Review-

JUN19 1926

LOUIS SVENCENSKI, VIOLINIST, DIES

Was Long a Member of the Kneisel Quartet.

Louis Svecenski, Jugoslavian viollinist, who for thirty-two years was a member of the famed Kneisel Quartet, died early to-day in the Lenox Hil Hospital after a long illness. He was 62 years old.

Funeral services will be held on Monday at 10 o'clock at the Campbell Funeral Church. Rubin Goldmark, musician and composer, will conduct the ceremonies with music by many of Svecenski's pupils now well known.

The violinist was born in Esseg. Educated at the University of Agram, he won the Government scholarship for music and attended the Vienna Conservatory. He was a classmate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. The latter's death two months ago is said to have hastened his own. He and Kneisel had played Brahms compositions under the composer's direction.

He first came to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its founding in 1904. A class in chamber music was founded by him at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. He was the author of many books on violin technique.

A widow and two daughters survive him. The Svecenski home is at 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

Boston College Men at the Pops Tonight

The following program will be played by the Pops Symphony Orchestra under Agide Jacchia, in Symphony Hall tonight, with the Boston College quartet assisting:

Military Polonaise.....Chopin
Ave Maria.....Schubert-Wilhelmj
(Solo Violin, Harp, Organ and Strings)
Excerpts from "Stabat Mater".....Rossini
Boston College Quartet
Fantasia, "Lohengrin".....Wagner
In the Village (A Dance).....Ondricek
Finale, Fourth Symphony.....Tchaikovsky
Boston College Quartet
Selection "The Vagabond King".....Friml
March of the Toys.....Herbert
Waltz, "Gold and Silver".....Lehar

LOUIS SVECENSKI TO BE BURIED MONDAY

Famous Violinist was Member of Kneisel Quartet For Thirty Years

The funeral of Louis Svecenski, the violinist who for thirty years has played with the Kneisel Quartet, will be held on Monday from Campbell's Funeral Church.

The violinist was born in Esseg. Educated at the University of Agram, he won the Government scholarship for music and attended the Vienna Conservatory. He was a classmate of Fritz Kreisler and Franz Kneisel. The latters' death two months ago is said to have hastened his own. He and Kneisel had played Brahms compositions under the composer's direction.

He first came to America in 1885 as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He was the principal teacher at the Institute of Musical Art since its founding in 1904. A class in chamber music was founded by him at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. He was the author of many books on violin technique.

A widow and two daughters survive him. The Svecenski home is at 327 West Eighty-fifth street.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
CHICAGO, ILL.

BOSTON SYMPHONY HEAD QUITS

Conductor Offended Because Number of Musicians Is Reduced

BOSTON, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

JUN27 1926

Koussevitzky Antics.

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony Orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux Orchestra.

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of one which marks our best organizations. In the wood-winds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimar Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

Even less effective was the Paris Philharmonic orchestra (or a consid-

ALICE GENTLE.

Contralto, will sing with the Ravina Opera Company during the annual ten week season which opened June 26.

put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

The Lamoureux Orchestra.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of one which marks our best organizations. In the wood-winds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimir Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

Even less effective was the Paris Philharmonic orchestra (or a consid-

THIS CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN EAGLE

His Orchestra Cut, Boston Symphony Director Quits

Boston, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

of the Music, made effective after tonight's concert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.

JUN27 1926

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony orchestra leader stepping before a fair-sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux orchestra.

But it was not an inspiriting effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

Paris is at a disadvantage in the matter of its orchestras. None is in the first rank, and for excellent reasons. The material is uneven, some admirable players being handicapped by having less capable men in their midst. But rehearsals are not so easily had—not enough of them.

The strings were too frequently strident during the Koussevitzky concert, and the brasses lacking in that golden quality of tone which marks our best organizations. In the woodwinds there was a degree of spottiness not at all to the fancy of the sensitive ear. All of which makes for a deficiency in tonal balance which is a foremost requisite in any distinguished symphony body.

Nor could I enthuse—nor do I—over the technical clarity of the Lamoureux players. I wondered just how Vladimar Shavitch managed when he conducted that aggregation a few weeks ago. For, you see, there is a constant raggedness in the attacks, and a corresponding shiftlessness in the release of the phrase.

Even less effective was the Paris Philharmonic orchestra (or a consid-

NEWS
CLEVELAND, OHIO

WHAT more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux orchestra.

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the mater of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was not need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-eggs music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

A NEW 'CELLISTE.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
SEATTLE, WASH.

JUL

"Pop Concert" Conductor Quits.

BOSTON, Thursday, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

cians.

p Concerts."
July 1.—(AP)—

NEW YORK EVENING POST

JUN 12 1926

"LONG LIFE TO JAZZ," IS GOOSSENS PRAYER

British Conductor of Rochester Symphony Finds Philadelphia Orchestra World's "Finest"

CONDUCTS IN HOLLYWOOD SOON

Evening Post Foreign Service

Copyright, 1926, by N. Y. Evening Post, Inc.

London, June 12.—"I have no hesitation in saying that the Philadelphia Orchestra is the finest orchestra in the world today," said Eugene Goossens, the English conductor, just returned here from his fourth visit to America, to your correspondent in an interview.

[Mr. Goossens, conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic, was enthusiastically received in New York during the last season when he conducted the New York Symphony Orchestra for one month.]

"The Boston Symphony, which I conducted as a guest during the last season, has a string tone that is probably unsurpassed, but there are just a few more inches of finish on the Philadelphia all round.

"Its precision is nothing short of wonderful, and for this Leopold Stokowski is responsible. He has the gift of 'attack,' which is rare even in great conductors—that gift of a definite beat which makes every man in the orchestra breathe more freely because he feels secure. With such a conductor there can be no roughness and no uncertainty.

"When I say this, mind you, I am not speaking as a casual observer, but as a musician who for years has played under the greatest conductors of Europe, Nikisch and Richter included, and who has conducted famous orchestras both in Europe and America. Old Dr. Richter, revered in England as no one else was, used to say that the hardest thing to do with an orchestra is to start it and the next hardest thing to stop it. That's one test of a conductor; and the other is accompanying. In both these tests Stokowski stands supreme. I never heard a more perfect orchestral accompaniment in my life.

"Another thing I admire Stokowski for is his prodigious memory. The way he masters a score, measure by measure, and retains it in his mind, is simply wonderful. If he comes to England with the Philadelphia Orchestra, he is bound to have a marvelous reception."

Seaking of jazz, Mr. Goossens said:

"Some people in Europe still think that America's sole musical interest is the exploitation and exportation of 'syncopated' music. They picture it as a country swayed by the output of 'Tin-Pan Alley.'

"But Americans of intelligence are beginning to resent the idea that the syncopated inanities of any fifth-rate composer represent in the minds of the public the normal state of America's musical enlightenment. Undoubtedly the best examples of so-called syncopated music are not only admirable in themselves, but stimulating and healthy in their influence, particularly when interpreted by an orchestra of the caliber of Paul Whiteman's —long life to it!"

Mr. Goossens is now conducting the season of the Diaghileff Russian Ballet in London, returning to the United States in July to conduct in the Hollywood Bowl, after which he begins his second season as the conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra.

EVE. TRIBUNE
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

JUL 1 - 1926

Boston Symphony Leader Resigns on Reduction

Boston, July 1.—(By Associated Press.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He also refused to renew his contract for next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM

RIGHTS OF A CONDUCTOR.

Arturo Toscanini, never a man of mercy at rehearsal, has won another victory for his own severity. A violinist of the Scala orchestra has withdrawn a damage suit arising from an alleged insult by the maestro. The fiddler held that during a rehearsal Signor Toscanini had said to him, "Weaklings are not wanted here. You are very feeble," and that that remark was slanderous. Now he is said to recognize that an orchestral leader "has an undeniable right to criticise and discipline his musicians."

But has that right ever been denied? The question is rather how far censure and discipline may go without going too far. The retort attributed to Signor Toscanini setting a famous soprano in her place when both were members of the Metropolitan Opera Company has often been quoted. "But, maestro," said the irritated lady, "don't you realize that I am a star?" "Stars, madame," replied the conductor, "are in the sky. You are on the stage." This, in view of all the circumstances, may be set down as the retort courteous.

Orchestras collectively and the conductors that lead them have not always been immune from sharp remarks by soloists whose musicianship they profess to take more or less lightly. It is said that Mme. Nordica, rehearsing Elisabeth's "Greeting" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, remarked jocularly upon a false entrance of the 'cellos:—"Are you the Boston Symphony? You play like a band from Kalamazoo!" The men received this sally in silence and Mme. Nordica suffered for her facetiousness by never being invited to sing with that orchestra again.

Mme. Melba, in a similar position, got off better, perhaps because she did not attempt a joke. She tells the story in her "Melodies and Memories":—"When I first sang with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, although I knew after five minutes that I had never sung to such a marvellous accompaniment, I did not fully realize the prestige which the orchestra had in the eyes of all good Americans. It was a prestige so exceptional that most foreign artists were rather awed by it and never dared even the smallest criticism. I suppose I must have been different.

"One day we were rehearsing the 'Allegro ed il Penseroso' of Handel, with flute obbligato. In an important part one of the instruments played a C natural instead of a C sharp. 'C sharp! C sharp!' I shouted, turning round and pointing at the man who had made the mistake. There was a dead silence. Then they all burst out laughing. And I realized that I had created a record as far as the Boston Symphony Orchestra was concerned."

Record or not, Mme. Melba was often its soloist during a period of more than twenty years.

SUN
PITTSBURG, PA.

JUL 1 - 1926

SYMPHONY LEADER QUITS.

BOSTON, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians.

PROTESTS SYMPHONY CUT DOWN

Jacchia Quits, Declaring the Players Allowed Him Are Inadequate

AMERICAN July 1

Declaring that despite his protests to the management, he was left with "an unbalanced and inadequate orchestra" for the closing concerts, Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Boston Symphony "Pops" for ten years, has passed in his resignation, refusing to return next season.

This action is the culmination of considerable friction and internal difficulties in the Symphony Orchestra, first and exclusively made known in the Boston Evening American.

Today, Frederick P. Cabot, president of the trustees, issued a statement that "the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and as well-balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Jacchia has conducted."

HAS ONLY 67 PLAYERS.

This fact was pointed out to Jacchia, according to Mr. Cabot's letter, but the conductor declared that so many musicians had been excused this season that he had only sixty-seven members in the orchestra.

"The reason given for excusing these men was economy," he declared, "or that they might accept positions for the Summer, or go to Europe. Sixty-seven members in the orchestra is not consistent with the advertisements stating that the orchestra consisted of eighty members."

Jacchia then declared that he was through and that he had refused to sign a contract for next season.

REGRETTED BY CABOT.

Mr. Cabot's statement says that "no one can regret more than the trustees and the management Jacchia's decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

Jacchia has attained considerable fame and popularity during his conductorship of the "Pops." He is also director of the Boston Conservatory of Music. His ten years of service at the Pops is the longest in the records of the orchestra.

POPS concert was given to disabled World War veterans by Agide Jacchia and his orchestra yesterday at the West Roxbury hospital for veterans. This photo shows Maestro Jacchia and a portion of his orchestra.
Advertiser Photo.

POST DISPATCH
ST. LOUIS, MO.

JUL - 1926

QUITS WHEN ORCHESTRA IS CUT

Conductor of Boston Symphony "Pop" Refuses to Finish Season.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop" concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra has been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians by the management. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

JACCHIA RESIGNS AS CONDUCTOR OF POPS CONCERTS

TRANSCRIPT July 1

Break Comes as Result of Disagreement with Policy of Symphony Management

WILL NOT CONDUCT SATURDAY

President of Board of Trustees Denies Orchestra Is Unbalanced or Inadequate

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Pops concerts for ten seasons, has resigned his position because of a disagreement with the policy of the Symphony management.

In a statement made this morning by Mr. Jacchia's secretary, it was explained that Mr. Jacchia will not conduct the closing concert of the season, Saturday evening, because the management has excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra will be unbalanced and inadequate. His engagement will terminate with the program of Friday evening. Mr. Jacchia's contract was offered him for next year but has been cancelled because of the disagreement.

The Trustees' Side

At noon the following statement was issued by Frederick P. Cabot, president of the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

"I have seen a statement made to the press this morning by Mr. Jacchia's secretary relative to Mr. Jacchia's refusal to conduct the closing concert of the present season of Pop concerts.

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and as well balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia has conducted. In fact, the orchestra is quite a little larger this week than has been the case in many concerts under Mr. Jacchia. The quality of the membership of the orchestra is well known and needs no defense.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that Mr. Jacchia would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract which had been offered him for next season. On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years, and no one can regret more than the trustees and the management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

Have Summer Engagements

Patrons of the concerts are familiar with the fact that the Pops season generally begins with about ninety of the 107 men in the winter orchestra and ends the ten-week period with nearer seventy, giving a general average of eighty available players. It has been the custom of the management to extend the opportunity to depart on summer engagements or hotel contracts to a limited number of players when the Pops season continues to or through July 4.

To America in 1902

Agide Jacchia first came to America in 1902 as chief assastant to Mascagni, whose pupil he had been at the Conservatory of Music in Pesaro, Italy. In the following five years Mr. Jacchia was conductor at a number of minor opera houses in Italy. The year 1907 brought him back to America, first to be leader of an operatic company in San Francisco, later to conduct in Montreal and New York. He first assumed leadership of the Pop Concerts in Boston in 1917, and has been commonly accepted as the most popular of the musicians who have held that summer post. Mr. Jacchia is director also of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He became an American citizen in 1922.

JACCHIA RESIGNS AS CONDUCTOR OF POPS CONCERTS

Continued from Page One

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
EVENING POST

JUN 12 1926

"LONG LIFE TO JAZZ," IS GOOSSENS PRAYER

British Conductor of Rochester Symphony Finds Philadelphia Orchestra World's "Finest"

CONDUCTS IN HOLLYWOOD SOON

Evening Post Foreign Service

Copyright, 1926, by N. Y. Evening Post, Inc.

London, June 12.—"I have no hesitation in saying that the Philadelphia Orchestra is the finest orchestra in the world today," said Eugene Goossens, the English conductor, just returned here from his fourth visit to America, to your correspondent in an interview.

[Mr. Goossens, conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic, was enthusiastically received in New York during the last season when he conducted the New York Symphony Orchestra for one month.]

"The Boston Symphony, which I conducted as a guest during the last season, has a string tone that is probably unsurpassed, but there are just a few more inches of finish on the Philadelphia all round.

"Its precision is nothing short of wonderful, and for this Leopold Stokowski is responsible. He has the gift of 'attack,' which is rare even in great conductors—that gift of a definite beat which makes every man in the orchestra breathe more freely because he feels secure. With such a conductor there can be no roughness and no uncertainty.

"When I say this, mind you, I am not speaking as a casual observer, but as a musician who for years has played under the greatest conductors of Europe, Nikisch and Richter included, and who has conducted famous orchestras both in Europe and America. Old Dr. Richter, revered in England as no one else was, used to say that the hardest thing to do with an orchestra is to start it and the next hardest thing to stop it. That's one test of a conductor; and the other is accompanying. In both these tests Stokowski stands supreme. I never heard a more perfect orchestral accompaniment in my life.

"Another thing I admire Stokowski for is his prodigious memory. The way he masters a score, measure by measure, and retains it in his mind, is simply wonderful. If he comes to England with the Philadelphia Orchestra, he is bound to have a marvelous reception."

Seaking of jazz, Mr. Goossens said:

"Some people in Europe still think that America's sole musical interest is the exploitation and exportation of 'syncopated' music. They picture it as a country swayed by the output of 'Tin-Pan Alley.'

"But Americans of intelligence are beginning to resent the idea that the syncopated inanities of any fifth-rate composer represent in the minds of the public the normal state of America's musical enlightenment. Undoubtedly the best examples of so-called syncopated music are not only admirable in themselves, but stimulating and healthy in their influence, particularly when interpreted by an orchestra of the caliber of Paul Whiteman's —long life to it!"

Mr. Goossens is now conducting the season of the Diaghileff Russian Ballet in London, returning to the United States in July to conduct in the Hollywood Bowl, after which he begins his second season as the conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra.

EVE. TRIBUNE
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

JUL 1 - 1926

Boston Symphony Leader Resigns on Reduction

Boston, July 1.—(By Associated Press.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He also refused to renew his contract for next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
TELEGRAM

RIGHTS OF A CONDUCTOR.

Arturo Toscanini, never a man of mercy at rehearsal, has won another victory for his own severity. A violinist of the Scala orchestra has withdrawn a damage suit arising from an alleged insult by the maestro. The fiddler held that during a rehearsal Signor Toscanini had said to him, "Weaklings are not wanted here. You are very feeble," and that that remark was slanderous. Now he is said to recognize that an orchestral leader "has an undeniable right to criticise and discipline his musicians."

But has that right ever been denied? The question is rather how far censure and discipline may go without going too far. The retort attributed to Signor Toscanini setting a famous soprano in her place when both were members of the Metropolitan Opera Company has often been quoted. "But, maestro," said the irritated lady, "don't you realize that I am a star?" "Stars, madame," replied the conductor, "are in the sky. You are on the stage." This, in view of all the circumstances, may be set down as the retort courteous.

Orchestras collectively and the conductors that lead them have not always been immune from sharp remarks by soloists whose musicianship they profess to take more or less lightly. It is said that Mme. Nordica, rehearsing Elisabeth's "Greeting" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, remarked jocularly upon a false entrance of the 'cellos:—"Are you the Boston Symphony? You play like a band from Kalamazoo!" The men received this sally in silence and Mme. Nordica suffered for her facetiousness by never being invited to sing with that orchestra again.

Mme. Melba, in a similar position, got off better, perhaps because she did not attempt a joke. She tells the story in her "Melodies and Memories":—"When I first sang with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, although I knew after five minutes that I had never sung to such a marvellous accompaniment, I did not fully realize the prestige which the orchestra had in the eyes of all good Americans. It was a prestige so exceptional that most foreign artists were rather awed by it and never dared even the smallest criticism. I suppose I must have been different.

"One day we were rehearsing the 'Allegro ed il Penseroso' of Handel, with flute obbligato. In an important part one of the instruments played a C natural instead of a C sharp. 'C sharp! C sharp!' I shouted, turning round and pointing at the man who had made the mistake. There was a dead silence. Then they all burst out laughing. And I realized that I had created a record as far as the Boston Symphony Orchestra was concerned."

Record or not, Mme. Melba was often its soloist during a period of more than twenty years.

SUN
PITTSBURG, PA.

JUL 1 1926

SYMPHONY LEADER QUITS.

BOSTON, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians.

PROTESTS SYMPHONY CUT DOWN

Jacchia Quits, Declaring the Players Allowed Him Are Inadequate

AMERICAN July 1

Declaring that despite his protests to the management, he was left with "an unbalanced and inadequate orchestra" for the closing concerts, Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Boston Symphony "Pops" for ten years, has passed in his resignation, refusing to return next season.

This action is the culmination of considerable friction and internal difficulties in the Symphony Orchestra, first and exclusively made known in the Boston Evening American.

Today, Frederick P. Cabot, president of the trustees, issued a statement that "the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and as well-balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Jacchia has conducted."

HAS ONLY 67 PLAYERS.

This fact was pointed out to Jacchia, according to Mr. Cabot's letter, but the conductor declared that so many musicians had been excused this season that he had only sixty-seven members in the orchestra.

"The reason given for excusing these men was economy," he declared, "or that they might accept positions for the Summer, or go to Europe. Sixty-seven members in the orchestra is not consistent with the advertisements stating that the orchestra consisted of eighty members."

Jacchia then declared that he was through and that he had refused to sign a contract for next season.

REGRETTED BY CABOT.

Mr. Cabot's statement says that "no one can regret more than the trustees and the management Jacchia's decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

Jacchia has attained considerable fame and popularity during his conductorship of the "Pops." He is also director of the Boston Conservatory of Music. His ten years of service at the Pops is the longest in the records of the orchestra.

POPS concert was given to disabled World War veterans by Agide Jacchia and his orchestra yesterday at the West Roxbury hospital for veterans. This photo shows Maestro Jacchia and a portion of his orchestra.
Advertiser Photo.

POST DISPATCH
ST. LOUIS, MO.

QUITS WHEN ORCHESTRA IS CUT

Conductor of Boston Symphony "Pop" Refuses to Finish Season.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop" concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra has been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians by the management. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

JACCHIA RESIGNS AS CONDUCTOR OF POPS CONCERTS

TRANSCRIPT July 1

Break Comes as Result of Disagreement with Policy of Symphony Management

WILL NOT CONDUCT SATURDAY

President of Board of Trustees Denies Orchestra Is Unbalanced or Inadequate

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Pops concerts for ten seasons, has resigned his position because of a disagreement with the policy of the Symphony management.

In a statement made this morning by Mr. Jacchia's secretary, it was explained that Mr. Jacchia will not conduct the closing concert of the season, Saturday evening, because the management has excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra will be unbalanced and inadequate. His engagement will terminate with the program of Friday evening. Mr. Jacchia's contract was offered him for next year but has been cancelled because of the disagreement.

The Trustees' Side

At noon the following statement was issued by Frederick P. Cabot, president of the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra:

"I have seen a statement made to the press this morning by Mr. Jacchia's secretary relative to Mr. Jacchia's refusal to conduct the closing concert of the present season of Pop concerts.

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and as well balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia has conducted. In fact, the orchestra is quite a little larger this week than has been the case in many concerts under Mr. Jacchia. The quality of the membership of the orchestra is well known and needs no defense.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that Mr. Jacchia would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract which had been offered him for next season. On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years, and no one can regret more than the trustees and the management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

Have Summer Engagements

Patrons of the concerts are familiar with the fact that the Pops season generally begins with about ninety of the 107 men in the winter orchestra and ends the ten-week period with nearer seventy, giving a general average of eighty available players. It has been the custom of the management to extend the opportunity to depart on summer engagements or hotel contracts to a limited number of players when the Pops season continues to or through July 4.

To America in 1902

Agide Jacchia first came to America in 1902 as chief assastant to Mascagni, whose pupil he had been at the Conservatory of Music in Pesaro, Italy. In the following five years Mr. Jacchia was conductor at a number of minor opera houses in Italy. The year 1907 brought him back to America, first to be leader of an operatic company in San Francisco, later to conduct in Montreal and New York. He first assumed leadership of the Pop Concerts in Boston in 1917, and has been commonly acepted as the most popular of the musicians who have held that summer post. Mr. Jacchia is director also of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He became an American citizen in 1922.

JACCHIA RESIGNS AS CONDUCTOR OF POPS CONCERTS

Continued from Page One

sons which Mr. Jacchia has conducted. In fact, the orchestra is quite a little larger this week than has been the case in many concerts under Mr. Jacchia. The quality of the membership of the orchestra is well known and needs no defense.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that Mr. Jacchia would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract which had been offered him for next season. On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years, and no one can regret more than the trustees and the management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

Have Summer Engagements

Patrons of the concerts are familiar with the fact that the Pops season generally begins with about ninety of the 107 men in the winter orchestra and ends the ten-week period with nearer seventy, giving a general average of eighty available players. It has been the custom of the management to extend the opportunity to depart on summer engagements or hotel contracts to a limited number of players when the Pops season continues to or through July 4.

To America in 1902

Agide Jacchia first came to America in 1902 as chief assastant to Mascagni, whose pupil he had been at the Conservatory of Music in Pesaro, Italy. In the following five years Mr. Jacchia was conductor at a number of minor opera houses in Italy. The year 1907 brought him back to America, first to be leader of an operatic company in San Francisco, later to conduct in Montreal and New York. He first assumed leadership of the Pop Concerts in Boston in 1917, and has been commonly acepted as the most popular of the musicians who have held that summer post. Mr. Jacchia is director also of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He became an American citizen in 1922.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.
JUL 1 - 1926

18

Boston Pop Leader Resigns As Orchestra Is Reduced

BOSTON, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop" concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed, was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his programs with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

LOUISVILLE, KY.
TIMES
JUL 1 - 1926

Conductor of Boston's "Pop Concerts" Resigns

Boston, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music made his resgnation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM
JUL - 1926

NEWS
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.
JUL 1 - 1926

Boston Symphony Leader Quits, Orchestra Reduced

BOSTON, Thursday (A. P.).— Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow nights concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

"Pop Concert" Conductor Quits.

BOSTON, July 1 (A.P.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after Friday night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also he had refused to renew his contract for next season. Jacchia said the management "had excused so many musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of eighty members.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
1926

NEW LONDON
CONN.
ISSUE OF
JUL 1 - 1926

'POPS' CONDUCTOR QUITS IN BOSTON

Jacchia Angry at Cut in Number of Musicians.

Boston, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned to-day. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after to-morrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted,

Pop Concerts' Conductor Resigns.

BOSTON, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the pop concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 70 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

JACCHIA QUITS ORCHESTRA

Conductor of Boston "Pop Concerts" Resigns—Staff Cut

Boston, July 1 (AP).—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
CHICAGO, ILL.
JUL 1 - 1926

Conductor of Boston Orchestra "Pops" Resigns

BOSTON, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

STANDARD
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
JUL 1 1926

'POP CONCERTS' LEADER RESIGNS

Conductor Ten Years Refuses to Lead in Final Two Programs

Declares Orchestra Has Been Reduced from 80 to 67 Musicians

Boston, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

80 Players Announced.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his program with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

THIS CLIPPING FROM AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.
JUL 2 1926

Gives Up Baton

AGIDE JACCHIA
CONDUCTOR of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, Agide Jacchia has resigned, effective after tonight's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

Mr. Fiedler to Lead Final Pop Concert

Monitor ——— July 2, '26

In the absence of Agide Jacchia, who has resigned as conductor of the Symphony Hall Pop concerts, the final concert of the season, tomorrow evening, will be conducted by Arthur Fiedler of the viola section.

JACCHIA OUT AS LEADER OF HUB SYMPHONY

Pops Conductor Raps Interference by the Management

Discord in the Boston Symphony orchestra came to the surface today in the resignation of Agide Jacchia, for 10 years conductor of the "Pops" concerts.

ART AND ECONOMY

Art and economy do not go hand in hand ,but they have been made to with the result of sacrificing musical standards, Jacchia hinted in his resignation.

The meastro said he would conduct only two more concerts, tonight's and tomorrow night, and someone else will have to finish out the season by directing the band at the Saturday and Sunday night concerts. Jacchia also said he had refused to sign a contract for next season.

A disagreement with the policy of the management had caused him to leave his post, Jacchia said. He identified the management as William H.

(Continued

Says Economy Hampered Him

AGIDE JACCHIA

JACCHIA QUITS POPS CONCERTS

Symphony Director Raps Interference by the Management

Continued from First Page

Brennan, manager of the orchestra, and George Judd, assistant manager, and said in what they did he supposed they were acting under the direction of the trustees.

HAD EXCUSED MEMBERS

Mr. Jacchia said both men had been promiscuously excusing members of the orchestra from further appearances this season in order that they might accept positions for the summer or go abroad.

"As the programs were planning for an orchestra of 80 members this left an unbalanced and inadequate orchestra," Jacchia declared. "The reason given for excusing these men was economy, or that they might accept positions for the summer or go to Europe.

"So many were excused as to leave only 67 members in the orchestra, and this was not consistent with their advertisements stating that the orchestra consisted of 80 members."

HAMPERED CONDUCTOR

It is reported that several of the musicians engaged for the Saturday and Sunday night concerts had never played with the orchestra before, and that this hampered the conductor in the rehearsals of his programs. But Jacchia refused to comment on this report.

Jacchia is probably the most popular conductor the "Pops" has ever had, and has served the longest as its leader. He is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, and has also won a reputation as choral conductor. For some years before coming here he was conductor of opera. His wife, Esther F. Jacchia, is a noted singer.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
JUL 2 - 1926

Conductor Jacchia Resigns Post With Boston Symphony

Boston, July 1.—(Associated Press.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today, effective after tomorrow's concert. Jacchia is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, he asserted, "had excused many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

THIS CLIPPING FROM MERCURY
NEW BEDFORD, MASS

JUL 2 1926

LEADER RESIGNS.

Conductor of Symphony "Pop Concerts" Objects to Reduction of Orchestra.

Boston, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

80 Players Announced.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his program with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JUL 2 1926

QUITS BOSTON SYMPHONY

Agide Jacchia Declines to Conduct Remaining Concerts

Boston, July 2.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop" concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned yesterday. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians.

His resignation, Mr. Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." He voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

PLAINDEALER
CLEVELAND, OHIO
JUL 2 - 192

Orchestra Conductor Resigns.

BOSTON.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, has resigned. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.

JUL 1 1926

Boston Pop Leader Resigns As Orchestra Is Reduced

BOSTON, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop" concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed, was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his programs with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
TELEGRAM

LOUISVILLE, KY.
TIMES

Conductor of Boston's "Pop Concerts" Resigns

Boston, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music made his resgnation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

NEWS
INDIANAPOLIS, IND

Boston Symphony Leader Quits, Orchestra Reduced

BOSTON, Thursday (A. P.).— Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow nights concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

"Pop Concert" Conductor Quits.

BOSTON, July 1 (A.P.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after Friday night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also he had refused to renew his contract for next season. Jacchia said the management "had excused so many musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of eighty members.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.

NEW LONDON CONN.

ISSUE OF
JUL 1 - 1926

'POPS' CONDUCTOR QUITS IN BOSTON

Jacchia Angry at Cut in Number of Musicians.

Boston, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned to-day. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after to-morrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted,

Pop Concerts' Conductor Resigns.

BOSTON, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the pop concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 70 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
EVENING POST

JACCHIA QUITS ORCHESTRA

Conductor of Boston "Pop Concerts" Resigns—Staff Cut

Boston, July 1 (AP).—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
CHICAGO, ILL.

Conductor of Boston Orchestra "Pops" Resigns

BOSTON, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

STANDARD
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

JUL 1 1926

'POP CONCERTS' LEADER RESIGNS

Conductor Ten Years Refuses to Lead in Final Two Programs

Declares Orchestra Has Been Reduced from 80 to 67 Musicians

Boston, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

50 Players Announced.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his program with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

THIS CLIPPING FROM AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.

Gives Up Baton

AGIDE JACCHIA
CONDUCTOR of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, Agide Jacchia has resigned, effective after tonight's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

Mr. Fiedler to Lead Final Pop Concert

Monitor July 2, '26

In the absence of Agide Jacchia, who has resigned as conductor of the Symphony Hall Pop concerts, the final concert of the season, tomorrow evening, will be conducted by Arthur Fiedler of the viola section

JACCHIA OUT AS LEADER OF HUB SYMPHONY

Pops Conductor Raps Interference by the Management

Discord in the Boston Symphony orchestra came to the surface today in the resignation of Agide Jacchia, for 10 years conductor of the "Pops" concerts.

ART AND ECONOMY

Art and economy do not go hand in hand ,but they have been made to with the result of sacrificing musical standards, Jacchia hinted in his resignation.

The meastro said he would conduct only two more concerts, tonight's and tomorrow night, and someone else will have to finish out the season by directing the band at the Saturday and Sunday night concerts. Jacchia also said he had refused to sign a contract for next season.

A disagreement with the policy of the management had caused him to leave his post, Jacchia said. He identified the management as William H.

(Continued

Says Economy Hampered Him

AGIDE JACCHIA

JACCHIA QUITS POPS CONCERTS

Symphony Director Raps Interference by the Management

Continued from First Page

Brennan, manager of the orchestra, and George Judd, assistant manager, and said in what they did he supposed they were acting under the direction of the trustees.

HAD EXCUSED MEMBERS

Mr. Jacchia said both men had been promiscuously excusing members of the orchestra from further appearances this season in order that they might accept positions for the summer or go abroad.

"As the programs were planning for an orchestra of 80 members this left an unbalanced and inadequate orchestra." Jacchia declared. "The reason given for excusing these men was economy, or that they might accept positions for the summer or go to Europe.

"So many were excused as to leave only 67 members in the orchestra, and this was not consistent with their advertisements stating that the orchestra consisted of 80 members."

HAMPERED CONDUCTOR

It is reported that several of the musicians engaged for the Saturday and Sunday night concerts had never played with the orchestra before, and that this hampered the conductor in the rehearsals of his programs. But Jacchia refused to comment on this report.

Jacchia is probably the most popular conductor the "Pops" has ever had, and has served the longest as its leader. He is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, and has also won a reputation as choral conductor. For some years before coming here he was conductor of opera. His wife, Esther F. Jacchia, is a noted singer.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

JUL 2 1926

Conductor Jacchia Resigns Post With Boston Symphony

Boston, July 1.—(Associated Press.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today, effective after tomorrow's concert. Jacchia is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, he asserted, "had excused many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

THIS CLIPPING FROM MERCURY
NEW BEDFORD, MASS

JUL 2 1926

LEADER RESIGNS.

Conductor of Symphony "Pop Concerts" Objects to Reduction of Orchestra.

Boston, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

80 Players Announced.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his program with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

QUITS BOSTON SYMPHONY

Agide Jacchia Declines to Conduct Remaining Concerts

Boston, July 2.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop" concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned yesterday. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians.

His resignation, Mr. Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." He voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

PLAINDEALER
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Orchestra Conductor Resigns.

BOSTON.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, has resigned. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.

JUL 1 - 1926

Boston Pop Leader Resigns As Orchestra Is Reduced

BOSTON, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop" concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed, was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his programs with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM

LOUISVILLE, KY.
TIMES

1926

Conductor of Boston's "Pop Concerts" Resigns

Boston, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music made his resgnation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

NEWS
INDIANAPOLIS, IND

Boston Symphony Leader Quits, Orchestra Reduced

BOSTON, Thursday (A. P.).— Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow nights concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

"Pop Concert" Conductor Quits.

BOSTON, July 1 (A.P.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after Friday night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also he had refused to renew his contract for next season. Jacchia said the management "had excused so many musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of eighty members.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.

JUL 1 - 1926

'POPS' CONDUCTOR QUITS IN BOSTON

Jacchia Angry at Cut in Number of Musicians.

Boston, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned to-day. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after to-morrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

The orchestra is advertised to consist of eighty members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests

Pop Concerts' Conductor Resigns.

BOSTON, July 1 (AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the pop concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 70 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

JACCHIA QUITS ORCHESTRA

Conductor of Boston "Pop Concerts" Resigns—Staff Cut

Boston, July 1 (AP).—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

STANDARD
NEW BEDFORD, MASS

JUL 1 1926

'POP CONCERTS' LEADER RESIGNS

Conductor Ten Years Refuses to Lead in Final Two Programs

Declares Orchestra Has Been Reduced from 80 to 67 Musicians

Boston, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

80 Players Announced.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his program with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

THIS CLIPPING FROM AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.

JUL 2 1926

Gives Up Baton

AGIDE JACCHIA
CONDUCTOR of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, Agide Jacchia has resigned, effective after tonight's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

Mr. Fiedler to Lead Final Pop Concert

Monitor July 2, '26

In the absence of Agide Jacchia, who has resigned as conductor of the Symphony Hall Pop concerts, the final concert of the season, tomorrow evening, will be conducted by Arthur Fiedler of the viola section.

JACCHIA OUT AS LEADER OF HUB SYMPHONY

Pops Conductor Raps Interference by the Management

Discord in the Boston Symphony orchestra came to the surface today in the resignation of Agide Jacchia, for 10 years conductor of the "Pops" concerts.

ART AND ECONOMY

Art and economy do not go hand in hand ,but they have been made to with the result of sacrificing musical standards, Jacchia hinted in his resignation.

The meastro said he would conduct only two more concerts, tonight's and tomorrow night, and someone else will have to finish out the season by directing the band at the Saturday and Sunday night concerts. Jacchia also said he had refused to sign a contract for next season.

A disagreement with the policy of the management had caused him to leave his post, Jacchia said. He identified the management as William H.

(Continued

Says Economy Hampered Him

AGIDE JACCHIA

JACCHIA QUITS POPS CONCERTS

Symphony Director Raps Interference by the Management

Continued from First Page

Brennan, manager of the orchestra, and George Judd, assistant manager, and said in what they did he supposed they were acting under the direction of the trustees.

HAD EXCUSED MEMBERS

Mr. Jacchia said both men had been promiscuously excusing members of the orchestra from further appearances this season in order that they might accept positions for the summer or go abroad.

"As the programs were planning for an orchestra of 80 members this left an unbalanced and inadequate orchestra," Jacchia declared. "The reason given for excusing these men was economy, or that they might accept positions for the summer or go to Europe.

"So many were excused as to leave only 67 members in the orchestra, and this was not consistent with their advertisements stating that the orchestra consisted of 80 members."

HAMPERED CONDUCTOR

It is reported that several of the musicians engaged for the Saturday and Sunday night concerts had never played with the orchestra before, and that this hampered the conductor in the rehearsals of his programs. But Jacchia refused to comment on this report.

Jacchia is probably the most popular conductor the "Pops" has ever had, and has served the longest as its leader. He is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, and has also won a reputation as choral conductor. For some years before coming here he was conductor of opera. His wife, Esther F. Jacchia, is a noted singer.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

JUL 2 - 192

Conductor Jacchia Resigns Post With Boston Symphony

Boston, July 1.—(Associated Press.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today, effective after tomorrow's concert. Jacchia is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, he asserted, "had excused many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

THIS CLIPPING FROM MERCURY
NEW BEDFORD, MASS

JUL 2 1926

LEADER RESIGNS.

Conductor of Symphony "Pop Concerts" Objects to Reduction of Orchestra.

Boston, July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said that the management, which he presumed was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

80 Players Announced.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his program with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

JUL 2 - 192

QUITS BOSTON SYMPHONY

Agide Jacchia Declines to Conduct Remaining Concerts

Boston, July 2.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia conductor of the "pop" concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for years, resigned yesterday. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians.

His resignation, Mr. Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs." He voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

PLAINDEALER
CLEVELAND, OHIO

JUL 2 1926

Orchestra Conductor Resigns.

BOSTON.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, has resigned. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THIS CLIPPING FROM Philadelphia Sun
JUL 3 - 1926

ORCHESTRA 'TOO SMALL'

Boston Conductor Quits When He Loses Thirteen Members

Boston, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EVE. TRIBUNE
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Boston Symphony Leader Resigns on Reduction

Boston, July 2.—(By Associated Press.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 10 years resigned yesterday. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He also refused to renew his contract for next season.

TRIBUNE
MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Boston Symphony Leader Resigns on Reduction

Boston, July 1.—(By Associated Press.)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He also refused to renew his contract for next season.

NEW YORK AMERICAN
JUL 2 1926

JACCHIA QUITS POST.

By Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 1.

AGIDE JACCHIA, conductor of the "P. O P. concerts" of the Boston Symphony orchestra for ten years, resigned today, effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 had refused to renew his con musicians.

SUN
BALTIMORE, MD.
JUL 2 - 1926

JACCHIA QUITS SYMPHONY

Conductor Resents Cuts In Boston Orchestra Personnel.

Boston, July 1 (AP).—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining pro

JACCHIA SAYS IT'S JEALOUSY

1 Post 11 July 2, 1926

Retiring 'Pops' Leader Blames Koussevitzky, Symphony Conductor, for 'Wrecking' of His Orchestra

Agide Jacchia, who caused a furore in music circles yesterday by resigning his post as conductor of the Symphony Pop concerts, charges that a niggardly policy of economy on the part of the management, and influence exerted over the management by Conductor Serge Koussevitzky of the Symphony Orchestra because of professional jealousy, have so weakened the Pops orchestra that he was forced to take such action to save his reputation.

Continued on Page 10

Jacchia Says Jealousy Weakened Orchestra

(Continued From First Page

Mr. Jacchia declared that a boy who peddled programmes at Symphony Hall a few weeks ago has been run in on the Pops orchestra to play the bassoon, and that a student has been playing the organ. Since the orchestra has been advertised as a Symphony orchestra, he said he considered the employment of a programme boy and a mere pupil was deceiving the public, and he did not intend to be any party to it.

According to present plans Mr. Jacchia will sail for Europe Tuesday, to join his family, who sailed a few weeks ago. But he is coming back to Boston, he says, and he emphatically declared that he will insitute a new series of Pops concerts under his own management next spring in opposition to the Symphony Pops.

Claims Orchestra Inadequate

Mr. Jacchia will conduct the Pops for the last time tonight. He announced yesterday that he will not wield the baton at the closing concert of the season tomorrow night, because he says the management has cut the orchestra too much for the closing concert, to the extent of it being inadequate and unbalanced, he says.

In answer to this charge, Frederick P. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, issued a statement yesterday in which he said it had been pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night would be as large and as well balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia has conducted.

Fiedler to Conduct Tomorrow

"In fact, the orchestra ...ite a little larger this week than ...n been the case in many concerts und... Mr. Jacchia. The quality of the ...mbership of the orchestra is well ... own and needs no defence," the statement further reads.

Manager Brennan announced yesterday afternoon that Arthur Fiedler, a member of the Pops Orchestra, would conduct the closing concert tomorrow night in the absence of Conducter Jacchia.

Says Koussevitzky Jealous

Mr. Jacchia said that his resignation was not a sudden step, but one carefully considered, and taken only when he could not get any definite guarantee from the Symphony management that the Pops orchestra would not be tampered with in the future. For this reason, he said, he refused to sign a contract to conduct the Pops next year.

The chief reason why friction has arisen is because of the jealousy of Serge Koussevitzky over the success of the Pops, Mr. Jacchia declared. Outside Boston, the Symphony orchestra has lost much of its prestige, he said, and therefore Conductor Koussevitzky has been envious of the big success which the Pops have enjoyed.

14 New Players Engaged

Mr. Jacchia explained that during the nine weeks of Pops about 400 orchestrations are played, and it requires players of experience successfully to carry out the programme. At the beginning of the current season he said 14 new players were engaged by Conductor Koussevitzky for the Pops orchestra, none of whom Jacchia knew. This enraged him, he said, because there isn't any time for rehearsals for the Pops, and he did not think it good musical judgment.

Two weeks after the season opened the first trumpet of the orchestra was taken away, he says. He considers the first trumpet the prima donna of the orchestra, and although the player was given his pay for nine weeks he was withdrawn at the end of two weeks, Jacchia charges, because of Koussevitzky's fear that too much success was being attained by the Pops.

Charges His List Ignored

Mr. Jacchia further charged yesterday that he was not considered in the selection of the orchestra members, or in the matter of excusing any of the players to accept other engagements. This practice is not new this season, he said, but has been going on for the past two ...three seasons.

At the beginning of the current season Mr. Jacchia says he furnished the management a typewritten list of the pieces he desired held through the entire series. He offered a suggestion that if any of the players were to be excused, his list be adhered to so that the orchestra would not suffer. This list has been ignored, he said, and it was only indirectly he learned that the orchestra was to be inadequate and unbalanced for the closing concert.

Only 67 Players Available

The public is informed, through advertisements, that the orchestra has 80 players, Jacchia said, but he learned that only 67 players were to be available for Saturday night. It wasn't a question of the number of players, so much, however, as the quality of the players and the instruments, he said. No judgment had been shown in reducing the orchestra, he further charged, and added that this was not so much of a shock to him as he considered the management was thinking more of the financial returns than of the quality of the orchestra.

"And it is because I have made the Pops, that I will not stand for the Pops being buried," said Mr. Jacchia.

Drinking Parties Before War

"It is only since the war that the Pops have become so popular from a musical standpoint. Before the war the Pops were hardly more than drinking parties, but since I became conductor I have established a reputation for the Pops which I do not intend to see destroyed while I am conductor," he added.

THIS CLIPPING FROM UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

After 10 Years, Jacchia to Resign

"Pops" Conductor Charges Management Reduced Orchestra.

BOSTON, July 1—(AP) Agide Jacchia, conductor of the pop concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programs were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

AGIDE JACCHIA
Conductor of the Pop Concerts for 10 years, who has resigned.

THIS CLIPPING FROM REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO LOSE CONDUCTOR

Agide Jacchia Says Reduction in Musicians Makes Orchestra Inadequate

Boston, June 1 — (AP) — Agide Jacchia, conductor of the pop concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

THIS CLIPPING FROM TIMES STAR
CINCINNATI, OHIO

BOSTON LOSES SYMPHONY CHIEF

BOSTON, July 1—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop Concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians.

The orchestra is advertised to consist of eighty members, and in spite of the fact that his programs called for a full orchestra, he said, the management had promiscuously excused so many players that actually only sixty-seven players are available.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

Boston Concert Leader Quits

Jacchia Quits As Conductor of Symphony 'POP' Bills

BOSTON, July 1 (AP).—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "P O P concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after to-morrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
JUL 2 - 1926

AGIDE JACCHIA QUITS THE BOSTON SYMPHONY

Refuses to Conduct Final 'Pop' Concert—Complains at Cutting Down of Orchestra.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., July 2.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop" concerts for the last eighteen years has resigned over a disagreement with the policy of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's management. Mr. Jacchia's secretary stated today that he would not conduct the closing concert of the season on Saturday evening, because the management had excused so many musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate. A contract had been given to him to sign for next season, but now the offer has been canceled.

Soon after Mr. Jacchia's action was made known, the trustees issued a statement through Frederick P. Cabot, President of the board. He said in part:

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and well balanced as it had been durin the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia had conducted.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management, specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that he would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter, repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract offered him for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as President of the Trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years and no one can regret more than the trustees and the management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

JACCHIA RESIGNS ORCHESTRA POST

Conductor Refuses to Direct Two Remaining Symphony Pop Concerts in Boston.

13 MUSICIANS DROPPED

Leader Declares Policy of Management Leaves Him with Inadequate Number.—Says 80 Have Been Advertised

Boston, July 1.—(AP)—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Pop concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned to-day. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after to-morrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programmes." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members. The conductor said that his programmes were planned for that number of musicians. He expressed the belief that the management had allowed the reduction in the interests of economy.

In spite of the fact that his programmes called for the full orchestra, he said that the management which, he presumed, was acting under the direction of the trustees of the orchestra, had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programmes.

Reiterating that he could not properly plan his programmes with that number, Jacchia voiced the opinion that the reduction was inconsistent with the management's announcement that the orchestra consisted of 80 players.

ST. LOUIS, MO.
Globe-Democrat
JUL 3 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA LEADER QUITS

By Associated Press.

BOSTON, MASS., July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of eighty members, and in spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said, the mana... excu... tuall... avail... gran...

HARRISBURG, PA.
PATRIOT

THIS CLIPPING FROM STAR
WASHINGTON, D. C.
JUL 3 1926

JACCHIA RESIGNS POST WITH BOSTON SYMPHONY

Conductor of "Pop Concerts" Says Number of Musicians Has Been Cut So as to Impair Orchestra.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 2.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tonight's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members, and in spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said, the management had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

CONDUCTOR RESIGNS AFTER ORCHESTRA CUT

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "P O P concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, has resigned. Jacchia declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

POPS TO BE HELD WITHOUT JACCHIA

Globe — July 2

Performance Tomorrow Under Arthur Fiedler

Conductor for 10 Years Claims Interference in Resigning

Orchestra Is Large as Ever at This Stage, Says Cabot

After leading the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Pop concerts for 10 years, Agide Jacchia announced his resignation yesterday, declaring that the management has excused so many musicians without consulting him that his orchestra has become "unbalanced and inadequate."

Under the arrangement in effect until his resignation, he was not only scheduled to finish the present season, but to conduct the Pops next year. According to his announcement, the resignation cancels his leadership of next year's Pops. He will conduct in a Russian program tonight, but will not conduct tomorrow, which was to have been the closing performance of the year.

Last night it was announced that there will be a performance tomorrow night, regardless of Mr Jacchia's resignation. Arthur Fiedler, who has played first violin and viola in the orchestra for several years, will conduct.

Statement by Cabot

Frederick P. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, issued a statement with regard to the resignation which follows, in part:

"Last Sunday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and as well balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons, which Mr Jacchia conducted.

"This week Mr Jacchia sent a second letter to the management specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr Jacchia's contract and the hope was sincerely expressed that Mr Jacchia would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr Jacchia wrote another letter repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract which had been offered for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr Jacchia's resignation. Mr Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years and no one can regret more than the trustees and management his decision to shorten his engagement, even by one night."

Average of 80 Players

Patrons of the concerts are familiar with the fact that the Pops season generally begins with about 90 of the 107 men in the Winter orchestra and ends the 10-week period with nearer 70, giving a general average of 80 available players. It has been the custom of the management to extend the opportunity to depart on Summer engagements or hotel contracts to a limited number of players when the Pops season continues to or through July 4.

Agide Jacchia first came to America in 1902 as chief assistant to Mascagni, whose pupil he had been at the Conservatory of Music in Pesaro, Italy. In the following five years Mr Jacchia was conductor at a number of minor opera houses in Italy. The year 1907 brought him back to America, first to be leader of an operatic company in San Francisco, later to conduct in Montreal and New York.

He first assumed leadership of the Pop concerts in Boston in 1917, and has been commonly accepted as the most popular of the musicians who have held that Summer post. Mr Jacchia is director also of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He became an American citizen in 1922.

Saturday Theatre Review
JUL 8 1926

AGIDE JACCHIA OUT AS CONDUCTOR OF BOSTON SYMPHONY

Directors Excused So Many Musicians Orchestra Could Not Function

(Special to The New York Review.)

Boston, July 2.—As a result of a difference with the directors, Agide Jacchia, for fifteen years conductor of the summer season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has quit. A contract had been given to him to sign for next season, but now the offer has been canceled.

Soon after Mr. Jacchia's action was made known, the trustees issued a statement through Frederick P. Cabot, president of the board. He said in part:

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and well balanced as it had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia had conducted.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management, specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that he would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter, repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract offered him for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the res... admiration of the Boston p... many years and no one ca... more than the trustees and t... agement his decision to shorten... gagement even by one night."

HARRISBURG, PA.
NEWS

Conductor Resigns When Orchestra Is Reduced

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "P O P concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, has resigned. Jacchia declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

CHRONICLE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
JUL 11 1926

Agide Jacchia Resigns From Boston Symphony

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Pop concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra during the last ten years, resigned his position on July 1, according to the Associated Press. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after the July 2 concert. He declined to conduct the remaining two concerts of the series because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said he had also refused to renew his contract for next season for the same reason.

Herald Editorial July 3 '26

The Jacchia Incident

Everybody must regret what in time is likely to be known as the Jacchia incident. The public at large will wonder, of course, if the incident might not have been avoided. There are tokens of nervous tension in the statements given out by the director of the Pops. There are indications of cautious restraint and of generosity in the letter given out by the chairman of the Symphony trustees. Could not the director have remained through one more concert and then in amicable conference have prosecuted his case with the trustees, either to reach a complete understanding or to sever connection with the orchestra which he has served long and acceptably without the unfortunate circumstances which now have accumulated to make an unpleasant termination of that service? Mr. Jacchia is jealous of his reputation as a conductor and wants to have the material at hand for the effects that should be produced in all these concerts, the last of them as well as the first. The trustees are jealous of the fame of the orchestra and of the institution which has achieved such an honorable reputation throughout the country. It would have been better for all parties if the relation had been continued throughout the season. It is regrettable that Mr. Jacchia terminates his connection one night short of the end of that season.

The Jacchia Incident

HERALD — July 3

Everybody must regret what in time is likely to be known as the Jacchia incident. The public at large will wonder, of course, if the incident might not have been avoided. There are tokens of nervous tension in the statements given out by the director of the Pops. There are indications of cautious restraint and of generosity in the letter given out by the chairman of the Symphony trustees. Could not the director have remained through one more concert and then in amicable conference have prosecuted his case with the trustees, either to reach a complete understanding or to sever connection with the orchestra which he has served long and acceptably without the unfortunate circumstances which now have accumulated to make an unpleasant termination of that service? Mr. Jacchia is jealous of his reputation as a conductor and wants to have the material at hand for the effects that should be produced in all these concerts, the last of them as well as the first. The trustees are jealous of the fame of the orchestra and of the institution which has achieved such an honorable reputation throughout the country. It would have been better for all parties if the relation had been continued throughout the season. It is regrettable that Mr. Jacchia terminates his connection one night short of the end of that season.

Herald July 3 '26

Boston Musician Who Conducts Pops Tonight

ARTHUR FIEDLER
Succeeds Agide Jacchia in Charge fo the Final Concert of the Year.

ARTHUR FIEDLER TO LEAD FINAL "POPS"

First Boston Musician to Conduct Famous Orchestra

Arthur Fiedler, Boston-born musician and prominent member of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct the final "Pops" concert in Symphony hall tonight in place of Agide Jacchia, whose resignation was accepted by the board of trustees last night.

Mr. Fiedler will be the first Boston musician in the history of the "Pops" to conduct this orchestra.

He is 32 years of age. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music in Berlin for several years. He is the son of Emanuel Fiedler of Berlin, Germany, who was a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 25 years. Mr. Fiedler has conducted in Berlin and has directed many concerts in New England.

WELL KNOWN HERE

He is well known not only as a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra for the past 11 years but also as a coach and accompanist for internationally known concert artists. His versatility is also shown by his mastery of the violin, piano, viola and organ. He is a bachelor.

The concert in Symphony hall tonight will close the forty-first season of the "Pops." The program, to be conducted by Arthur... ler, is as follows:

Stars and Stripes ..... Sousa
Overture to "Oberon" ..... Weber
The Lost Chord (Solo ... urt Schmeisser) ..... Sullivan
Fantasia, "Carmen" ..... Bizet
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody ..... Liszt
By the Waters of Minnetonka ..... Lieurance-Jacchia
Liebesfreud ..... Kreisler
Ouverture Solennelle, "1812" ..... Tchaikovsky
Dance of the Hours "La Gioconda" ..... Ponchielli
... Handel

ST. LOUIS, MO.
Globe-Democrat

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA LEADER QUITS

By Associated Press.

BOSTON, MASS., July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of eighty members, and in spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said, the manag... excu... tuall... avail... gran...

HARRISBURG, PA.
PATRIOT

THIS CLIPPING FROM STAR
WASHINGTON, D. C.

JACCHIA RESIGNS POST WITH BOSTON SYMPHONY

Conductor of "Pop Concerts" Says Number of Musicians Has Been Cut So as to Impair Orchestra.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 2.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tonight's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members, and in spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said, the management had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

CONDUCTOR RESIGNS AFTER ORCHESTRA CUT

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "P O P concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, has resigned. Jacchia declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

The Jacchia Incident

Herald Editorial July 3

Everybody must regret what in time is likely to be known as the Jacchia incident. The public at large will wonder, of course, if the incident might not have been avoided. There are tokens of nervous tension in the statements given out by the director of the Pops. There are indications of cautious restraint and of generosity in the letter given out by the chairman of the Symphony trustees. Could not the director have remained through one more concert and then in amicable conference have prosecuted his case with the trustees, either to reach a complete understanding or to sever connection with the orchestra which he has served long and acceptably without the unfortunate circumstances which now have accumulated to make an unpleasant termination of that service? Mr. Jacchia is jealous of his reputation as a conductor and wants to have the material at hand for the effects that should be produced in all these concerts, the last of them as well as the first. The trustees are jealous of the fame of the orchestra and of the institution which has achieved such an honorable reputation throughout the country. It would have been better for all parties if the relation had been continued throughout the season. It is regrettable that Mr. Jacchia terminates his connection one night short of the end of that season.

The Jacchia Incident

HERALD July 3

Everybody must regret what in time is likely to be known as the Jacchia incident. The public at large will wonder, of course, if the incident might not have been avoided. There are tokens of nervous tension in the statements given out by the director of the Pops. There are indications of cautious restraint and of generosity in the letter given out by the chairman of the Symphony trustees. Could not the director have remained through one more concert and then in amicable conference have prosecuted his case with the trustees, either to reach a complete understanding or to sever connection with the orchestra which he has served long and acceptably without the unfortunate circumstances which now have accumulated to make an unpleasant termination of that service? Mr. Jacchia is jealous of his reputation as a conductor and wants to have the material at hand for the effects that should be produced in all these concerts, the last of them as well as the first. The trustees are jealous of the fame of the orchestra and of the institution which has achieved such an honorable reputation throughout the country. It would have been better for all parties if the relation had been continued throughout the season. It is regrettable that Mr. Jacchia terminates his connection one night short of the end of that season.

HERALD July 3

Boston Musician Who Conducts Pops Tonight

ARTHUR FIEDLER
Succeeds Agide Jacchia in Charge fo the Final Concert of the Year.

ARTHUR FIEDLER TO LEAD FINAL "POPS"

First Boston Musician to Conduct Famous Orchestra

Arthur Fiedler, Boston-born musician and prominent member of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct the final "Pops" concert in Symphony hall tonight in place of Agide Jacchia, whose resignation was accepted by the board of trustees last night.

Mr. Fiedler will be the first Boston musician in the history of the "Pops" to conduct this orchestra.

He is 32 years of age. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music in Berlin for several years. He is the son of Emanuel Fiedler of Berlin, Germany, who was a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 25 years. Mr. Fiedler has conducted in Berlin and has directed many concerts in New England.

WELL KNOWN HERE

He is well known not only as a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra for the past 11 years but also as a coach and accompanist for internationally known concert artists. His versatility is also shown by his mastery of the violin, piano, viola and organ. He is a bachelor.

The concert in Symphony hall tonight will close the forty-first season of the "Pops." The program, to be conducted by Arthur [illegible]dler, is as follows:

Stars and Stripes [illegible].....Sousa
Overture to "Oberon".....Weber
The Lost Chord (Solo [illegible]urt Schmeisser).....Sullivan
Fantasia, "Carmen".....Bizet
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
By the Waters of Minnetonka.Lieurance-Jacchia
Liebesfreud.....Kreisler
Ouverture Solennelle, "1812".....Tchaikovsky
Dance of the Hours "La Gioconda".....Ponchielli
[illegible] A Gesandi.....Handel

POPS TO BE HELD WITHOUT JACCHIA

Globe July 2

Performance Tomorrow Under Arthur Fiedler

Conductor for 10 Years Claims Interference in Resigning

Orchestra Is Large as Ever at This Stage, Says Cabot

After leading the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Pop concerts for 10 years, Agide Jacchia announced his resignation yesterday, declaring that the management has excused so many musicians without consulting him that his orchestra has become "unbalanced and inadequate."

Under the arrangement in effect until his resignation, he was not only scheduled to finish the present season, but to conduct the Pops next year. According to his announcement, the resignation cancels his leadership of next year's Pops. He will conduct in a Russian program tonight, but will not conduct tomorrow, which was to have been the closing performance of the year.

Last night it was announced that there will be a performance tomorrow night, regardless of Mr Jacchia's resignation. Arthur Fiedler, who has played first violin and viola in the orchestra for several years, will conduct.

Statement by Cabot

Frederick P. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, issued a statement with regard to the resignation which follows, in part:

"Last Sunday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and as well balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons, which Mr Jacchia conducted.

"This week Mr Jacchia sent a second letter to the management specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr Jacchia's contract and the hope was sincerely expressed that Mr Jacchia would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr Jacchia wrote another letter repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract which had been offered for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr Jacchia's resignation. Mr Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years and no one can regret more than the trustees and management his decision to shorten his engagement, even by one night."

Average of 80 Players

Patrons of the concerts are familiar with the fact that the Pops season generally begins with about 90 of the 107 men in the Winter orchestra and ends the 10-week period with nearer 70, giving a general average of 80 available players. It has been the custom of the management to extend the opportunity to depart on Summer engagements or hotel contracts to a limited number of players when the Pops season continues to or through July 4.

Agide Jacchia first came to America in 1902 as chief assistant to Mascagni, whose pupil he had been at the Conservatory of Music in Pesaro, Italy. In the following five years Mr Jacchia was conductor at a number of minor opera houses in Italy. The year 1907 brought him back to America, first to be leader of an operatic company in San Francisco, later to conduct in Montreal and New York.

He first assumed leadership of the Pop concerts in Boston in 1917, and has been commonly accepted as the most popular of the musicians who have held that Summer post. Mr Jacchia is director also of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He became an American citizen in 1922.

Saturday Theatre Review

JUL 3 1926

AGIDE JACCHIA OUT AS CONDUCTOR OF BOSTON SYMPHONY

Directors Excused So Many Musicians Orchestra Could Not Function

(Special to The New York Review.)

Boston, July 2.—As a result of a difference with the directors, Agide Jacchia, for fifteen years conductor of the summer season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has quit. A contract had been given to him to sign for next season, but now the offer has been canceled.

Soon after Mr. Jacchia's action was made known, the trustees issued a statement through Frederick P. Cabot, president of the board. He said in part:

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and well balanced as it had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia had conducted.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management, specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that he would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter, repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract offered him for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston p... many years and no one ca... more than the trustees and t... agement his decision to shorten... gagement even by one night."

HARRISBURG, PA.
NEWS

Conductor Resigns When Orchestra Is Reduced

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "P O P concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, has resigned. Jacchia declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

CHRONICLE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

JUL 11 1926

Agide Jacchia Resigns From Boston Symphony

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Pop concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra during the last ten years, resigned his position on July 1, according to the Associated Press. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after the July 2 concert. He declined to conduct the remaining two concerts of the series because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said he had also refused to renew his contract for next season for the same reason.

ST. LOUIS, MO.
Globe-Democrat
JUL - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA LEADER QUITS

By Associated Press.

BOSTON, MASS., July 1.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pop concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tomorrow night's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of eighty members, and in spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said, the management had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only sixty-seven players were available for the remaining programs.

THIS CLIPPING FROM STAR
WASHINGTON, D. C.

JACCHIA RESIGNS POST WITH BOSTON SYMPHONY

Conductor of "Pop Concerts" Says Number of Musicians Has Been Cut So as to Impair Orchestra.

By the Associated Press

BOSTON, July 2.—Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "pop concerts" of Boston Symphony Orchestra for 10 years, resigned today. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after tonight's concert. He declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from 80 to 67 musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining program." The orchestra is advertised to consist of 80 members, and in spite of the fact that his programs called for the full orchestra, he said, the management had "promiscuously excused" so many players that actually only 67 players were available for the remaining programs.

[redacted] reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

Herald Editorial July 3rd

The Jacchia Incident

Everybody must regret what in time is likely to be known as the Jacchia incident. The public at large will wonder, of course, if the incident might not have been avoided. There are tokens of nervous tension in the statements given out by the director of the Pops. There are indications of cautious restraint and of generosity in the letter given out by the chairman of the Symphony trustees. Could not the director have remained through one more concert and then in amicable conference have prosecuted his case with the trustees, either to reach a complete understanding or to sever connection with the orchestra which he has served long and acceptably without the unfortunate circumstances which now have accumulated to make an unpleasant termination of that service? Mr. Jacchia is jealous of his reputation as a conductor and wants to have the material at hand for the effects that should be produced in all these concerts, the last of them as well as the first. The trustees are jealous of the fame of the orchestra and of the institution which has achieved such an honorable reputation throughout the country. It would have been better for all parties if the relation had been continued throughout the season. It is regrettable that Mr. Jacchia terminates his connection one night short of the end of that season.

HERALD July 3rd

The Jacchia Incident

Everybody must regret what in time is likely to be known as the Jacchia incident. The public at large will wonder, of course, if the incident might not have been avoided. There are tokens of nervous tension in the statements given out by the director of the Pops. There are indications of cautious restraint and of generosity in the letter given out by the chairman of the Symphony trustees. Could not the director have remained through one more concert and then in amicable conference have prosecuted his case with the trustees, either to reach a complete understanding or to sever connection with the orchestra which he has served long and acceptably without the unfortunate circumstances which now have accumulated to make an unpleasant termination of that service? Mr. Jacchia is jealous of his reputation as a conductor and wants to have the material at hand for the effects that should be produced in all these concerts, the last of them as well as the first. The trustees are jealous of the fame of the orchestra and of the institution which has achieved such an honorable reputation throughout the country. It would have been better for all parties if the relation had been continued throughout the season. It is regrettable that Mr. Jacchia terminates his connection one night short of the end of that season.

HERALD July 3rd

Boston Musician Who Conducts Pops Tonight

ARTHUR FIEDLER
Succeeds Agide Jacchia in Charge fo the Final Concert of the Year.

ARTHUR FIEDLER TO LEAD FINAL "POPS"

First Boston Musician to Conduct Famous Orchestra

Arthur Fiedler, Boston-born musician and prominent member of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will conduct the final "Pops" concert in Symphony hall tonight in place of Agide Jacchia, whose resignation was accepted by the board of trustees last night.

Mr. Fiedler will be the first Boston musician in the history of the "Pops" to conduct this orchestra.

He is 32 years of age. He studied at the Royal Academy of Music in Berlin for several years. He is the son of Emanuel Fiedler of Berlin, Germany, who was a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra for 25 years. Mr. Fiedler has conducted in Berlin and has directed many concerts in New England.

WELL KNOWN HERE

He is well known not only as a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra for the past 11 years but also as a coach and accompanist for internationally known concert artists. His versatility is also shown by his mastery of the violin, piano, viola and organ. He is a bachelor.

The concert in Symphony hall tonight will close the forty-first season of the "Pops." The program, to be conducted by Arthur [redacted]ler, is as follows:

Stars and Stripes [redacted]	Sousa
Overture to "Oberon"	Weber
The Lost Chord (Solo [redacted] Kurt Schmeisser)	Sullivan
Fantasia, "Carmen"	Bizet
Fourteenth Hungarian Rhapsody	Liszt
By the Waters of Minnetonka	Lieurance-Jacchia
Liebesfreud	Kreisler
Ouverture Solennelle, "1812"	Tchaikovsky
Dance of the Hours "La Gioconda"	Ponchielli
[redacted]	Handel

POPS TO BE HELD WITHOUT JACCHIA

Globe July 2

Performance Tomorrow Under Arthur Fiedler

Conductor for 10 Years Claims Interference in Resigning

Orchestra Is Large as Ever at This Stage, Says Cabot

After leading the Boston Symphony orchestra in the Pop concerts for 10 years, Agide Jacchia announced his resignation yesterday, declaring that the management has excused so many musicians without consulting him that his orchestra has become "unbalanced and inadequate."

Under the arrangement in effect until his resignation, he was not only scheduled to finish the present season, but to conduct the Pops next year. According to his announcement, the resignation cancels his leadership of next year's Pops. He will conduct in a Russian program tonight, but will not conduct tomorrow, which was to have been the closing performance of the year.

Last night it was announced that there will be a performance tomorrow night, regardless of Mr Jacchia's resignation. Arthur Fiedler, who has played first violin and viola in the orchestra for several years, will conduct.

Statement by Cabot

Frederick P. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, issued a statement with regard to the resignation which follows, in part:

"Last Sunday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and as well balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons, which Mr Jacchia conducted.

"This week Mr Jacchia sent a second letter to the management specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr Jacchia's contract and the hope was sincerely expressed that Mr Jacchia would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr Jacchia wrote another letter repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract which had been offered for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr Jacchia's resignation. Mr Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years and no one can regret more than the trustees and management his decision to shorten his engagement, even by one night."

Average of 80 Players

Patrons of the concerts are familiar with the fact that the Pops season generally begins with about 90 of the 107 men in the Winter orchestra and ends the 10-week period with nearer 70, giving a general average of 80 available players. It has been the custom of the management to extend the opportunity to depart on Summer engagements or hotel contracts to a limited number of players when the Pops season continues to or through July 4.

Agide Jacchia first came to America in 1902 as chief assistant to Mascagni, whose pupil he had been at the Conservatory of Music in Pesaro, Italy. In the following five years Mr Jacchia was conductor at a number of minor opera houses in Italy. The year 1907 brought him back to America, first to be leader of an operatic company in San Francisco, later to conduct in Montreal and New York.

He first assumed leadership of the Pop concerts in Boston in 1917, and has been commonly accepted as the most popular of the musicians who have held that Summer post. Mr Jacchia is director also of the Boston Conservatory of Music. He became an American citizen in 1922.

Saturday Theatre Review

JUL 3 1926

AGIDE JACCHIA OUT AS CONDUCTOR OF BOSTON SYMPHONY

Directors Excused So Many Musicians Orchestra Could Not Function

(Special to The New York Review.)

Boston, July 2.—As a result of a difference with the directors, Agide Jacchia, for fifteen years conductor of the summer season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has quit. A contract had been given to him to sign for next season, but now the offer has been canceled.

Soon after Mr. Jacchia's action was made known, the trustees issued a statement through Frederick P. Cabot, president of the board. He said in part:

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and well balanced as it had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia had conducted.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management, specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that he would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter, repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract offered him for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years and no one can regret more than the trustees and management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

HARRISBURG, PA.
NEWS

Conductor Resigns When Orchestra Is Reduced

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "P O P concerts" of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for ten years, has resigned. Jacchia declined to conduct the two remaining concerts of the season because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said also that he had refused to renew his contract for next season.

His resignation, Jacchia said, was due to a disagreement with the policy of the management, which, he asserted, "had excused so many of the musicians that the orchestra would be unbalanced and inadequate for the remaining programs."

CHRONICLE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

JUL 11 1926

Agide Jacchia Resigns From Boston Symphony

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the Pop concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra during the last ten years, resigned his position on July 1, according to the Associated Press. Jacchia, who is director of the Boston Conservatory of Music, made his resignation effective after the July 2 concert. He declined to conduct the remaining two concerts of the series because the orchestra had been reduced from eighty to sixty-seven musicians. He said he had also refused to renew his contract for next season for the same reason.

Agide Jacchia Will Return to Found New Boston "Pops"

Herald July 2, 1926

Issues Statement Claiming Slashing of Orchestra Caused Resignation

FIEDLER CONDUCTS CONCERT ON JULY 3

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pops" concerts for the past ten years, whose resignation was accepted by the directors of the popular concerts yesterday, declared when interviewed at his home on the Fenway last night that he intended returning to Boston next season to open a "Pops" series under his own direction and management.

His resignation he stated came as the result of the refusal on the part of the management to keep a full quota of players, with the result that he felt the concert would be unbalanced and not up to his high standard.

LAST APPEARANCE TONIGHT

He conducted the concert last night and will make his last appearance tonight. Saturday night will find Arthur Fiedler, a member of the Boston Symphony, conducting the last "Pops" concert. Mr. Jacchia said that on Saturday night there will be 67 players present instead of the average of 80.

"I created the Pops after the war, and I refuse to be present and taking part in their burial," he declared when referring to tomorrow night's small number.

"For ten years the 'Pops' have completely filled my life, and for them I live and work. Since last October I have prepared 24 orchestrations, and completed them in March. For this work I received no compensation.

ASKED TO RECALL THE RESIGNATION

"I have condoned the absence of a few players now and then, but allowing so many to leave on Saturday was too much. The management asked me to reconsider my resignation, and I in turn asked them for a promise that such affairs would not take place next year. They told me to forget about the future. I refused."

Mr. Jacchia declared he started the season with 14 men who never played in the "Pops" and that it was impossible to have such men, no matter how good they were, learn the 400 pieces that are played in the nine weeks of the "Pops" in an efficient manner.

"Just imagine, if you can," he continued, "having the organ played by a pupil of music, instead of an accomplished and finished artist. Such is the case, and I even overlooked this action on the part of the management. And to place a young man who has been employed in passing out programs, in the orchestra playing the bassoon, is such a thing imaginable? Such is the case at present.

During the present season I handed

(Continued on Page Ten, Column 6)

AGIDE JACCHIA TO FOUND NEW 'POPS'

(Continued from Page One)

a typewriter copy of pieces that must be present in the orchestra for proper balance to the management. I told them that they might excuse some men, but it was imperative that these pieces be always present. They have completely ignored it time and again. They are ruining the Pops and my heart is broken."

During the interview Mr. Jacchia was visibly affected and showed it by the tremor in his voice, the shaking of his hands as he lighted a cigarette and his nervous walking up and down his apartment. His wife and family left for Europe last Friday and he leaves to join them on Tuesday.

William H. Brennan, manager of the orchestra, when interviewed last night concerning the action of Mr. Jacchia, said he had nothing to say other than that Arthur Fiedler would lead the "Pops" on Saturday night.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

Frederick P. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said the resignation of Mr. Jacchia had been received and accepted. As to the latter's statements concerning the size of the orchestra, Mr. Cabot said it was as large and well balanced as at any time during the closing concerts for the past nine seasons in which Mr. Jacchia has conducted. Mr. Cabot's statement follows:

"I have seen a statement made to the press this morning by Mr. Jacchia's secretary relative to Mr. Jacchia's refusal to conduct the closing concert of the present season of Pop concerts.

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and well balanced as it had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia has conducted. In fact, the orchestra is quite a little larger this week than has been the case in many concerts under Mr. Jacchia. The quality of the membership of the orchestra is well known and needs no defense.

REQUEST JACCHIA TO RECONSIDER

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract, and the hope was sincerely expressed that Mr. Jacchia would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract which had been offered him for next season. On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years, and no on regrets more than the trustees and the management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

THE CASE OF MR. JACCHIA

Transcript — July 7, '26

To the Editor of the Transcript:

I was quite disappointed in the editorial in last night's Transcript headed "Mr. Jacchia quits," inasmuch as the only point of view considered seemed to be that of the management of the orchestra. Of course it would have been very easy for Mr. Jacchia to have completed his contract by conducting tonight's concert; but it would have been equally easy for the trustees of the orchestra, to have yielded to Mr. Jacchia's request that more men be given for tonight's concert and that in the future the personnel of the orchestra contracted to play during the Pops season, should remain the same during the period of concerts. It would also have been more gracious on the part of the management to have thus shown their appreciation for the faithful and successful work during the last ten years by Mr. Jacchia. The management of the orchestra have undertaken to give the people a series of concerts with "eighty Symphony players" according to their advertisements, these concerts to be under the direction of a certain conductor. Now, from the viewpoint of the people, the management have failed in their contract as much as has Mr. Jacchia. The prices of the tickets remain the same at the end of the season as at the beginning, but anyone attending the concerts knows that the members composing the Pops concerts are not the men of the regular Symphony, although they are advertised as such, and towards the end of the season the orchestra dwindles down to the almost vanishing point.

Last Saturday night we attended the Pops concert, and were amazed at the small number of the men playing. This is not living up to the contract on the part of the management. In your editorial, you further state that Mr. Jacchia even critized one of Boston's most cherished institutions — The Boston Symphony Orchestra. As far as the public can find out, it was not the orchestra that was criticized but the lack of it that has caused the whole trouble.

Would it not have been better for the management to have yielded to this very reasonable request for the full quota of men to remain during the season, and for Mr. Jacchia to have acted a little less hastily and for both sides to have remembered their obligations to the public? Is it too late even now for both sides to get together and iron out all these difficulties that have arisen and to try to take into consideration all the little daily cares and worries that may have been responsible for this most unhappy ending of the bright Pops season? The people have grown to love Mr. Jacchia and we want him reinstated with full co-operation on both sides to give the people the best possible. Over the radio all this season has come the slogan, "You might as well have the best," and we want it. Can't some settlement be arrived at that will be satisfactory to all parties concerned—the members of the orchestra, the conductor, the management and the people? Let the present situation prove that the Boston Symphony Orchestra can produce the real harmony as well as instrumental harmony.

C. D. HAMILTON

Arlington, July 3.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BILLBOARD

JUL 3 1926

Boston Symphony To Give Ten Concerts in New York

For the 1926-'27 season, which marks the 46th in New York for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the series will consist of 10 concerts, five on Thursday evenings and an equal number on Saturday afternoons. The dates for these are November 25 and 27, January 6 and 8, February 3 and 5, March 10 and 12 and April 7 and 9. All of the programs will be directed by Serge Koussevitzky.

AND now another landmark is on its way into the past tense of Providence life. Memories of Infantry Hall will soon be all that is left of the structure that has housed no small part of the city's history-making for the last half century.

For, though only 46 years old, Infantry Hall has held more people, gathered for more varied purposes, than any other building in town.

Memories of military activities, memories of politics, memories of music, memories of gay festivals and solemn banquets, of dog shows and poultry shows, of fraternal conventions and class initiations, of amateur theatricals, of roller polo, of ponderous lectures and of prize fights—

All these memories and more centre about the rambling structure which once was a cause of civic pride and now is to make way for a garage. No other building in Rhode Island, it is safe to say, has in so brief a period

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

JUL 25 1926

ture in a few days. Where once assembled the city's socially elect at charity balls and concerts, there remains but a huddle of worn benches awaiting the second-hand dealer's bid.

Dark and still is the large auditorium wherein was brought forth the music of the masters by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Gericke, Paur, Muck and Koussevitzky. Where Patti, Tetrazzini and Galli-Curci thrilled Rhode Island music lovers with their operatic arias, and Paderewski, Rachmaninoff, Sarasate and Kreisler gave their masterful interpretations, dim shadows hold unchallenged sway.

William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft have addressed their admirers from the auditorium's stage. There Bryan and Borah and Darrow and Debs have expounded their theories. Count von Bernstorff once addressed Providence citizenry from the old hall's platform —before the World War.

In its comparatively short span of life, as the age of buildings is reck-

Infantry Hall has enjoyed a his-rarely equalled. It opened in Jan-

1880, with a great military fair, argest event of its kind ever held e State up to that time. The last upon which the doors of the aulum swung open to the public was show of the Rhode Island Boston ier Club a few weeks ago.

uring the 46 years which separated varian conductor and composer who toured this country on two occasions, appeared here, as did Joseph Stransky with the New York Philharmonic. Sousa and his band and the Beggers' Opera from London were others. And not to be forgotten by the large number whom she kept waiting is Irene Castle, who, when she last appeared at the auditorium with her ballet, delayed the performance nearly an hour because of a tiff with the authorities concerning the propriety of stockingless dancing. She finally wore the stockings.

Continued from Page Three

Music lovers have not been the only ones drawn to Infantry Hall, however. In 1882 the newspapers carried announcements of the opening of a roller skating rink in the building. There was skating afternoons and evenings, with an orchestra in attendance. And as roller skating became increasingly popular, someone conceived the idea of playing polo on skates. A league was formed in which Providence had a team, and the first game was played at the auditorium in 1885. Although some seasons found Providence without a team, the game was played intermittently until 1923.

Large and available seven days a week, unlike the theatres, Infantry Hall made an ideal place for political rallies and conventions. Republican conventions were held there for years. Great political questions were debated on the floor which perhaps the night before had been the scene of the charity ball or a concert or a poultry show. The Young Republican Regiment and the Republican Club dinners were held there annually. The Democrats found it a convenient place to meet, also, nor was its use limited to the two principal parties, for the socialists and others have rented it upon occasion.

The greatest crowd which ever gathered at the hall, according to George A. Manchester, superintendent of the building for many years, assembled to hear Roosevelt. Hundreds of people crowded the stairs, corridors and the sidewalk in front of the building. It was decided to hold an overflow meeting at the Opera House, and so, upon finishing his speech, Roosevelt was whisked away to the Dorrance street building where he repeated his talk for the benefit of those who could not gain admission to Infantry Hall.

For several years the New England Manufacturing Jewelers' and Silversmiths' Association held its annual dinners in the hall, at which speakers of national and international reputation made addresses. Among them were President Taft, on March 21, 1910, Count von Bernstof and Senator Borah.

Notable gatherings of chartered commands were numerous. On June 8, 1888, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston and the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of London were entertained by the First Light Infantry. These companies were again guests on Oct. 3, 1903, and the Richmond Light Infantry Blues of Richmond, Va., were entertained on Sept. 16 and 17, 1912.

Fraternal orders have found the auditorium the only adequate place for their large gatherings. It was used for many years by Palestine Temple, Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, for initiatory ceremonials and banquets.

An important feature in the record of Infantry Hall in recent years has been the Talma Studio of The Players, who were, incidentally, the last tenants to vacate the building. Their studio, a play factory more extensive than any other owned by a little theatre group in the United States, occupied the entire upper floor of the building.

For their performances each year, The Players set up a theatre in the auditorium. The hall was divided by movable walls and curtains resembling scenery such as is used on the stage. The rear wall was panelled and decorated to represent the old Talma Theatre. Curtains hung from the ceiling gave the effect of a balcony, and the whole resembled a small playhouse.

Prize fighting did not enter the list of Infantry Hall events until after the World War, when returning veterans brought home new ideas of the propriety of the "manly art." Before that boxing matches had been relegated to "clubs" of one sort or another in the suburbs, but veteran organizations saw no reason

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

JUL 4 1926

38

"A riot in the house," writes a correspondent, marked the first performance of "La Preface du Livre de Vie" by Nicholas Obouhoff, a Russian composer, born in Moscow in 1892 and living in Paris since 1919, at Koussevitzky's third Paris concert at the Opera on June 3. The Boston Symphony's conductor, however, paid no attention to the racket and the work was played to the end. Obouhoff has used an "absolute" harmony based on the twelve notes of the chromatic tempered scale (whereby the work, presumably, is "atonal"), and, while preserving the staff, has introduced new signs for the notes represented by black keys on the piano, abolishing sharps and flats. He has also new names, "lo" for C sharp, "te" for D sharp, "ra" (we are not sure of the consonant) for F sharp, "lu" for C sharp, "bi" for A sharp (or B flat). The vocal parts (there are four singers, as well as two pianists) glide into each other with the aim of producing the effect of a single, superhuman voice.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

JUL 18 1926

The Bennington concert course in the studio of Haroid Henry, "The Yellow Barn," Monument avenue, Bennington, Vt., began Tuesday night with a violin recital by Sascna Jacobson, Arthur Kraft, tenor, and Max Poliokoff, violinist, will appear in the second concert July 29, Mr Henry himself in the third August 17, and Horace Britt, 'cellist, on September 2. Mr Henry will also take part in ensemble numbers in the first, second and fourth concerts. Mildred Couper is accompanist for the series.

The resignation of Agide Jacchia, as conductor of the Boston Symphony hall "Pops" has caused wide regret. For 10 years Mr Jacchia has conducted these nightly concerts during the spring and early summer with unusual success. The end of his work with them came because he was unwilling to have the numbers of the orchestra cut down on the closing night of July 3 below the advertised number, and below the number which he believed necessary to have the music properly played. He refused to conduct on the closing night, and his place was taken by Arthur Fiedler. Mr Jacchia received many glowing encomiums by the Boston press in both editorials and in news stories, and it appears evident that he has the sympathy of the public in the matter, rather than the management of the orchestra, which appears at various times not to have kept faith with its public. The "Pop" concerts, in danger of extinction after prohibition cut out the literal "pops," have been made more successful than they ever were by Mr Jacchia. Nightly the great hall has been crowded during the last five years, and it has become one of the institutions of Boston. The programs have combined serious music with lighter stuff of real musical value. We hope that Mr Jacchia and the officials will come to an understanding so that they may be able to get together again next summer.

HERALD
LOUISVILLE, KY.

JUL 11 1926

JACCHIA QUITS AS SYMPHONY HEAD IN BOSTON

Director Charges Officers Disrupted Orchestra By Excusing Players.

BOSTON, July 10.—As a result of a difference with the directors, Agide Jacchia, for fifteen years conductor of the summer season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has quit. A contract had been given to him to sign for next season, but now the offer has been canceled. Soon after Jacchia's action was made known, the trustees issued a statement through Frederick P. Cabot, president of the board. He said in part:

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and well balanced as it had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia had conducted.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management, specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that he would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of last week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter, repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract offered him for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years and no ons can regret more than the trustees and the management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

Agide Jacchia Will Return to Found New Boston "Pops"

Herald July 2, 1926

Issues Statement Claiming Slashing of Orchestra Caused Resignation

FIEDLER CONDUCTS CONCERT ON JULY 3

Agide Jacchia, conductor of the "Pops" concerts for the past ten years, whose resignation was accepted by the directors of the popular concerts yesterday, declared when interviewed at his home on the Fenway last night that he intended returning to Boston next season to open a "Pops" series under his own direction and management.

His resignation he stated came as the result of the refusal on the part of the management to keep a full quota of players, with the result that he felt the concert would be unbalanced and not up to his high standard.

LAST APPEARANCE TONIGHT

He conducted the concert last night and will make his last appearance tonight. Saturday night will find Arthur Fiedler, a member of the Boston Symphony, conducting the last "Pops" concert. Mr. Jacchia said that on Saturday night there will be 67 players present instead of the average of 80.

"I created the Pops after the war, and I refuse to be present and taking part in their burial," he declared when referring to tomorrow night's small number.

"For ten years the 'Pops' have completely filled my life, and for them I live and work. Since last October I have prepared 24 orchestrations, and completed them in March. For this work I received no compensation.

ASKED TO RECALL THE RESIGNATION

"I have condoned the absence of a few players now and then, but allowing so many to leave on Saturday was too much. The management asked me to reconsider my resignation, and I in turn asked them for a promise that such affairs would not take place next year. They told me to forget about the future. I refused."

Mr. Jacchia declared he started the season with 14 men who never played in the "Pops" and that it was impossible to have such men, no matter how good they were, learn the 400 pieces that are played in the nine weeks of the "Pops" in an efficient manner.

"Just imagine, if you can," he continued, "having the organ played by a pupil of music, instead of an accomplished and finished artist. Such is the case, and I even overlooked this action on the part of the management. And to place a young man who has been employed in passing out programs, in the orchestra playing the bassoon, is such a thing imaginable? Such is the case at present.

During the present season I handed

(Continued on Page Ten, Column 6)

AGIDE JACCHIA TO FOUND NEW 'POPS'

(Continued from Page One)

a typewriter copy of pieces that must be present in the orchestra for proper balance to the management. I told them that they might excuse some men, but it was imperative that these pieces be always present. They have completely ignored it time and again. They are ruining the Pops and my heart is broken."

During the interview Mr. Jacchia was visibly affected and showed it by the tremor in his voice, the shaking of his hands as he lighted a cigarette and his nervous walking up and down his apartment. His wife and family left for Europe last Friday and he leaves to join them on Tuesday.

William H. Brennan, manager of the orchestra, when interviewed last night concerning the action of Mr. Jacchia, said he had nothing to say other than that Arthur Fiedler would lead the "Pops" on Saturday night.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

Frederick P. Cabot, president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said the resignation of Mr. Jacchia had been received and accepted. As to the latter's statements concerning the size of the orchestra, Mr. Cabot said it was as large and well balanced as at any time during the closing concerts for the past nine seasons in which Mr. Jacchia has conducted. Mr. Cabot's statement follows:

"I have seen a statement made to the press this morning by Mr. Jacchia's secretary relative to Mr. Jacchia's refusal to conduct the closing concert of the present season of Pop concerts.

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from [illegible] satisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and as well balanced as the orchestra had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia has conducted. In fact, the orchestra is quite a little larger this week than has been the case in many concerts under Mr. Jacchia. The quality of the membership of the orchestra is well known and needs no defense.

REQUEST JACCHIA TO RECONSIDER

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract, and the hope was sincerely expressed that Mr. Jacchia would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of this week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract which had been offered him for next season. On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years, and no on regrets more than the trustees and the management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

THE CASE OF MR. JACCHIA

Transcript — July 7, '26

To the Editor of the Transcript:

I was quite disappointed in the editorial in last night's Transcript headed "Mr. Jacchia quits," inasmuch as the only point of view considered seemed to be that of the management of the orchestra. Of course it would have been very easy for Mr. Jacchia to have completed his contract by conducting tonight's concert; but it would have been equally easy for the trustees of the orchestra, to have yielded to Mr. Jacchia's request that more men be given for tonight's concert and that in the future the personnel of the orchestra contracted to play during the Pops season, should remain the same during the period of concerts. It would also have been more gracious on the part of the management to have thus shown their appreciation for the faithful and successful work during the last ten years by Mr. Jacchia. The management of the orchestra have undertaken to give the people a series of concerts with "eighty Symphony players" according to their advertisements, these concerts to be under the direction of a certain conductor. Now, from the viewpoint of the people, the management have failed in their contract as much as has Mr. Jacchia. The prices of the tickets remain the same at the end of the season as at the beginning, but anyone attending the concerts knows that the members composing the Pops concerts are not the men of the regular Symphony, although they are advertised as such, and towards the end of the season the orchestra dwindles down to the almost vanishing point.

Last Saturday night we attended the Pops concert, and were amazed at the small number of the men playing. This is not living up to the contract on the part of the management. In your editorial, you further state that Mr. Jacchia even critized one of Boston's most cherished institutions — The Boston Symphony Orchestra. As far as the public can find out, it was not the orchestra that was criticized but the lack of it that has caused the whole trouble.

Would it not have been better for the management to have yielded to this very reasonable request for the full quota of men to remain during the season, and for Mr. Jacchia to have acted a little less hastily and for both sides to have remembered their obligations to the public? Is it too late even now for both sides to get together and iron out all these difficulties that have arisen and to try to take into consideration all the little daily cares and worries that may have been responsible for this most unhappy ending of the bright Pops season? The people have grown to love Mr. Jacchia and we want him reinstated with full co-operation on both sides to give the people the best possible. Over the radio all this season has come the slogan, "You might as well have the best," and we want it. Can't some settlement be arrived at that will be satisfactory to all parties concerned—the members of the orchestra, the conductor, the management and the people? Let the present situation prove that the Boston Symphony Orchestra can produce the real harmony as well as instrumental harmony.

C. D. HAMILTON

Arlington, July 3.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BILLBOARD

JUL 3 1926

Boston Symphony To Give Ten Concerts in New York

For the 1926-'27 season, which marks the 46th in New York for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the series will consist of 10 concerts, five on Thursday evenings and an equal number on Saturday afternoons. The dates for these are November 25 and 27, January 6 and 8, February 3 and 5, March 10 and 12 and April 7 and 9. All of the programs will be directed by Serge Koussevitzky.

AND now another landmark is on its way into the past tense of Providence life. Memories of Infantry Hall will soon be all that is left of the structure that has housed no small part of the city's history-making for the last half century.

For, though only 46 years old, Infantry Hall has held more people, gathered for more varied purposes, than any other building in town.

Memories of military activities, memories of politics, memories of music, memories of gay festivals and solemn banquets, of dog shows and poultry shows, of fraternal conventions and class initiations, of amateur theatricals, of roller polo, of ponderous lectures and of prize fights—

All these memories and more centre about the rambling structure which once was a cause of civic pride and now is to make way for a garage. No other building in Rhode Island, it is safe to say, has in so brief a period acquired so firm a fame as the home of so wide a variety of interests.

But now the building's only occupant is the custodian. His bargaining with junk dealers over the small amount of equipment and furniture still remaining in the building nearly finished, he too will desert the structure in a few days. Where once assembled the city's socially elect at charity balls and concerts, there remains but a huddle of worn benches awaiting the second-hand dealer's bid.

Dark and still is the large auditorium wherein was brought forth the music of the masters by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Gericke, Paur, Muck and Koussevitzky. Where Patti, Tetrazzini and Galli-Curci thrilled Rhode Island music lovers with their operatic arias, and Paderewski, Rachmaninoff, Sarasate and Kreisler gave their masterful interpretations, dim shadows hold unchallenged sway.

William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft have addressed their admirers from the auditorium's stage. There Bryan and Borah and Darrow and Debs have expounded their theories. Count von Bernstorff once addressed Providence citizenry from the old hall's platform —before the World War.

In its comparatively short span of life, as the age of buildings is reckoned, Infantry Hall has enjoyed a history rarely equalled. It opened in January, 1880, with a great military fair, the largest event of its kind ever held in the State up to that time. The last affair upon which the doors of the auditorium swung open to the public was the show of the Rhode Island Boston Terrier Club a few weeks ago.

During the 46 years which separated [illegible] osevelt was whisked away to the Dor- ice street building where he repeated talk for the benefit of those who ld not gain admission to Infantry l.

or several years the New England tufacturing Jewelers' and Silver- hs' Association held its annual din- in the hall, at which speakers of tional and international reputation made addresses. Among them were President Taft, on March 21, 1910, Count von Bernstof and Senator Borah.

Notable gatherings of chartered commands were numerous. On June 8, 1888, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston and the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of London were entertained by the First Light Infantry. These companies were again guests on Oct. 3, 1903, and the Richmond Light Infantry Blues of Richmond, Va., were entertained on Sept. 16 and 17, 1912.

Fraternal orders have found the auditorium the only adequate place for their large gatherings. It was used for many years by Palestine Temple, Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, for initiatory ceremonials and banquets.

An important feature in the record of Infantry Hall in recent years has been the Talma Studio of The Players, who were, incidentally, the last tenants to vacate the building. Their studio, a play factory more extensive than any other owned by a little theatre group in the United States, occupied the entire upper floor of the building.

For their performances each year, The Players set up a theatre in the auditorium. The hall was divided by movable walls and curtains resembling scenery such as is used on the stage. The rear wall was panelled and decorated to represent the old Talma Theatre. Curtains hung from the ceiling gave the effect of a balcony, and the whole resembled a small playhouse.

Prize fighting did not enter the list of Infantry Hall events until after the World War, when returning veterans brought home new ideas of the propriety of the "manly art." Before that boxing matches had been relegated to "clubs" of one sort or another in the suburbs, but veteran organizations saw no reason [illegible] appeared at the auditor- [illegible] with her ballet, delayed the performance nearly an hour because of a tiff with the authorities concerning the propriety of stockingless dancing. She finally wore the stockings.

Music lovers have not been the only ones drawn to Infantry Hall, however. In 1882 the newspapers carried announcements of the opening of a roller skating rink in the building. There was skating afternoons and evenings, with an orchestra in attendance. And as roller skating became increasingly popular, someone conceived the idea of playing polo on skates. A league was formed in which Providence had a team, and the first game was played at the auditorium in 1885. Although some seasons found Providence without a team, the game was played intermittently until 1923.

Large and available seven days a week, unlike the theatres, Infantry Hall made an ideal place for political rallies and conventions. Republican conventions were held there for years. Great political questions were debated on the floor which perhaps the night before had been the scene of the charity ball or a concert or a poultry show. The Young Republican Regiment and the Republican Club dinners were held there annually. The Democrats found it a convenient place to meet, also, nor was its use limited to the two principal parties, for the socialists and others have rented it upon occasion.

The greatest crowd which ever gathered at the hall, according to George A. Manchester, superintendent of the building for many years, assembled to hear Roosevelt. Hundreds of people crowded the stairs, corridors and the sidewalk in front of the building. It was decided to hold an overflow meeting at the Opera House, and so, upon finishing his speech, why they should not have here what had been one of their cherished recreations in training camps and rest billets in this country and France. Carefully arranged programmes, staged without the traditional accompaniments of alcohol and rough clamor, proved profitable and attracted a considerable feminine following.

About a dozen years ago the question of fire hazard was raised, in connection with the assembling of large numbers of people whose only exits were down long stairways to South Main street or out a winding passage to the steep walk that leads to the hall from Benefit street, the latter used by those approaching from the East Side. As a result important changes were made on the eastern side, or rear, of the building, with new exits and fire escapes.

In 1920 the Church House Corporation acquired the property, and for five years used a large part of the building for its charitable work. New dining rooms, sleeping quarters and offices were arranged, and one room was fitted up as a chapel. Rev. Louis J. Bernhardt is superintendent of the institution and Rt. Rev. James DeWolf Perry, Jr., is President of the corporation. Last year the building was sold to the Keefe-Gardner Corporation, and Church House is now having plans drawn for a new building.

A $750,000 garage will be erected on the Infantry Hall site by the new owners, according to Ezekiel E. Gardner, who, with Dr. F. H. Keefe, formed the Keefe-Gardner Corporation. There will be eight floors, with accommodations for 120 cars on each floor, according to tentative plans. The upper floors will be served by a circular ramp in the middle of the structure and by electric elevators.

The property has changed hands several times since Henry J. Steere acquired the stock in the Infantry Building Corporation in 1883. The owners since that time, and the years in which they acquired the property, are as follows: Thomas W. Steere, 1894; State Real Estate Company, 1901; Realty Company of America, 1901; Infantry Hall Auditorium Company, 1909; Century Realty Company, 1910; The Church House, 1920; Keefe-Gardner Corpora-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

1926

"A riot in the house," writes a correspondent, marked the first performance of "La Preface du Livre de Vie" by Nicholas Obouhoff, a Russian composer, born in Moscow in 1892 and living in Paris since 1919, at Koussevitzky's third Paris concert at the Opera on June 3. The Boston Symphony's conductor, however, paid no attention to the racket and the work was played to the end. Obouhoff has used an "absolute" harmony based on the twelve notes of the chromatic tempered scale (whereby the work, presumably, is "atonal"), and, while preserving the staff, has introduced new signs for the notes represented by black keys on the piano, abolishing sharps and flats. He has also new names, "lo" for C sharp, "te" for D sharp, "ra" (we are not sure of the consonant) for F sharp, "lu" for C sharp, "bi" for A sharp (or B flat). The vocal parts (there are four singers, as well as two pianists) glide into each other with the aim of producing the effect of a single, superhuman voice.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

JUL 18 1926

The Bennington concert course in the studio of Harold Henry, "The Yellow Barn," Monument avenue, Bennington, Vt., began Tuesday night with a violin recital by Sascha Jacobson, Arthur Kraft, tenor, and Max Pollikoff, violinist, will appear in the second concert July 29, Mr Henry himself in the third August 17, and Horace Britt, 'cellist, on September 2. Mr Henry will also take part in ensemble numbers in the first, second and fourth concerts. Mildred Couper is accompanist for the series.

The resignation of Agide Jacchia, as conductor of the Boston Symphony hall "Pops" has caused wide regret. For 10 years Mr Jacchia has conducted these nightly concerts during the spring and early summer with unusual success. The end of his work with them came because he was unwilling to have the numbers of the orchestra cut down on the closing night of July 3 below the advertised number, and below the number which he believed necessary to have the music properly played. He refused to conduct on the closing night, and his place was taken by Arthur Fiedler. Mr Jacchia received many glowing encomiums by the Boston press in both editorials and in news stories, and it appears evident that he has the sympathy of the public in the matter, rather than the management of the orchestra, which appears at various times not to have kept faith with its public. The "Pop" concerts, in danger of extinction after prohibition cut out the literal "pops," have been made more successful than they ever were by Mr Jacchia. Nightly the great hall has been crowded during the last five years, and it has become one of the institutions of Boston. The programs have combined serious music with lighter stuff of real musical value. We hope that Mr Jacchia and the officials will come to an understanding so that they may be able to get together again next summer.

THE
HERALD
LOUISVILLE, KY.

JUL 11 1926

JACCHIA QUITS AS SYMPHONY HEAD IN BOSTON

Director Charges Officers Disrupted Orchestra By Excusing Players.

BOSTON, July 10.—As a result of a difference with the directors, Agide Jacchia, for fifteen years conductor of the summer season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has quit. A contract had been given to him to sign for next season, but now the offer has been canceled. Soon after Jacchia's action was made known, the trustees issued a statement through Frederick P. Cabot, president of the board. He said in part:

"Last Saturday morning the orchestra's management received a letter from Mr. Jacchia expressing dissatisfaction with the size of the orchestra for the closing concert, July 3. It was at once pointed out to Mr. Jacchia that the orchestra for the closing night this season would be as large and well balanced as it had been during the closing concerts for the last nine seasons which Mr. Jacchia had conducted.

"This week Mr. Jacchia sent a second letter to the management, specifically stating that he would not conduct the concert on July 3. The management replied that they had no authority to modify Mr. Jacchia's contract and hope was sincerely expressed that he would not act upon his suggestion. On Tuesday night of last week Mr. Jacchia wrote another letter, repeating his intention not to conduct on July 3 and also stating that he did not wish to accept the contract offered him for next season.

"On Wednesday morning this correspondence was referred to me as president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and with sincere regret I accepted Mr. Jacchia's resignation.

"Mr. Jacchia has had the respect and admiration of the Boston public for many years and no one can regret more than the trustees and the management his decision to shorten his engagement even by one night."

PRESS
PITTSBURG, PA.
AUG 1 1926

FOURTEEN CONCERTS IN ORCHESTRA SERIES

Pictured above are: Upper row, left to right—Fritz Reiner, Henri Verbrugghen and Walter Damrosch; center row—Nikolai Sokoloff, Wilhelm Furtwaengler, Willem Mengelberg, and lower view, Serge Koussevitzky.

THE Symphony orchestra concerts, given under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Orchestra association, will enter upon the eleventh season with a series of seven Friday night and seven Saturday afternoon concerts this fall. The concerts will all be given in Syria Mosque and open with the Boston Symphony, under Serge Koussevitzky, on Friday, Nov. 5, followed by a Saturday matinee on Nov. 6. A concert by the Boston Symphony is always an event of importance, and with the conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, the occasion is one of the events of the season. The second concert in the series will be given by the Cincinnati orchestra,

Fritz Reiner, conductor, on Nov. 19 and 20; the Cleveland orchestra, with Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor, will give the third pair on Dec. 10 and 11; the New York Philharmonic will favor Pittsburgh with two visits, giving a pair of concerts on Jan. 1 and 8, with Willem Mengelberg, conductor, and another pair on March 11 and 12, with Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor. The New York Symphony, with Walter Damrosch, conductor, will return after an absence of many years, on Jan. 28 and 29. The Minneapolis orchestra, Henri Verbrugghen, conductor, will give a pair of concerts on Feb. 11 and 12.

In addition to the regular Friday night and Saturday afternoon concerts, three special concerts will be given [illegible] elementary grade[illegible] be giv[illegible] from [illegible] direct[illegible] chape[illegible] childr[illegible] the C[illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] Feb.

THIS CLIPPING FROM DAYTON, O.
NEWS
JUN2 9 1926

BALTIMORE, MD.
EVE. SUN
AUG 4 1926

IT will doubtless be a matter of interest to many Baltimoreans to learn that Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as the succe[illegible] to M. Rabaud, who, in turn, followed Karl Muck, has been engaged to direct a performance of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande," in Berlin, with an all-French cast next May.

M. Monteux has been sharing with Willem Mengelberg the duties of conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam and has directed concerts in Moscow, Leningrad, Norway and Sweden. Everywhere he is declared to have been warmly received.

He showed himself on his appearance here with the Boston Symphony to be an earnest, highly sentitive, broad-minded conductor, with a fine conception of his work. That he did not achieve the signal success he strove for is perhaps not to be counted against him, since he had to contend with exceptional conditions which constituted a serious handicap.

Monteux's freedom from narrowness was shown again and again in the decided leaning which he manifested toward German music at a time when prejudices still were strong in this country and when the feeling against everything German yet asserted itself. Monteux did his best to place musical art above nationalism, and he will always be held in grateful remembrance for his catholicity of taste not less than for his ability.

CHRONICLE
HOUSTON, TEXAS
JUL 4 1926

Koussevitzky Antics.

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony Orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux Orchestra?

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Tallaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-egg music, weird and non-appealing, [illegible]smans play the piano. [illegible]was, however, consid-

o o o

[illegible]x Orchestra.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
JUL 18 1926

DURING the past season Paris has caught two glimpses of the typical Spanish theatre, with its mixture of song and dance; but in June it heard an authentic Spanish Zarzuela in all its integrity. André Messager in Le Figaro was careful to explain the difference between a Zarzuela and an operetta. The first is a popular drama in miniature, accompanied by songs and dances. The music, usually based on national folk airs, still leaves room for the inspiration of the moment; Pedrell, Breton and Vines were noted composers in this genre.

The Zarzuela that the Parisians heard, "La Calesera," was written by Louis Francisco Alonzo to a libretto by Emilio Gonzalez and Luis Martinez Roman. André Messager found the plot disconcertingly naïve, "but the music of Alonzo had real value, although the score lacked the distinctive Spanish color and betrayed the influence of the Italian school. Mme. Cora Raga, the prima donna, displayed a remarkable voice."

Alfred Cortot and Jacques Thibaud appeared in three separate recitals at the Paris Opéra in June. M. Cortot showed a preference for Schumann and Chopin. His interpretations, according to Le Figaro, were "miraculous." Thibaud gave his first concert with the assistance of the orchestra of the Société du Conservatoire, Philippe Gaubert conducting. At his second, Georges de Lausnay collaborated at the piano. In both instances the violinist upheld his "reputation for brilliant and polished technique." Later in the month Cortot, Thibaud and Casals joined forces in a chamber music recital at the Opéra, playing trios by Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Schumann. Serge Koussevitzky gave Paul Hindemith's concerto for orchestra for the first time in Paris at his closing concert. Le Temps said that "it neither astonished, pleased nor displeased the public. The composer gave an impression of strength and decision and treated his concerto in the manner of the concerto grosso of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BUFFALO, N. Y.
SEP 2 - 1926

NATIONAL RADIO SIDELIGHTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, Symphony orchestra and the Boston symphony. The last two organizations in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. This series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Others stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio corporation, General Electric net work during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

NEW YORK TIMES
AUG 1 - 1926

Pierre Monteux, two seasons ago conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will direct a performance of Debussy's "Pelléas et Mélisande" in Berlin, with an all-French cast, next May. Mr. Monteux, after sharing a season with Willem Mengelberg as conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam, during which he rehearsed eighty-three symphonies and shorter pieces, conducted in Moscow, Leningrad, Norway and Sweden, where he was warmly received. Next year Mr. Monteux will conduct in London and Liverpool, besides filling Continental engagements.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
HARRISBURG, PA.
AUG 3 - 1926

DIRECTORS IMPERTURBED

Nikolai Obukhoff's "La Preface du Livre de Vie" created a riot when it was first performed at the Concerts Koussevitzky in Paris. Mr. Koussevitzky, who is conductor of the Boston Symphony, paid no heed to the racket, but went right on as though all were peaceful. M. Obukhoff's work is based on the twelve notes of the chromatic tempered scale. The four voices used blend with each other in a attemp to produce a single, superhuman voice. Two pianos are also included in the instrumentation.

French Take Their Music Seriously, Dayton Couple Say After Parisian Visit

EDITOR'S NOTE:—This is one of a series of articles written for the Dayton Daily News from the various art centers of Europe by John Finley Williamson, conductor of Westminster choir.

BY JOHN FINLEY WILLIAMSON

PARIS, France, June 29.—The French take their music seriously.

That fact was demonstrated at a recent concert we attended when Koussevitsky of the Boston Symphony was hissed.

Koussevitsky appeared in the French capitol as the guest conductor of the Paris Symphony orchestra.

He included an extremely modern composition on the program. The soprano whistled through her fingers instead of singing. The alto merely groaned.

For about three minutes the audience endured in silence. Then followed hisses and laughter.

Finally the auditors clapped their hands and stamped their feet so hard the conductor had to stop the performance and leave the stage.

This treatment was accorded Koussevitsky in the presence of distinguished musicians and composers.

Rachmaninoff, Charpenter, Ganz and many more sat "out front" during this demonstration.

"Polite" applause as we have it in America is unkown in Europe. Concert goers either do or do not like interpretations. Their opinions are expressed in different ways.

PRESS
PITTSBURG, PA.
AUG 1 1926

FOURTEEN CONCERTS IN ORCHESTRA SERIES

Pictured above are: Upper row, left to right: Fritz Reiner, Henri Verbrugghen and Walter Damrosch; center row—Nikolai Sokoloff, Wilhelm Furtwaengler, Willem Mengelberg, and lower view, Serge Koussevitzky.

THE Symphony orchestra concerts, given under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Orchestra association, will enter upon the eleventh season with a series of seven Friday night and seven Saturday afternoon concerts this fall. The concerts will all be given in Syria Mosque and open with the Boston Symphony, under Serge Koussevitzky, on Friday, Nov. 5, followed by a Saturday matinee on Nov. 6. A concert by the Boston Symphony is always an event of importance, and with the conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, the occasion is one of the events of the season. The second concert in the series will be given by the Cincinnati orchestra,

Fritz Reiner, conductor, on Nov. 19 and 20; the Cleveland orchestra, with Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor, will give the third pair on Dec. 10 and 11; the New York Philharmonic will favor Pittsburgh with two visits, giving a pair of concerts on Jan. 1 and 8, with Willem Mengelberg, conductor, and another pair on March 11 and 12, with Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor. The New York Symphony, with Walter Damrosch, conductor, will return after an absence of many years, on Jan. 28 and 29. The Minneapolis orchestra, Henri Verbrugghen, conductor, will give a pair of concerts on Feb. 11 and 12.

In addition to the regular Friday night and Saturday afternoon concerts, three special concerts will be given [illegible] grade [illegible] be giv[illegible] from [illegible] direct[illegible] chapel [illegible] childr[illegible] the C[illegible] the C[illegible] and [illegible] Feb.

THIS CLIPPING FROM DAYTON, O.
NEWS
JUN2 9 1926

BALTIMORE, MD.
EVE. SUN
AUG 4 1926

IT will doubtless be a matter of interest to many Baltimoreans to learn that Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as the succe[illegible] M. Rabaud, who, in turn, followed Karl Muck, has been engaged to direct a performance of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande," in Berlin, with an all-French cast next May.

M. Monteux has been sharing with Willem Mengelberg the duties of conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam and has directed concerts in Moscow, Leningrad, Norway and Sweden. Everywhere he is declared to have been warmly received.

He showed himself on his appearance here with the Boston Symphony to be an earnest, highly sentitive, broad-minded conductor, with a fine conception of his work. That he did not achieve the signal success he strove for is perhaps not to be counted against him, since he had to contend with exceptional conditions which constituted a serious handicap.

Monteux's freedom from narrowness was shown again and again in the decided leaning which he manifested toward German music at a time when prejudices still were strong in this country and when the feeling against everything German yet asserted itself. Monteux did his best to place musical art above nationalism, and he will always be held in grateful remembrance for his catholicity of taste not less than for his ability.

CHRONICLE
HOUSTON, TEXAS
JUL 4 1926

Koussevitzky Antics.

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony Orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux Orchestra?

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-egg music, weird and non-appealing. [illegible]smans play the piano, was, however, consid-

o o o

[illegible]x Orchestra.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
NOV 18 1926

DURING the past season Paris has caught two glimpses of the typical Spanish theatre, with its mixture of song and dance; but in June it heard an authentic Spanish Zarzuela in all its integrity. André Messager in Le Figaro was careful to explain the difference between a Zarzuela and an operetta. The first is a popular drama in miniature, accompanied by songs and dances. The music, usually based on national folk airs, still leaves room for the inspiration of the moment; Pedrell, Breton and Vines were noted composers in this genre.

The Zarzuela that the Parisians heard, "La Calesera," was written by Louis Francisco Alonzo to a libretto by Emilio Gonzalez and Luis Martinez Roman. André Messager found the plot disconcertingly naïve, "but the music of Alonzo had real value, although the score lacked the distinctive Spanish color and betrayed the influence of the Italian school. Mme. Cora Raga, the prima donna, displayed a remarkable voice."

Alfred Cortot and Jacques Thibaud appeared in three separate recitals at the Paris Opéra in June. M. Cortot showed a preference for Schumann and Chopin. His interpretations, according to Le Figaro, were "miraculous." Thibaud gave his first concert with the assistance of the orchestra of the Société du Conservatoire, Philippe Gaubert conducting. At his second, Georges de Lausnay collaborated at the piano. In both instances the violinist upheld his "reputation for brilliant and polished technique." Later in the month Cortot, Thibaud and Casals joined forces in a chamber music recital at the Opéra, playing trios by Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Schumann. Serge Koussevitzky gave Paul Hindemith's concerto for orchestra for the first time in Paris at his closing concert. Le Temps said that "it neither astonished, pleased nor displeased the public. The composer gave an impression of strength and decision and treated his concerto in the manner of the concerto grosso of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BUFFALO, N. Y.
SEP 2 - 1926

NATIONAL RADIO SIDELIGHTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, Symphony orchestra and the Boston symphony. The last two organizations in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. This series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Others stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio corporation, General Electric net work during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

NEW YORK TIMES
AUG 1 1926

Pierre Monteux, two seasons ago conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will direct a performance of Debussy's "Pelléas et Mélisande" in Berlin, with an all-French cast, next May. Mr. Monteux, after sharing a season with Willem Mengelberg as conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam, during which he rehearsed eighty-three symphonies and shorter pieces, conducted in Moscow, Leningrad, Norway and Sweden, where he was warmly received. Next year Mr. Monteux will conduct in London and Liverpool, besides filling Continental engagements.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
HARRISBURG, PA.
AUG 3 - 1926

DIRECTORS IMPERTURBED

Nikolai Obukhoff's "La Preface du Livre de Vie" created a riot when it was first performed at the Concerts Koussevitzky in Paris. Mr. Koussevitzky, who is conductor of the Boston Symphony, paid no heed to the racket, but went right on as though all were peaceful. M. Obukhoff's work is based on the twelve notes of the chromatic tempered scale. The four voices used blend with each other in a attemp to produce a single, superhuman voice. Two pianos are also included in the instrumentation.

French Take Their Music Seriously, Dayton Couple Say After Parisian Visit

EDITOR'S NOTE:—This is one of a series of articles written for the Dayton Daily News from the various art centers of Europe by John Finley Williamson, conductor of Westminster choir.

BY JOHN FINLEY WILLIAMSON

PARIS, France, June 29.—The French take their music seriously.

That fact was demonstrated at a recent concert we attended when Koussevitsky of the Boston Symphony was hissed.

Koussevitsky appeared in the French capitol as the guest conductor of the Paris Symphony orchestra.

He included an extremely modern composition on the program. The soprano whistled through her fingers instead of singing. The alto merely groaned.

For about three minutes the audience endured in silence. Then followed hisses and laughter.

Finally the auditors clapped their hands and stamped their feet so hard the conductor had to stop the performance and leave the stage.

This treatment was accorded Koussevitsky in the presence of distinguished musicians and composers.

Rachmaninoff, Charpenter, Ganz and many more sat "out front" during this demonstration.

"Polite" applause as we have it in America is unkown in Europe. Concert goers either do or do not like interpretations. Their opinions are expressed in different ways.

PRESS
PITTSBURG, PA.
AUG 1 1926

FOURTEEN CONCERTS IN ORCHESTRA SERIES

Pictured above are: Upper row, left to right—Fritz Reiner, Henri Verbrugghen and Walter Damrosch; center row—Nikolai Sokoloff, Wilhelm Furtwaengler, Willem Mengelberg, and lower view, Serge Koussevitzky.

THE Symphony orchestra concerts, given under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Orchestra association, will enter upon the eleventh season with a series of seven Friday night and seven Saturday afternoon concerts this fall. The concerts will all be given in Syria Mosque and open with the Boston Symphony, under Serge Koussevitzky, on Friday, Nov. 5, followed by a Saturday matinee on Nov. 6. A concert by the Boston Symphony is always an event of importance, and with the conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, the occasion is one of the events of the season. The second concert in the series will be given by the Cincinnati orchestra,

Fritz Reiner, conductor, on Nov. 19 and 20; the Cleveland orchestra, with Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor, will give the third pair on Dec. 10 and 11; the New York Philharmonic will favor Pittsburgh with two visits, giving a pair of concerts on Jan. 1 and 8, with Willem Mengelberg, conductor, and another pair on March 11 and 12, with Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor. The New York Symphony, with Walter Damrosch, conductor, will return after an absence of many years, on Jan. 28 and 29. The Minneapolis orchestra, Henri Verbrugghen, conductor, will give a pair of concerts on Feb. 11 and 12.

In addition to the regular Friday night and Saturday afternoon concerts, three special concerts will be given for children in the elementary grade schools. These concerts will be given in Syria Mosque on Fridays from 4 to 5 p. m., the children going direct from the schools under the chaperonage of their teachers. The children's concerts will be given by the Cincinnati orchestra on Nov. 19, the Cleveland orchestra on Dec. 10 and the Minneapolis orchestra on Feb. 11.

BALTIMORE, MD.
EVE. SUN
AUG 4 1926

IT will doubtless be a matter of interest to many Baltimoreans to learn that Pierre Monteux, who was conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as the successor of M. Rabaud, who, in turn, followed Karl Muck, has been engaged to direct a performance of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande," in Berlin, with an all-French cast next May.

M. Monteux has been sharing with Willem Mengelberg the duties of conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam and has directed concerts in Moscow, Leningrad, Norway and Sweden. Everywhere he is declared to have been warmly received.

He showed himself on his appearance here with the Boston Symphony to be an earnest, highly sentitive, broad-minded conductor, with a fine conception of his work. That he did not achieve the signal success he strove for is perhaps not to be counted against him, since he had to contend with exceptional conditions which constituted a serious handicap.

Monteux's freedom from narrowness was shown again and again in the decided leaning which he manifested toward German music at a time when prejudices still were strong in this country and when the feeling against everything German yet asserted itself. Monteux did his best to place musical art above nationalism, and he will always be held in grateful remembrance for his catholicity of taste not less than for his ability.

CHRONICLE
HOUSTON, TEXAS
JUL 4 1926

Koussevitzky Antics.

What more natural, since it was in Paris that he first gained his vogue as a conductor, than to find the Boston Symphony Orchestra leader stepping before a fair sized audience at the Paris Opera, leading in a special performance the Lamoureux Orchestra?

But it was not an inspiring effort. Mr. Koussevitzky has personality and he is an excellent musician. Better than either, he is a specialist on the double-bass fiddle. His reading of the Brahms Fourth Symphony was a sad affair. Not only did he shatter traditions in the matter of tempi-dragging when he should not, and hurrying when there was no need—but he resorted to all manner of dynamic exaggerations, seemingly in an effort to put color into his reading. Koussevitzky lacks understanding of the classic line and he will, I regret to say, refrain from learning.

His conducting of two small bits of Mlle. Taliaferre were better, though he could not have been expected to do much with such insipid music. As for the piano concerto of M. Tansmans, who appeared in the role of soloist, nothing at all was possible. It was butter-and-egg music, weird and non-appealing. Nor can M. Tansmans play the piano. The applause was, however, considerable.

o o o

The Lamoureux Orchestra.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
JUL 18 1926

DURING the past season Paris has caught two glimpses of the typical Spanish theatre, with its mixture of song and dance; but in June it heard an authentic Spanish Zarzuela in all its integrity. André Messager in Le Figaro was careful to explain the difference between a Zarzuela and an operetta. The first is a popular drama in miniature, accompanied by songs and dances. The music, usually based on national folk airs, still leaves room for the inspiration of the moment; Pedrell, Breton and Vines were noted composers in this genre.

The Zarzuela that the Parisians heard, "La Calesera," was written by Louis Francisco Alonzo to a libretto by Emilio Gonzalez and Luis Martinez Roman. André Messager found the plot disconcertingly naïve, "but the music of Alonzo had real value, although the score lacked the distinctive Spanish color and betrayed the influence of the Italian school. Mme. Cora Raga, the prima donna, displayed a remarkable voice."

Alfred Cortot and Jacques Thibaud appeared in three separate recitals at the Paris Opéra in June. M. Cortot showed a preference for Schumann and Chopin. His interpretations, according to Le Figaro, were "miraculous." Thibaud gave his first concert with the assistance of the orchestra of the Société du Conservatoire, Philippe Gaubert conducting. At his second, Georges de Lausnay collaborated at the piano. In both instances the violinist upheld his "reputation for brilliant and polished technique." Later in the month Cortot, Thibaud and Casals joined forces in a chamber music recital at the Opéra, playing trios by Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Schumann. Serge Koussevitzky gave Paul Hindemith's concerto for orchestra for the first time in Paris at his closing concert. Le Temps said that "it neither astonished, pleased nor displeased the public. The composer gave an impression of strength and decision and treated his concerto in the manner of the concerto grosso of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BUFFALO, N. Y.
SEP 2 - 1926

NATIONAL RADIO SIDELIGHTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, Symphony orchestra and the Boston symphony. The last two organizations in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. This series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Others stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio corporation, General Electric net work during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

NEW YORK TIMES
AUG 1 - 1926

Pierre Monteux, two seasons ago conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will direct a performance of Debussy's "Pelléas et Mélisande" in Berlin, with an all-French cast, next May. Mr. Monteux, after sharing a season with Willem Mengelberg as conductor of the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam, during which he rehearsed eighty-three symphonies and shorter pieces, conducted in Moscow, Leningrad, Norway and Sweden, where he was warmly received. Next year Mr. Monteux will conduct in London and Liverpool, besides filling Continental engagements.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
HARRISBURG, PA.
AUG 3 - 1926

DIRECTORS IMPERTURBED

Nikolai Obukhoff's "La Preface du Livre de Vie" created a riot when it was first performed at the Concerts Koussevitzky in Paris. Mr. Koussevitzky, who is conductor of the Boston Symphony, paid no heed to the racket, but went right on as though all were peaceful. M. Obukhoff's work is based on the twelve notes of the chromatic tempered scale. The four voices used blend with each other in a attemp to produce a single, superhuman voice. Two pianos are also included in the instrumentation.

Music Couple an Visit

...ORS NOTE:—This is one of a series of articles written for the Dayton Daily News from the various art centers of Europe by John Finley Williamson, conductor of Westminster choir.

BY JOHN FINLEY WILLIAMSON

PARIS, France, June 29.—The French take their music seriously.

That fact was demonstrated at a recent concert we attended when Koussevitsky of the Boston Symphony was hissed.

Koussevitsky appeared in the French capitol as the guest conductor of the Paris Symphony orchestra.

He included an extremely modern composition on the program. The soprano whistled through her fingers instead of singing. The alto merely groaned.

For about three minutes the audience endured in silence. Then followed hisses and laughter.

Finally the auditors clapped their hands and stamped their feet so hard the conductor had to stop the performance and leave the stage.

This treatment was accorded Koussevitsky in the presence of distinguished musicians and composers.

Rachmaninoff, Charpenter, Ganz and many more sat "out front" during this demonstration.

"Polite" applause as we have it in America is unkown in Europe. Concert goers either do or do not like interpretations. Their opinions are expressed in different ways.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NATION
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 25 1926

Music

The Emotional Trend in Performance

A COMBINATION of optimistic and democratic philosophy is responsible for the belief that artistic excellence, and excellence alone, is rewarded by widespread appreciation. As proof of this contention there is cited the Sturm und Drang to hear the Boston Symphony under Dr. Muck, the present Philadelphia Orchestra, or Arturo Toscanini.

But if the enthusiasm at Mr. Toscanini's final concert last season, an enthusiasm described as unprecedented, was a direct response solely to his competence, why was his first visit, in January, 1921, a comparative failure? As a matter of fact, there was just as great a demonstration at the final concert of Mr. Furtwaengler's first visit a year ago; and if this was, as contended at the time, a direct response to his competence, why did presumably the same competence arouse so much less enthusiasm and interest at his second visit? But the greatest tumult of all time occurred in March, 1921, at the final concert of Mr. Mengelberg's first season with the National Symphony; and if this was a response to competence, why has Mr. Mengelberg's work since then, though of equal quality, been treated with indifference?

It depends usually on the reviewers: let them lose their heads, and the public will lose theirs. The report of phenomenal excellence (the old Boston, the Philadelphia, Mr. Mengelberg in 1921, Mr. Furtwaengler in 1925, Mr. Toscanini in 1926) or of anything else that is phenomenal (Mr. Koussevitzky in 1924; also Mr. Klemperer, whose mannerisms triumphed over unfavorable reviews) sends the public scampering after tickets. When these are all gone there is a new reason for trying to get in: the fact that one can't. Reports of inaccessibility attract the persons who will struggle for anything that is inaccessible; reports of struggles attract the persons who assume that what is fought for is worth fighting for. Inside the hall there is lightning and thunder. And to all this the reviewers point as confirmation of their own judgments: the public is responsive to artistic excellence. The second season, if the concerts are still few and talked about (Mr. Stokowski and Mr. Koussevitzky), the atmosphere continues to be electric; but when the guest returns as permanent conductor of a resident orchestra with several series of concerts (Mr. Mengelberg and Mr. Furtwaengler) he is an old story and accessible, and interest, first of the reviewers and then consequently of the public, dies out.

The decisive fact, then, is that in 1921 Mr. Aldrich of the Times was lukewarm to Mr. Toscanini and all but excited over Mr. Mengelberg, and in 1926 Mr. Downes of the Times is cool to Mr. Mengelberg and hot about Mr. Toscanini. For me this difference in critical opinion represents a shift in taste, and this, in turn, a change in the executive art to which the taste refers.

Musical performance seems to be recapitulating the development of music itself: from architectural it has become emotional. Formerly changes in tempo and color revealed pattern and structure, now they convey emotions; and as against Mr. Mengelberg's architectonics of form we now have Mr. Toscanini's architectonics of emotions. This tendency is all to the good in a work like "Götterdämmerung": Mr. Toscanini's performance is the more shattering, and therefore to be preferred to Dr. Muck's. It is less good for Beethoven: here, though there is emotional content, the style remains architectural and demands the solidity of Mr. Mengelberg rather than Toscanini. And it is no good at [illegible] it did music with emo[illegible]med by Mr. Mengelberg, architectural; the moods when architectural music [illegible]nal, it acquires emotional [illegible]ssential character. When, [illegible]r. Samuel like Chopin or

THIS CLIPPING FROM DISPATCH
ST. PAUL, MINN.

SEP 3 - 1926

SYMPHONIES YIELD TO WIRELESS LURE

Leading Orchestras of U. S. Engaged for Series of Concerts for Coming Season.

(Special to the Dispatch.)
(Copyright, 1926, by Consolidated Press Association.)

Washington, Sept. 3.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

Directed by Damrosch.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ, and allied stations. It also is understood that the Chicago orchestra and other symphony organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for an additional financial remuneration.

Two More Links Added.

The thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth links to the mammoth broadcasting chain that will distribute the entertainment program at the third annual Radio Industries Banquet, were added today by the inclusion of stations WHO, Des Moines, and 6XBR, the Warner Brothers's portable broadcaster, to the network. The number of stations that will participate in the broadcast now exceeds by six the tie-up of the past. There also is being considered re-broadcasting of the program, if possible, by use of short waves on the Pacific coast.

So far the Des Moines station is the farthest western link added to the chain. The program will be offered the night of September 15.

TIMES STAR
CINCINNATI, OHIO

SEP 2 - 1926

Two to Play Under Banner of Good Will Advertisers.

CHICAGO MAY JOIN

In Broadcasting Free Winter Performances.

By ROBERT MACK
(By the Consolidated Press. Copyright, 1926, by the Cincinnati Times-Star.)

WASHINGTON, September 2—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of "good-will advertisers."

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from Station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the instalation of microphones for the winter [illegible] be [illegible]s.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.

SEP 3 - 1926

BIG ORCHESTRAS COME TO 'MIKE'

New York Philharmonic, Boston Symphony and Others Broadcast.

BY ROBERT MACK.
Special Correspondent of The Times.
(Copyright, 1926, by the Consolidated Press Association.)

Washington, Sept. 3.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be played by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain or stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other eastern broadcasters and it is understood will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering

POST
DENVER, COLO.

SEP 2 - 1926

NOTED SYMPHONY ORCHESTRAS WILL PLAY OVER RADIO

Profitable Field Is Found By Leading Musical Organizations.

(By ROBERT MACK.)
(Denver Post Leased Wire.)
(Copyright, 1926, Consolidated Press Assn.)

Washington, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast thru a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard thru the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for an additional financial remuneration.

The thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth links to the mammoth broadcasting chain that will distribute the entertainment program at the third annual radio industries banquet, were added today by the inclusion of stations WHO, Des Moines, and 6XBR, the Warner Brothers portable broadcaster, to the network. The number of stations that will participate in the broadcast now exceeds by six the record tieup of the past. Plans are also being considered for the rebroadcasting of the program, if possible, by the use of short waves on the Pacific coast. So far the Des Moines station is the farthest western link added to the chain. The program will be offered the night of Sept. 15.

NEWS
CLEVELAND, OHIO

SEP 3 - 1926

23

ORCHESTRAS TO PLAY FOR RADIO

Organizations, Hitherto Shy of Ether, Find Profit and Larger Audiences.

By Robert Mack.
Copyright, 1926.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The two last organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or in the auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

Offer Educational Program.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

Philharmonic to Broadcast.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are consid[illegible] of

THIS CLIPPING FROM UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

AUG 30 1926

Broadcast from WBZ to Include Feature of WJZ

Capitol Theater Orchestra and Organ Will Be Heard in Regular Monday Concert.

The Maxwell House Coffee Orchestra will be heard from WBZ at 8 o'clock tonight. At 9 o'clock the Capitol Theater Orchestra under the direction of J. Fred Turgeon and Rene Dagenais, theater organist, will broadcast. For this evening Mr. Turgeon has arranged a special program, in which will be included several numbers recently requested by the radio audience.

The Priscilla Beach Ensemble will present the last of a series of 10 broadcasts from the Hotel Brunswick Studio at 10 o'clock. This organization has presented a most interesting series of programs, which have been arranged by the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, and are presented through the courtesy of Neil McIntosh, developer of Priscilla Beach at Plymouth. As on the occasion of previous broadcasts, the ensemble will be assisted by Aidan Redmond, baritone. During the course of each concert there has been interpolated a brief sketch of the history of the early settlers at Plymouth.

From the Hotel Brunswick studio, Mme. Mary Desmond and Dr. D. M. Staley will be heard in a program of contralto solos and dramatic readings, respectively. Mme. Desmond is connected with the department of music of the College of the Spoken Word as a vocal instructor. She was educated in Europe and has sung in the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden, London. She has been heard as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and has sung before King George and Queen Mary by command. The audience of WBZ will remember Dr. Staley for his interesting readings broadcast recently. Dr. Staley is the president of the college and conducts classes in interpretation of literature and associated subjects.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THIS CLIPPING FROM NATION
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 25 1926

Music

The Emotional Trend in Performance

A COMBINATION of optimistic and democratic philosophy is responsible for the belief that artistic excellence, and excellence alone, is rewarded by widespread appreciation. As proof of this contention there is cited the Sturm und Drang to hear the Boston Symphony under Dr. Muck, the present Philadelphia Orchestra, or Arturo Toscanini.

But if the enthusiasm at Mr. Toscanini's final concert last season, an enthusiasm described as unprecedented, was a direct response solely to his competence, why was his first visit, in January, 1921, a comparative failure? As a matter of fact, there was just as great a demonstration at the final concert of Mr. Furtwaengler's first visit a year ago; and if this was, as contended at the time, a direct response to his competence, why did presumably the same competence arouse so much less enthusiasm and interest at his second visit? But the greatest tumult of all time occurred in March, 1921, at the final concert of Mr. Mengelberg's first season with the National Symphony; and if this was a response to competence, why has Mr. Mengelberg's work since then, though of equal quality, been treated with indifference?

It depends usually on the reviewers; let them lose their heads, and the public will lose theirs. The report of phenomenal excellence (the old Boston, the Philadelphia, Mr. Mengelberg in 1921, Mr. Furtwaengler in 1925, Mr. Toscanini in 1926) or of anything else that is phenomenal (Mr. Koussevitzky in 1924; also Mr. Klemperer, whose mannerisms triumphed over unfavorable reviews) sends the public scampering after tickets. When these are all gone there is a new reason for trying to get in: the fact that one can't. Reports of inaccessibility attract the persons who will struggle for anything that is inaccessible; reports of struggles attract the persons who assume that what is fought for is worth fighting for. Inside the hall there is lightning and thunder. And to all this the reviewers point as confirmation of their own judgments: the public is responsive to artistic excellence. The second season, if the concerts are still few and talked about (Mr. Stokowski and Mr. Koussevitzky), the atmosphere continues to be electric; but when the guest returns as permanent conductor of a resident orchestra with several series of concerts (Mr. Mengelberg and Mr. Furtwaengler) he is an old story and accessible, and interest, first of the reviewers and then consequently of the public, dies out.

The decisive fact, then, is that in 1921 Mr. Aldrich of the Times was lukewarm to Mr. Toscanini and all but excited over Mr. Mengelberg, and in 1926 Mr. Downes of the Times is cool to Mr. Mengelberg and hot about Mr. Toscanini. For me this difference in critical opinion represents a shift in taste, and this, in turn, a change in the executive art to which the taste refers.

Musical performance seems to be recapitulating the development of music itself: from architectural it has become emotional. Formerly changes in tempo and color revealed pattern and structure, now they convey emotions; and as against Mr. Mengelberg's architectonics of form we now have Mr. Toscanini's architectonics of emotions. This tendency is all to the good in a work like "Götterdämmerung": Mr. Toscanini's performance is the more shattering, and therefore to be preferred to Dr. Muck's. It is less good for Beethoven: here, though there is emotional content, the style remains architectural and demands the solidity of Mr. Mengelberg rather than the sinuous curves of Mr. Toscanini. And it is no good at all for purely architectural music. For it did music with emotional content little harm to be performed by Mr. Mengelberg, for example, as though it were purely architectural; the moods were realized anyhow, indirectly; but when architectural music [illegible] it were emotional, it acquires emotional [illegible]ssential character. When, [illegible]. Samuel like Chopin or

TIMES STAR
CINCINNATI, OHIO

SEP 2 - 1926

Two to Play Under Banner of Good Will Advertisers.

CHICAGO MAY JOIN

In Broadcasting Free Winter Performances.

By ROBERT MACK
(By the Consolidated Press. Copyright, 1926, by the Cincinnati Times-Star.)

WASHINGTON, September 2—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of "good-will advertisers."

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from Station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the instalation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge or, when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

POST
DENVER, COLO.

SEP 2 - 1926

NOTED SYMPHONY ORCHESTRAS WILL PLAY OVER RADIO

Profitable Field Is Found By Leading Musical Organizations.

(By ROBERT MACK.)
(Denver Post Leased Wire.)
(Copyright, 1926, Consolidated Press Assn.)

Washington, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast thru a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard thru the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations. It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for an additional financial remuneration.

The thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth links to the mammoth broadcasting chain that will distribute the entertainment program at the third annual radio industries banquet, were added today by the inclusion of stations WHO, Des Moines, and 6XBR, the Warner Brothers portable broadcaster, to the network. The number of stations that will participate in the broadcast now exceeds by six the record tieup of the past. Plans are also being considered for the rebroadcasting of the program, if possible, by the use of short waves on the Pacific coast. So far the Des Moines station is the farthest western link added to the chain. The program will be offered the night of Sept. 15.

NEWS
CLEVELAND, OHIO

SEP 3 - 1926

23

ORCHESTRAS TO PLAY FOR RADIO

Organizations, Hitherto Shy of Ether, Find Profit and Larger Audiences.

By Robert Mack.
Copyright, 1926.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The two last organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or in the auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

Offer Educational Program.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

Philharmonic to Broadcast.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge or when possible for additional financial remuneration.

The thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth links to the mammoth broadcasting chain that will distribute the entertainment program at the third annual radio industries banquet were added today by the inclusion of stations WHO, Des Moines, and 6XBR, the Warner Brothers portable broadcaster. The number of stations that will participate in the broadcast now exceeds by six the record of the past. Plans are also being considered for the rebroadcasting of the program, if possible, by the use of short waves on the Pacific coast. So far the Des Moines station is the farthest western link added to the chain.

The program will be offered the night of September 15.

"SPEEDED" GIRLS TO DANCE

[illegible] to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be played by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain or stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other eastern broadcasters and it is understood will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances.

TO WIRELESS LURE

Leading Orchestras of U. S. Engaged for Series of Concerts for Coming Season.

(Special to the Dispatch.)
(Copyright, 1926, by Consolidated Press Association.)

Washington, Sept. 3.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

Directed by Damrosch.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic so-

[illegible]oncerts, which will begin in [illegible]me. These concerts also will [illegible]cast by WJZ, and allied sta[illegible] It also is understood that the Chicago orchestra and other symphony organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for an additional financial remuneration.

Two More Links Added.

The thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth links to the mammoth broadcasting chain that will distribute the entertainment program at the third annual Radio Industries Banquet, were added today by the inclusion of stations WHO, Des Moines, and 6XBR, the Warner Brothers's portable broadcaster, to the network. The number of stations that will participate in the broadcast now exceeds by six the tie-up of the past. There also is being considered re-broadcasting of the program, if possible, by use of short waves on the Pacific coast.

So far the Des Moines station is the farthest western link added to the chain. The program will be offered the night of September 15.

Arrangement" with Any Which Statement Does revious One.

[illegible]les C. Pyle, sports promoter, who [illegible]r, under contract to play a series [illegible] no "business arrangement" with [illegible]up team.

Pyle Makes Statement.

Pyle's admission that he had not [illegible]proached any member of the team [illegible]as made here today after William Tilden, 2d, Vincent Richards, Wil-

[illegible]es in interpretation of literature and associated subjects

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THIS CLIPPING FROM NATION
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 25 1926

Music

The Emotional Trend in Performance

A COMBINATION of optimistic and democratic philosophy is responsible for the belief that artistic excellence, and excellence alone, is rewarded by widespread appreciation. As proof of this contention there is cited the Sturm und Drang to hear the Boston Symphony under Dr. Muck, the present Philadelphia Orchestra, or Arturo Toscanini.

But if the enthusiasm at Mr. Toscanini's final concert last season, an enthusiasm described as unprecedented, was a direct response solely to his competence, why was his first visit, in January, 1921, a comparative failure? As a matter of fact, there was just as great a demonstration at the final concert of Mr. Furtwaengler's first visit a year ago; and if this was, as contended at the time, a direct response to his competence, why did presumably the same competence arouse so much less enthusiasm and interest at his second visit? But the greatest tumult of all time occurred in March, 192., at the final concert of Mr. Mengelberg's first season with the National Symphony; and if this was a response to competence, why has Mr. Mengelberg's work since then, though of equal quality, been treated with indifference?

It depends usually on the reviewers: let them lose their heads, and the public will lose theirs. The report of phenomenal excellence (the old Boston, the Philadelphia, Mr. Mengelberg in 1921, Mr. Furtwaengler in 1925, Mr. Toscanini in 1926) or of anything else that is phenomenal (Mr. Koussevitzky in 1924; also Mr. Klemperer, whose mannerisms triumphed over unfavorable reviews) sends the public scampering after tickets. When these are all gone there is a new reason for trying to get in: the fact that one can't. Reports of inaccessibility attract the persons who will struggle for anything that is inaccessible; reports of struggles attract the persons who assume that what is fought for is worth fighting for. Inside the hall there is lightning and thunder. And to all this the reviewers point as confirmation of their own judgments: the public is responsive to artistic excellence. The second season, if the concerts are still few and talked about (Mr. Stokowski and Mr. Koussevitzky), the atmosphere continues to be electric; but when the guest returns as permanent conductor of a resident orchestra with several series of concerts (Mr. Mengelberg and Mr. Furtwaengler) he is an old story and accessible, and interest, first of the reviewers and then consequently of the public, dies out.

The decisive fact, then, is that in 1921 Mr. Aldrich of the Times was lukewarm to Mr. Toscanini and all but excited over Mr. Mengelberg, and in 1926 Mr. Downes of the Times is cool to Mr. Mengelberg and hot about Mr. Toscanini. For me this difference in critical opinion represents a shift in taste, and this, in turn, a change in the executive art to which the taste refers.

Musical performance seems to be recapitulating the development of music itself: from architectural it has become emotional. Formerly changes in tempo and color revealed pattern and structure, now they convey emotions; and as against Mr. Mengelberg's architectonics of form we now have Mr. Toscanini's architectonics of emotions. This tendency is all to the good in a work like "Götterdämmerung": Mr. Toscanini's performance is the more shattering, and therefore to be preferred to Dr. Muck's. It is less good for Beethoven: here, though there is emotional content, the style remains architectural and demands the solidity of Mr. Mengelberg rather than the sinuous curves of Mr. Toscanini. And it is no good at all for purely architectural music. For it did music with emotional content little harm to be performed by Mr. Mengelberg, for example, as though it were purely architectural; the moods were reali[illegible] anyhow, indirectly; but when architectural music [illegible]h it were emotional, it acquires emotional [illegible]ssential character. When, [illegible]r. Samuel like Chopin or

---

TIMES STAR
CINCINNATI, OHIO

SEP 2 - 1926

Two to Play Under Banner of Good Will Advertisers.

CHICAGO MAY JOIN

In Broadcasting Free Winter Performances.

By ROBERT MACK
(By the Consolidated Press. Copyright, 1926, by the Cincinnati Times-Star.)

WASHINGTON, September 2—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of "good-will advertisers."

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from Station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the instalation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge or, when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

POST
DENVER, COLO.

SEP 2 - 1926

NOTED SYMPHONY ORCHESTRAS WILL PLAY OVER RADIO

Profitable Field Is Found By Leading Musical Organizations.

(By ROBERT MACK.)
(Denver Post Leased Wire.)
(Copyright, 1926, Consolidated Press Assn.)

Washington, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast thru a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard thru the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations. It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for an additional financial remuneration.

The thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth links to the mammoth broadcasting chain that will distribute the entertainment program at the third annual radio industries banquet, were added today by the inclusion of stations WHO, Des Moines, and 6XBR, the Warner Brothers portable broadcaster, to the network. The number of stations that will participate in the broadcast now exceeds by six the record tieup of the past. Plans are also being considered for the rebroadcasting of the program, if possible, by the use of short waves on the Pacific coast. So far the Des Moines station is the farthest western link added to the chain. The program will be offered the night of Sept. 15.

NEWS
CLEVELAND, OHIO

SEP 3 - 1926

23

ORCHESTRAS TO PLAY FOR RADIO

Organizations, Hitherto Shy of Ether, Find Profit and Larger Audiences.

By Robert Mack.
Copyright, 1926.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The two last organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or in the auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

Offer Educational Program.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

Philharmonic to Broadcast.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge or when possible for additional financial remuneration.

The thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth links to the mammoth broadcasting chain that will distribute the entertainment program at the third annual radio industries banquet were added today by the inclusion of stations WHO, Des Moines, and 6XBR, the Warner Brothers portable broadcaster. The number of stations that will participate in the broadcast now exceeds by six the record of the past. Plans are also being considered for the rebroadcasting of the program, if possible, by the use of short waves on the Pacific coast. So far the Des Moines station is the farthest western link added to the chain. The program will be offered the night of September 15.

"SPEEDER" GETS 5 DAYS

TO WIRELESS LURE

Leading Orchestras of U. S. Engaged for Series of Concerts for Coming Season.

(Special to the Dispatch.)
(Copyright, 1926, by Consolidated Press Association.)

Washington, Sept. 3.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for a series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

Directed by Damrosch.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances.

Arrangement" with Any Which Statement Does revious One.

les C. Pyle, sports promoter, who r, under contract to play a series no "business arrangement" with up team.

Pyle Makes Statement.

Pyle's admission that he had not proached any member of the team as made here today after William Tilden, 2d, Vincent Richards, Wil-es in interpretation of literature and associated subjects

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

SEP 4 – 1926

Plan Concerts by Symphonies

Three Big Orchestras Will Broadcast for Advertisers

Washington — The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric net work during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK SUN

SEP 4 1926

Symphony Groups to Play for Radio

THE leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The two latter organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration for their broadcast performances by playing under the banner of good will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, which will play under the direction of Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations through the country are considering plans for the broadcasting of several of their winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
DETROIT, MICH.

SEP 5 1926

New York Orchestra to Be Heard on W W J

Other Eastern Organizations Arranging Radio Programs Include the Philharmonic and the Boston Groups.

By ROBERT MACK.

(Copyright 1926, Consolidated Press Assn.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network, have consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

'Love's Old Sweet Song' On Tonight's Program

FOR his program through Station WWJ tonight Allen McQuhae has chosen the following compositions in which he will be assisted by an orchestra conducted by Nicolai Berezowsky.

Opening Air.
"Love's Old Sweet Song"..Molloy
"Ah My Beloved".....Stickles
Overture, "Stradella".....Flotow
"Bonnie Mary Argyle.....Nelson
"Meeting of the Waters".....
..... Weatherly
"Nirvana" ..... Adams
"Now the Day Is Over"...Barnby

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

SEP 5 1926

ORCHESTRAS FIND PROFIT ON RADIO

Three Big Organizations Are Already Lined Up For Coming Season

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2. — Copyright, 1926.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming Winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for the concerts.

The New York Philharmonic services, whose Summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the Summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the Winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of Winter performance.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NORWICH CONN.

ISSUE OF
SEP 6 [illegible]

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO HAVE BIG RADIO AUDIENCE

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience, aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man.

Boston Symphony to Be Heard Over RCA Chain

Concerts Broadcast Last Season Through WEEI Are Transferred to WBZ and Associated Stations

The world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest gathering in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on Oct. 9. The entire twenty-four concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful station of WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man. The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are: Oct. 9, 16, 23 and Nov. 13 and 20· Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series o

Transcript Sept 7

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 5 1926

SYMPHONIES IN LINE FOR RADIO

Once Unfriendly Orchestras Find Field Profitable for Concerts.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for seriesof radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters and it is understood will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation—General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphone for the winter concerts which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances.

(Copyright, 1926)

Station WBZ to Radiocast All Symphony

Monitor — Sept 7

Each Saturday Night Concert to Benefit Wide Group of Listeners

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens Saturday evening, October 9, the largest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air into thousands of homes.

Westinghouse Station WBZ will radiocast the entire 24 concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi River, while many further west will also be in a position to hear the concert.

Mr. Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the orchestra, will sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for opening the Symphony season. He restricted his European activities this suminer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in northern France.

W. S. Quniby, Boston business man, who last season sponsored the radiocasting of Symphony, is likewise responsible for putting the concerts on the air this season. The dates of the radiocasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra programs through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov. 13 and 20, Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25, Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb. 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

WBZ TO BROADCAST BOSTON SYMPHONY

Herald — Sept 7

Entire Series "to Go on Air," Starting Oct. 9

Continuing the plan inaugurated last season in January, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its season here on the evening of Oct. 9, the concerts will again go "on the air" through Westinghouse station WBZ, according to announcement made yesterday through officials of the station by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of the concerts.

In his talk to the radio audience listening in on the final "Pop" broadcast last July, Mr. Quinby expressed hope that both Symphony and Pop broadcasts would be continued another season, and in the statement issued yesterday said this wish had been gratified and that he and his associates were very glad to be able to provide the radio audience with another season of symphony.

Westinghouse station WBZ will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river, while many farther west will also be in a position to hear the concert.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains in northern France.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16th, 23d and 30th, Nov. 13 and 20th, Dec. 4, 11th, 18th and 25th, Jan. 1, 15th, 22d and 29th, Feb. 12, 19th and 26th, March 5, 19th and 26th, April 2, 16th, 23d and 30th.

MILLIONS WILL HEAR SYMPHONY

Post — Sept 7

Concerts Broadcast From WBZ, WJZ, WGY and WRC

(AP)—The world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest gathering in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

TO THE MISSISSIPPI

The powerful stations of WJZ, New York, WGY Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23, and 30 Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23, and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers with regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine and Northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

SEP 4 – 1926

Plan Concerts by Symphonies

Three Big Orchestras Will Broadcast for Advertisers

Washington — The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric net work during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK SUN

SEP 4 1926

Symphony Groups to Play for Radio

THE leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The two latter organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration for their broadcast performances by playing under the banner of good will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, which will play under the direction of Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations through the country are considering plans for the broadcasting of several of their winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
DETROIT, MICH.

SEP 5 1926

New York Orchestra to Be Heard on W W J

Other Eastern Organizations Arranging Radio Programs Include the Philharmonic and the Boston Groups.

By ROBERT MACK.

(Copyright 1926, Consolidated Press Assn.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network, have consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

'Love's Old Sweet Song' On Tonight's Program

FOR his program through Station WWJ tonight Allen McQuhae has chosen the following compositions in which he will be assisted by an orchestra conducted by Nicolai Berezowsky.

Opening Air.
"Love's Old Sweet Song"..Molloy
"Ah My Beloved".....Stickles
Overture, "Stradella".....Flotow
"Bonnie Mary Argyle.....Nelson
"Meeting of the Waters".....
..... Weatherly
"Nirvana" ..... Adams
"Now the Day Is Over"...Barnby

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

SEP 5 1926

ORCHESTRAS FIND PROFIT ON RADIO

Three Big Organizations Are Already Lined Up For Coming Season

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2. — Copyright, 1926.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming Winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for the concerts.

The New York Philharmonic services, whose Summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the Summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the Winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of Winter performance.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 5 1926

SYMPHONIES IN LINE FOR RADIO

Once Unfriendly Orchestras Find Field Profitable for Concerts.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for seriesof radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters and it is understood will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation—General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphone for the winter concerts which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances.

(Copyright, 1926)

Station W B Z to Radiocast All Symphony

Monitor — Sept 7

Each Saturday Night Concert to Benefit Wide Group of Listeners

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens Saturday evening, October 9, the largest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air into thousands of homes.

Westinghouse Station WBZ will radiocast the entire 24 concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi River, while many further west will also be in a position to hear the concert.

Mr. Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the orchestra, will sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for opening the Symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in northern France.

W. S. Quniby, Boston business man, who last season sponsored the radiocasting of Symphony, is likewise responsible for putting the concerts on the air this season. The dates of the radiocasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra programs through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov. 13 and 20, Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25, Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb. 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

WBZ TO BROADCAST BOSTON SYMPHONY

Herald — Sept 7

Entire Series "to Go on Air," Starting Oct. 9

Continuing the plan inaugurated last season in January, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its season here on the evening of Oct. 9, the concerts will again go "on the air" through Westinghouse station WBZ, according to announcement made yesterday through officials of the station by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of the concerts.

In his talk to the radio audience listening in on the final "Pop" broadcast last July, Mr. Quinby expressed hope that both Symphony and Pop broadcasts would be continued another season, and in the statement issued yesterday said this wish had been gratified and that he and his associates were very glad to be able to provide the radio audience with another season of symphony.

Westinghouse station WBZ will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river, while many farther west will also be in a position to hear the concert.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains in northern France.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16th, 23d and 30th, Nov. 13 and 20th, Dec. 4, 11th, 18th and 25th, Jan. 1, 15th, 22d and 29th, Feb. 12, 19th and 26th, March 5, 19th and 26th, April 2, 16th, 23d and 30th.

MILLIONS WILL HEAR SYMPHONY

Post — Sept 7

Concerts Broadcast From WBZ, WJZ, WGY and WRC

(AP)—The world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest gathering in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

TO THE MISSISSIPPI

The powerful stations of WJZ, New York, WGY Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23, and 30 Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23, and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers with regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine and Northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE NORWICH CONN.

ISSUE OF
SEP 6

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO HAVE BIG RADIO AUDIENCE

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience, aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man.

Boston Symphony to Be Heard Over RCA Chain

Concerts Broadcast Last Season Through WEEI Are Transferred to WBZ and Associated Stations

The world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest gathering in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on Oct. 9. The entire twenty-four concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful station of WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man. The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are: Oct. 9, 16, 23 and Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of

Transcript — Sept 7

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
MILWAUKEE, WIS.

SEP 4 – 1926

Plan Concerts by Symphonies

Three Big Orchestras Will Broadcast for Advertisers

Washington — The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of goodwill advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric net work during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations. It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are [illegible] plans for the broadcast- performances, either [illegible] possible, for

SEP 4 1926

[illegible]

THE leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The two latter organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration for their broadcast performances by playing under the banner of good will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, which will play under the direction of Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations through the country are considering plans for the broadcasting of several of their winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
DETROIT, MICH.

SEP 5 1926

New York Orchestra to Be Heard on W W J

Other Eastern Organizations Arranging Radio Programs Include the Philharmonic and the Boston Groups.

By ROBERT MACK.

(Copyright 1926, Consolidated Press Assn.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of goodwill advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network, have consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances, either free of charge, or when possible, for additional financial remuneration.

'Love's Old Sweet Song' On Tonight's Program

FOR his program through Station WWJ tonight Allen McQuhae has chosen the following compositions in which he will be assisted by an orchestra conducted by Nicolai Berezowsky.

Opening Air.
"Love's Old Sweet Song"..Molloy
"Ah My Beloved".....Stickles
Overture, "Stradella".....Flotow
"Bonnie Mary Argyle.....Nelson
"Meeting of the Waters".....
..... Weatherly
"Nirvana" ..... Adams
"Now the Day Is Over"...Barnby

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

SEP 5 1926

ORCHESTRAS FIND PROFIT ON RADIO

Three Big Organizations Are Already Lined Up For Coming Season

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2. — Copyright, 1926.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming Winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of goodwill advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ, and other Eastern broadcasters, and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for the concerts.

The New York Philharmonic services, whose Summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation-General Electric network during the Summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the Winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of Winter performance.

[illegible]

FIRST RADIO [illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE NORWICH CONN.

ISSUE OF
SEP 6 [illegible]

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO HAVE BIG RADIO AUDIENCE

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience, aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man.

Boston Symphony to Be Heard Over RCA Chain

Concerts Broadcast Last Season Through WEEI Are Transferred to WBZ and Associated Stations

The world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest gathering in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on Oct. 9. The entire twenty-four concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful station of WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man. The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are: Oct. 9, 16, 23 and Nov. 13 and 20· Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series o[illegible]

Transcript Sept 7

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 5 1926

SYMPHONIES IN LINE FOR RADIO

Once Unfriendly Orchestras Find Field Profitable for Concerts.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The leading symphony orchestras of the country at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for seriesof radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations, in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of good-will advertisers.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a Chicago manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other Eastern broadcasters and it is understood will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic Society, whose summer concerts were heard through the Radio Corporation—General Electric network during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphone for the winter concerts which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations.

It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances.

(Copyright, 1926)

Station W B Z to Radiocast All Symphony

Monitor Sept 7

Each Saturday Night Concert to Benefit Wide Group of Listeners

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens Saturday evening, October 9, the largest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air into thousands of homes

Westinghouse Station WBZ will radiocast the entire 24 concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi River, while many further west will also be in a position to hear the concert.

Mr. Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the orchestra, will sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for opening the Symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in northern France.

W. S. Quniby, Boston business man, who last season sponsored the radiocasting of Symphony, is likewise responsible for putting the concerts on the air this season. The dates of the radiocasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra programs through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov. 13 and 20, Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25, Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb. 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

WBZ TO BROADCAST BOSTON SYMPHONY

Herald Sept 7

Entire Series "to Go on Air," Starting Oct. 9

Continuing the plan inaugurated last season in January, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its season here on the evening of Oct. 9, the concerts will again go "on the air" through Westinghouse station WBZ, according to announcement made yesterday through officials of the station by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of the concerts.

In his talk to the radio audience listening in on the final "Pop" broadcast last July, Mr. Quinby expressed hope that both Symphony and Pop broadcasts would be continued another season, and in the statement issued yesterday said this wish had been gratified and that he and his associates were very glad to be able to provide the radio audience with another season of symphony.

Westinghouse station WBZ will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river, while many farther west will also be in a position to hear the concert.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains in northern France.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16th, 23d and 30th, Nov. 13 and 20th, Dec. 4, 11th, 18th and 25th, Jan. 1, 15th, 22d and 29th, Feb. 12, 19th and 26th, March 5, 19th and 26th, April 2, 16th, 23d and 30th.

MILLIONS WILL HEAR SYMPHONY

Post Sept 7

Concerts Broadcast From WBZ, WJZ, WGY and WRC

(AP)—The world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest gathering in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

TO THE MISSISSIPPI

The powerful stations of WJZ, New York, WGY Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quimby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23, and 30 Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23, and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers with regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine and Northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
BULLETIN
SEP 7 1926

MILLIONS WILL HEAR BOSTON SYMPHONY

Entire 24 Concerts to be Broadcast by WBZ, Westinghouse.

Boston, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse, station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it also was disclosed to-day in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30; Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bains and in Northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM AUGUSTA, ME.
JOURNAL
SEP 7 1926

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Play Over Radio Oct. 9th

Boston, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful stations of WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23, and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on September 21, to prepare an opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new compositions, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains and in northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
FREE PRESS
BURLINGTON, VT.
SEP 7 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO BROADCAST CONCERTS

BOSTON, Sept. 6. (AP)—The world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on October 9th. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ.

The powerful stations of WJZ New York; WGY Schenectady, and WRC, Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Missouri river while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston businessman.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23, and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22, and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 6, 8 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on September 21 to prepare for the opening of the symphony.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
TELEGRAM
SEP 7 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO BE HEARD OVER RADIO

Entire 24 Concerts of 107 Artists to Be Broadcast by Station WBZ.

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—(AP) The Boston symphony orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Station WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BUFFALO, N. Y.
SEP 7 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO GIVE RADIO CONCERTS

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 6 (AP).—The Boston Symphony orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23, 30.

SARATOGA, N. Y.
SARATOGIAN

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS WILL BE BROADCAST

BOSTON, Sept. 7. (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 7. (AP)—Springfield's first real radio romance will beb rought to a happy conclusion Saturday when W. Gordon Swan announcer for WBZ, will take for his bride Miss Helen L. Kyle of Waterville, Maine, who admits she met the young announcer "over the air."

Pleased by his announcements, Miss Kyle sent messages saying so, and eventually became acquainted with him in person as the result of answers to those messages.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.
SEP 7

SYMPHONY CONCERTS WILL BE BROADCAST

Programmes Will Be Heard as Far West as Mississippi River.

(By the Associated Press.)

The world famous Boston Symphony orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct. 9 The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ

The powerful stations of WJZ, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed yesterday in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far West as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther West will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During the season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are: Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov. 13 and 20, Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25, Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb. 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26. April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers with regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baines and in northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 7 1926

SYMPHONY BROADCASTING

So enthusiastic was the welcome accorded the broadcasting of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra last winter that we are promised, for the coming season, the whole series of twenty-four concerts from Station WBZ and associated stations. This means that, almost every Saturday evening from October to April, inclusive, millions of listeners in the eastern part of the United States will be enabled to tune in on the performances of the country's finest musical organization.

We cannot think of any greater contribution to the culture of America than this magnificent gift of Mr. W. S. Quinby. It is significant, too, that the culture of America should be ready to receive such a gift. Before the advent of the radio, symphony music was the possession of the few, and only the few professed to understand or enjoy it. Now, in the shrewd judgment of some of our largest broadcasters, the country will not only accept but appreciate this most intellectual form of musical art.

We believe that they are not mistaken in their judgment. The taste of radio listeners has steadily improved. Wearied by the repetition of the quickly hackneyed favorites of so-called "popular music," it turns gladly to the inexhaustible riches of the masters interpreted by the magic of Serge Koussevitsky and his admirable organization. Perhaps the radio public will not, in general, grasp the whole beauty and meaning of symphony music, but with the weekly hearing of such music there cannot but follow a fuller understanding and appreciation.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PRESS-HERALD
PORTLAND, ME.
SEP 7 - 1926

Hub Symphony Concerts To Be Broadcast Through Four Stations

Remote Control From WBZ Will Bring Music To Millions

Serge Koussevitzky

Boston, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ.

Station WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of S. S. Quimby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ, are October, 9, 16, 23, and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19, and 26; March 5, 19, and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on September 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baines and in northern France.

25

THIS CLIPPING FROM
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
BULLETIN

SEP 7 1926

MILLIONS WILL HEAR BOSTON SYMPHONY

Entire 24 Concerts to be Broadcast by WBZ, Westinghouse.

Boston, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse, station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it also was disclosed to-day in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30; Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bains and in Northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM AUGUSTA, ME.
JOURNAL

SEP 7 1926

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Play Over Radio Oct. 9th

Boston, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The world-famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful stations of WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year the concerts will be given to the audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23, and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on September 21, to prepare an opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new compositions, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains and in northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
FREE PRESS
BURLINGTON, VT.

SEP 7 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO BROADCAST CONCERTS

BOSTON, Sept. 6. (AP)—The world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on October 9th. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ.

The powerful stations of WJZ New York; WGY Schenectady, and WRC, Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Missouri river while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business-man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23, and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22, and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 6, 8 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on September 21 to prepare for the opening of the symphony.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
TELEGRAM
SEP 7 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO BE HEARD OVER RADIO

Entire 24 Concerts of 107 Artists to Be Broadcast by Station WBZ.

BOSTON, Sept. 6.—(AP) The Boston symphony orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Station WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

[illegible] millions, when its 46th season opens October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23, 30.

SARATOGA, N. Y.
SARATOGIAN

SEP

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS WILL BE BROADCAST

BOSTON, Sept. 7. (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 7. (AP)—Springfield's first real radio romance will beb rought to a happy conclusion Saturday when W. Gordon Swan announcer for WBZ, will take for his bride Miss Helen L. Kyle of Waterville, Maine, who admits she met the young announcer "over the air."

Pleased by his announcements, Miss Kyle sent messages saying so, and eventually became acquainted with him in person as the result of answers to those messages.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.

SEP 7 [illegible]

SYMPHONY CONCERTS WILL BE BROADCAST

Programmes Will Be Heard as Far West as Mississippi River.

(By the Associated Press.)

The world famous Boston Symphony orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct. 9 The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ

The powerful stations of WJZ, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed yesterday in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far West as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther West will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During the season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are: Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov. 13 and 20, Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25, Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb. 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26. April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers with regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baines and in northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 7 1926

SYMPHONY BROADCASTING

So enthusiastic was the welcome accorded the broadcasting of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra last winter that we are promised, for the coming season, the whole series of twenty-four concerts from Station WBZ and associated stations. This means that, almost every Saturday evening from October to April, inclusive, millions of listeners in the eastern part of the United States will be enabled to tune in on the performances of the country's finest musical organization.

We cannot think of any greater contribution to the culture of America than this magnificent gift of Mr. W. S. Quinby. It is significant, too, that the culture of America should be ready to receive such a gift. Before the advent of the radio, symphony music was the possession of the few, and only the few professed to understand or enjoy it. Now, in the shrewd judgment of some of our largest broadcasters, the country will not only accept but appreciate this most intellectual form of musical art.

We believe that they are not mistaken in their judgment. The taste of radio listeners has steadily improved. Wearied by the repetition of the quickly hackneyed favorites of so-called "popular music," it turns gladly to the inexhaustible riches of the masters interpreted by the magic of Serge Koussevitsky and his admirable organization. Perhaps the radio public will not, in general, grasp the whole beauty and meaning of symphony music, but with the weekly hearing of such music there cannot but follow a fuller understanding and appreciation.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PRESS-HERALD
PORTLAND, ME.

SEP 7 - 1926

Hub Symphony Concerts To Be Broadcast Through Four Stations

Remote Control From WBZ Will Bring Music To Millions

Serge Koussevitzky

Boston, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ.

Station WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of S. S. Quimby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ, are October, 9, 16, 23, and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1. 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19, and 26; March 5, 19, and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on September 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baines and in northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 7 1926

MILLIONS TO HEAR BOSTON SYMPHONY

Entire 24 Concerts, Starting on October 9, to Be Broadcast by WBZ, Westinghouse.

KOUSSEVITZKY TO DIRECT

Three Other Stations to Tie in for Opening of Orchestra Season, Extending Field Far to South and West

Boston, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it also was disclosed to-day in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30; Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bains and in Northern France.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS TO BE BROADCAST

Globe — Sept 7

Available as Far West as Mississippi River

W. S. Quinby Makes It Possible to Enjoy Splendid Music

(By the Associated Press)

The world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful stations of WJZ, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed yesterday in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far West as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther West will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During the season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are: Oct 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov 13 and 20, Dec 4, 11, 18 and 25, Jan 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this Summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers with regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine and in Northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LOWELL MASS.
COURIER-CITIZEN

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Play to Millions Opening Night

BOSTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audiences by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30; Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains and in northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS TO BE BROADCAST BY WBZ

Boston, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audinece aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussvitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghorse Station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

SEP 7

Boston Symphony To Broadcast Program

BOSTON, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disilosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
FALL RIVER, MASS.

SEP 8

proud of its representative.

The Boston Symphony orchestra will this season play to the largest audience in its history. The entire 24 concerts beginning Oct. 9, will be broadcast through WBZ. WJZ, WGY and WRC will also tie in with WBZ. The concerts will be directed by Koussevitzky.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BANGOR, ME.

SEP 7 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO PLAY TO GREAT AUDIENCE OCT. 9

Millions to Hear Famous Orchestra Over Radio on Opening of its Season.

BOSTON, Sept. 6—(AP)—The world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful stations of WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night it was also disclosed today in the announcement of G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ, are October 9, 16, 23 and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on September 21, to prepare for the

THIS CLIPPING FROM STAR
HUDSON, N. Y.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO GIVE SERIES OF CONCERTS

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast by WGY on Saturday evening, during October, November and December, in co-operation with WBZ of Springfield and WJZ of New York. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, October 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are October 16 and 23, November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM HOLYOKE
MASS.
Transcript
ISSUE OF
SEP 8 - 1926

WBZ TO BROADCAST BOSTON SYMPHONY

Entire Series "to Go on Air," Starting Oct. 9.

Continuing the plan inaugurated last season in January, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its season here on the evening of Oct. 9, the concerts will again go "on the air" through Westinghouse station WBZ, according to announcement made yesterday through officials of the station by W. S. Quimby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of the concerts.

In his talk to the radio audience listening in on the final "Pop" broadcast last July, Mr. Quimby expressed hope that both Symphony and Pop broadcasts would be continued another season, and in the statement issued yesterday said this wish had been gratified and that he and his associates were very glad to be able to provide the radio audience with another season of symphony.

Westinghouse station WBZ will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night ,thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi River, while many farther west will also be in a position to hear the concert.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the France on Sept. 21, to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aixles-Bains in northern France.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra programs through WBZ are: Oct 9, 16th, 23d and 30th Nov, 13 and 20th, Dec. 4, 11th, 18th and 25th, Jan. 1, 15th, 22d and 29th, Feb 12, 19th and 26th, March 5, 19th and 26th, April 2, 16th, 23d and 30th.

for storage purposes. The animals were lodged in the top floor, while the third floor was converted into a storehouse for scenery and props.

Only five persons are known to have been in the upper floors of the building when the fire started, and of these all but one escaped. He was Tom Collins, animal trainer and owner of two pet kangaroos, known on the Keith and other vaudeville circuits as the "Box-

THIS CLIPPING FROM CAMDEN, N. J.

SEP 9 1926

Boston Symphony Plans to Broadcast All Its Concerts

24 Programs Will Be Heard by Radio Public During Coming Winter

The entire season of 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast this year. The series opens October 9 and will be conducted by Serge Koussevitsky. There are 107 men in the orchestra.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, and April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, the Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France, September 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season.

He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix les-Bains and in Northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

SEP 9 - 1926

Orchestra and Radio

A vastly larger radio audience than has yet had the privilege of listening to the Boston concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra is made certain in the announcement that the programs of the entire Boston series will be broadcast the coming season through WBZ station of this city. For the opening concert on October 9 powerful stations at Schenectady, New York and Washington will be tied in with WBZ, with the result that the performances under Mr Koussevitzky's direction will be heard by a substantial portion of radio listeners in the East.

Multiplication of the orchestra's invisible audience will not diminish the audience physically present in Symphony hall. That can seldom, if ever, be a consequence of radio broadcasting, even though there are occasions when a radio listener may have a real advantage over many listeners actually present. Even at best the radio does not afford a self-complete instrumentality, save, perhaps, for purposes of conveying information.

In regard to the broadcasting of arguments it has been contended that the radio compels a speaker to rely in greater degree upon logic than would be necessary if he could count on the influence of his own personality and the possible aid of mass enthusiasm. But since personality properly enters into the impression a speaker makes, it might be argued that he should not be deprived of the benefit when his personality is strong and that the public should not lack the means of rating him accurately if his personality is weak. But as some persons of strong personality are ineffectual as orators, the circumstances of radio communication may at times be an all-round advantage. Entertainers who have built up a radio reputation are at least as well known by their public as favorites of the film.

To judge from a current discussion the radio audience of the Boston Symphony orchestra will be free from some handicaps which interfere with the appreciation of music in the larger cities. In a recent issue of the Nation, B. H. Haggin asserts that the effect an individual conductor makes on the New York public depends on the reviewers. "Let them lose their heads and the 'public will lose theirs. The report 'of phenomenal excellence sends the 'public scampering for tickets. When 'these are all gone, there is a new 'reason for trying to get in: the fact 'that one can't. Reports of inaccessibility attract the persons who assume that what is fought for is 'worth fighting for."

Mr Haggin has not gone unchallenged. It is clear that he fails to give an exhaustive review of the New York situation, which is complicated by the fact that in a single season the Philharmonic orchestra is led successively by three conductors, each with his own following and to some extent possessing a special appeal on account of race or nationality. The orchestra tends to be regarded less as a great musical institution than as an instrument on which different conductors can play according to their ideas, genius and degrees of artistic sincerity. Since each conductor must choose his own programs there can be no organic program-making covering a whole season. It is natural under these circumstances that interest in each conductor as a star performer should be accentuated. The veteran critic, W. J. Henderson, complained last season that the methods of big business were being applied in the orchestral world and that the extraneous excitement attending orchestral concerts in New York approximated that which has always attended the opera.

How free from all these distractions the Boston Symphony's radio listener will be! He will not see the conductor or be concerned about the way that functionary wears his clothes. Gestures, no matter how theatrical, will be assayed only in the music that they aid in eliciting from the musicians' instruments. The excitement of the concert hall will not be communicated to the quiet of the home. The radio listener may wonder if he is missing some of the real "fun." But that "fun" impoverishes, not enhances, appreciation of music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 7 1926

MILLIONS TO HEAR BOSTON SYMPHONY

Entire 24 Concerts, Starting on October 9, to Be Broadcast by WBZ, Westinghouse.

KOUSSEVITZKY TO DIRECT

Three Other Stations to Tie in for Opening of Orchestra Season, Extending Field Far to South and West

Boston, Sept. 6.—(AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it also was disclosed to-day in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30; Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bains and in Northern France.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS TO BE BROADCAST

Globe Sept 7

Available as Far West as Mississippi River

W. S. Quinby Makes It Possible to Enjoy Splendid Music

(By the Associated Press)

The world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful stations of WJZ, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed yesterday in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far West as the Mississippi River, while many listeners still farther West will also be in a position to hear the broadcast.

During the season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are: Oct 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov 13 and 20, Dec 4, 11, 18 and 25, Jan 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept 21, to prepare for the opening of the season. He restricted his European activities this Summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers with regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine and in Northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LOWELL MASS.
COURIER-CITIZEN

Boston Symphony Orchestra to Play to Millions Opening Night

BOSTON, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens on Oct. 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audiences by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30; Nov. 13 and 20; Dec. 4, 11, 18 and 25; Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29; Feb. 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on Sept. 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains and in northern France.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.

SEP by H [illegible]

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS TO BE BROADCAST BY WBZ

Boston, Sept. 6 (AP)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audinece aggregating millions, when its 46th season opens October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussvitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghorse Station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

SEP 7 1926

Boston Symphony To Broadcast Program

BOSTON, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens October 9. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disilosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
FALL RIVER, MASS.

SEP 8 - 1926

proud of its representatives.

The Boston Symphony orchestra will this season play to the largest audience in its history. The entire 24 concerts beginning Oct. 9, will be broadcast through WBZ. WJZ, WGY and WRC will also tie in with WBZ. The concerts will be directed by Koussevitzky.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BANGOR, ME.

SEP 7 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO PLAY TO GREAT AUDIENCE OCT. 9

Millions to Hear Famous Orchestra Over Radio on Opening of its Season.

BOSTON, Sept. 6—(AP)—The world famous Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire 24 concerts of the 107 musicians, directed by Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

The powerful stations of WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night it was also disclosed today in the announcement of G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ, are October 9, 16, 23 and 30; November 13 and 20; December 4, 11, 18 and 25; January 1, 15, 22 and 29; February 12, 19 and 26; March 5, 19 and 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France on September 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bainecand in northern France

HOLYOKE
MASS.
Transcript
ISSUE OF
SEP 8 - 1926

WBZ TO BROADCAST BOSTON SYMPHONY

Entire Series "to Go on Air," Starting Oct. 9.

Continuing the plan inaugurated last season in January, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its season here on the evening of Oct. 9, the concerts will again go "on the air" through Westinghouse station WBZ, according to announcement made yesterday through officials of the station by W. S. Quimby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of the concerts.

In his talk to the radio audience listening in on the final "Pop" broadcast last July, Mr. Quimby expressed hope that both Symphony and Pop broadcasts would be continued another season, and in the statement issued yesterday said this wish had been gratified and that he and his associates were very glad to be able to provide the radio audience with another season of symphony.

Westinghouse station WBZ will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night ,thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi River, while many farther west will also be in a position to hear the concert.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the France on Sept. 21, to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aixles-Bains in northern France.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra programs through WBZ are: Oct. 9, 16th, 23d and 30th Nov. 13 and 20th, Dec. 4, 11th, 18th and 25th. Jan. 1, 15th, 22d and 29th. Feb 12, 19th and 26th. March 5, 19th and 26th, April 2, 16th, 23d and 30th.

for storage purposes. The animals were lodged in the top floor, while the third floor was converted into a storehouse for scenery and props.

Only five persons are known to have been in the upper floors of the building when the fire started, and of these all but one escaped. He was Tom Collins, animal trainer and owner of two pet kangaroos, known on the Keith and other vaudeville circuits as the "Boxing Kangaroos."

Firemen found Collins' body in the wreckage, one charred arm still clasped about the body of a dead kangaroo. Apparently he had lost his own life trying to save his pets.

Mme. Adelaide Herman, widow of the magician, came to the fire in a taxicab. When she arrived the blaze was at its height.

24 ... Be Heard ...lio Public During Coming Winter

The entire season of 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast this year. The series opens October 9 and will be conducted by Serge Koussevitsky. There are 107 men in the orchestra.

Stations WJZ, New York: WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed today in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station. Thus, this concert will be made available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard as far west as the Mississippi river, while many listeners still farther west will also be in a position to hear the broadcast. During this season, as was the case with a series of broadcasts last year, the concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, and April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Koussevitzky, the Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the steamer France, September 21, to prepare for the opening of the symphony season.

He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conferences with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix les-Bains and in Northern France.

THE REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
SEP 9 - 1926

Orchestra and Radio

A vastly larger radio audience than has yet had the privilege of listening to the Boston concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra is made certain in the announcement that the programs of the entire Boston series will be broadcast the coming season through WBZ station of this city. For the opening concert on October 9 powerful stations at Schenectady, New York and Washington will be tied in with WBZ, with the result that the performances under Mr Koussevitzky's direction will be heard by a substantial portion of radio listeners in the East.

Multiplication of the orchestra's invisible audience will not diminish the audience physically present in Symphony hall. That can seldom, if ever, be a consequence of radio broadcasting, even though there are occasions when a radio listener may have a real advantage over many listeners actually present. Even at best the radio does not afford a self-complete instrumentality, save, perhaps, for purposes of conveying information.

In regard to the broadcasting of arguments it has been contended that the radio compels a speaker to rely in greater degree upon logic than would be necessary if he could count on the influence of his own personality and the possible aid of mass enthusiasm. But since personality properly enters into the impression a speaker makes, it might be argued that he should not be deprived of the benefit when his personality is strong and that the public should not lack the means of rating him accurately if his personality is weak. But as some persons of strong personality are ineffectual as orators, the circumstances of radio communication may at times be an all-round advantage. Entertainers who have built up a radio reputation are at least as well known by their public as favorites of the film.

To judge from a current discussion the radio audience of the Boston Symphony orchestra will be free from some handicaps which interfere with the appreciation of music in the larger cities. In a recent issue of the Nation, B. H. Haggin asserts that the effect an individual conductor makes on the New York public depends on the reviewers. "Let them lose their heads and the 'public will lose theirs. The report 'of phenomenal excellence sends the 'public scampering for tickets. When 'these are all gone, there is a new 'reason for trying to get in: the fact 'that one can't. Reports of inaccessibility attract the persons who assume that what is fought for is 'worth fighting for."

Mr Haggin has not gone unchallenged. It is clear that he fails to ive an exhaustive review of the ew York situation, which is complicated by the fact that in a single season the Philharmonic orchestra is led successively by three conductors, each with his own following and to some extent possessing a special appeal on account of race or nationality. The orchestra tends to be regarded less as a great musical institution than as an instrument on which different conductors can play according to their ideas, genius and degrees of artistic sincerity. Since each conductor must choose his own programs there can be no organic program-making covering a whole season. It is natural under these circumstances that interest in each conductor as a star performer should be accentuated. The veteran critic, W. J. Henderson, complained last season that the methods of big business were being applied in the orchestral world and that the extraneous excitement attending orchestral concerts in New York approximated that which has always attended the opera.

How free from all these distractions the Boston Symphony's radio listener will be! He will not see the conductor or be concerned about the way that functionary wears his clothes. Gestures, no matter how theatrical, will be assayed only in the music that they aid in eliciting from the musicians' instruments. The excitement of the concert hall will not be communicated to the quiet of the home. The radio listener may wonder if he is missing some of the real "fun." But that "fun" impoverishes, not enhances, appreciation of music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
DENVER, COLO.

SEP 8 - 1926

NEW RUSSIAN MUSIC REQUIRES TRAINED EAR FOR APPRECIATION

Solon Alberti, Celebrated Virtuoso, Declares Critics Called Compositions of Wagner and Mozart 'Noise' at First.

The latest Russian grand opera in Paris last July was noise, nothing but a combination of all noises, to the ear of such an expert as Solon Alberti, for years coach of Metropolitan Grand opera stars, and one of the greatest living pianists, who is in Denver en route to the Pacific coast.

"This does not mean that the latest Russion composition is not real music," said Alberti at the Brown Palace hotel, Wednesday. "It means that my ear and the ears of the skilled musicians who listened to the rendition and bissed, are not attuned to the combinations of notes synchronized by the Russian composer. When Hamslick, the great German critic first heard Wagner he wrote, 'Who is this upstart apostle of noise?' When I first heard Richard Strauss, his music was all Greek to my ear. Now he is one of my favorites. Early in his career Mozart was branded a Bolshevik in music. The human ear has to be attuned to combinations in musical notes.

FAILURE SPLITS UP ORCHESTRA.

"On this occasion in Paris the Russian opera was directed by Kussewitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, a master of his art. With me, in the audience, sat Rudolf Ganz, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra. The theme of the Russian composer was based on a poem of life from birth to death. The audience was composed of musicians and musical critics. They hissed the noise. Ganz contributed a distinct cuckoo note and his wife was shocked. He explained that the cuckoo was the only noise not represented in the alleged music. Finally Kussewitzky quit the stage and the orchestra broke up.

"Yet, I venture to predict that when we become accustomed to this modern Russian music we will like it and the composition will be accepted as a classic. The human ear, no matter how highly trained, has to be educated all over again when it encounters new combinations of notes."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EVE. UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

SEP 11 1926

Symphony Concerts to Cover Country in Enlarged Chain

Scope of Plans Gives Wider Range for Broadcasting Programs of Boston Organization.

Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations covering the Nation will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 46th season, Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed a chain including WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady, and WRC at Washington. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receiving sets located still farther west will be in a position to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, and who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23; Nov. 20; Dec. 4, 11 and 25; Jan. 22 and 29; Feb. 19 and 26; March 5; April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ only. The dates of these programs are Oct. 30, Nov. 13, Dec. 18, Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 12, March 19 and 26 and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LOWELL MASS.
COURIER-CITIZEN

SEP 1 ? 1926

RADIO TASTES.

The news that all the 24 concerts to be given this season by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcasted--virtually to all properly attuned ears east of the Mississippi—raises the hope that with the lapse of time a more general attention will be paid to the improvement of the programs offered "on the air." It is notorious that at present there is more dreary twaddle than anything else made available by the score or so of prominent broadcasting stations; and to a degree this is inevitable because of that ancient demand that one "give the people what they think they want." The question is mainly whether or not they can be made to think they want something better worth their while.

An experiment last year, when a dozen or so of the Boston concerts were sent out by radio on Saturday nights, was encouraging. It is, however, quite true that music such as an organization like this plays is often much beyond the natural tastes of an unmusical person; and if the radio stations of the country attempted to purvey nothing of a lower grade it is entirely probable that we should find a bloodless revolution promoted by the millions who want programs they can follow with unfeigned delight. Yet the truth is that those same millions, although they don't know it, would appreciate good music if they ever permitted themselves to hear it and didn't assume off-hand that of course they'd be bored. This generous patron who enables the broadcasting of Boston's Saturday night concerts may well lead many thousands of people to wonder why they ever thought so disparagingly of their own musical appreciations. Not all Symphony programs are "dull stuff" from the limited viewpoint of the ordinary listener—although sometimes one must admit that only musicians can be expected to listen with a maximum of pleasure.

Don't write off all such music as "high-brow" and therefore beyond

NEW YORK AMERICAN

SEP 11 1926

Symphony Plans Air Programme

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—It was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be broadcast through a network of the most powerful radio stations in the country.

The entire series of twenty-four evening concerts by this world famous organization of 107 musicians, directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed fifteen of the symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EVE. UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

SEP 8 - 1926

The Symphony Broadcasts

Listeners-in who heard the programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast last spring through the generosity of Mr. W. S. Quimby of Boston pleasurably anticipate the broadcasting of the Saturday evening concerts of this organization which is announced by WBZ as a weekly feature next winter. Mr. Quimby is again the donor of the concerts to the radio public, and his generosity may rightfully be classed as a public benefaction. The radio has given him the opportunity to inaugurate a new form of philanthropy which should prove decidedly worth while.

The Boston Symphony broadcasts should establish new standards in a rapidly expanding field. Symphony orchestras are not unfamiliar to listeners-in, and the Stadium concerts broadcast from New York during the summer are deservedly popular. But this is, we believe, the first time that the broadcasting of an entire symphony season by a first-class orchestra under its regular leader has been contemplated. If it is successful—and no pains should be spared to make it so—other orchestras may not be long in following suit. The broadcasting of programs of such orchestras as that in Philadelphia directed by Stokowski and the Chicago Symphony under Stock would be welcome additions to the radio symphony field.

Those who listen in to the Boston Symphony broadcasts may not always have an easy time of it. The high artistic standards of the organization are axiomatic. M. Koussevitzky, furthermore, is a conductor of exacting taste and of catholic predilections. His programs, particularly when he ranges the modern composers, as he frequently does, may not be the easiest. Certainly he will make no concessions to his radio audience, and those who switch from the dinner jazz recital to the symphony programs will need radically and swiftly to adjust their attitudes.

The broadcasts should not fail to be educating, and if receptivity is good they should prove artistically satisfactory. It is to be hoped that they justify the expectations of those who have offered them and those who have consented to them.

TRAVELER Sept. 11.

Boston Symphony Orchestra Season

The 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is to open in Symphony hall on Oct. 8. It will include the usual double series of 24 Friday afternoon and 24 Saturday evening concerts in Symphony hall, the series of five Monday evening concerts, and the series of five Tuesday afternoon concerts which are to be repeated. All available places for the larger series have been resubscribed. A few desirable season tickets are still to be had for the Monday and Tuesday series on application at Symphony hall.

Serge Koussevitsky is to sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for the season's opening. This will be the Russian conductor's third season in America. An extensive schedule of concerts will include a Beethoven festival in the spring.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 12 1926

Koussevitzky Returning

Serge Koussevitzky is to sail for America a week from Tuesday to prepare for the opening of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston on Oct. 8. This will be the Russian conductor's third season in America, and it will include the usual series of five concerts in this city, to be given at the Albee Theatre on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15. Twenty-four of the Boston concerts will be made available to a vast radio audience this season.

Koussevitzky restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains, and in northern France.

The prospects are of the finest for the coming Boston Symphony season, according to reports from Symphony Hall. There will be over 100 concerts, with a Beethoven festival in the spring. For the five series of 67 concerts in Greater Boston, and the double series in New York, there will probably be no season tickets available, all having been renewed or alloted to the waiting lists.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will visit the following cities: Providence, Montreal, Toronto, Buffalo, Rochester, Pittsburgh, New York, Brooklyn, Montclair, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington, Springfield, Plymouth, Hartford, New Haven, and under the auspices of Harvard, Smith and Wellesley at Cambridge, Northampton

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 14 1926

SYMPHONIES IN THE AIR

The announcement that the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have decided to broadcast all the regular concerts of that famous organization during the coming season will be welcomed in thousands of homes. The best interpretation of the best music will thus be brought to the hearing of a vast number of persons who have few opportunities to attend concerts of the highest quality.

The broadcasting of other symphony concerts in the past two years, notably those of the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Philharmonic Society, has proved that there is a widespread appreciation of the higher spots in radio entertainment. It was tested by the Boston orchestra last season with conspicuous success. The evident conclusion of the trustees is that it is altogether desirable to establish the microphone as a regular auxiliary instrument of the orchestra.

So a splendid feature is added to the radio programme of the season, one which will be awaited with eager anticipation. The Symphony trustees have taken an attitude in the matter that is wise as well as generous. Early fears felt by managers of amusement enterprises and by artists that the broadcasting of programmes would have a detrimental effect upon their business seem to have been allayed. Instead of diverting patronage it has been demonstrated that the radio stimulates interest and encourages a larger attendance. This is especially the case with the greater artists and the concerts of high grade. The idea that people will not go to a Boston Symphony concert if they can remain comfortably at home and hear it over the radio is a false assumption. On the contrary, a few radio receptions of this sort are likely to attract personal attendance by many who never before had heard a symphony concert. The broadcast programme is valuable as a stimulus to a wider appreciation of good music and to a more devoted patronage of the concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM LYNN, MASS.
TELEGRAM NEWS

27

SEP 1 1 1926

RADIO SEASON AT HAND

The thousands of radio fans of Greater Lynn are assured of plenty of high class music during the coming fall and winter. Recent announcement that the entire season's program of the Boston Symphony orchestra would be put on the air by the Springfield station was received with many expressions of gratification by music lovers all over the city.

And in addition to the presentation of the music of this magnificent musical organization there will be a series of concerts by New York's famous Philharmonic orchestra which will be broadcast through one of the Boston stations. One would not have to go much farther than a year to find those connected with musical organizations of the higher order ridiculing the prospects of ever presenting symphony music over the air.

Lynn is extremely fortunate in being located at just about the right distance from three big radio stations. If it were nearer much of the selectivity would be destroyed for a great many receivers. On the other hand if it were far removed, only the most costly and efficient of receivers would be able to adequately present the fine musical programs.

Lynn ought to be making preparations to put two or three good programs on the air through one of the Boston stations this winter. It has enough talent to make as good or better showing than many other cities which evidently have found it advantageous to occasionally get on the ether.

This city has had the pleasure of listening to an all-Lynn symphony orchestra on several occasions in the past few years and it has been generally accredited with doing a mighty fine piece of work. Why couldn't this organization be got together for a few rehearsals preparatory to sending out a program from one of the Boston stations. We believe it would "do itself proud."

What Lynn is doing and going to do could be interestingly and briefly told between the numbers.

GLOBE—SEPT 12, 19

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give its usual annual series again with Serge Koussevitzky as conductor. The 24 Saturday evening concerts will be broadcast through the powerful radio station WBZ and others, so that they may be heard throughout the Eastern United States.

All seats for the 24 Friday afternoons and 24 Saturday evenings have been subscribed for the season. The only exception is the 505 unreserved seats in the second balcony, to which admission is sold at the doors on Friday afternoons. The waiting line for these seats is likely to be long and patient.

For the five Monday evenings and the five Tuesday afternoons a few seats may still be had for the season. Those who wish a ticket are advised to apply at once, as the supply will pretty certainly be exhausted before the concerts begin.

There is a chance that a few tickets for the 10 Cambridge concerts, for which persons now connected with Harvard University have preference, may remain untaken. They were sold out last season before the concerts began.

Brilliant Symphony Season

Mr Koussevitzky is sailing for America on the France, Sept 21, to prepare for the opening of the Symphony season, Oct 8 and 9. It is largely due to his striking and vivid personality that the popular demand for Symphony tickets has become so overwhelming. The Friday afternoon series has been sold out in advance for many seasons past. But there have usually been a few tickets unsubscribed for other series.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and by the Radcliffe Choral Society, is to give a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis next March in commemoration of the centenary of the composer's death. The Symphony Or-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES

SEP 12 1926

SYMPHONIC CONCERTS—WJZ.

"The audience of WJZ is assured of one symphonic concert each Saturday night from Oct. 1 to April 15. Arrangements have been completed whereby the student concerts of the

New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard on alternate Saturday nights. Other classical music broadcasts will be booked from time to time to fill in weekday performances, and the Sunday evening broadcasts will adhere closely to the higher type of selections by symphonic groups."—C. B. Popenoe.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
DENVER, COLO.

SEP 8 - 1926

NEW RUSSIAN MUSIC REQUIRES TRAINED EAR FOR APPRECIATION

Solon Alberti, Celebrated Virtuoso, Declares Critics Called Compositions of Wagner and Mozart 'Noise' at First.

The latest Russian grand opera in Paris last July was noise, nothing but a combination of all noises, to the ear of such an expert as Solon Alberti, for years coach of Metropolitan Grand opera stars, and one of the greatest living pianists, who is in Denver en route to the Pacific coast.

"This does not mean that the latest Russion composition is not real music," said Alberti at the Brown Palace hotel, Wednesday. "It means that my ear and the ears of the skilled musicians who listened to the rendition and hissed, are not attuned to the combinations of notes synchronized by the Russian composer. When Hamslick, the great German critic first heard Wagner he wrote, 'Who is this upstart apostle of noise?' When I first heard Richard Strauss, his music was all Greek to my ear. Now he is one of my favorites. Early in his career Mozart was branded a Bolshevik in music. The human ear has to be attuned to combinations in musical notes.

FAILURE SPLITS UP ORCHESTRA.

"On this occasion in Paris the Russian opera was directed by Kussewitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, a master of his art. With me, in the audience, sat Rudolf Ganz, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra. The theme of the Russian composer was based on a poem of life from birth to death. The audience was composed of musicians and musical critics. They hissed the noise. Ganz contributed a distinct cuckoo note and his wife was shocked. He explained that the cuckoo was the only noise not represented in the alleged music. Finally Kussewitzky quit the stage and the orchestra broke up.

"Yet, I venture to predict that when we become accustomed to this modern Russian music we will like it and the composition will be accepted as a classic. The human ear, no matter how highly trained, has to be educated all over again when it encounters new combinations of notes."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EVE. UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

SEP 11 1926

Symphony Concerts to Cover Country in Enlarged Chain

Scope of Plans Gives Wider Range for Broadcasting Programs of Boston Organization.

Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations covering the Nation will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 48th season, Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed a chain including WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady, and WRC at Washington. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receiving sets located still farther west will be in a position to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, and who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23; Nov. 20; Dec. 4, 11 and 25; Jan. 22 and 29; Feb. 19 and 26; March 5; April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ only. The dates of these programs are Oct. 30, Nov. 13, Dec. 18, Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 12, March 19 and 26 and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LOWELL MASS.
COURIER-CITIZEN

SEP 1 1926

RADIO TASTES.

The news that all the 24 concerts to be given this season by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcasted--virtually to all properly attuned ears east of the Mississippi—raises the hope that with the lapse of time a more general attention will be paid to the improvement of the programs offered "on the air." It is notorious that at present there is more dreary twaddle than anything else made available by the score or so of prominent broadcasting stations; and to a degree this is inevitable because of that ancient demand that one "give the people what they think they want." The question is mainly whether or not they can be made to think they want something better worth their while.

An experiment last year, when a dozen or so of the Boston concerts were sent out by radio on Saturday nights, was encouraging. It is, however, quite true that music such as an organization like this plays is often much beyond the natural tastes of an unmusical person; and if the radio stations of the country attempted to purvey nothing of a lower grade it is entirely probable that we should find a bloodless revolution promoted by the millions who want programs they can follow with unfeigned delight. Yet the truth is that those same millions, although they don't know it, would appreciate good music if they ever permitted themselves to hear it and didn't assume off-hand that of course they'd be bored. This generous patron who enables the broadcasting of Boston's Saturday night concerts may well lead many thousands of people to wonder why they ever thought so disparagingly of their own musical appreciations. Not all Symphony programs are "dull stuff" from the limited viewpoint of the ordinary listener—although sometimes one must admit that only musicians can be expected to listen with a maximum of pleasure.

Don't write off all such music as "high-brow" and therefore beyond

NEW YORK AMERICAN

SEP 11 1926

Symphony Plans Air Programme

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—It was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be broadcast through a network of the most powerful radio stations in the country.

The entire series of twenty-four evening concerts by this world famous organization of 107 musicians, directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed fifteen of the symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EVE. UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

SEP 8 - 1926

The Symphony Broadcasts

Listeners-in who heard the programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast last spring through the generosity of Mr. W. S. Quimby of Boston pleasurably anticipate the broadcasting of the Saturday evening concerts of this organization which is announced by WBZ as a weekly feature next winter. Mr. Quimby is again the donor of the concerts to the radio public, and his generosity may rightfully be classed as a public benefaction. The radio has given him the opportunity to inaugurate a new form of philanthropy which should prove decidedly worth while.

The Boston Symphony broadcasts should establish new standards in a rapidly expanding field. Symphony orchestras are not unfamiliar to listeners-in, and the Stadium concerts broadcast from New York during the summer are deservedly popular. But this is, we believe, the first time that the broadcasting of an entire symphony season by a first-class orchestra under its regular leader has been contemplated. If it is successful—and no pains should be spared to make it so—other orchestras may not be long in following suit. The broadcasting of programs of such orchestras as that in Philadelphia directed by Stokowski and the Chicago Symphony under Stock would be welcome additions to the radio symphony field.

Those who listen in to the Boston Symphony broadcasts may not always have an easy time of it. The high artistic standards of the organization are axiomatic. M. Koussevitzky, furthermore, is a conductor of exacting taste and of catholic predilections. His programs, particularly when he ranges the modern composers, as he frequently does, may not be the easiest. Certainly he will make no concessions to his radio audience, and those who switch from the dinner jazz recital to the symphony programs will need radically and swiftly to adjust their attitudes.

The broadcasts should not fail to be educating, and if receptivity is good they should prove artistically satisfactory. It is to be hoped that they justify the expectations of those who have offered them and those who have consented to them.

TRAVELER Sept. 11.

Boston Symphony Orchestra Season

The 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is to open in Symphony hall on Oct. 8. It will include the usual double series of 24 Friday afternoon and 24 Saturday evening concerts in Symphony hall, the series of five Monday evening concerts, and the series of five Tuesday afternoon concerts which are to be repeated. All available places for the larger series have been resubscribed. A few desirable season tickets are still to be had for the Monday and Tuesday series on application at Symphony hall.

Serge Koussevitsky is to sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for the season's opening. This will be the Russian conductor's third season in America. An extensive schedule of concerts will include a Beethoven festival in the spring.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 12 1926

Koussevitzky Returning

Serge Koussevitzky is to sail for America a week from Tuesday to prepare for the opening of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston on Oct. 8. This will be the Russian conductor's third season in America, and it will include the usual series of five concerts in this city, to be given at the Albee Theatre on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15. Twenty-four of the Boston concerts will be made available to a vast radio audience this season.

Koussevitzky restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains, and in northern France.

The prospects are of the finest for the coming Boston Symphony season, according to reports from Symphony Hall. There will be over 100 concerts, with a Beethoven festival in the spring. For the five series of 67 concerts in Greater Boston, and the double series in New York, there will probably be no season tickets available, all having been renewed or alloted to the waiting lists.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will visit the following cities: Providence, Montreal, Toronto, Buffalo, Rochester, Pittsburgh, New York, Brooklyn, Montclair, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington, Springfield, Plymouth, Hartford, New Haven, and under the auspices of Harvard, Smith and Wellesley at Cambridge, Northampton

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 14 1926

SYMPHONIES IN THE AIR

The announcement that the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have decided to broadcast all the regular concerts of that famous organization during the coming season will be welcomed in thousands of homes. The best interpretation of the best music will thus be brought to the hearing of a vast number of persons who have few opportunities to attend concerts of the highest quality.

The broadcasting of other symphony concerts in the past two years, notably those of the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Philharmonic Society, has proved that there is a widespread appreciation of the higher spots in radio entertainment. It was tested by the Boston orchestra last season with conspicuous success. The evident conclusion of the trustees is that it is altogether desirable to establish the microphone as a regular auxiliary instrument of the orchestra.

So a splendid feature is added to the radio programme of the season, one which will be awaited with eager anticipation. The Symphony trustees have taken an attitude in the matter that is wise as well as generous. Early fears felt by managers of amusement enterprises and by artists that the broadcasting of programmes would have a detrimental effect upon their business seem to have been allayed. Instead of diverting patronage it has been demonstrated that the radio stimulates interest and encourages a larger attendance. This is especially the case with the greater artists and the concerts of high grade. The idea that people will not go to a Boston Symphony concert if they can remain comfortably at home and hear it over the radio is a false assumption. On the contrary, a few radio receptions of this sort are likely to attract personal attendance by many who never before had heard a symphony concert. The broadcast programme is valuable as a stimulus to a wider appreciation of good music and to a more devoted patronage of the concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM LYNN, MASS.
TELEGRAM NEWS

27

RADIO SEASON AT HAND

The thousands of radio fans of Greater Lynn are assured of plenty of high class music during the coming fall and winter. Recent announcement that the entire season's program of the Boston Symphony orchestra would be put on the air by the Springfield station was received with many expressions of gratification by music lovers all over the city.

And in addition to the presentation of the music of this magnificent musical organization there will be a series of concerts by New York's famous Philharmonic orchestra which will be broadcast through one of the Boston stations. One would not have to go much farther than a year to find those connected with musical organizations of the higher order ridiculing the prospects of ever presenting symphony music over the air.

Lynn is extremely fortunate in being located at just about the right distance from three big radio stations. If it were nearer much of the selectivity would be destroyed for a great many receivers. On the other hand if it were far removed, only the most costly and efficient of receivers would be able to adequately present the fine musical programs.

Lynn ought to be making preparations to put two or three good programs on the air through one of the Boston stations this winter. It has enough talent to make as good or better showing than many other cities which evidently have found it advantageous to occasionally get on the ether.

This city has had the pleasure of listening to an all-Lynn symphony orchestra on several occasions in the past few years and it has been generally accredited with doing a mighty fine piece of work. Why couldn't this organization be got together for a few rehearsals preparatory to sending out a program from one of the Boston stations. We believe it would "do itself proud."

What Lynn is doing and going to do could be interestingly and briefly told between the numbers.

GLOBE—SEPT 12, 19

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give its usual annual series again with Serge Koussevitzky as conductor. The 24 Saturday evening concerts will be broadcast through the powerful radio station WBZ and others, so that they may be heard throughout the Eastern United States.

All seats for the 24 Friday afternoons and 24 Saturday evenings have been subscribed for the season. The only exception is the 505 unreserved seats in the second balcony, to which admission is sold at the doors on Friday afternoons. The waiting line for these seats is likely to be long and patient.

For the five Monday evenings and the five Tuesday afternoons a few seats may still be had for the season. Those who wish a ticket are advised to apply at once, as the supply will pretty certainly be exhausted before the concerts begin.

There is a chance that a few tickets for the 10 Cambridge concerts, for which persons now connected with Harvard University have preference, may remain untaken. They were sold out last season before the concerts began.

Brilliant Symphony Season

Mr Koussevitzky is sailing for America on the France, Sept 21, to prepare for the opening of the Symphony season, Oct 8 and 9. It is largely due to his striking and vivid personality that the popular demand for Symphony tickets has become so overwhelming. The Friday afternoon series has been sold out in advance for many seasons past. But there have usually been a few tickets unsubscribed for other series.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and by the Radcliffe Choral Society, is to give a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis next March in commemoration of the centenary of the composer's death. The Symphony Or-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES

SEP 12 1926

SYMPHONIC CONCERTS—WJZ.

"The audience of WJZ is assured of one symphonic concert each Saturday night from Oct. 1 to April 15. Arrangements have been completed whereby the student concerts of the

New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard on alternate Saturday nights. Other classical music broadcasts will be booked from time to time to fill in weekday performances, and the Sunday evening broadcasts will adhere closely to the higher type of selections by symphonic groups."—C. B. Popenoe.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
DENVER, COLO.
SEP 8 - 1926

NEW RUSSIAN MUSIC REQUIRES TRAINED EAR FOR APPRECIATION

Solon Alberti, Celebrated Virtuoso, Declares Critics Called Compositions of Wagner and Mozart 'Noise' at First.

The latest Russian grand opera in Paris last July was noise, nothing but a combination of all noises, to the ear of such an expert as Solon Alberti, for years coach of Metropolitan Grand opera stars, and one of the greatest living pianists, who is in Denver en route to the Pacific coast.

"This does not mean that the latest Russion composition is not real music," said Alberti at the Brown Palace hotel, Wednesday. "It means that my ear and the ears of the skilled musicians who listened to the rendition and hissed, are not attuned to the combinations of notes synchronized by the Russian composer. When Hamslick, the great German critic first heard Wagner he wrote, 'Who is this upstart apostle of noise?' When I first heard Richard Strauss, his music was all Greek to my ear. Now he is one of my favorites. Early in his career Mozart was branded a Bolshevik in music. The human ear has to be attuned to combinations in musical notes.

FAILURE SPLITS UP ORCHESTRA.

"On this occasion in Paris the Russian opera was directed by Kussewitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, a master of his art. With me, in the audience, sat Rudolf Ganz, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra. The theme of the Russian composer was based on a poem of life from birth to death. The audience was composed of musicians and musical critics. They hissed the noise. Ganz contributed a distinct cuckoo note and his wife was shocked. He explained that the cuckoo was the only noise not represented in the alleged music. Finally Kussewitzky quit the stage and the orchestra broke up.

"Yet, I venture to predict that when we become accustomed to this modern Russian music we will like it and the composition will be accepted as a classic. The human ear, no matter how highly trained, has to be educated all over again when it encounters new combinations of notes."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EVE. UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
SEP 1 1 1926

Symphony Concerts to Cover Country in Enlarged Chain

Scope of Plans Gives Wider Range for Broadcasting Programs of Boston Organization.

Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations covering the Nation will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 46th season, Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed a chain including WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady, and WRC at Washington. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receiving sets located still farther west will be in a position to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, and who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23; Nov. 20; Dec. 4, 11 and 25; Jan. 22 and 29; Feb. 19 and 26; March 5; April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ only. The dates of these programs are Oct. 30, Nov. 13, Dec. 18, Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 12, March 19 and 26 and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LOWELL MASS.
COURIER-CITIZEN
SEP 1 1926

RADIO TASTES.

The news that all the 24 concerts to be given this season by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcasted--virtually to all properly attuned ears east of the Mississippi—raises the hope that with the lapse of time a more general attention will be paid to the improvement of the programs offered "on the air." It is notorious that at present there is more dreary twaddle than anything else made available by the score or so of prominent broadcasting stations; and to a degree this is inevitable because of that ancient demand that one "give the people what they think they want." The question is mainly whether or not they can be made to think they want something better worth their while.

An experiment last year, when a dozen or so of the Boston concerts were sent out by radio on Saturday nights, was encouraging. It is, however, quite true that music such as an organization like this plays is often much beyond the natural tastes of an unmusical person; and if the radio stations of the country attempted to purvey nothing of a lower grade it is entirely probable that we should find a bloodless revolution promoted by the millions who want programs they can follow with unfeigned delight. Yet the truth is that those same millions, although they don't know it, would appreciate good music if they ever permitted themselves to hear it and didn't assume off-hand that of course they'd be bored. This generous patron who enables the broadcasting of Boston's Saturday night concerts may well lead many thousands of people to wonder why they ever thought so disparagingly of their own musical appreciations. Not all Symphony programs are "dull stuff" from the limited viewpoint of the ordinary listener—although sometimes one must admit that only musicians can be expected to listen with a maximum of pleasure.

Don't write off all such music as "high-brow" and therefore beyond your ken. The chances are that you'll find Beethoven almost more of a fellow than the industrious Remick and the unquenchable Berlin, if you give him a chance.

Air Programme

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—It was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be broadcast through a network of the most powerful radio stations in the country.

The entire series of twenty-four evening concerts by this world famous organization of 107 musicians, directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed fifteen of the symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EVE. UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
SEP 8 - 1926

The Symphony Broadcasts

Listeners-in who heard the programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast last spring through the generosity of Mr. W. S. Quimby of Boston pleasurably anticipate the broadcasting of the Saturday evening concerts of this organization which is announced by WBZ as a weekly feature next winter. Mr. Quimby is again the donor of the concerts to the radio public, and his generosity may rightfully be classed as a public benefaction. The radio has given him the opportunity to inaugurate a new form of philanthropy which should prove decidedly worth while.

The Boston Symphony broadcasts should establish new standards in a rapidly expanding field. Symphony orchestras are not unfamiliar to listeners-in, and the Stadium concerts broadcast from New York during the summer are deservedly popular. But this is, we believe, the first time that the broadcasting of an entire symphony season by a first-class orchestra under its regular leader has been contemplated. If it is successful—and no pains should be spared to make it so—other orchestras may not be long in following suit. The broadcasting of programs of such orchestras as that in Philadelphia directed by Stokowski and the Chicago Symphony under Stock would be welcome additions to the radio symphony field.

Those who listen in to the Boston Symphony broadcasts may not always have an easy time of it. The high artistic standards of the organization are axiomatic. M. Koussevitzky, furthermore, is a conductor of exacting taste and of catholic predilections. His programs, particularly when he ranges the modern composers, as he frequently does, may not be the easiest. Certainly he will make no concessions to his radio audience, and those who switch from the dinner jazz recital to the symphony programs will need radically and swiftly to adjust their attitudes.

The broadcasts should not fail to be educating, and if receptivity is good they should prove artistically satisfactory. It is to be hoped that they justify the expectations of those who have offered them and those who have consented to them.

J. RAVELEI Sept. 11.

Boston Symphony Orchestra Season

The 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is to open in Symphony hall on Oct. 8. It will include the usual double series of 24 Friday afternoon and 24 Saturday evening concerts in Symphony hall, the series of five Monday evening concerts, and the series of five Tuesday afternoon concerts which are to be repeated. All available places for the larger series have been resubscribed. A few desirable season tickets are still to be had for the Monday and Tuesday series on application at Symphony hall.

Serge Koussevitsky is to sail for America on the France on Sept. 21 to prepare for the season's opening. This will be the Russian conductor's third season in America. An extensive schedule of concerts will include a Beethoven festival in the spring.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 1 2 1926

Koussevitzky Returning

Serge Koussevitzky is to sail for America a week from Tuesday to prepare for the opening of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston on Oct. 8. This will be the Russian conductor's third season in America, and it will include the usual series of five concerts in this city, to be given at the Albee Theatre on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15. Twenty-four of the Boston concerts will be made available to a vast radio audience this season.

Koussevitzky restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-les-Bains, and in northern France.

The prospects are of the finest for the coming Boston Symphony season, according to reports from Symphony Hall. There will be over 100 concerts, with a Beethoven festival in the spring. For the five series of 67 concerts in Greater Boston, and the double series in New York, there will probably be no season tickets available, all having been renewed or alloted to the waiting lists.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will visit the following cities: Providence, Montreal, Toronto, Buffalo, Rochester, Pittsburgh, New York, Brooklyn, Montclair, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington, Springfield, Plymouth, Hartford, New Haven, and under the auspices of Harvard, Smith and Wellesley at Cambridge, Northampton

THIS CLIPPING FROM LYNN, MASS.
TELEGRAM NEWS
27
SEP 1 1 1926

RADIO SEASON AT HAND

The thousands of radio fans of Greater Lynn are assured of plenty of high class music during the coming fall and winter. Recent announcement that the entire season's program of the Boston Symphony orchestra would be put on the air by the Springfield station was received with many expressions of gratification by music lovers all over the city.

And in addition to the presentation of the music of this magnificent musical organization there will be a series of concerts by New York's famous Philharmonic orchestra which will be broadcast through one of the Boston stations. One would not have to go much farther than a year to find those connected with musical organizations of the higher order ridiculing the prospects of ever presenting symphony music over the air.

Lynn is extremely fortunate in being located at just about the right distance from three big radio stations. If it were nearer much of the selectivity would be destroyed for a great many receivers. On the other hand if it were far removed, only the most costly and efficient of receivers would be able to adequately present the fine musical programs.

Lynn ought to be making preparations to put two or three good programs on the air through one of the Boston stations this winter. It has enough talent to make as good or better showing than many other cities which evidently have found it advantageous to occasionally get on the ether.

This city has had the pleasure of listening to an all-Lynn symphony orchestra on several occasions in the past few years and it has been generally accredited with doing a mighty fine piece of work. Why couldn't this organization be got together for a few rehearsals preparatory to sending out a program from one of the Boston stations. We believe it would "do itself proud."

What Lynn is doing and going to do could be interestingly and briefly told between the numbers.

RNAL
E, R. I.
SEP 1 6

SYMPHONIES IN THE AIR

The announcement that the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have decided to broadcast all the regular concerts of that famous organization during the coming season will be welcomed in thousands of homes. The best interpretation of the best music will thus be brought to the hearing of a vast number of persons who have few opportunities to attend concerts of the highest quality.

The broadcasting of other symphony concerts in the past two years, notably those of the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Philharmonic Society, has proved that there is a widespread appreciation of the higher spots in radio entertainment. It was tested by the Boston orchestra last season with conspicuous success. The evident conclusion of the trustees is that it is altogether desirable to establish the microphone as a regular auxiliary instrument of the orchestra.

So a splendid feature is added to the radio programme of the season, one which will be awaited with eager anticipation. The Symphony trustees have taken an attitude in the matter that is wise as well as generous. Early fears felt by managers of amusement enterprises and by artists that the broadcasting of programmes would have a detrimental effect upon their business seem to have been allayed. Instead of diverting patronage it has been demonstrated that the radio stimulates interest and encourages a larger attendance. This is especially the case with the greater artists and the concerts of high grade. The idea that people will not go to a Boston Symphony concert if they can remain comfortably at home and hear it over the radio is a false assumption. On the contrary, a few radio receptions of this sort are likely to attract personal attendance by many who never before had heard a symphony concert. The broadcast programme is valuable as a stimulus to a wider appreciation of good music and to a more devoted patronage of the concerts.

GLOBE—SEPT 12, 19

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give its usual annual series again with Serge Koussevitzky as conductor. The 24 Saturday evening concerts will be broadcast through the powerful radio station WBZ and others, so that they may be heard throughout the Eastern United States.

All seats for the 24 Friday afternoons and 24 Saturday evenings have been subscribed for the season. The only exception is the 505 unreserved seats in the second balcony, to which admission is sold at the doors on Friday afternoons. The waiting line for these seats is likely to be long and patient.

For the five Monday evenings and the five Tuesday afternoons a few seats may still be had for the season. Those who wish a ticket are advised to apply at once, as the supply will pretty certainly be exhausted before the concerts begin.

There is a chance that a few tickets for the 10 Cambridge concerts, for which persons now connected with Harvard University have preference, may remain untaken. They were sold out last season before the concerts began.

Brilliant Symphony Season

Mr Koussevitzky is sailing for America on the France, Sept 21, to prepare for the opening of the Symphony season, Oct 8 and 9. It is largely due to his striking and vivid personality that the popular demand for Symphony tickets has become so overwhelming. The Friday afternoon series has been sold out in advance for many seasons past. But there have usually been a few tickets unsubscribed for other series.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by the Harvard Glee Club and by the Radcliffe Choral Society, is to give a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis next March in commemoration of the centenary of the composer's death. The Symphony Orchestra will also give a series of special concerts with Beethoven programs.

The Sunday recital series will incl[illegible] such popular singers as Amel[illegible] Galli-Curci, [illegible] John McCormack.

"The audience [illegible] of one symphonic concert each Saturday night from Oct. 1 to April 15. Arrangements have been completed whereby the student concerts of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard on alternate Saturday nights. Other classical music broadcasts will be booked from time to time to fill in weekday performances, and the Sunday evening broadcasts will adhere closely to the higher type of selections by symphonic groups."—C. B. Popenoe.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
FREE PRESS
DETROIT, MICH.

26

SEP 12 1926

BIG SYMPHONY GROUPS ON AIR

Orchestras, Previously Unfriendly, Prepare to Broadcast During Winter.

Severa lof the leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of goodwill advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations. It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances.

While the directors of the Detroit Symphony orchestra were greatly pleased with the widespread publicity that came to the organization through the broadcasting of the summer concerts, it is felt that the symphony society is not now strong enough financially to venture placing the microphones at Orchestra hall for the winter concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES

SEP 12 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY—WBZ.

"Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our Fall schedule. Beginning Oct. 9, the series of twenty-four concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be presented from 8:15 until 10 P. M., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays when the orchestra is on t

"Popular and dance music wil furnished by various orchestras. middle of September will mark reappearance of the Aleppo Te Band. The programs by this band be offered weekly throughout the e tire Fall and Winter season. Th educational policy of the station fo the past few years will be continued. New courses will be presented by professors of leading New England colleges. Play-by-play accounts of the football games scheduled for the Harvard Stadium will be broadcast. The

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LEDGER DISPATCH
NORFOLK, VA.

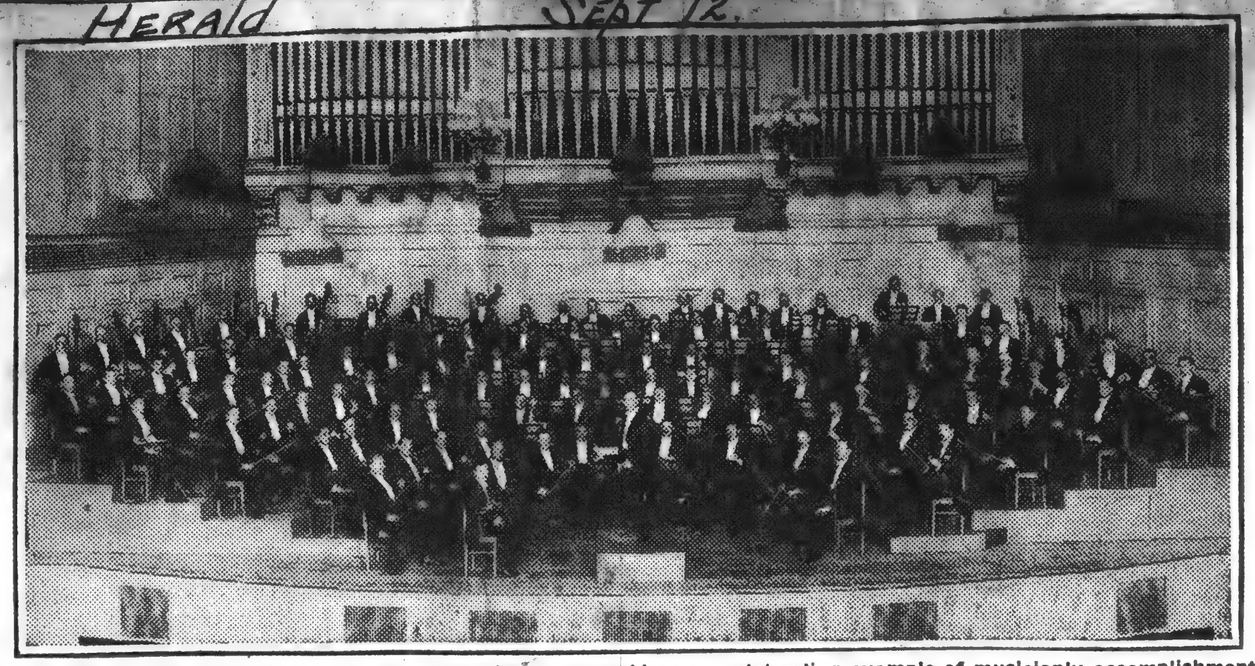
SEP 12 1926

Boston Symphony Concerts Added To Fall Radio Menu

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast by WGY, WBZ and WJZ on Saturday evenings, during October, November and December. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, October 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are October 16 and 23, November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

WBZ TO BROADCAST BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

HERALD Sept 12.



The Boston Symphony orchestra, famous throughout the world as an outstanding example of musicianly accomplishment, will be heard by thousands of radio listeners throughout the country over station WBZ and through a network of other nationally heard stations, including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. These symphony concerts are sponsored by W. S. Quinby, prominent Boston business man, who also made possible the concerts of this orchestra and the Pops, last year.

THIS CLIPPING FROM ALBANY,
N. Y.
TELEGRAM

SEP 12 1926

SEVEN CONCERTS ON WGY

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast by WGY on Saturday evenings, during October, November and December, in co-operation with WBZ of Springfield and WJZ of New York. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, October 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are October 16 and 23, November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS

SEP 15 1926

Copyright, The Chicago Daily News, Inc.

BOSTON SYMPHONY PROGRAM TO BE FEATURE OF WBZ

The entire twenty-four concerts to be given this season by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast through station WBZ, Springfield. The opening concert, Oct. 9, will be heard from WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, as well as WBZ.

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE SIOUX FALLS
S. D.

ISSUE OF

SEP 14 1926

county farmers in the new Swift plant.

RADIO ENRICHED

Boston Globe

The decision taken by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to put every one of the regular concerts given this coming season "on the air" is well taken . . . What a festival now awaits thousands of homes! And what a splendid announcement is this with which to reopen the broadcasting season! The mission of radio as an aid to those who love beauty in music is once more emphasized. The stimulation of interest in musical masterpieces which this program promises is bound to bear fruit."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
DETROIT, MICH.

SEP 12 1926

Boston Symphony Announces Dates

A SERIES of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast by WGY on Saturday evenings, during October, November and December, in co-operation with WBZ, of Springfield, and WJZ, of New York. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, Oct. 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are Oct. 16 and 23, Nov. 20 and Dec. 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

SEP 13 1926

BOSTON BAND TO PLAY

By International News Service

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of twenty-four Saturday evening concerts by this world famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

That station will feed fifteen of the symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

SEP 12 1926

Boston Symphony's Season Programs to Be Sent Out on Air

Boston, Mass.—(By the Associated Press)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire twenty-four concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussevitzky will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed to-day in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9th, 16th, 23d and 30th; November 13th and 20th; December 4th, 11th, 18th and 25th; January 1st, 15th, 22d and 29th; February 12th, 19th and 26th; March 5th, 19th and 26th; April 2d, 16th, 23d and 30th.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON WBZ AND CHAIN

WJZ, WRC and WGY to Take Several of Concerts

Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverings will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced yesterday that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 46th season Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

FROM STATION WBZ

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians, directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitsky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed 15 of the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi river, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be in position to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23, Nov. 20, Dec. 4, 11 and 25, Jan. 22 and 29, Feb. 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ. The dates of these programs are Oct. 30, Nov. 13, Dec. 18, Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 12, March 19 and 26 and April 2.

AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY OPENS SOON AT WBZ

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 19.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 8.10 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse Station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire twenty-four concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PORTLAND, ME.
TELEGRAM

SEP 21 1926

The possibilities of the radio as a cultural agency are exemplified by the recent announcement that the concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra during the coming Fall and Winter will be broadcast through a tie-up of the most powerful stations of the East, so that concerts will be heard weekly by an audience that will run into the millions, the largest probably ever to listen to a musical program. The Boston orchestra, directed by Serge Koussevitsky is the leading organization of the kind in the country. It plays only the best compositions. The cultural influence of good music is universally admitted. In the past only a few thousands have been able to hear these Boston concerts and benefit by them. Next winter and probably for a longer time millions will be influenced by them.

***

[illegible] anniversary of the birth

POST
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO PLAY FOR WRC AUDIENCE

Chain of Stations to Broadcast Musical Event Through Tie-Up With Springfield.

A. ATWATER KENT PLANS OPERA STARS' PROGRAM

WJZ and Affiliated Studios Will Put on Air Collegiate Football Games.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 o'clock Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicans will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall.

Westinghouse station, WRZ, Springfield, Mass., will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far West as the Mississippi river.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30 November [illegible] nd [illegible]b- [illegible]0

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE
GRAND RAPIDS
MICH.
NEWS

ISSUE OF

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY—WBZ

Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our fall schedule. Beginning Oct. 9, the series of 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be presented from 8:16 until 10 p. m., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays when the orchestra is on tour.

"Popular and dance music will be furnished by various orchestras. The middle of September will mark the reappearance of the Aleppo Temple band. The programs by this band will be offered weekly throughout the entire fall and winter season. The educational policy of the station for the past few years will be continued. New courses will be presented by professors of leading New England colleges. Play-by-play accounts of the football games scheduled for the Harvard stadium will be broadcast. The Princeton-Navy, Yale-Army, and Yale-Harvard games will also be broadcast by WBZ, tying it with WJZ in sending out these contests. The winter sport schedule will again find the broadcasting of professional hockey games each week direct from the Boston arena."—J. E. Murley.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
FREE PRESS
DETROIT, MICH.

SEP 12 1926

BIG SYMPHONY GROUPS ON AIR

Orchestras, Previously Unfriendly, Prepare to Broadcast During Winter.

Severa lof the leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of goodwill advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations. It is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances.

While the directors of the Detroit Symphony orchestra were greatly pleased with the widespread publicity that came to the organization through the broadcasting of the summer concerts, it is felt that the symphony society is not now strong enough financially to venture placing the microphones at Orchestra hall for the winter concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES

SEP 12 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY—WBZ.

"Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our Fall schedule. Beginning Oct. 9, the series of twenty-four concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be presented from 8:15 until 10 P. M., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays when the orchestra is on t

"Popular and dance music wil furnished by various orchestras. middle of September will mark reappearance of the Aleppo Ter Band. The programs by this band v be offered weekly throughout the e tire Fall and Winter season. Th educational policy of the station fo the past few years will be continued. New courses will be presented by professors of leading New England colleges. Play-by-play accounts of the football games scheduled for the Harvard Stadium will be broadcast. The

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LEDGER DISPATCH
NORFOLK, VA.

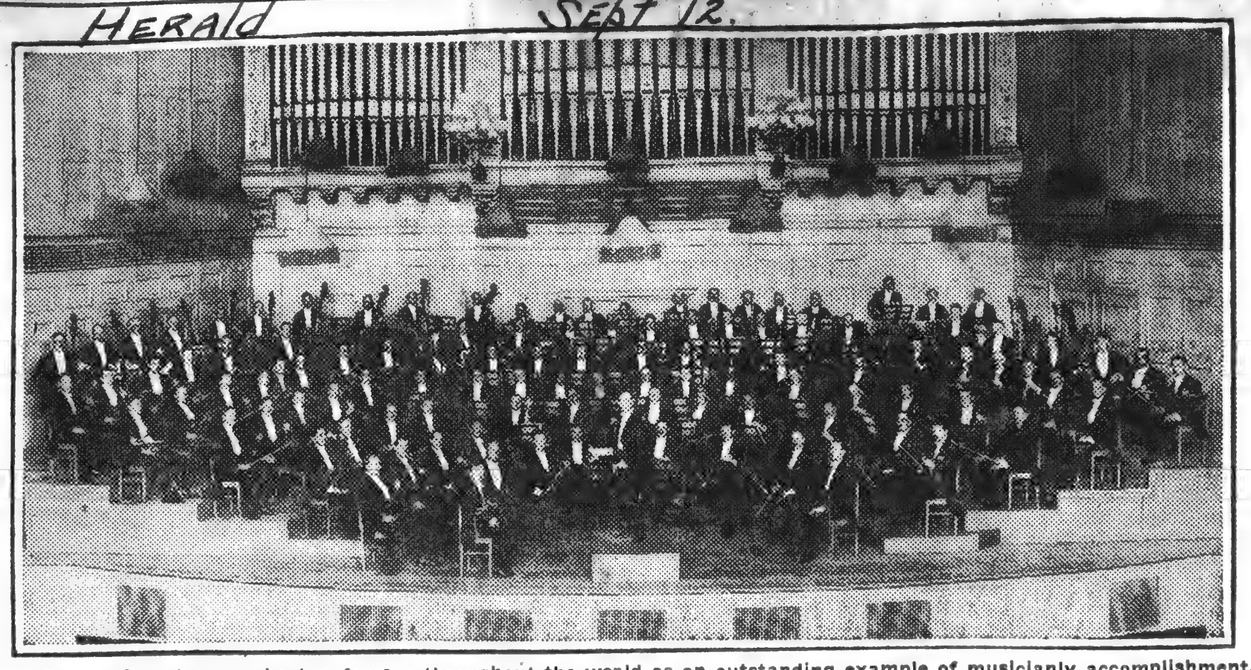
SEP 12 1926

Boston Symphony Concerts Added To Fall Radio Menu

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast by WGY, WBZ and WJZ on Saturday evenings, during October, November and December. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, October 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are October 16 and 23, November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

WBZ TO BROADCAST BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

HERALD Sept 12.



The Boston Symphony orchestra, famous throughout the world as an outstanding example of musicianly accomplishment, will be heard by thousands of radio listeners throughout the country over station WBZ and through a network of other nationally heard stations, including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. These symphony concerts are sponsored by W. S. Quinby, prominent Boston business man, who also made possible the concerts of this orchestra and the Pops, last year.

THIS CLIPPING FROM ALBANY,
N. Y.
TELEGRAM

SEP 12 1926

SEVEN CONCERTS ON WGY

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast by WGY on Saturday evenings, during October, November and December, in co-operation with WBZ of Springfield and WJZ of New York. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, October 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are October 16 and 23, November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

NEWS
DETROIT, MICH.

SEP 12 1926

Boston Symphony Announces Dates

A SERIES of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast by WGY on Saturday evenings, during October, November and December, in co-operation with WBZ, of Springfield, and WJZ, of New York. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, Oct. 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are Oct. 16 and 23, Nov. 20 and Dec. 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

SEP 12 1926

Boston Symphony's Season Programs to Be Sent Out on Air

Boston, Mass.—(By the Associated Press)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire twenty-four concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussevitzky will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed to-day in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9th, 16th, 23d and 30th; November 13th and 20th; December 4th, 11th, 18th and 25th; January 1st, 15th, 22d and 29th; February 12th, 19th and 26th; March 5th, 19th and 26th; April 2d, 16th, 23d and 30th.

THIS CLIPPING FROM CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS

SEP 15 1926

© 1926, The Chicago Daily News, Inc.

BOSTON SYMPHONY PROGRAM TO BE FEATURE OF WBZ

The entire twenty-four concerts to be given this season by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast through station WBZ, Springfield. The opening concert, Oct. 9, will be heard from WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, as well as WBZ.

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE SIOUX FALLS
S. D.

ISSUE OF

[illegible] county farmers in the new Swift plant.

RADIO ENRICHED

Boston Globe

The decision taken by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to put every one of the regular concerts given this coming season "on the air" is well taken . . . What a festival now awaits thousands of homes! And what a splendid announcement is this with which to reopen the broadcasting season! The mission of radio as an aid to those who love beauty in music is once more emphasized. The stimulation of interest in musical masterpieces which this program promises is bound to bear fruit."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

SEP 13 1926

BOSTON BAND TO PLAY

By International News Service

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of twenty-four Saturday evening concerts by this world famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

That station will feed fifteen of the symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON WBZ AND CHAIN

WJZ, WRC and WGY to Take Several of Concerts

Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverings will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced yesterday that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 46th season Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

FROM STATION WBZ

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians, directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitsky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed 15 of the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi river, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be in position to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23, Nov. 20, Dec. 4, 11 and 25, Jan. 22 and 29, Feb. 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ. The dates of these programs are Oct. 30, Nov. 13, Dec. 18, Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 12, March 19 and 26 and April 2.

AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY OPENS SOON AT WBZ

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 19.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 8.10 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse Station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire twenty-four concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PORTLAND, ME.
TELEGRAM

SEP 12 1926

The possibilities of the radio as a cultural agency are exemplified by the recent announcement that the concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra during the coming Fall and Winter will be broadcast through a tie-up of the most powerful stations of the East, so that concerts will be heard weekly by an audience that will run into the millions, the largest probably ever to listen to a musical program. The Boston orchestra, directed by Serge Koussevitsky is the leading organization of the kind in the country. It plays only the best compositions. The cultural influence of good music is universally admitted. In the past only a few thousands have been able to hear these Boston concerts and benefit by them. Next winter and probably for a longer time millions will be influenced by them.

***

[illegible] anniversary of the birt[illegible]

POST
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SEP 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO PLAY FOR WRC AUDIENCE

Chain of Stations to Broadcast Musical Event Through Tie-Up With Springfield.

A. ATWATER KENT PLANS OPERA STARS' PROGRAM

WJZ and Affiliated Studios Will Put on Air Collegiate Football Games.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 o'clock Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicans will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall.

Westinghouse station, WRZ, Springfield, Mass., will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far West as the Mississippi river.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November [illegible] nd [illegible]b- [illegible]0

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE
GRAND RAPIDS
MICH.
NEWS

ISSUE OF

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY—WBZ

Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our fall schedule. Beginning Oct. 9, the series of 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be presented from 8:15 until 10 p. m., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays when the orchestra is on tour.

"Popular and dance music will be furnished by various orchestras. The middle of September will mark the reappearance of the Aleppo Temple band. The programs by this band will be offered weekly throughout the entire fall and winter season. The educational policy of the station for the past few years will be continued. New courses will be presented by professors of leading New England colleges. Play-by-play accounts of the football games scheduled for the Harvard stadium will be broadcast. The Princeton-Navy, Yale-Army, and Yale-Harvard games will also be broadcast by WBZ, tying it with WJZ in sending out these contests. The winter sport schedule will again find the broadcasting of professional hockey games each week direct from the Boston arena."—J. E. Murley.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THIS CLIPPING FROM
FREE PRESS
DETROIT, MICH.
SEP 12 1926

BIG SYMPHONY GROUPS ON AIR

Orchestras, Previously Unfriendly, Prepare to Broadcast During Winter.

Severa lof the leading symphony orchestras of the country, at one time rather unfriendly to the microphone, have discovered interesting and profitable fields in the ether, according to advance announcements of programs for the coming winter.

Already engaged for series of radio concerts are the New York Philharmonic orchestra, the New York Symphony orchestra and the Boston Symphony. The last two organizations in addition to finding a wider audience than they could hope for in the concert hall or auditorium, will receive financial remuneration by playing under the banner of goodwill advertisers.

The New York Symphony orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will offer a series of educational performances, the bill for which will be paid by a manufacturing concern. The series will be broadcast through a chain of stations headed by WEAF, New York.

The Boston Symphony will be heard from station WBZ and other eastern broadcasters and, it is understood, will play under the auspices of a New England manufacturer. Other stations are expected to join WBZ for these concerts.

The New York Philharmonic society, whose summer concerts were heard during the summer, has consented to the installation of microphones for the winter concerts, which will begin in a short time. These concerts also will be broadcast by WJZ and allied stations. it is also understood that the Chicago Symphony orchestra and other symphonic organizations are considering plans for the broadcasting of winter performances.

While the directors of the Detroit Symphony orchestra were greatly pleased with the widespread publicity that came to the organization through the broadcasting of the summer concerts, it is felt that the symphony society is not now strong enough financially to venture placing the microphones at Orchestra hall for the winter concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
SEP 12 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY—WBZ.

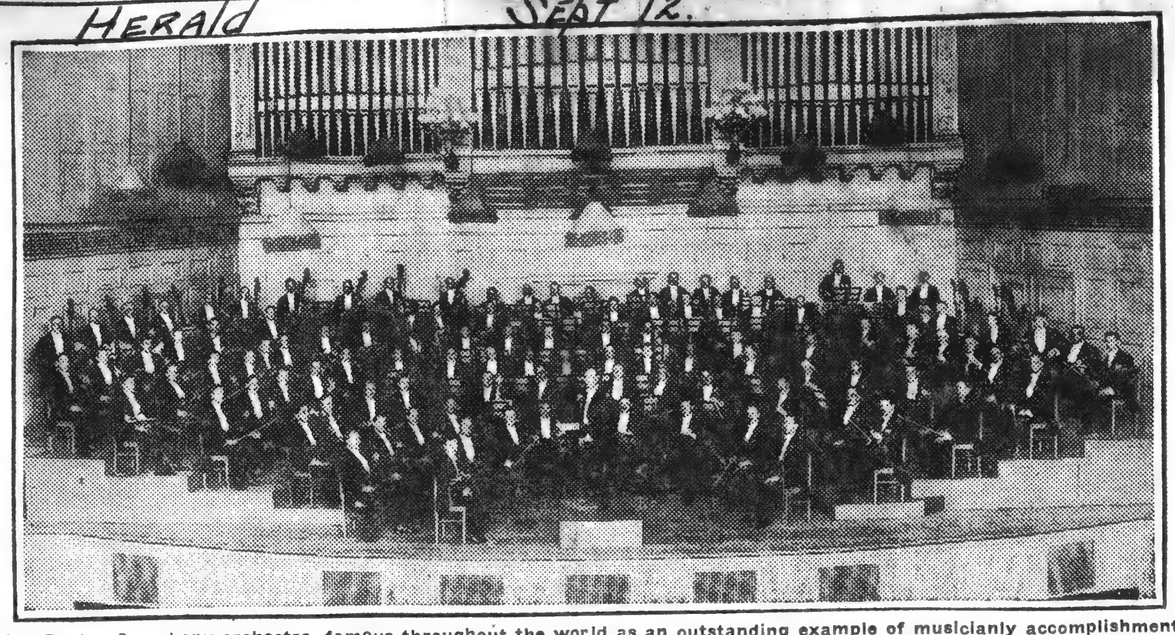
"Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our Fall schedule. Beginning Oct. 9, the series of twenty-four concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be presented from 8:15 until 10 P. M., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays when the orchestra is on tour.

"Popular and dance music will be furnished by various orchestras. The middle of September will mark the reappearance of the Aleppo Temple Band. The programs by this band will be offered weekly throughout the entire Fall and Winter season. The educational policy of the station for the past few years will be continued. New courses will be presented by professors of leading New England colleges. Play-by-play accounts of the football games scheduled for the Harvard Stadium will be broadcast. The Princeton-Navy, Yale-Army and Yale-Harvard games will also be broadcast by WBZ, tying it with WJZ in sending out these contests. The Winter sport schedule will again find the broadcasting of professional hockey games each week direct from the Boston Arena."—J. E. Murley.

***

WBZ TO BROADCAST BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Herald Sept 12.



The Boston Symphony orchestra, famous throughout the world as an outstanding example of musicianly accomplishment, will be heard by thousands of radio listeners throughout the country over station WBZ and through a network of other nationally heard stations, including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. These symphony concerts are sponsored by W. S. Quinby, prominent Boston business man, who also made possible the concerts of this orchestra and the Pops, last year.

THIS CLIPPING FROM ALBANY,
N. Y.
TELEGRAM
SEP 12 1926

SEVEN CONCERTS ON WGY

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast by WGY on Saturday evenings, during October, November and December, in co-operation with WBZ of Springfield and WJZ of New York. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, October 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are October 16 and 23, November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

NEWS
DETROIT, MICH.
SEP 12 1926

Boston Symphony Announces Dates

A SERIES of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be broadcast by WGY on Saturday evenings, during October, November and December, in co-operation with WBZ, of Springfield, and WJZ, of New York. The first concert by this nationally known organization will be heard Saturday evening, Oct. 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are Oct. 16 and 23, Nov. 20 and Dec. 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
[illegible]EMOCRAT
[illegible]RONICLE
[illegible]HESTER, N. Y.
[illegible]12 1926

Boston Symphony's Season Programs to Be Sent Out on Air

Boston, Mass.—(By the Associated Press)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play to the greatest audience in its history, a radio audience aggregating millions, when its forty-sixth season opens on October 9th. The entire twenty-four concerts of the 107 musicians directed by Serge Koussevitzky will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

Stations WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, it was also disclosed to-day in the announcement by G. H. Jaspert, director of the Boston station.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by the gift of W. S. Quinby, Boston business man.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9th, 16th, 23d and 30th; November 13th and 20th; December 4th, 11th, 18th and 25th; January 1st, 15th, 22d and 29th; February 12th, 19th and 26th; March 5th, 19th and 26th; April 2d, 16th, 23d and 30th.

[illegible]d Saturday evening, October 9. Dates of other concerts scheduled for the air by WGY are October 16 and 23, November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS
SEP 15 1926
[illegible] The Chicago Daily News, Inc.

BOSTON SYMPHONY PROGRAM TO BE FEATURE OF WBZ

The entire twenty-four concerts to be given this season by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast through station WBZ, Springfield. The opening concert, Oct. 9, will be heard from WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, as well as WBZ.

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE SIOUX FALLS
S. D.
ISSUE OF
[illegible]

county farmers in the new Swift plant.

RADIO ENRICHED

Boston Globe

The decision taken by the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to put every one of the regular concerts given this coming season "on the air" is well taken . . . What a festival now awaits thousands of homes! And what a splendid announcement is this with which to reopen the broadcasting season! The mission of radio as an aid to those who love beauty in music is once more emphasized. The stimulation of interest in musical masterpieces which this program promises is bound to bear fruit."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
SEP 13 1926

BOSTON BAND TO PLAY

By International News Service

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of twenty-four Saturday evening concerts by this world famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ.

That station will feed fifteen of the symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON WBZ AND CHAIN

WJZ, WRC and WGY to Take Several of Concerts

Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverings will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced yesterday that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 46th season Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

FROM STATION WBZ

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians, directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitsky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ, which will feed 15 of the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi river, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be in position to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23, Nov. 20, Dec. 4, 11 and 25, Jan. 22 and 29, Feb. 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ. The dates of these programs are Oct. 30, Nov. 13, Dec. 18, Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 12, March 19 and 26 and April 2.

AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.
SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY OPENS SOON AT WBZ

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 19.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 8.10 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse Station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire twenty-four concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PORTLAND, ME.
TELEGRAM
SEP 12 1926

The possibilities of the radio as a cultural agency are exemplified by the recent announcement that the concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra during the coming Fall and Winter will be broadcast through a tie-up of the most powerful stations of the East, so that concerts will be heard weekly by an audience that will run into the millions, the largest probably ever to listen to a musical program. The Boston orchestra, directed by Serge Koussevitsky is the leading organization of the kind in the country. It plays only the best compositions. The cultural influence of good music is universally admitted. In the past only a few thousands have been able to hear these Boston concerts and benefit by them. Next winter and probably for a longer time millions will be influenced by them.

***

[illegible]th anniversary of the birt[illegible]

POST
WASHINGTON, D. C.
SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO PLAY FOR WRC AUDIENCE

Chain of Stations to Broadcast Musical Event Through Tie-Up With Springfield.

A. ATWATER KENT PLANS OPERA STARS' PROGRAM

WJZ and Affiliated Studios Will Put on Air Collegiate Football Games.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 o'clock Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicans will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall.

Westinghouse station, WRZ, Springfield, Mass., will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the Symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far West as the Mississippi river.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November [illegible]

THIS CLIPPING F[illegible]
GRAND [illegible]
MIC[illegible]
NEW[illegible]
ISSUE [illegible]
SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY—WBZ

Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our fall schedule. Beginning Oct. 9, the series of 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be presented from 8:15 until 10 p. m., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays when the orchestra is on tour.

"Popular and dance music will be furnished by various orchestras. The middle of September will mark the reappearance of the Aleppo Temple band. The programs by this band will be offered weekly throughout the entire fall and winter season. The educational policy of the station for the past few years will be continued. New courses will be presented by professors of leading New England colleges. Play-by-play accounts of the football games scheduled for the Harvard stadium will be broadcast. The Princeton-Navy, Yale-Army, and Yale-Harvard games will also be broadcast by WBZ, tying it with WJZ in sending out these contests. The winter sport schedule will again find the broadcasting of professional hockey games each week direct from the Boston arena."—J. E. Murley.

REDUCTION

RATIO

19x

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A3

A4

A5

1.0

1.1

1.25

1.4

1.6

1.8

1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

HENRY ROMEIKE NEW YORK
THE ORIGINAL
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
No Connection with any other ROMEIKE
220 WEST 19th ST., NEW YORK
Tel. Chelsea 8860
THIS CLIPPING FROM
SEP 24 1926

"SYMPHONY" TICKETS SELLING RAPIDLY

With the sale of tickets for the Boston Symphony Concert actually underway the significance of this undertaking to the town becomes clearer. Not that it was ever obscure, but now possibilities which before might have seemed remote are seen to be so easily attainable that there is an added incentive to their realization.

This is not merely a local affair. The Teachers' Club is making a strong and well-planned effort to bring here to this concert on Oct. 19th as large a gathering of people from without Plymouth as can be brought here without depriving Plymouth people of their opportunity to hear the concert. That means that those who come will see Plymouth at its best. To bring a group of people here on an occasion of this kind, usher them into a hall such as the town has in the Memorial Building, and then present one of the finest musical organizations in the country to them for their delectation is to make an impression on them which they will carry with them always. And that impression will be one of a town which does things, of a town which offers to its people facilities for entertainment possessed by very few towns of its size, of a people quick to realize the value of such facilities and make use of them. And these visitors will actually be in contact with us. We shall not be obliged to communicate our ideas to them through pictures or the printed page; their own senses will furnish them with all the evidence necessary to convince them of the energy and enterprise of the town. As to the value of this — ask any business man. It is the sort of thing which attracts to the town the most desirable class of people as permanent residents. It is "good business" in the highest sense of that term.

As for the opportunity offered the people of this town: It is unnecessary to remind anyone here that if they wish to hear a Symphony Concert in Boston they must first expend three dollars in railway fares and suffer whatever inconveniences such a journey entails, or they must drive up in their own car or with a friend meet that expense and then buy a ticket, if they can. Those who know what it means to bring a Symphony Orchestra to a town of this size are full of admiration for the Club's determination to keep its prices down so that they are within the reach of everyone. When the expense, the work and the worry of such a project are taken into account it seems almost unbelievable that tickets can be sold at a price as is asked. That means, of course, that the Teachers must have nearly a capacity house to meet all expenses. But they realize that and are working determinedly to fill the hall to its utmost limit. They have set aside 560 seats to sell for one dollar because they don't want it said that they brought Boston Symphony here at a price which prohibited some people from attending. There is no charity in what they are doing, but there is a great deal of fine public spirit.

It can safely be said that this will be the first Symphony Concert given in Plymouth. No record exists of a previous performance by any other organization. Truly this is another feather in the cap of the Teachers' Club — if it's feathers they seek. There is something about a "first time" which exerts a tremendous appeal. It is unique, of course. People like to say that they heard "the first Symphony concert ever given" in this town or that town. And to speak of the first anything in Plymouth is to enhance such an appeal. It will be a source of satisfaction to many to say that they heard Boston Symphony when it played here for the first time. It should be a source of eternal satisfaction to the members of the Teachers' Club to say that they brought them here.

Continued on Page 6, Col. 2

Tickets may now be obtained at any of the following places: The United Music Co., Burbank's Store, Buttner's Store, the Cordage Men's Club, Louis Knife's Store in No. Plymouth. These tickets are exchangeable at the United Music Co. any day from now until the day of the concert, and at the door the night of the concert. Below appear the names of those whose courage and public spirit have made this concert possible. These are the guarantors:

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Holmes,
264 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kyle,
Union street.
Dr. J. H. Shaw,
43 Court street.
Miss Susan Howland,
15 Cushman street.
Miss Mary Perkins,
15 Cushman street.
Miss Susan Bowditch,
9 Park avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brown,
7 Winslow street.
Mr. Coburn Wood,
Bayview avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Roland Holmes,
11 Whiting street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Douglas,
8 Samoset street.
Sheriff and Mrs. Earl Blake,
Obery street.
Mr. and Mrs. George Mabbett,
Warren avenue.
Dr. and Mrs. E. D. Hill,
13 Warren avenue.
Mr. John Vahey,
69 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Feinberg,
155 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Morris Feldman,
19 Mayflower street.
Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Snow,
19 Clyfton street.
Mr. James Swanton,
54 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Shaw,
16 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Belcher,
Bayview avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eastwood,
25 Warren avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Perry Richards,
Warren avenue.
Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Bruce,
75 Court street.
Mr. Morton Collingwood,
12 Vernon street.
Mr. and Mrs. George Gooding,
141 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Murray,
Foot Hill avenue, Duxbury, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Lyscom Bruce,
Pleasant street.
Mr. Wm. Sharkey,
5 Court street.
Maj. and Mrs. Andrew Carr,
18 Standish avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Anderson,
23 Standish avenue.
Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Osmond,
Lothrop street.
Rev. J. A. Crowley,
81 Court street.
Rev. J. B. Mullen,
774 Boylston street, Brookline, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. John Beever,
268 Court street.
Misses Ripley,
94 Court street.
Mr. Harvey A. Soule,
Main street, Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leach,
Green street, Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Brown,
330 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burns,
9 Holmes Terrace.
Mr. James Spooner,
39 North street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Libby,
259 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. John Damon,
258 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Otten, Jr.,
2 Alden street.
Dr. R. J. Fields,
Court street.
Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Curtin,
272 Court street.
Mr. Sherman Whipple,
Chilton Hall.
Miss Helen Finney,
5 Winter street.
Dr. and Mrs. Waldo Hayward,
13 Sever street.
Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bradford,
68 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Morton Kyle,
8 Lothrop street.
Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Burgess,
Lincoln street.
Miss Helen Holmes,
262 Court street.

Miss Lillian Eddy,
26 Fremont street.
Miss Helen Holmes,
Wapping road, Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Brown,
4 North street.
Mr. and Mrs. E. Thurston Damon,
212 Court street.
Mr. Helen F. Pierce,
6 North street.
Mr. George Buttner,
15 Vernon street.
Mr. and Mrs. Horace Turner,
School Dept., Milton, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mellor,
5 Cushman street.
Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gooding,
29 Leyden street.
Dr. and Mrs. W. O. Dyer,
274 Court street.
Mr. Hugh Dowling,
Cordage Club.
Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Holmes,
Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rubinstein,
Court street.
Mrs. B. F. Mellor,
Court street.
Mrs. Mary Boyden,
66 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Burt Corey,
94 Allerton street.
Mr. Joseph Collingwood,
8 Clyfton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Paul Delano,
Kingston.
Mr. and Mrs. LeBaron Barker,
Halfway Pond.
Mr. and Mrs. Louis K. Liggett,
Long Pond.
Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Davis,
222 Sandwich street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beever,
Warren avenue.
Mrs. LeBaron Hathaway,
Warren avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Geo. J. Anderson,
19 Lincoln street.
Miss Anne Appleton,
Summer street.
Miss Lucretia Watson,
Summer street.
Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Beckman,
276 Sandwich street.
Mr. and Mrs. John Washburn,
17 Fremont street.
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Beaman,
17 Sever street.
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Holmes,
27 Russell street.
Rev. and Mrs. Alfred R. Hussey,
80 Russell street.
Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Donovan,
Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Craig,
37 Pleasant street.
Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Briggs,
45 Russell street.
Mr. and Mrs. James Millar,
41 Russell street.
Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Burbank,
5 So. Green street.
Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall,
5 Holmes Terrace.
Mr. and Mrs. Peter Peterson,
Union street.
Mr. and Mrs. Alton Edes,
216 Warren avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hawkins,
Warren avenue.
Mr. John Courtney,
8 Vernon street.
Mr. John Russell,
26 North street.
Mrs. George M. Potter and
Miss Lillian Potter,
Warren avenue.
Mr. John O'Brien,
6 Middle street.
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pioppi,
Alden street.
Mr. Frank Smith,
Bay View avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perkins, Jr.,
Newfields street.
Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Bittinger,
140 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Bittinger,
4 Cushman street.
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blackmer,
Warren avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. John Brewer,
8 Holmes street.
Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Brewster,
Holmes Terrace.
Mr. F. J. Heavens,
Moore Bldg.
Mr. G. Herbert Clarke,
Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hobart,
School street.
Miss Emma Louise Bradford,
100 Court street.

REDUCTION RATIO

12x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A3

A4

A5

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

HENRY THE ORIGINAL ROMEIKE NEW YORK
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
No Connection with any other ROMEIKE
220 WEST 19th ST., NEW YORK
Tel. Chelsea 8860
THIS CLIPPING FROM Plymouth Press
SEP 24 1926

"SYMPHONY" TICKETS SELLING RAPIDLY

With the sale of tickets for the Boston Symphony Concert actually underway the significance of this undertaking to the town becomes clearer. Not that it was ever obscure, but now possibilities which before might have seemed remote are seen to be so easily attainable that there is an added incentive to their realization.

This is not merely a local affair. The Teachers' Club is making a strong and well-planned effort to bring here to this concert on Oct. 19th as large a gathering of people from without Plymouth as can be brought here without depriving Plymouth people of their opportunity to hear the concert. That means that those who come will see Plymouth at its best. To bring a group of people here on an occasion of this kind, usher them into a hall such as the town has in the Memorial Building, and then present one of the finest musical organizations in the country to them for their delectation is to make an impression on them which they will carry with them always. And that impression will be one of a town which does things, of a town which offers to its people facilities for entertainment possessed by very few towns of its size, of a people quick to realize the value of such facilities and make use of them. And these visitors will actually be in contact with us. We shall not be obliged to communicate our ideas to them through pictures or the printed page; their own senses will furnish them with all the evidence necessary to convince them of the energy and enterprise of the town. As to the value of this — ask any business man. It is the sort of thing which attracts to the town the most desirable class of people as permanent residents. It is "good business" in the highest sense of that term.

As for the opportunity offered the people of this town: It is unnecessary to remind anyone here that if they wish to hear a Symphony Concert in Boston they must first expend three dollars in railway fares and suffer whatever inconveniences such a journey entails, or they must drive up in their own car or with a friend meet that expense and then buy a ticket, if they can. Those who know what it means to bring a Symphony Orchestra to a town of this size are full of admiration for the Club's determination to keep its prices down so that they are within the reach of everyone. When the expense, the work and the worry of such a project are taken into account it seems almost unbelievable that tickets can be sold at a price as is asked. That means, of course, that the Teachers must have nearly a capacity house to meet all expenses. But they realize that and are working determinedly to fill the hall to its utmost limit. They have set aside 560 seats to sell for one dollar because they don't want it said that they brought Boston Symphony here at a price which prohibited some people from attending. There is no charity in what they are doing, but there is a great deal of fine public spirit.

It can safely be said that this will be the first Symphony Concert given in Plymouth. No record exists of a previous performance by any other organization. Truly this is another feather in the cap of the Teachers' Club — if it's feathers they seek. There is something about a "first time" which exerts a tremendous appeal. It is unique, of course. People like to say that they heard "the first Symphony concert ever given" in this town or that town. And to speak of the first anything in Plymouth is to enhance such an appeal. It will be a source of satisfaction to many to say that they heard Boston Symphony when it played here for the first time. It should be a source of eternal satisfaction to the members of the Teachers' Club to say that they brought them here.

Tickets may now be obtained at any of the following places: The United Music Co., Burbank's Store, Buttner's Store, the Cordage Men's Club, Louis Knife's Store in No. Plymouth. These tickets are exchangeable at the United Music Co. any day from now until the day of the concert, and at the door the night of the concert. Below appear the names of those whose courage and public spirit have made this concert possible. These are the guarantors:

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Holmes,
264 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kyle,
Union street.
Dr. J. H. Shaw,
43 Court street.
Miss Susan Howland,
15 Cushman street.
Miss Mary Perkins,
15 Cushman street.
Miss Susan Bowditch,
9 Park avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brown

Miss Lillian Eddy,
26 Fremont street.
Miss Helen Holmes,
Wapping road, Kingston, Mass.
Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Brown,
4 North street.
Mr. and Mrs. E. Thurston Damon,
212 Court street.
Dr. Helen F. Pierce,
6 North street.
Mr. George Buttner,
15 Vernon street.
Mr. and Mrs. Horace Turner,
School Dept., Milton, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mellor,
5 Cushman street.
Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gooding,
29 Leyden street.
Dr. and Mrs. W. O. Dyer,
274 Court street.
Mr. Hugh Dowling,
Cordage Club.
Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Holmes,
Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rubinstein,
Court street.
Mrs. B. F. Mellor,
Court street.
Mrs. Mary Boyden,
66 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Burt Corey,
94 Allerton street.
Mr. Joseph Collingwood,
8 Clyfton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Paul Delano,
Kingston.

tails, or they must drive up in their own car or with a friend meet that expense and then buy a ticket, if they can. Those who know what it means to bring a Symphony Orchestra to a town of this size are full of admiration for the Club's determination to keep its prices down so that they are within the reach of everyone. When the expense, the work and the worry of such a project are taken into account it seems almost unbelievable that tickets can be sold at a price as is asked. That means, of course, that the Teachers must have nearly a capacity house to meet all expenses. But they realize that and are working determinedly to fill the hall to its utmost limit. They have set aside 560 seats to sell for one dollar because they don't want it said that they brought Boston Symphony here at a price which prohibited some people from attending. There is no charity in what they are doing, but there is a great deal of fine public spirit.

It can safely be said that this will be the first Symphony Concert given in Plymouth. No record exists of a previous performance by any other organization. Truly this is another feather in the cap of the Teachers' Club — if it's feathers they seek. There is something about a "first time" which exerts a tremendous appeal. It is unique, of course. People like to say that they heard "the first Symphony concert ever given" in this town or that town. And to speak of the first anything in Plymouth is to enhance such an appeal. It will be a source of satisfaction to many to say that they heard Boston Symphony when it played here for the first time. It should be a source of eternal satisfaction to the members of the Teachers' Club to say that they D brought them here.

Continued on Page 6, Col. 3

Tickets may now be obtained at any of the following places: The United Music Co., Burbank's Store, Buttner's Store, the Cordage Men's Club, Louis Knife's Store in No. Plymouth. These tickets are exchangeable at the United Music Co. any day from now until the day of the concert, and at the door the night of the concert. Below appear the names of those whose courage and public spirit have made this concert possible. These are the guarantors:

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Holmes,
264 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kyle,
Union street.
Dr. J. H. Shaw,
43 Court street.
Miss Susan Howland,
15 Cushman street.
Miss Mary Perkins,
15 Cushman street.
Miss Susan Bowditch,
9 Park avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Richard Brown,
7 Winslow street.
Mr. Coburn Wood,
Bayview avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Roland Holmes,
11 Whiting street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Douglas,
8 Samoset street.
Sheriff and Mrs. Earl Blake,
Obery street.
Mr. and Mrs. George Mabbett,
Warren avenue.
Dr. and Mrs. E. D. Hill,
13 Warren avenue.
Mr. John Vahey,
69 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Feinberg,
155 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Morris Feldman,
19 Mayflower street.
Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Snow,
19 Clyfton street.
Mr. James Swanton,
54 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Shaw,
16 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Belcher,
Bayview avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eastwood,
25 Warren avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Perry Richards,
Warren avenue.
Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Bruce,
75 Court street.
Mr. Morton Collingwood,
12 Vernon street.
Mr. and Mrs. George Gooding,
141 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Murray,
Foot Hill avenue, Duxbury, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Lyscom Bruce,
Pleasant street.
Mr. Wm. Sharkey,
5 Court street.
Maj. and Mrs. Andrew Carr,
18 Standish avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Anderson,
23 Standish avenue.
Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Osmond,
Lothrop street.
Rev. J. A. Crowley,
81 Court street.
Rev. J. B. Mullen,
774 Boylston street, Brookline, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. John Beever,
268 Court street.
Misses Ripley,
94 Court street.
Mr. Harvey A. Soule,
Main street, Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leach,
Green street, Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Brown,
330 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burns,
9 Holmes Terrace.
Mr. James Spooner,
39 North street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Libby,
259 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. John Damon,
258 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Otten, Jr.,
2 Alden street.
Dr. R. J. Fields,
Court street.
Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Curtin,
272 Court street.
Mr. Sherman Whipple,
Chilton Hall.
Miss Helen Finney,
5 Winter street.
Dr. and Mrs. Waldo Hayward,
13 Sever street.
Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bradford,
68 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Morton Kyle,
8 Lothrop street.
Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Burgess,
Lincoln street.
Miss Helen Holmes,
262 Court street.

Miss Lillian Eddy,
26 Fremont street.
Miss Helen Holmes,
Wapping road, Kingston, Mass.
Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Brown,
4 North street.
Mr. and Mrs. E. Thurston Damon,
212 Court street.
Dr. Helen F. Pierce,
6 North street.
Mr. George Buttner,
15 Vernon street.
Mr. and Mrs. Horace Turner,
School Dept., Milton, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Albert Mellor,
5 Cushman street.
Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gooding,
29 Leyden street.
Dr. and Mrs. W. O. Dyer,
274 Court street.
Mr. Hugh Dowling,
Cordage Club.
Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Holmes,
Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rubinstein,
Court street.
Mrs. B. F. Mellor,
Court street.
Mrs. Mary Boyden,
66 Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Burt Corey,
94 Allerton street.
Mr. Joseph Collingwood,
8 Clyfton street.
Mr. and Mrs. Paul Delano,
Kingston.
Mr. and Mrs. LeBaron Barker,
Halfway Pond.
Mr. and Mrs. Louis K. Liggett,
Long Pond.
Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Davis,
222 Sandwich street.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Beever,
Warren avenue.
Mrs. LeBaron Hathaway,
Warren avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Geo. J. Anderson,
19 Lincoln street.
Miss Anne Appleton,
Summer street.
Miss Lucretia Watson,
Summer street.
Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Beckman,
276 Sandwich street.
Mr. and Mrs. John Washburn,
17 Fremont street.
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Beaman,
17 Sever street.
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Holmes,
27 Russell street.
Rev. and Mrs. Alfred R. Hussey,
80 Russell street.
Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Donovan,
Allerton street.
Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Craig,
37 Pleasant street.
Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Briggs,
45 Russell street.
Mr. and Mrs. James Millar,
41 Russell street.
Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Burbank,
5 So. Green street.
Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hall,
5 Holmes Terrace.
Mr. and Mrs. Peter Peterson,
Union street.
Mr. and Mrs. Alton Edes,
216 Warren avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hawkins,
Warren avenue.
Mr. John Courtney,
8 Vernon street.
Mr. John Russell,
26 North street.
Mrs. George M. Potter and
Miss Lillian Potter,
Warren avenue.
Mr. John O'Brien,
6 Middle street.
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pioppi,
Alden street.
Mr. Frank Smith,
Bay View avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perkins, Jr.,
Newfields street.
Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Bittinger,
140 Court street.
Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Bittinger,
4 Cushman street.
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blackmer,
Warren avenue.
Mr. and Mrs. John Brewer,
8 Holmes street.
Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Brewster,
Holmes Terrace.
Mr. F. J. Heavens,
Moore Bldg.
Mr. G. Herbert Clarke,
Kingston, Mass.
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hobart,
School street.
Miss Emma Louise Bradford,
100 Court street.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
ALBANY, N. Y.

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY AGAIN TO BE ON AIR

Program on Opening Night, Oct. 9, to Reach Millions of Homes.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 18.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the twenty-four concerts of the symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France Tuesday to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bainc in Northern France.

W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of twelve symphony concerts, and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops orchestra. These were sponsored by Mr. Quinby.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Post Sept 12

BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Coming events cast their shadows before.

Although the music season proper of 1926-27 is still a month away, the entrepreneurs and impresarios are already crying their wares.

From Symphony Hall comes the announcement—cheering or otherwise, according to one's point of view—that all seats for both the Friday and the Saturday series of Symphony concerts have been subscribed for the season, though there are a few season tickets still available for the concerts on Monday evenings and Tuesday afternoons. Serge Koussevitzky sails for America on the "France" on Sept. 21, and on Friday afternoon, Oct. 8, he will conduct the first concert of the orchestra's 46th season, a feature of which will be the Beethoven festival in the spring, commemorative of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 22 1926

The Winter's Concerts

The Boston Symphony, Chaliapin and his opera company, Mary Lewis, Serge Rachmaninoff, Fritz Kreisler, Alberto Salvi . . .

These are among the organizations and artists that promise to make the approaching winter season the most tempting, musically, that Providence has ever had.

They are being brought here, in a majority of instances, at sacrifices by their sponsors. Some of them, like Kreisler and the Symphony, are old friends. We are in the habit of greeting them enthusiastically each year. But the others are less familiar visitors. Some of them, in fact, have never been among us before. They will, however, we feel sure, be received no less cordially for that.

And if the community does indicate, by its generous support, the interest and appreciation which so deserving a programme merits, we shall surely have more of them in the future, as Providence develops gradually into the important musical centre which so many hope to see it become.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SPOKESMAN REVIEW
SPOKANE, WASH.

SEP 23 1926

"JAZZ HAS SHOT ITS BOLT"

Something Needed to Take Its Place, Says Orchestra Director.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (AP)—Jazz "has shot its bolt," in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that, aside from "color," it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
WILMINGTON, DEL.

SEP 23 1926

FINISH OF JAZZ SEEN BY BOSTON MUSICIAN

Has Shot Its Bolt, Declares Symphony Leader, Back From Europe

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (AP).—Jazz has shot its bolt in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who returned from Europe today on the steamship France.

"The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz," he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST STANDARD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 23 1926

SERGE FORESEES END TO REIGN OF JAZZ

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (AP).—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who returned from Europe today on the steamship France. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

SEP 23 1926

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of Boston Symphony Orchestra, has arrived in Boston after five months abroad.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEWS LEADER
RICHMOND, VA.

SEP 23 1926

SAYS JAZZ AGE OVER

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

Brings New Musical Scores to Play Here

SERGEI KOUSSEVITZKY

KOUSSEVITZKY BACK IN BOSTON

Herald Sept 23

Symphony Conductor Has Entire Program Made Out for Season

DID MUCH WORK IN 'VACATION' ABROAD

Sergei Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, returned to Boston yesterday after four months in Europe, technically a vacation, though in reality a period for the most part tense with industry.

As evidence of the manner in which he spent his vacation, he had with him the entire program of the coming season of Symphony concerts, revised according to his latest decisions, and written out neatly on note paper of the S. S. France of the French line on which he and Madame Koussevitzky made the return voyage.

PROGRAMS PREPARED

Last night he was found in a suite at the Vendome, enjoying a little real relaxation for a change. There he granted an interview to The Herald, during which, literally dragged out of him, came to light the story of the manner of his "vacation." He was willing enough to talk of the coming Symphony season, and all the treasures and oddities of the musical world which it held. Never backward in whole-hearted praise of this or that composer, examples of whose genius will be heard here this season.

Yes, he was enthusiastic over prospects for the Symphony season, this quiet man of the magic baton, fired with true love of his art, but when it came to discussion of the work that had been entailed for him in gathering the wealth of melody which he brought back for the delight of Boston music lovers—well, as the saying goes, that's another story.

KOUSSEVITZKY BACK IN BOSTON

(Continued from Page One)

Music, scores never heard in this country, scores, many of which were written especially for the Boston Symphony, were mentioned by Mr. Koussevitzky, who gave great praise to these famous composers of Europe. Then, with the closing statement "written especially for the Boston Symphony" he dismissed the trouble, the disappointments which had faced him in the process of getting them to bring them back to Boston. Many scores, signed by famous men, he would not discuss at all at this time, or even mention.

Outside of this business of gathering such a wealth of material for the coming symphony season he conducted, while in Paris, his annual series of four "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Opera, one of the most popular of Europe's summer musical season.

Later he went to Zurich, where he assisted at the International Musical Festival, to which every country in the world sends its representative musicians and music.

"Did you find anything there you considered worthy of bringing back with you," he was asked?

"Yes," he replied, "I found there both good and bad, but among the good I found three studies which I will give this season. As a matter of fact I cannot help being pleased with the results of my searches. I have a number of things with me."

He almost seemed to begrudge shedding the light of publicity on his treasures, but among those of which he would speak were Respighi, the Italian composer, who wrote four studies for Boston. Albert Roussel composed an orchestral suite for the symphony, Alexander Tansman a symphony for Boston's orchestra. Others are three bits by the Russian, Prokofieff, never heard in this country, and Dorfscenen, written by the great Hungarian, Bela Bartok, for the League of Modern Composers, but to have its premiere here.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK WORLD

SEP 23 1926

29

JAZZ IS WANING, SAYS CONDUCTOR

Koussevitsky, Back on France, Believes New Musical Form Is Needed Now

FRENCH HYGIENIST HERE

Dr. Leon Bernard Will Attend Tuberculosis Conference

Dr. Leon Bernard, professor of hygiene at the University of Paris, and France's leading authority on hygiene and tuberculosis, arrived here yesterday on the French liner France.

Prof. Bernard, who is head of the French Government's Department of Hygiene, will attend an international congress on tuberculosis in Washington the end of this month.

Another arrival on the France was Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. "Jazz, as a musical form," he said, "is on the wane and will soon die. It has nothing further to contribute to music. It has given a great deal of color, but now a new form is needed and will probably soon arise."

Mona Morgan, Shakespearian actress, returned from a several weeks' visit abroad, which included a pilgrimage to Shakespeare's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon.

While in Stratford she asked a gardener tending the greens about the poet's memorial, who was this man named Shakespeare, whose name had been used for the local hotel and many shops. The gardener, who had spent his entire life in Stratford, replied that he thought "Shakespeare was a writer." "He wrote for the Bible," further inquiry devoleped.

J. H. Thompson, Lemuel Bolles and M. Mackay, American Legion officials, reurned on the France from the Fidac convention of Allied veterans in Warsaw. They said the veterans' meeting approved a plan to invite German and Austrian delegations to an international meeting of men who served in the great war to be held at Luxembourg in six weeks.

The French liner avoided the hurricane that has been sweeping the North Atlantic through the full radio weather reports which were broadcast, according to Capt. Blancart, master of the France. He said he was able to adjust his course and speed to reach the storm swept area after the hurricane had passed.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.

SEP 23 1926

Boston Orchestra Conductor Finds Jazz Is Passing

New York, Sept. 23—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who returned from Europe yesterday on the steamship France.

The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM LIGHT
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

SEP 23 192

Jazz Out of Date Declares Savant

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN EAGLE

SEP 24 1926

Jazz, according to Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the wane and will be replaced shortly by a new musical form. Ought one to take this as a promise or as a menace?

TRANSCRIPT Sept 23

The Symphony in Crescendo

Mr. Koussevitzky's return quickens but can scarcely enlarge Boston's interest in the impending Symphony season. The orchestra, under his baton, has established such breadth of appeal that talk of still further increasing it is, in one sense of the word, for the moment quite idle. Long before the conductor had finished his European vacation, the mere knowledge that he would return for the current year had led to almost complete sale of all available tickets for the regular concerts of 1926-27. Today the hall for Friday afternoons, Saturday evenings and Monday evenings is fully sold out. A few scattering seats remain for the Tuesday series. To be sure, tickets for the Thursday concerts in Cambridge have not yet been offered, but shortly they will be, and when they are it is a foregone conclusion that not a place will remain. Apparently, if we are to talk of broadening the public in actual attendance upon the Symphony Concerts, we now must talk of broadening Symphony Hall, arcading it, perhaps, so that the audience room will cover all of Massachusetts avenue!

In the light of this situation, the decision of the trustees to accept the generous private offer for broadcasting all of this year's twenty-four concerts on Saturday evenings seems all the more surely commendable. An opportunity to follow the concerts will thus be given not only to thousands who never would have been inclined to give them ear were it not for the radio, but also in many cases to persons who cannot secure seats for the concerts, no matter how much they may desire to be within the hall. Moreover, the extension of Boston's interest in the Symphony Orchestra during recent years, whether as shown by the increased attendance or as encouraged among the vast new public that follows the radio, is obviously a force that is full of creative power. Just what the Symphony's way of responding to the new demand will be, precisely what lines of growth or modes of progress the orchestra will follow, no man can yet say. But one thing is certain. The demand cannot be denied satisfaction. So firmly founded, so notably excellent an institution as the Boston Symphony Orchestra will grow with the times. It will come to influence popular taste and popular standards in matters of music even more widely than has been guess

---

ADVERTISER Sept 23

Symphony Head Back in Hub

Bringing nine new musical scores which will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitsky, conductor, is back in Boston for the winter musical season, after an extended European trip in search of new works.

The music brought back, which was especially written for the symphony orchestra, was composed by

---

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK BROOKLYN EAGLE

SEP 25 1926

Serge Koussevitsky—
Conductor of the Boston—
Symphony Orchestra—
Who Has Just Returned—
From Europe, says—
Jazz, as a Musical Form—
Will Soon Die as It—
Has Nothing Further—
To Contribute to Music.
It Never had Anything—
But ONE TUNE to—
Contribute, Because—
ALL JAZZ TUNES—
Are the SAME.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
ALBANY, N. Y.

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY AGAIN TO BE ON AIR

Program on Opening Night, Oct. 9, to Reach Millions of Homes.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 18.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the twenty-four concerts of the symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France Tuesday to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bainc in Northern France.

W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of twelve symphony concerts, and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops orchestra. These were sponsored by Mr. Quinby.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Post Sept 12
BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Coming events cast their shadows before.

Although the music season proper of 1926-27 is still a month away, the entrepreneurs and impresarios are already crying their wares.

From Symphony Hall comes the announcement—cheering or otherwise, according to one's point of view—that all seats for both the Friday and the Saturday series of Symphony concerts have been subscribed for the season, though there are a few season tickets still available for the concerts on Monday evenings and Tuesday afternoons. Serge Koussevitzky sails for America on the "France" on Sept. 21, and on Friday afternoon, Oct. 8, he will conduct the first concert of the orchestra's 46th season, a feature of which will be the Beethoven festival in the spring, commemorative of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 22 1926

The Winter's Concerts

The Boston Symphony, Chaliapin and his opera company, Mary Lewis, Serge Rachmaninoff, Fritz Kreisler, Alberto Salvi . . .

These are among the organizations and artists that promise to make the approaching winter season the most tempting, musically, that Providence has ever had.

They are being brought here, in a majority of instances, at sacrifices by their sponsors. Some of them, like Kreisler and the Symphony, are old friends. We are in the habit of greeting them enthusiastically each year. But the others are less familiar visitors. Some of them, in fact, have never been among us before. They will, however, we feel sure, be received no less cordially for that.

And if the community does indicate, by its generous support, the interest and appreciation which so deserving a programme merits, we shall surely have more of them in the future, as Providence develops gradually into the important musical centre which so many hope to see it become.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SPOKESMAN REVIEW
SPOKANE, WASH.

SEP 23 1926

"JAZZ HAS SHOT ITS BOLT"

Something Needed to Take Its Place, Says Orchestra Director.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (AP)—Jazz "has shot its bolt," in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that, aside from "color," it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
WILMINGTON, DEL.

SEP 23 1926

FINISH OF JAZZ SEEN BY BOSTON MUSICIAN

Has Shot Its Bolt, Declares Symphony Leader, Back From Europe

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (AP).—Jazz has shot its bolt in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who returned from Europe today on the steamship France.

"The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz," he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST STANDARD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 24 1926

SERGE FORESEES END TO REIGN OF JAZZ

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (Æ).—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who returned from Europe today on the steamship France. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

SEP 23 1926

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of Boston Symphony Orchestra, has arrived in Boston after five months abroad.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEWS LEADER
RICHMOND, VA.

SEP 23 1926

SAYS JAZZ AGE OVER

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

Brings New Musical Scores to Play Here

SERGEI KOUSSEVITZKY

KOUSSEVITZKY BACK IN BOSTON

Herald Sept 23

Symphony Conductor Has Entire Program Made Out for Season

DID MUCH WORK IN 'VACATION' ABROAD

Sergei Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, returned to Boston yesterday after four months in Europe, technically a vacation, though in reality a period for the most part tense with industry.

As evidence of the manner in which he spent his vacation, he had with him the entire program of the coming season of Symphony concerts, revised according to his latest decisions, and written out neatly on note paper of the S. S. France of the French line on which he and Madame Koussevitzky made the return voyage.

PROGRAMS PREPARED

Last night he was found in a suite at the Vendome, enjoying a little real relaxation for a change. There he granted an interview to The Herald, during which, literally dragged out of him, came to light the story of the manner of his "vacation." He was willing enough to talk of the coming Symphony season, and all the treasures and oddities of the musical world which it held. Never backward in whole-hearted praise of this or that composer, examples of whose genius will be heard here this season.

Yes, he was enthusiastic over prospects for the Symphony season, this quiet man of the magic baton, fired with true love of his art, but when it came to discussion of the work that had been entailed for him in gathering the wealth of melody which he brought back for the delight of Boston music lovers—well, as the saying goes, that's another story.

KOUSSEVITZKY BACK IN BOSTON

(Continued from Page One)

Music, scores never heard in this country, scores, many of which were written especially for the Boston Symphony, were mentioned by Mr. Koussevitzky, who gave great praise to these famous composers of Europe. Then, with the closing statement "written especially for the Boston Symphony" he dismissed the trouble, the disappointments which had faced him in the process of getting them to bring them back to Boston. Many scores, signed by famous men, he would not discuss at all at this time, or even mention.

Outside of this business of gathering such a wealth of material for the coming symphony season he conducted, while in Paris, his annual series of four "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Opera, one of the most popular of Europe's summer musical season.

Later he went to Zurich, where he assisted at the International Musical Festival, to which every country in the world sends its representative musicians and music.

"Did you find anything there you considered worthy of bringing back with you," he was asked?

"Yes," he replied, "I found there both good and bad, but among the good I found three studies which I will give this season. As a matter of fact I cannot help being pleased with the results of my searches. I have a number of things with me."

He almost seemed to begrudge shedding the light of publicity on his treasures, but among those of which he would speak were Respighi, the Italian composer, who wrote four studies for Boston. Albert Roussel composed an orchestral suite for the symphony, Alexander Tansman a symphony for Boston's orchestra. Others are three bits by the Russian, Prokofieff, never heard in this country, and Dorfscenen, written by the great Hungarian, Bela Bartok, for the League of Modern Composers, but to have its premiere here.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK WORLD

SEP 23 1926

29

JAZZ IS WANING, SAYS CONDUCTOR

Koussevitsky, Back on France, Believes New Musical Form Is Needed Now

FRENCH HYGIENIST HERE

Dr. Leon Bernard Will Attend Tuberculosis Conference

Dr. Leon Bernard, professor of hygiene at the University of Paris, and France's leading authority on hygiene and tuberculosis, arrived here yesterday on the French liner France.

Prof. Bernard, who is head of the French Government's Department of Hygiene, will attend an international congress on tuberculosis in Washington the end of this month.

Another arrival on the France was Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. "Jazz, as a musical form," he said, "is on the wane and will soon die. It has nothing further to contribute to music. It has given a great deal of color, but now a new form is needed and will probably soon arise."

Mona Morgan, Shakespearian actress, returned from a several weeks' visit abroad, which included a pilgrimage to Shakespeare's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon.

While in Stratford she asked a gardener tending the greens about the poet's memorial, who was this man named Shakespeare, whose name had been used for the local hotel and many shops. The gardener, who had spent his entire life in Stratford, replied that he thought "Shakespeare was a writer." "He wrote for the Bible," further inquiry devoloped.

J. H. Thompson, Lemuel Bolles and M. Mackay, American Legion officials, reurned on the France from the Fidac convention of Allied veterans in Warsaw. They said the veterans' meeting approved a plan to invite German and Austrian delegations to an international meeting of men who served in the great war to be held at Luxembourg in six weeks.

The French liner avoided the hurricane that has been sweeping the North Atlantic through the full radio weather reports which were broadcast, according to Capt. Blancart, master of the France. He said he was able to adjust his course and speed to reach the storm swept area after the hurricane had passed.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.

SEP 23 1926

Boston Orchestra Conductor Finds Jazz Is Passing

New York, Sept. 23—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who returned from Europe yesterday on the steamship France.

The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM LIGHT
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

SEP

Jazz Out of Date Declares Savant

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

Advertiser Sept 23

Symphony Head Back in Hub

Bringing nine new musical scores which will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitsky, conductor, is back in Boston for the winter musical season, after an extended European trip in search of new works.

The music brought back, which was especially written for the symphony orchestra, was composed by

THIS CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN EAGLE

SEP 24 1926

Jazz, according to Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is on the wane and will be replaced shortly by a new musical form. Ought one to take this as a promise or as a menace?

Transcript Sept 23

The Symphony in Crescendo

Mr. Koussevitzky's return quickens but can scarcely enlarge Boston's interest in the impending Symphony season. The orchestra, under his baton, has established such breadth of appeal that talk of still further increasing it is, in one sense of the word, for the moment quite idle. Long before the conductor had finished his European vacation, the mere knowledge that he would return for the current year had led to almost complete sale of all available tickets for the regular concerts of 1926-27. Today the hall for Friday afternoons, Saturday evenings and Monday evenings is fully sold out. A few scattering seats remain for the Tuesday series. To be sure, tickets for the Thursday concerts in Cambridge have not yet been offered, but shortly they will be, and when they are it is a foregone conclusion that not a place will remain. Apparently, if we are to talk of broadening the public in actual attendance upon the Symphony Concerts, we now must talk of broadening Symphony Hall, arcading it, perhaps, so that the audience room will cover all of Massachusetts avenue!

In the light of this situation, the decision of the trustees to accept the generous private offer for broadcasting all of this year's twenty-four concerts on Saturday evenings seems all the more surely commendable. An opportunity to follow the concerts will thus be given not only to thousands who never would have been inclined to give them ear were it not for the radio, but also in many cases to persons who cannot secure seats for the concerts, no matter how much they may desire to be within the hall. Moreover, the extension of Boston's interest in the Symphony Orchestra during recent years, whether as shown by the increased attendance or as encouraged among the vast new public that follows the radio, is obviously a force that is full of creative power. Just what the Symphony's way of responding to the new demand will be, precisely what lines of growth or modes of progress the orchestra will follow, no man can yet say. But one thing is certain. The demand cannot be denied satisfaction. So firmly founded, so notably excellent an institution as the Boston Symphony Orchestra will grow with the times. It will come to influence popular taste and popular standards in matters of music even more widely [illegible] been guess

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK BROOKLYN EAGL

SEP 25 1926

Serge Koussevitsky—
Conductor of the Boston—
Symphony Orchestra—
Who Has Just Returned—
From Europe, says—
Jazz, as a Musical Form—
Will Soon Die as It—
Has Nothing Further—
To Contribute to Music.
It Never had Anything—
But ONE TUNE to—
Contribute, Because—
ALL JAZZ TUNES—
Are the SAME.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
ALBANY, N. Y.

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY AGAIN TO BE ON AIR

Program on Opening Night, Oct. 9, to Reach Millions of Homes.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 18.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the twenty-four concerts of the symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France Tuesday to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bainc in Northern France.

W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of twelve symphony concerts, and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops orchestra. These were sponsored by Mr. Quinby.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

Past Sept 12
BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Coming events cast their shadows before.

Although the music season proper of 1926-27 is still a month away, the entrepreneurs and impresarios are already crying their wares.

From Symphony Hall comes the announcement—cheering or otherwise, according to one's point of view—that all seats for both the Friday and the Saturday series of Symphony concerts have been subscribed for the season, though there are a few season tickets still available for the concerts on Monday evenings and Tuesday afternoons. Serge Koussevitzky sails for America on the "France" on Sept. 21, and on Friday afternoon, Oct. 8, he will conduct the first concert of the orchestra's 46th season, a feature of which will be the Beethoven festival in the spring, commemorative of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 22 1926

The Winter's Concerts

The Boston Symphony, Chaliapin and his opera company, Mary Lewis, Serge Rachmaninoff, Fritz Kreisler, Alberto Salvi . . .

These are among the organizations and artists that promise to make the approaching winter season the most tempting, musically, that Providence has ever had.

They are being brought here, in a majority of instances, at sacrifices by their sponsors. Some of them, like Kreisler and the Symphony, are old friends. We are in the habit of greeting them enthusiastically each year. But the others are less familiar visitors. Some of them, in fact, have never been among us before. They will, however, we feel sure, be received no less cordially for that.

And if the community does indicate, by its generous support, the interest and appreciation which so deserving a programme merits, we shall surely have more of them in the future, as Providence develops gradually into the important musical centre which so many hope to see it become.

THIS CLIPPING FROM SPOKESMAN REVIEW
SPOKANE, WASH.

SEP 23 1926

"JAZZ HAS SHOT ITS BOLT"

Something Needed to Take Its Place, Says Orchestra Director.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. (AP)—Jazz "has shot its bolt," in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that, aside from "color," it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
WILMINGTON, DEL.

SEP 23 1926

FINISH OF JAZZ SEEN BY BOSTON MUSICIAN

Has Shot Its Bolt, Declares Symphony Leader, Back From Europe

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (AP).—Jazz has shot its bolt in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who returned from Europe today on the steamship France.

"The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz," he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST STANDARD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 23 1926

SERGE FORESEES END TO REIGN OF JAZZ

NEW YORK, Sept. 22 (AP).—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who returned from Europe today on the steamship France. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

SEP 23 1926

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of Boston Symphony Orchestra, has arrived in Boston after five months abroad.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEWS LEADER
RICHMOND, VA.

SEP 23 1926

SAYS JAZZ AGE OVER

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

Brings New Musical Scores to Play Here

SERGEI KOUSSEVITZKY

KOUSSEVITZKY BACK IN BOSTON

Herald Sept 23

Symphony Conductor Has Entire Program Made Out for Season

DID MUCH WORK IN 'VACATION' ABROAD

Sergei Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, returned to Boston yesterday after four months in Europe, technically a vacation, though in reality a period for the most part tense with industry.

As evidence of the manner in which he spent his vacation, he had with him the entire program of the coming season of Symphony concerts, revised according to his latest decisions, and written out neatly on note paper of the S. S. France of the French line on which he and Madame Koussevitzky made the return voyage.

PROGRAMS PREPARED

Last night he was found in a suite at the Vendome, enjoying a little real relaxation for a change. There he granted an interview to The Herald, during which, literally dragged out of him, came to light the story of the manner of his "vacation." He was willing enough to talk of the coming Symphony season, and all the treasures and oddities of the musical world which it held. Never backward in whole-hearted praise of this or that composer, examples of whose genius will be heard here this season.

Yes, he was enthusiastic over prospects for the Symphony season, this quiet man of the magic baton, fired with true love of his art, but when it came to discussion of the work that had been entailed for him in gathering the wealth of melody which he brought back for the delight of Boston music lovers—well, as the saying goes, that's another story.

KOUSSEVITZKY BACK IN BOSTON

(Continued from Page One)

Music, scores never heard in this country, scores, many of which were written especially for the Boston Symphony, were mentioned by Mr. Koussevitzky, who gave great praise to these famous composers of Europe. Then, with the closing statement "written especially for the Boston Symphony" he dismissed the trouble, the disappointments which had faced him in the process of getting them to bring them back to Boston. Many scores, signed by famous men, he would not discuss at all at this time, or even mention.

Outside of this business of gathering such a wealth of material for the coming symphony season he conducted, while in Paris, his annual series of four "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Opera, one of the most popular of Europe's summer musical season.

Later he went to Zurich, where he assisted at the International Musical Festival, to which every country in the world sends its representative musicians and music.

"Did you find anything there you considered worthy of bringing back with you," he was asked?

"Yes," he replied, "I found there both good and bad, but among the good I found three studies which I will give this season. As a matter of fact I cannot help being pleased with the results of my searches. I have a number of things with me."

He almost seemed to begrudge shedding the light of publicity on his treasures, but among those of which he would speak were Respighi, the Italian composer, who wrote four studies for Boston. Albert Roussel composed an orchestral suite for the symphony, Alexander Tansman a symphony for Boston's orchestra. Others are three bits by the Russian, Prokofieff, never heard in this country, and Dorfscenen, written by the great Hungarian, Bela Bartok, for the League of Modern Composers, but to have its premiere here.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK WORLD

29

SEP 23 1926

JAZZ IS WANING, SAYS CONDUCTOR

Koussevitsky, Back on France, Believes New Musical Form Is Needed Now

FRENCH HYGIENIST HERE

Dr. Leon Bernard Will Attend Tuberculosis Conference

Dr. Leon Bernard, professor of hygiene at the University of Paris, and France's leading authority on hygiene and tuberculosis, arrived here yesterday on the French liner France.

Prof. Bernard, who is head of the French Government's Department of Hygiene, will attend an international congress on tuberculosis in Washington the end of this month.

Another arrival on the France was Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. "Jazz, as a musical form," he said, "is on the wane and will soon die. It has nothing further to contribute to music. It has given a great deal of color, but now a new form is needed and will probably soon arise."

Mona Morgan, Shakespearian actress, returned from a several weeks' visit abroad, which included a pilgrimage to Shakespeare's birthplace at Stratford-on-Avon.

While in Stratford she asked a gardener tending the greens about the poet's memorial, who was this man named Shakespeare, whose name had been used for the local hotel and many shops. The gardener, who had spent his entire life in Stratford, replied that he thought "Shakespeare was a writer." "He wrote for the Bible," further inquiry devoloped.

J. H. Thompson, Lemuel Bolles and M. Mackay, American Legion officials, reurned on the France from the Fidac convention of Allied veterans in Warsaw. They said the veterans' meeting approved a plan to invite German and Austrian delegations to an international meeting of men who served in the great war to be held at Luxembourg in six weeks.

The French liner avoided the hurricane that has been sweeping the North Atlantic through the full radio weather reports which were broadcast, according to Capt. Blancart, master of the France. He said he was able to adjust his course and speed to reach the storm swept area after the hurricane had passed.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.

SEP 23 1926

Boston Orchestra Conductor Finds Jazz Is Passing

New York, Sept. 23—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who returned from Europe yesterday on the steamship France.

The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM LIGHT
SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS

SEP 2[illegible]

Jazz Out of Date Declares Savant

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

ADVERTISER Sept 23

Symphony Head Back in Hub

Bringing nine new musical scores which will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitsky, conductor, is back in Boston for the winter musical season, after an extended European trip in search of new works.

The music brought back, which was especially written for the symphony orchestra, was composed by Alexander Tansman, Respighi and Roussel. Another special tidbit is "Classical" Symphony by Prokofiev.

musical form. Ought one to take this as a promise or as a menace?

TRANSCRIPT Sept 23

The Symphony in Crescendo

Mr. Koussevitzky's return quickens but can scarcely enlarge Boston's interest in the impending Symphony season. The orchestra, under his baton, has established such breadth of appeal that talk of still further increasing it is, in one sense of the word, for the moment quite idle. Long before the conductor had finished his European vacation, the mere knowledge that he would return for the current year had led to almost complete sale of all available tickets for the regular concerts of 1926-27. Today the hall for Friday afternoons, Saturday evenings and Monday evenings is fully sold out. A few scattering seats remain for the Tuesday series. To be sure, tickets for the Thursday concerts in Cambridge have not yet been offered, but shortly they will be, and when they are it is a foregone conclusion that not a place will remain. Apparently, if we are to talk of broadening the public in actual attendance upon the Symphony Concerts, we now must talk of broadening Symphony Hall, arcading it, perhaps, so that the audience room will cover all of Massachusetts avenue!

In the light of this situation, the decision of the trustees to accept the generous private offer for broadcasting all of this year's twenty-four concerts on Saturday evenings seems all the more surely commendable. An opportunity to follow the concerts will thus be given not only to thousands who never would have been inclined to give them ear were it not for the radio, but also in many cases to persons who cannot secure seats for the concerts, no matter how much they may desire to be within the hall. Moreover, the extension of Boston's interest in the Symphony Orchestra during recent years, whether as shown by the increased attendance or as encouraged among the vast new public that follows the radio, is obviously a force that is full of creative power. Just what the Symphony's way of responding to the new demand will be, precisely what lines of growth or modes of progress the orchestra will follow, no man can yet say. But one thing is certain. The demand cannot be denied satisfaction. So firmly founded, so notably excellent an institution as the Boston Symphony Orchestra will grow with the times. It will come to influence popular taste and popular standards in matters of music even more widely and richly than has ever yet been guessed.

Symphony Orchestra—
Who Has Just Returned—
From Europe, says—
Jazz, as a Musical Form—
Will Soon Die as It—
Has Nothing Further—
To Contribute to Music.
It Never had Anything—
But ONE TUNE to—
Contribute, Because—
ALL JAZZ TUNES—
Are the SAME.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
Plymouth Memorial Mas
SEP 24 1926

EDITORIALS

A DEPARTURE FROM THE MEDIOCRE

People Like To Be Entertained

This reason alone will attract many persons to mediocre entertainments.

There comes a time, however, when the public taste becomes satiated with the puerileness and mediocrity so often present in entertainment presented purely from the commercial point of view, and without due consideration of high standards and artistic excellence.

Theatricals of the commercial type, which for their success depend upon extravagant and vivid descriptive matter in their publicity tend to lower the standards of entertainment within a town and leave unpleasant after-effects which hurt the community.

The public has a fickle taste and when "fed up" on enterprises presented purely for monetary gain will in time refuse to patronize such offerings.

Wisely, the Plymouth Teachers' Club in planning their annual entertainment considered the public taste and decided upon a radically different programme for their annual presentation.

Through strenuous efforts this small organization has secured the Boston Symphony Orchestra which will give their programme in the Memorial Building on Tuesday night, October 19th. This successful culmination of the Teachers' Club plan has made this organization the first to break away from the common-place and the stereotyped in entertainment to the great satisfaction of those who appreciate artistic excellence. The after effect will have a beneficial and lasting effect upon the community and will do more to advertise Plymouth than any one other project yet promoted by any single organization.

The finest and best way in which the public can show its appreciation of this wide-awake organization is by packing the house on the night of Tuesday, October 19th. Should any profit result after paying expenses this balance will be applied to the scholarship fund annually awarded by the Teachers' Club.

That a "packed house" will result is safely assured for an attraction such as the Boston Symphony Orchestra will draw an audience from many miles away.

SUN
PITTSBURG, PA.
SEP 25 1926

Symphony Orchestra Season.

Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens the symphony season in Pittsburgh on November 5 and 6 at Syria Mosque, has the distinction of having been a virtuoso of the double-bass. When as a boy of 14 he entered the Moscow Conservatory, he was required by rules in the orchestral class to study either a brass instrument or the doublebass. He developed an extraordinary proficiency, and for the first 10 years of his professional career toured Europe giving recitals on this unusual instrument. In addition to Koussevitzky, other conductors to be heard in the series of seven pairs of concerts in Pittsburgh this season are Walter Damrosch, with his New York Symphony Orchestra; Willem Mengelberg, with the New York Philharmonic; Fritz Reiner, conductor of the Cincinnati Orchestra; Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra; Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis Orchestra; and Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor with the New York Philharmonic on its second appearance.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BILLBOARD

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 26 1926

Koussevitzky Returns

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned to Boston last Wednesday after spending the summer in Europe. He brought with him several new scores which promise to be of interest. The noted Russian conductor will assemble his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the Boston season on Oct. 8, and the first of the five concerts in this city will be given on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Koussevitsky, on being interviewed Thursday, expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in this city last spring which resulted in securing the Albee Theatre for the local concerts this season after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its Providence visits because no auditorium was available. The conductor said that he anticipates an eventful season and indicated that he will select for the local programmes the greatest of the old master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

As a result of his quest for new music in Europe Koussevitzky brought back to this country manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony, and which are to have their first performances in Boston.

* * *

NEW YORK AMERICAN
SEP 26 192

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY and a limited orchestra from the Boston Symphony have been specially engaged for a programme of unfamiliar chamber music consisting of one large and two smaller pieces. At the opening concert, the Belgian Pro-Arte Quartet will make its American debut with a group of modern compositions.

* * *

Boston Symphony conductor explains that a composition Paris audience howled off the stage was intended to test of mind of the hearers and was metaphysics and not Here's an alibi for the bum actor, when the crowd shouts: hook!"

SEP25 1926
HERALD
FALL RIVER, MASS.
SEP 24 1926

Boston Symphony Will Give Annual Series in New York

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sergei Koussevitzky, conductor, will give its annual series in Carnegie Hall, New York. There will be five [illegible]

SYMPHONYS' CONDUCTOR BACK HOME

Post — Sept 23

Koussevitzky Brings 9 New Works for Performance

Armed with the manuscripts of new scores especially composed for himself and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky, his characteristic smiling self, stepped off the "Knickerbocker" express at the Back Bay station at 5 minutes past 6 last evening.

"It is good to be back in Boston," were almost the conductor's first words, and he added immediately: "It seems so short a time since we left America. The summer has passed very quickly."

HAD STORMY VOYAGE

At 10 o'clock, this morning, Mr. and Mrs. Koussevitzky, with their entourage of secretary, maid and valet, reached New York aboard the steamship France, and, as it will be seen, they lost no time in coming to Boston, though, with customs and other formalities to be gone through with and catching the "I o'clock" involved considerable hustling. The crossing from Europe had been an unusually rough one, but neither Mr. or Mrs. Koussevitzky showed any ill effects from the stormy voyage.

Indeed, in his becoming ensemble of brown—felt hat, belted overcoat, suit, shoes and cravat—the conductor looked the picture of health, and not a little prepossessing. "Isn't he lovely?" was the comment of one feminine member of the party that had assembled to greet him.

New Home in Bay State Road

On leaving the station, the Koussevitzkys went straightway to the Hotel Vendome, where they will remain ensconsed in a commodious suite until Monday next, when it is expected that their new home at 131 Bay State road will be ready for their occupancy. Two large bunches of red roses, already installed, bore witness to friendly greetings, and a large vase full of flowers appeared shortly after the Koussevitzkys had arrived. As the box was being opened the conductor expressed—not too seriously— the hope that it might contain champagne. But he was doomed to disappointment.

Of the ensuing Symphony season Mr. Koussevitzky spoke encouragingly. He feels sure that the wealth of novel music that he purposes to introduce to Boston audiences will prove of more than common interest.

Among the pieces composed especially for performances at his hands are a Symphony by the Parisianized Pole, Alexander Tansman, of which the conductor speaks with especial enthusiasm; four Etudes by Respighi and a Suite by Roussel. For the first time in America Mr. Koussevitzky will conduct a little "Classical" Symphony by Prokofiev and a Suite from that composer's ballet, 'Buffon." The name of Bela Bartok, distinguished Hungarian modernist, will make its first appearance on the programmes of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a work composed for the League of Composers in New York but to be heard here prior to its performance in that city.

With Mr. Koussevitzky safely returned the musical public of Boston will now prick up its collective ears and eagerly await the Symphony opening. Something to make it 'sit up and take notice" is sure to come forth.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
ALBANY, N. Y.
SEP 26 192

BOSTON SYMPHONY SOON.

Seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast on Saturday evenings during October, November and December by stations WGY, WJZ and WBZ. The first will be October 9, with Serge Koussevitsky as conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 25 1926

KOUSSEVITZKY SEES GREAT SEASON HERE

Boston Symphony Conductor Looks Forward to Providence Visit.

(Special to the Evening Bulletin.)

Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will soon begin rehearsals for its 46th season, to-day expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five symphony concerts there, after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of a suitable auditorium.

Mr. Koussevitsky said he looked forward to a particularly eventful season in the Rhode Island capital and promised that his selection for the symphony programmes there would include the greatest of the works of the old masters in addition to the most sifinificant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor, who arrived from Europe on the La France last Wednesday, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony and will have their first performance in this city. Mr. Koussevitzky has many plans for the coming season, which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the famous composer's death.

The Providence season will comprise five Tuesday evening concerts on the following dates: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 25 192

KOUSSEVITZKY PLANS FIVE CONCERTS HERE

Serge Koussevitsky arrived from Europe on Wednesday to prepare for his third season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Russian leader brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which were written especially for this orchestra, and will have their first performance in Boston.

The conductor is full of plans for the coming season which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

The conductor expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in securing the E. F. Albee theatre for a series of five symphony concerts here, after it had been announced that the great orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of an autditorium. Koussevitsky looks forward to an eventful Providence season, and promises to select for these programs the greatest of the older master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

The Providence season will consist of [illegible] on Oct Feb

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 26 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY.

Last Wednesday, Serge Koussevitsky arrived from Europe to prepare for his third season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Russian leader, having consulted composers and publishers in Europe, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which were written especially for this orchestra, and will have their first performance in Boston.

The conductor is full of plans for the coming season which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

The conductor expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five Symphony concerts here, after it had been announced that the great orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of an auditorium. Koussevitzky looks forward to an eventful Providence season, and promises to select for these programs the greatest of the older master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor arrived on "La France," having divided his summer between his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, his quest of new music, and a well earned period of rest in French and Swiss resorts.

He will call his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of its 4th season, in Symphony Hall, on Oct. 8. The Providence season will consist of five Tuesday evening concerts on the following dates: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18, and Feb. 15.

Koussevitzky Returns

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned to Boston last Wednesday after spending the summer in Europe. He brought with him several new scores which promise to be of interest. The noted Russian conductor will assemble his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the Boston season on Oct. 8, and the first of the five concerts in this city will be given on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Koussevitsky, on being interviewed Thursday, expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in this city last spring which resulted in securing the Albee Theatre for the local concerts this season after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its Providence visits because no auditorium [illegible]

Koussevitzky PROVIDENCE JOURNAL Sept 26

THIS CLIPPING FROM
DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
SEP 23 1926

SAYS JAZZ IS DONE.

New York, Sept. 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who returned from Europe to-day on the steamship France. The time has come for something else to take the place of Jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
PITTSBURGH, PA.
SEP 26 1926

SYMPHONY CONCERTS

Serge Koussevitsky, the conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, which opens the symphony season in Pittsburgh on November 5 and 6 at Syria Mosque, has the sole distinction of having been a virtuoso of the double bass. When as a boy of 14 he entered the Moscow University he was required by rules in the orchestral class to study either a brass instrument or the double bass. He developed an extraordinary proficiency, and for the first 10 years of his professional career toured Europe, giving recitals on this unusual instrument. He even composed a concerto for the double bass, which he played with the leading orchestras of the time. The rigors of a conductor's duties have compelled Koussevitzky more or less to lay aside his beloved "Amati," but it has never been far from him. He first played it publicly in this country at Brown University in Providence, when last February the degree of doctor of music was conferred upon him.

In addition to Koussevitzky, other conductors to be heard in the series of seven pairs in Pittsburgh this season are Walter Damrosch, who returns after an absence of 10 years with his New York Symphony orchestra; Willem Mengelberg, with the New York Philharmonic; Fritz Reiner, conductor of the Cincinnati orchestra; Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland orchestra; Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis orchestra, and Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor with the New York Philharmonic on its second appearance.

THIS CLIPPING FROM CHRONICLE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SEP 19 192

[illegible] tions to broadcast

Boston Symphony To Be Broadcast

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be heard on Saturday evenings during October, November and December, through stations WGY, Schenectady; WBZ Springfield, and WJZ New York. The concerts are scheduled for October 9, 16 and 23; November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PLAINDEALER
CLEVELAND, OHIO
SEP 19 192

* * *

Boston Symphony Soon.

Seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast on Saturday evenings during October, November and December by stations WGY, WJZ and WBZ. The first will be on Oct. 9, with Serge Koussevitsky as conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
Plymouth Memorial Mas
SEP 24 1926

EDITORIALS

* * *

A DEPARTURE FROM THE MEDIOCRE

* * *

People Like To Be Entertained

* * *

This reason alone will attract many persons to mediocre entertainments.

There comes a time, however, when the public taste becomes satiated with the puerileness and mediocrity so often present in entertainment presented purely from the commercial point of view, and without due consideration of high standards and artistic excellence.

Theatricals of the commercial type, which for their success depend upon extravagant and vivid descriptive matter in their publicity tend to lower the standards of entertainment within a town and leave unpleasant after-effects which hurt the community.

The public has a fickle taste and when "fed up" on enterprises presented purely for monetary gain will in time refuse to patronize such offerings.

Wisely, the Plymouth Teachers' Club in planning their annual entertainment considered the public taste and decided upon a radically different programme for their annual presentation.

Through strenuous efforts this small organization has secured the Boston Symphony Orchestra which will give their programme in the Memorial Building on Tuesday night, October 19th. This successful culmination of the Teachers' Club plan has made this organization the first to break away from the common-place and the stereotyped in entertainment to the great satisfaction of those who appreciate artistic excellence. The after effect will have a beneficial and lasting effect upon the community and will do more to advertise Plymouth than any one other project yet promoted by any single organization.

The finest and best way in which the public can show its appreciation of this wide-awake organization is by packing the house on the night of Tuesday, October 19th. Should any profit result after paying expenses this balance will be applied to the scholarship fund annually awarded by the Teachers' Club.

That a "packed house" will result is safely assured for an attraction such as the Boston Symphony Orchestra will draw an audience from many miles away.

SUN
PITTSBURG, PA.

SEP 25 1926

Symphony Orchestra Season.

Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens the symphony season in Pittsburgh on November 5 and 6 at Syria Mosque, has the distinction of having been a virtuoso of the double-bass. When as a boy of 14 he entered the Moscow Conservatory, he was required by rules in the orchestral class to study either a brass instrument or the doublebass. He developed an extraordinary proficiency, and for the first 10 years of his professional career toured Europe giving recitals on this unusual instrument. In addition to Koussevitzky, other conductors to be heard in the series of seven pairs of concerts in Pittsburgh this season are Walter Damrosch, with his New York Symphony Orchestra; Willem Mengelberg, with the New York Philharmonic; Fritz Reiner, conductor of the Cincinnati Orchestra; Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra; Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis Orchestra; and Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor with the New York Philharmonic on its second appearance.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BILLBOARD

SEP 25 19

Boston Symphony Will Give Annual Series in New York

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sergei Koussevitzky, conductor, will give its annual series in Carnegie Hall, New York. There will be five Thursday [illegible]

HERALD
FALL RIVER, MASS.

SEP 24 1926

Boston Symphony conductor explains that a composition Paris audience howled off the stage was intended to test of mind of the hearers and was metaphysics and not Here's an alibi for the bum actor, when the crowd shouts: hook!"

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 25 1926

Koussevitzky Returns

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned to Boston last Wednesday after spending the summer in Europe. He brought with him several new scores which promise to be of interest. The noted Russian conductor will assemble his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the Boston season on Oct. 8, and the first of the five concerts in this city will be given on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Koussevitsky, on being interviewed Thursday, expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in this city last spring which resulted in securing the Albee Theatre for the local concerts this season after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its Providence visits because no auditorium was available. The conductor said that he anticipates an eventful season and indicated that he will select for the local programmes the greatest of the old master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

As a result of his quest for new music in Europe Koussevitzky brought back to this country manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony, and which are to have their first performances in Boston.

* * *

NEW YORK AMERICAN

SEP 2 8 192

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY and a limited orchestra from the Boston Symphony have been specially engaged for a programme of unfamiliar chamber music consisting of one large and two smaller pieces. At the opening concert, the Belgian Pro-Arte Quartet will make its American debut with a group of modern compositions.

* * *

SYMPHONYS' CONDUCTOR BACK HOME

Post — Sept 23

Koussevitzky Brings 9 New Works for Performance

Armed with the manuscripts of new scores especially composed for himself and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky, his characteristic smiling self, stepped off the "Knickerbocker" express at the Back Bay station at 5 minutes past 6 last evening.

"It is good to be back in Boston," were almost the conductor's first words, and he added immediately: "It seems so short a time since we left America. The summer has passed very quickly."

HAD STORMY VOYAGE

At 10 o'clock, this morning, Mr. and Mrs. Koussevitzky, with their entourage of secretary, maid and valet, reached New York aboard the steamship France, and, as it will be seen, they lost no time in coming to Boston, though, with customs and other formalities to be gone through with and catching the "I o'clock" involved considerable hustling. The crossing from Europe had been an unusually rough one, but neither Mr. or Mrs. Koussevitzky showed any ill effects from the stormy voyage.

Indeed, in his becoming ensemble of brown—felt hat, belted overcoat, suit, shoes and cravat—the conductor looked the picture of health, and not a little prepossessing. "Isn't he lovely?" was the comment of one feminine member of the party that had assembled to greet him.

New Home in Bay State Road

On leaving the station, the Koussevitzkys went straightway to the Hotel Vendome, where they will remain ensconsed in a commodious suite until Monday next, when it is expected that their new home at 131 Bay State road will be ready for their occupancy. Two large bunches of red roses, already installed, bore witness to friendly greetings, and a large vase full of flowers appeared shortly after the Koussevitzkys had arrived. As the box was being opened the conductor expressed—not too seriously— the hope that it might contain champagne. But he was doomed to disappointment.

Of the ensuing Symphony season Mr. Koussevitzky spoke encouragingly. He feels sure that the wealth of novel music that he purposes to introduce to Boston audiences will prove of more than common interest.

Among the pieces composed especially for performances at his hands are a Symphony by the Parisianized Pole, Alexander Tansman, of which the conductor speaks with especial enthusiasm; four Etudes by Respighi and a Suite by Roussel. For the first time in America Mr. Koussevitzky will conduct a little "Classical" Symphony by Prokofiev and a Suite from that composer's ballet, 'Buffon." The name of Bela Bartok, distinguished Hungarian modernist, will make its first appearance on the programmes of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a work composed for the League of Composers in New York but to be heard here prior to its performance in that city.

With Mr. Koussevitzky safely returned the musical public of Boston will now prick up its collective ears and eagerly await the Symphony opening. Something to make it sit up and take notice" is sure to come forth.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
ALBANY, N. Y.

SEP 26 19

BOSTON SYMPHONY SOON.

Seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast on Saturday evenings during October, November and December by stations WGY, WJZ and WBZ. The first will be October 9, with Serge Koussevitsky as conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 25 192

KOUSSEVITZKY SEES GREAT SEASON HERE

Boston Symphony Conductor Looks Forward to Providence Visit.

(Special to the Evening Bulletin.)

Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will soon begin rehearsals for its 46th season, to-day expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five symphony concerts there, after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of a suitable auditorium.

Mr. Koussevitsky said he looked forward to a particularly eventful season in the Rhode Island capital and promised that his selection for the symphony programmes there would include the greatest of the works of the old masters in addition to the most sifinificant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor, who arrived from Europe on the La France last Wednesday, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony and will have their first performance in this city. Mr. Koussevitzky has many plans for the coming season, which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the famous composer's death.

The Providence season will comprise five Tuesday evening concerts on the following dates: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

Koussevitzky PROVIDENCE JOURNAL
Returns Sept 26

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned to Boston last Wednesday after spending the summer in Europe. He brought with him several new scores which promise to be of interest. The noted Russian conductor will assemble his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the Boston season on Oct. 8, and the first of the five concerts in this city will be given on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Koussevitsky, on being interviewed Thursday, expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in this city last spring which resulted in securing the Albee Theatre for the local concerts this season after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its Providence visits because no auditorium [illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM
DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

SEP 2 3 1926

SAYS JAZZ IS DONE.

New York, Sept. 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who returned from Europe to-day on the steamship France. The time has come for something else to take the place of Jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 25 192

KOUSSEVITZKY PLANS FIVE CONCERTS HERE

Serge Koussevitsky arrived from Europe on Wednesday to prepare for his third season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Russian leader brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which were written especially for this orchestra, and will have their first performance in Boston.

The conductor is full of plans for the coming season which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

The conductor expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in securing the E. F. Albee theatre for a series of five symphony concerts here, after it had been announced that the great orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of an autditorium. Koussevitsky looks forward to an eventful Providence season, and promises to select for these programs the greatest of the older master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

The Providence season will consist of [illegible] on Oc Fe

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
PITTSBURGH, PA.

SEP 28 192

SYMPHONY CONCERTS

Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, which opens the symphony season in Pittsburgh on November 5 and 6 at Syria Mosque, has the sole distinction of having been a virtuoso of the double bass. When as a boy of 14 he entered the Moscow University he was required by rules in the orchestral class to study either a brass instrument or the double bass. He developed an extraordinary proficiency, and for the first 10 years of his professional career toured Europe, giving recitals on this unusual instrument. He even composed a concerto for the double bass, which he played with the leading orchestras of the time. The rigors of a conductor's duties have compelled Koussevitzky more or less to lay aside his beloved "Amati," but it has never been far from him. He first played it publicly in this country at Brown University in Providence, when last February the degree of doctor of music was conferred upon him.

In addition to Koussevitzky, other conductors to be heard in the series of seven pairs in Pittsburgh this season are Walter Damrosch, who returns after an absence of 10 years with his New York Symphony orchestra; Willem Mengelberg, with the New York Philharmonic; Fritz Reiner, conductor of the Cincinnati orchestra; Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland orchestra; Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis orchestra, and Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor with the New York Philharmonic on its second appearance.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 26 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY.

Last Wednesday, Serge Koussevitsky arrived from Europe to [illegible] third season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Russian leader, having consulted composers and publishers in Europe, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which were written especially for this orchestra, and will have their first performance in Boston.

The conductor is full of plans for the coming season which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

The conductor expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five Symphony concerts here, after it had been announced that the great orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of an auditorium. Koussevitsky looks forward to an eventful Providence season, and promises to select for these programs the greatest of the older master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor arrived on "La France," having divided his summer between his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, his quest of new music, and a well earned period of rest in French and Swiss resorts.

He will call his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of its 4th season, in Symphony Hall, on Oct. 8. The Providence season will consist of five Tuesday evening concerts on the following dates: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18, and Feb. 1[illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM
CHRONICLE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SEP 19 192[illegible]

[illegible] to broadcast

Boston Symphony To Be Broadcast

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be heard on Saturday evenings during October, November and December, through stations WGY, Schenectady; WBZ Springfield, and WJZ, New York. The concerts are scheduled for October 9, 16 and 23; November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM PLAINDEALER
CLEVELAND, OHIO

SEP 19 192[illegible]

* * *

Boston Symphony Soon.

Seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast on Saturday evenings during October, November and December by stations WGY, WJZ and WBZ. The first will be on Oct. 9, with Serge Koussevitsky as conductor.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THIS CLIPPING FROM Plymouth Mass
Memorial
SEP 24 1926

EDITORIALS

* * *

A DEPARTURE FROM THE MEDIOCRE

* * *

People Like To Be Entertained

* * *

This reason alone will attract many persons to mediocre entertainments.

There comes a time, however, when the public taste becomes satiated with the puerileness and mediocrity so often present in entertainment presented purely from the commercial point of view, and without due consideration of high standards and artistic excellence.

Theatricals of the commercial type, which for their success depend upon extravagant and vivid descriptive matter in their publicity tend to lower the standards of entertainment within a town and leave unpleasant after-effects which hurt the community.

The public has a fickle taste and when "fed up" on enterprises presented purely for monetary gain will in time refuse to patronize such offerings.

Wisely, the Plymouth Teachers' Club in planning their annual entertainment considered the public taste and decided upon a radically different programme for their annual presentation.

Through strenuous efforts this small organization has secured the Boston Symphony Orchestra which will give their programme in the Memorial Building on Tuesday night, October 19th. This successful culmination of the Teachers' Club plan has made this organization the first to break away from the common-place and the stereotyped in entertainment to the great satisfaction of those who appreciate artistic excellence. The after effect will have a beneficial and lasting effect upon the community and will do more to advertise Plymouth than any one other project yet promoted by any single organization.

The finest and best way in which the public can show its appreciation of this wide-awake organization is by packing the house on the night of Tuesday, October 19th. Should any profit result after paying expenses this balance will be applied to the scholarship fund annually awarded by the Teachers' Club.

That a "packed house" will result is safely assured for an attraction such as the Boston Symphony Orchestra will draw an audience from many miles away.

SUN
PITTSBURG, PA.

SEP 25 1926

Symphony Orchestra Season.

Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens the symphony season in Pittsburgh on November 5 and 6 at Syria Mosque, has the distinction of having been a virtuoso of the doublebass. When as a boy of 14 he entered the Moscow Conservatory, he was required by rules in the orchestral class to study either a brass instrument or the doublebass. He developed an extraordinary proficiency, and for the first 10 years of his professional career toured Europe giving recitals on this unusual instrument. In addition to Koussevitzky, other conductors to be heard in the series of seven pairs of concerts in Pittsburgh this season are Walter Damrosch, with his New York Symphony Orchestra; Willem Mengelberg, with the New York Philharmonic; Fritz Reiner, conductor of the Cincinnati Orchestra; Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra; Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis Orchestra; and Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor with the New York Philharmonic on its second appearance.

THIS CLIPPING FROM BILLBOARD

SEP 25 1926

Boston Symphony Will Give Annual Series in New York

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sergei Koussevitzky, conductor, will give its annual series in Carnegie Hall, New York. There will be five Thursday evening and five Saturday afternoon concerts, with the opening program scheduled for November 25 and the final concert April 9.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 25 1926

Koussevitzky Returns

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned to Boston last Wednesday after spending the summer in Europe. He brought with him several new scores which promise to be of interest. The noted Russian conductor will assemble his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the Boston season on Oct. 8, and the first of the five concerts in this city will be given on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Koussevitsky, on being interviewed Thursday, expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in this city last spring which resulted in securing the Albee Theatre for the local concerts this season after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its Providence visits because no auditorium was available. The conductor said that he anticipates an eventful season and indicated that he will select for the local programmes the greatest of the old master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

As a result of his quest for new music in Europe Koussevitzky brought back to this country manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony, and which are to have their first performances in Boston.

* * *

NEW YORK AMERICAN

SEP 26 1926

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY and a limited orchestra from the Boston Symphony have been specially engaged for a programme of unfamiliar chamber music consisting of one large and two smaller pieces. At the opening concert, the Belgian Pro-Arte Quartet will make its American debut with a group of modern compositions.

* * *

or explains that a composition he stage was intended to test nd was metaphysics and not actor, when the crowd shouts: hook!"

SYMPHONYS' CONDUCTOR BACK HOME

Post — Sept 23

Koussevitzky Brings 9 New Works for Performance

Armed with the manuscripts of new scores especially composed for himself and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky, his characteristic smiling self, stepped off the "Knickerbocker" express at the Back Bay station at 5 minutes past 6 last evening.

"It is good to be back in Boston," were almost the conductor's first words, and he added immediately: "It seems so short a time since we left America. The summer has passed very quickly."

HAD STORMY VOYAGE

At 10 o'clock, this morning, Mr. and Mrs. Koussevitzky, with their entourage of secretary, maid and valet, reached New York aboard the steamship France, and, as it will be seen, they lost no time in coming to Boston, though, with customs and other formalities to be gone through with and catching the "I o'clock" involved considerable hustling. The crossing from Europe had been an unusually rough one, but neither Mr. or Mrs. Koussevitzky showed any ill effects from the stormy voyage.

Indeed, in his becoming ensemble of brown—felt hat, belted overcoat, suit, shoes and cravat—the conductor looked the picture of health, and not a little prepossessing. "Isn't he lovely?" was the comment of one feminine member of the party that had assembled to greet him.

New Home in Bay State Road

On leaving the station, the Koussevitzkys went straightway to the Hotel Vendome, where they will remain ensconsed in a commodious suite until Monday next, when it is expected that their new home at 131 Bay State road will be ready for their occupancy. Two large bunches of red roses, already installed, bore witness to friendly greetings, and a large vase full of flowers appeared shortly after the Koussevitzkys had arrived. As the box was being opened the conductor expressed—not too seriously— the hope that it might contain champagne. But he was doomed to disappointment.

Of the ensuing Symphony season Mr. Koussevitzky spoke encouragingly. He feels sure that the wealth of novel music that he purposes to introduce to Boston audiences will prove of more than common interest.

Among the pieces composed especially for performances at his hands are a Symphony by the Parisianized Pole, Alexander Tansman, of which the conductor speaks with especial enthusiasm; four Etudes by Respighi and a Suite by Roussel. For the first time in America Mr. Koussevitzky will conduct a little "Classical" Symphony by Prokofiev and a Suite from that composer's ballet, 'Buffon." The name of Bela Bartok, distinguished Hungarian modernist, will make its first appearance on the programmes of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a work composed for the League of Composers in New York but to be heard here prior to its performance in that city.

With Mr. Koussevitzky safely returned the musical public of Boston will now prick up its collective ears and eagerly await the Symphony opening. Something to make it 'sit up and take notice" is sure to come forth.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
ALBANY, N. Y.

SEP 26 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY SOON.

Seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast on Saturday evenings during October, November and December by stations WGY, WJZ and WBZ. The first will be October 9, with Serge Koussevitsky as conductor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 25 1926

KOUSSEVITZKY SEES GREAT SEASON HERE

Boston Symphony Conductor Looks Forward to Providence Visit.

(Special to the Evening Bulletin.)

Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will soon begin rehearsals for its 46th season, to-day expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five symphony concerts there, after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of a suitable auditorium.

Mr. Koussevitsky said he looked forward to a particularly eventful season in the Rhode Island capital and promised that his selection for the symphony programmes there would include the greatest of the works of the old masters in addition to the most sifinificant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor, who arrived from Europe on the La France last Wednesday, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony and will have their first performance in this city. Mr. Koussevitzky has many plans for the coming season, which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the famous composer's death.

The Providence season will comprise five Tuesday evening concerts on the following dates: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 25 1926

KOUSSEVITZKY PLANS FIVE CONCERTS HERE

Serge Koussevitsky arrived from Europe on Wednesday to prepare for his third season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Russian leader brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which were written especially for this orchestra, and will have their first performance in Boston.

The conductor is full of plans for the coming season which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

The conductor expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in securing the E. F. Albee theatre for a series of five symphony concerts here, after it had been announced that the great orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of an autditorium. Koussevitsky looks forward to an eventful Providence season, and promises to select for these programs the greatest of the older master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

The Providence season will consist of five Tuesday evening concerts on Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 26 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY.

Last Wednesday, Serge Koussevitsky arrived from Europe to prepare for his third season in America as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Russian leader, having consulted composers and publishers in Europe, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which were written especially for this orchestra, and will have their first performance in Boston.

The conductor is full of plans for the coming season which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the composer's death.

The conductor expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five Symphony concerts here, after it had been announced that the great orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of an auditorium. Koussevitzky looks forward to an eventful Providence season, and promises to select for these programs the greatest of the older master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor arrived on "La France," having divided his summer between his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" in Paris, his quest of new music, and a well earned period of rest in French and Swiss resorts.

He will call his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of its 4th season, in Symphony Hall, on Oct. 8. The Providence season will consist of five Tuesday evening concerts on the following dates: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18, and Feb. 15.

Koussevitzky Returns

Providence Journal
Sept 26

Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned to Boston last Wednesday after spending the summer in Europe. He brought with him several new scores which promise to be of interest. The noted Russian conductor will assemble his orchestra for rehearsal next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the Boston season on Oct. 8, and the first of the five concerts in this city will be given on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26.

Koussevitsky, on being interviewed Thursday, expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in this city last spring which resulted in securing the Albee Theatre for the local concerts this season after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its Providence visits because no auditorium was available. The conductor said that he anticipates an eventful season and indicated that he will select for the local programmes the greatest of the old master works and the most significant of the newer scores.

As a result of his quest for new music in Europe Koussevitzky brought back to this country manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony, and which are to have their first performances in Boston.

New ... Associated Pre... its bolt, in the opinio... sevitzky, conductor of t... Symphony Orchestra, who ... from Europe to-day on the steamship France. The time has come for something else to take the place of Jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it had added nothing to modern music.

of having ... bass. When as a b... tered the Moscow University he was required by rules in the orchestral class to study either a brass instrument or the double bass. He developed an extraordinary proficiency, and for the first 10 years of his professional career toured Europe, giving recitals on this unusual instrument. He even composed a concerto for the double bass, which he played with the leading orchestras of the time. The rigors of a conductor's duties have compelled Koussevitzky more or less to lay aside his beloved "Amati," but it has never been far from him. He first played it publicly in this country at Brown University in Providence, when last February the degree of doctor of music was conferred upon him.

In addition to Koussevitzky, other conductors to be heard in the series of seven pairs in Pittsburgh this season are Walter Damrosch, who returns after an absence of 10 years with his New York Symphony orchestra; Willem Mengelberg, with the New York Philharmonic; Fritz Reiner, conductor of the Cincinnati orchestra; Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Cleveland orchestra; Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis orchestra, and Wilhelm Furtwaengler, conductor with the New York Philharmonic on its second appearance.

THIS CLIPPING FROM CHRONICLE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SEP 19 1926

tions to broadcast.

Boston Symphony To Be Broadcast

A series of seven concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be heard on Saturday evenings during October, November and December, through stations WGY, Schenectady; WBZ Springfield, and WJZ, New York. The concerts are scheduled for October 9, 16 and 23; November 20 and December 4, 11 and 25. Serge Koussevitsky will be the conductor.

...phony Soon.

...concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra will be broadcast on Saturday evenings during October, November and December by stations WGY, WJZ and WBZ. The first will be on Oct. 9, with Serge Koussevitsky as conductor.

KOUSSEVITZKY HERE FOR CONCERT SEASON

Globe Sept 23

ymphony Leader Brings New Compositions

As brilliant as one of his own concerts, Serge Koussevitzky, admired conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in Boston early last night, after nearly five months abroad. Scarcely ever has the Back Bay Station seen a more gorgeous figure than that of the Symphony leader as he stepped off the Knickerbocker Limited and greeted many friends who had come to welcome him and Mme Koussevitzky.

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

He wore a suit that was a symphony all by itself. Tans and light browns intermingled quite fetchingly, and there was just a touch of red, too. There were tan shoes, fawn-colored spats, a shirt with collar to match of light browns and tans, and a cravat of light tan and brown with little floral decorations. There was also a light tan fedora. Mme Koussevitzky was quite overshadowed by all this elegance.

The couple, escorted by maid and valet, who took care of their dozens of trunks and bags, were driven to the Hotel Vendome, where they will stay until Monday, when their new home at 131 Bay State road will be in order. Mr Koussevitzky will start rehearsals on Oct 2, and in the meantime he will begin to make various programs for the year.

Droll. Boston terrier, which became Mr Koussevitzky's property two years ago, returned from Europe with his master and was quite the pet of the lobby while the Koussevitzkys were registering.

"It will be a most interesting season," promised Mr Koussevitzky. He refused to say whether he would give his Boston audiences more modern music or not. He is planning a Beethoven Festival in the Spring, celebrating the 100th anniversary of the composer. At these six or seven concerts the nine symphonies of Beethoven will be played.

Koussevitzky has brought back a new symphony, written by Alexander Tasman especially for Boston. Then there are four new etudes by Respighi and works by Roussel, "Choux," or "Buffoon," by Prokofieff, a modern Russian composer, whose "Seven, They Are Seven," was played by the Symphony Orchestra last season, will be one of the new numbers. Mr Koussevitzky played this in his Concerts Koussevitzky which he conducted in Paris this Summer. He also played "Music for the Theatre" there. This was written by a Brooklyn composer, Copland, and created much interest in Paris. He plans to add it to his orchestra's repertory.

But "Preface to Life," the symphony which created so much excitement in Paris, will not be played for Boston audiences. When Koussevitzky offered this extremely modern number, with groans instead of singing and other strange devices, the French people hissed and yelled and started a real riot.

"An interesting experiment," shrugged Mr Koussevitzky, "but, after all, only an experiment. It was metaphysics, not music."

THIS CLIPPING FROM RECORD
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SEP 19 1926

The trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have decided to broadcast all the regular concerts of that organization during the coming season, and radio fans in the immediate vicinity of Boston are naturally delighted. What will be the effect upon the attendance at the concerts remains to be seen. The trustees evidently feel that there will be no detriment to the box office receipts, but that is open to question. If the seats were all, or nearly all, sold far in advance, as is the case with most other large orchestras, the effect might be negligible, but there is reason to believe that many music-lovers will prefer to remain comfortably at home and enjoy the concerts free of charge rather than journey in to the auditorium and pay out their money for seats and transportation.

SEP 19 1926

CONCERT SERIES OPENS OCTOBER 9

24 Boston Symphony Programs to Be Broadcast by WBZ, Springfield.

OTHER STATIONS TIE-IN

WJZ, WGY and WRC to Join in Initial Offering Presented by 107 Musicians.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 18.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 o'clock Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that ever has listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced yesterday by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Restricted Activities.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris.

During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in Northern France.

W. S. Quniby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history, January 23 of this year.

Schedule of Concerts.

This followed the broadcasting of 12 symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra. All were sponsored by Mr. Quimby.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

THIS CLIPPING FROM JOURNAL COURIER
LOUISVILLE, KY.

SEP 19 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY AGAIN RADIOCASTS

Boston, Sept. 18—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 7:10 o'clock Saturday night, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians is expected to be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK AMERICAN

SEP 28 192

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, the Boston Philharmonic's conductor, got back aboard the French liner, also, and said the usual thing. You've forgotten it? Well, here it is, for the last time:

"Jazz has shot its bolt . . . time coming when it will be replaced."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK SUN

SEP 18 1926

Boston Symphony to Go on Air

WHEN the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 8:10 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire twenty-four concerts of the symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi River.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the France on September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bains in northern France.

W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of Symphony. As a results of his efforts the Boston Symphony Orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of twelve Symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra

THIS CLIPPING FROM ADVERTISER

SEP 23 192

Fifteen Stations Will Join To Broadcast Symphoney Concerts

Boston, Mass.,—Sept. 23—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quimby, head of the Boston, New York, and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22, and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM TIMES DISPATCH
RICHMOND, VA.

SEP 19 1926

31

STATIONS SPREADING OUT WITH IMPROVED FEATURES

Boston Symphony Will Be Heard on Air—Opera Stars to Sing Weekly and World's Series and Football Are Programmed.

A survey of the broadcasting stations reveals the plans of the studio directors this season. It is evident that the entertainment this fall and winer will be of high quality, including concerts by leading operatic stars, philharmonic orchestras and musicals sponsored by phonograph concerns. There will be many political talks and concerts by the most prominent symphony orchestras in the United States.

Boston Symphony—WBZ.

"Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our fall schedule. Beginning October 9, the series of twenty-four concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be presented from 8:15 until 10 P. M., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays, when the orchestra is on tour.

PORTLAND, ORE.
TELEGRAM

SEP 18 192

JAZZ AGAIN SCHEDULED F

B
NEW has sh
Serge
the Bo has ju time h take t claring has ad

LOS ANGELES
CAL.
EXAMINER

SEP 19 192

Write a Dirge for Jazz; Serge Says It's Dead

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP).

JAZZ has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who has just returned from Europe.

The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it has added nothing to modern music.

CLEVELAND,
OHIO
NEWS

SEP 28 192

BOSTON'S FINE ORCHESTRA TO RESUME RADIO

Koussevitzky Will Direct Symphonists in Forty-sixth Season; Will Be on WBZ Programs.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at ten minutes past 8 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced recently by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France on September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in northern France.

Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of 12 symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the pops orchestra. These were all sponsored by Mr. Quinby.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 28 192

HUB SYMPHONY WILL BROADCAST

Inaugural Tie of New England Station for Series of Concerts

Boston, Sept. 25.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday night concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by WBZ which will feed the concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23, Nov. 20, Dec. 4, 11 and 25, Jan. 22 and 29, Feb. 19 and 26, March 5,

THIS CLIPPING FROM CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS

SEP 25 192

BOSTON SYMPHONY WILL BE BROADCAST BY WBZ

Station WBZ has announced a schedule for the winter, which includes twenty-four concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra. The first symphony concert will be heard the evening of Oct. 9, with others following each Saturday of that month. Only two programs will be presented during November, but four will come on the air in both December and January. In February, March and April a total of ten concerts will be given. These concerts as they occur will be listed in the "Pick of the Air" and the DX programs which appear in The Daily News radio section each day.

KOUSSEVITZKY HERE FOR CONCERT SEASON

Globe Sept 23

Symphony Leader Brings New Compositions

As brilliant as one of his own concerts, Serge Koussevitzky, admired conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in Boston early last night, after nearly five months abroad. Scarcely ever has the Back Bay Station seen a more gorgeous figure than that of the Symphony leader as he stepped off the Knickerbocker Limited and greeted many friends who had come to welcome him and Mme Koussevitzky.

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

He wore a suit that was a symphony all by itself. Tans and light browns intermingled quite fetchingly, and there was just a touch of red, too. There were tan shoes, fawn-colored spats, a shirt with collar to match of light browns and tans, and a cravat of light tan and brown with little floral decorations. There was also a light tan fedora. Mme Koussevitzky was quite overshadowed by all this elegance.

The couple, escorted by maid and valet, who took care of their dozens of trunks and bags, were driven to the Hotel Vendome, where they will stay until Monday, when their new home at 131 Bay State road will be in order. Mr Koussevitzky will start rehearsals on Oct 2, and in the meantime he will begin to make various programs for the year.

Droll. Boston terrier, which became Mr Koussevitzky's property two years ago, returned from Europe with his master and was quite the pet of the lobby while the Koussevitzkys were registering.

"It will be a most interesting season," promised Mr Koussevitzky. He refused to say whether he would give his Boston audiences more modern music or not. He is planning a Beethoven Festival in the Spring, celebrating the 100th anniversary of the composer. At these six or seven concerts the nine symphonies of Beethoven will be played.

Koussevitzky has brought back a new symphony, written by Alexander Tasman especially for Boston. Then there are four new etudes by Respighi and works by Roussel, "Choux," or "Buffoon," by Prokofieff, a modern Russian composer, whose "Seven, They Are Seven," was played by the Symphony Orchestra last season, will be one of the new numbers. Mr Koussevitzky played this in his Concerts Koussevitzky which he conducted in Paris this Summer. He also played "Music for the Theatre" there. This was written by a Brooklyn composer, Copland, and created much interest in Paris. He plans to add it to his orchestra's repertory.

But "Preface to Life," the symphony which created so much excitement in Paris, will not be played for Boston audiences. When Koussevitzky offered this extremely modern number, with groans instead of singing and other strange devices, the French people hissed and yelled and started a real riot.

"An interesting experiment," shrugged Mr Koussevitzky, "but, after all, only an experiment. It was metaphysics, not music."

THIS CLIPPING FROM RECORD
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SEP 19 1926

The trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have decided to broadcast all the regular concerts of that organization during the coming season, and radio fans in the immediate vicinity of Boston are naturally delighted. What will be the effect upon the attendance at the concerts remains to be seen. The trustees evidently feel that there will be no detriment to the box office receipts, but that is open to question. If the seats were all, or nearly all, sold far in advance, as is the case with most other large orchestras, the effect might be negligible, but there is reason to believe that many music-lovers will prefer to remain comfortably at home and enjoy the concerts free of charge rather than journey in to the auditorium and pay out their money for seats and transportation.

POST STANDARD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 19 1926

CONCERT SERIES OPENS OCTOBER 9

24 Boston Symphony Programs to Be Broadcast by WBZ, Springfield.

OTHER STATIONS TIE-IN

WJZ, WGY and WRC to Join in Initial Offering Presented by 107 Musicians.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 18.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8.10 o'clock Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that ever has listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced yesterday by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Restricted Activities.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris.

During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in Northern France.

W. S. Quniby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history, January 23 of this year.

Schedule of Concerts.

This followed the broadcasting of 12 symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra. All were sponsored by Mr. Quimby.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

THIS CLIPPING FROM JOURNAL COURIER
LOUISVILLE, KY.

SEP 23 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY AGAIN RADIOCASTS

Boston, Sept. 18—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 7.10 o'clock Saturday night, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians is expected to be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK AMERICAN

SEP 23 19

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, the Boston Philharmonic's conductor, got back aboard the French liner, also, and said the usual thing. You've forgotten it? Well, here it is, for the last time:

"Jazz has shot its bolt . . . time coming when it will be replaced."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK SUN

SEP 18 1926

Boston Symphony to Go on Air

WHEN the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 8:10 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire twenty-four concerts of the symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi River.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the France on September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bains in northern France.

W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of Symphony. As a results of his efforts the Boston Symphony Orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of twelve Symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra

THIS CLIPPING FROM ADVERTISER

SEP 23 19

Fifteen Stations Will Join To Broadcast Symphoney Concerts

Boston, Mass.,—Sept. 23—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quimby, head of the Boston, New York, and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22, and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM TIMES DISPATCH
RICHMOND, VA.

SEP 19 1926

31

STATIONS SPREADING OUT WITH IMPROVED FEATURES

Boston Symphony Will Be Heard on Air—Opera Stars to Sing Weekly and World's Series and Football Are Programmed.

A survey of the broadcasting stations reveals the plans of the studio directors this season. It is evident that the entertainment this fall and winer will be of high quality, including concerts by leading operatic stars, philharmonic orchestras and musicals sponsored by phonograph concerns. There will be many political talks and concerts by the most prominent symphony orchestras in the United States.

Boston Symphony—WBZ.

"Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our fall schedule. Beginning October 9, the series of twenty-four concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be presented from 8:15 until 10 P. M., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays, when the orchestra is on tour.

PORTLAND, ORE.
TELEGRAM

JAZZ AGAIN SCHEDULED F

B
NEW has sh
Serge
the Bo has ju time h
take t claring
has ad

CLEVELAND, OHIO
NEWS

LOS ANGELES CAL.
EXAMINER

Write a Dirge for Jazz; Serge Says It's Dead

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP).

JAZZ has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who has just returned from Europe.

The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it has added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

BOSTON'S FINE ORCHESTRA TO RESUME RADIO

Koussevitzky Will Direct Symphonists in Forty-sixth Season; Will Be on WBZ Programs.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at ten minutes past 8 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced recently by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France on September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in northern France.

Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of 12 symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the pops orchestra. These were all sponsored by Mr. Quinby.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

HUB SYMPHONY WILL BROADCAST

Inaugural Tie of New England Station for Series of Concerts

Boston, Sept. 25.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday night concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by WBZ which will feed the concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23, Nov. 20, Dec. 4, 11 and 25, Jan. 22 and 29, Feb. 19 and 26, March 5,

THIS CLIPPING FROM CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS

BOSTON SYMPHONY WILL BE BROADCAST BY WBZ

Station WBZ has announced a schedule for the winter, which includes twenty-four concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra. The first symphony concert will be heard the evening of Oct. 9, with others following each Saturday of that month. Only two programs will be presented during November, but four will come on the air in both December and January. In February, March and April a total of ten concerts will be given. These concerts as they occur will be listed in the "Pick of the Air" and the DX programs which appear in The Daily News radio section each day.

KOUSSEVITZKY HERE FOR CONCERT SEASON

Globe Sept 23

Symphony Leader Brings New Compositions

As brilliant as one of his own concerts, Serge Koussevitzky, admired conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in Boston early last night, after nearly five months abroad. Scarcely ever has the Back Bay Station seen a more gorgeous figure than that of the Symphony leader as he stepped off the Knickerbocker Limited and greeted many friends who had come to welcome him and Mme Koussevitzky.

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY

He wore a suit that was a symphony all by itself. Tans and light browns intermingled quite fetchingly, and there was just a touch of red, too. There were tan shoes, fawn-colored spats, a shirt with collar to match of light browns and tans, and a cravat of light tan and brown with little floral decorations. There was also a light tan fedora. Mme Koussevitzky was quite overshadowed by all this elegance.

The couple, escorted by maid and valet, who took care of their dozens of trunks and bags, were driven to the Hotel Vendome, where they will stay until Monday, when their new home at 131 Bay State road will be in order. Mr Koussevitzky will start rehearsals on Oct 2, and in the meantime he will begin to make various programs for the year.

Droll. Boston terrier, which became Mr Koussevitzky's property two years ago, returned from Europe with his master and was quite the pet of the lobby while the Koussevitzkys were registering.

"It will be a most interesting season," promised Mr Koussevitzky. He refused to say whether he would give his Boston audiences more modern music or not. He is planning a Beethoven Festival in the Spring, celebrating the 100th anniversary of the composer. At these six or seven concerts the nine symphonies of Beethoven will be played.

Koussevitzky has brought back a new symphony, written by Alexander Tasman especially for Boston. Then there are four new etudes by Respighi and works by Roussel, "Choux," or "Buffoon," by Prokofieff, a modern Russian composer, whose "Seven, They Are Seven," was played by the Symphony Orchestra last season, will be one of the new numbers. Mr Koussevitzky played this in his Concerts Koussevitzky which he conducted in Paris this Summer. He also played "Music for the Theatre" there. This was written by a Brooklyn composer, Copland, and created much interest in Paris. He plans to add it to his orchestra's repertory.

But "Preface to Life," the symphony which created so much excitement in Paris, will not be played for Boston audiences. When Koussevitzky offered this extremely modern number, with groans instead of singing and other strange devices, the French people hissed and yelled and started a real riot.

"An interesting experiment," shrugged Mr Koussevitzky, "but, after all, only an experiment. It was metaphysics, not music."

POST STANDARD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

SEP 19 1926

CONCERT SERIES OPENS OCTOBER 9

24 Boston Symphony Programs to Be Broadcast by WBZ, Springfield.

OTHER STATIONS TIE-IN

WJZ, WGY and WRC to Join in Initial Offering Presented by 107 Musicians.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 18.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 o'clock Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that ever has listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced yesterday by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Restricted Activities.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris.

During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in Northern France.

W. S. Quniby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history, January 23 of this year.

Schedule of Concerts.

This followed the broadcasting of 12 symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra. All were sponsored by Mr. Quimby.

The dates of the broadcasts through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK SUN

SEP 18 1926

Boston Symphony to Go on Air

WHEN the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 8:10 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire twenty-four concerts of the symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi River.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sail for America on the France on September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Bains in northern France.

W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of Symphony. As a results of his efforts the Boston Symphony Orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of twelve Symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra

THIS CLIPPING FROM TIMES DISPATCH
RICHMOND, VA.

SEP 19 1926

3

STATIONS SPREADING OUT WITH IMPROVED FEATURES

Boston Symphony Will Be Heard on Air—Opera Stars to Sing Weekly and World's Series and Football Are Programmed.

A survey of the broadcasting stations reveals the plans of the studio directors this season. It is evident that the entertainment this fall and winer will be of high quality, including concerts by leading operatic stars, philharmonic orchestras and musicals sponsored by phonograph concerns. There will be many political talks and concerts by the most prominent symphony orchestras in the United States.

Boston Symphony—WBZ.

"Weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Victor and Brunswick series, featuring noted artists, form the nucleus around which we will build our fall schedule. Beginning October 9, the series of twenty-four concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be presented from 8:15 until 10 P. M., Saturday evenings, excepting those Saturdays, when the orchestra is on tour.

LOS ANGELES
CAL.
EXAMINER

PORTLAND, ORE.
TELEGRAM

JAZZ AGAIN SCHEDULED FOR AN EARLY DEATH

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 23.—Jazz has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who has just returned from Europe. The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it has added nothing to modern music.

Write a Dirge for Jazz; Serge Says It's Dead

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP).

JAZZ has shot its bolt, in the opinion of Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who has just returned from Europe.

The time has come for something else to take the place of jazz, he said, declaring that aside from "color" it has added nothing to modern music.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
HERALD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.

THIS CLIPPING FROM ADVERTISER

SEP 3

Fifteen Stations Will Join To Broadcast Symphoney Concerts

Boston, Mass.,—Sept. 23—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quimby, head of the Boston, New York, and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22, and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM JOURNAL COURIER
LOUISVILLE, KY.

SEP 23

BOSTON SYMPHONY AGAIN RADIOCASTS

Boston, Sept. 18—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 7:10 o'clock Saturday night, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians is expected to be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK AMERICAN

SEP 23 19

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

SERGE KOUSSEVITSKY, the Boston Philharmonic's conductor, got back aboard the French liner, also, and said the usual thing. You've forgotten it? Well, here it is, for the last time:

"Jazz has shot its bolt . . . time coming when it will be replaced."

THIS CLIPPING FROM RECORD
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SEP 19 1926

The trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have decided to broadcast all the regular concerts of that organization during the coming season, and radio fans in the immediate vicinity of Boston are naturally delighted. What will be the effect upon the attendance at the concerts remains to be seen. The trustees evidently feel that there will be no detriment to the box office receipts, but that is open to question. If the seats were all, or nearly all, sold far in advance, as is the case with most other large orchestras, the effect might be negligible, but there is reason to believe that many music-lovers will prefer to remain comfortably at home and enjoy the concerts free of charge rather than journey in to the auditorium and pay out their money for seats and transportation.

Koussevitzky Will Direct Symphonists in Forty-sixth Season; Will Be on WBZ Programs.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at ten minutes past 8 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire 24 concerts of the symphony season, it was announced recently by G. H. Jaspert, director. He also stated that the powerful stations, WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will sail for America on the France on September 21 to prepare for opening the symphony season. He restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris. During the last two months, excepting the time required for conference with composers and publishers in regard to new scores, he has been resting at Aix-Les-Baine in northern France.

Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago house bearing his name, last season sponsored the broadcasting of symphony. As a result of his efforts the Boston Symphony orchestra went on the air for the first time in its history on January 23 of this year. This followed the broadcasting of 12 symphony concerts and, during the spring and early summer, nine concerts of the pops orchestra. These were all sponsored by Mr. Quinby.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are October 9, 16, 23 and 30, November 13 and 20, December 4, 11, 18 and 25, January 1, 15, 22 and 29, February 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

HUB SYMPHONY WILL BROADCAST

Inaugural Tie of New England Station for Series of Concerts

Boston, Sept. 25.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season Oct. 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday night concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by WBZ which will feed the concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

The concerts will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23, Nov. 20, Dec. 4, 11 and 25, Jan. 22 and 29, Feb. 19 and 26, March 5, and April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through WBZ. The dates of these programs are Oct. 30, Nov. 13, Dec. 18, Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

Bo... first ... the ... follow... month. Only ... be presented during ... four will come on the ... December and January. In February, March and April a total of ten concerts will be given. These concerts as they occur will be listed in the "Pick of the Air" and the DX programs which appear in The Daily News radio section each day.

THIS CLIPPING FROM Record Eagle
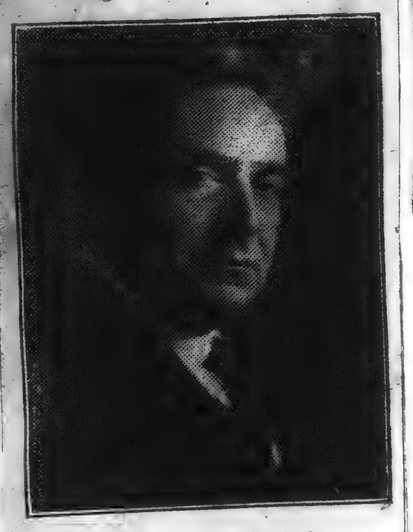
Traverse City Mich
SEP 24 1926

History of the Boston Symphony Orchestra



Serge Koussevitsky, Conductor
Boston Symphony Orchestra

The superlative performances of the Boston Symphony Ochestra are indeed a thing to wonder at. But just how and why this organization has come to be one of the very greatest in the world leaves little room for speculation or debate. The simple facts of its history are self-explanatory.

In 1881, the late Major Henry L. Higginson realized the first dream and aspiration of his life by founding in Boston a full-sized symphony orchestra — a rare phenomenon in those days. This noted musician, soldier, financier, and public-spirited citizen believed that there was a musical public for such an undertaking. Sparing no expense, he engaged the finest musicians then available in Europe to fill up its ranks, and brought to this country one after another of the world's greatest conductors to lend their individual genius to the cumulative improvement of the ensemble.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra in its original form had only sixty players, and its conductor was George Henschel, a celebrated musician of the day. The initial aims (always since adhered to) were that the musicians should play under one conductor in one orchestra, and not debase their talents by routine engagements; that the symphony concerts should provide only the finest music; that artistic considerations should always be paramount, and that the conductor be given absolute control. Controversy waxed hot in those days. The policies, the programmes, even the wisdom of the whole venture were violently attacked and staunchly defended. But the wisdom of the founder was justified as each succeeding year of the Orchestra added growth and success to the last.

The second conductor, Wilhelm Gericke, had two terms (1884-9) and 1898-1906. Through years of tireless training, this thorough and arduous musician gradually built up the fine ensemble for which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has since held its special renown. In the interim of Gericke's periods of service came Arthur Nikisch, the great Hungarian leader, and Emil Pauer who conducted through 1893-8.

Dr. Karl Muck was the conductor from 1906 to 1918, with the exception of the years 1908-12, which were held by Max Fiedler. To Dr. Muck's exacting hand the great Orchestra responded like a single, marvelously perfect instrument.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra next had two French conductors — Henri Rabaud in the season of 1918-19, a distinguished musician and composer, now head of the Paris Conservatoire, — and Pierre Monteux (1919-24), who ably carried on the then established tradition of a finely blended ensemble.

In the autumn of 1924, Serge Koussevitzky first crossed the Atlantic to become the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. From Europe had come many reports of his remarkable qualities as a leader and as an artist.

Expectations were more than fulfilled. America, having heard perhaps all of the "great" conductors living, has found qualities in Koussevitzky's leadership which are said to be quite without an equal.

With such a combination of a great orchestra and a great leader, it is not surprising that a Boston Symphony concert is regarded as one of the finest achievements in the musical performances of our day. There are waiting lists for every subscription series, and seats for any concert are at a premium.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE
SEP 22 1926

Simon Guggenheim on France

Among the 1,000 passengers arriving from Havre and Plymouth on the French liner France are Serge Koussevitsky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, accompanied by Mrs. Koussevitsky, coming for the Boston season; A. Buzzi Peccia, of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Mrs. Gilbert Miller, American artist; Ralph Barton, artist and caricaturist; Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Foundation; Dr. Lecomte de Nouy, Dr. Carrel's assistant; Edward Wace, director of the Credit Commercial, of France, and Simon Guggenheim, president of the American Smelting and Refining Company, with Mrs. Guggenheim and Guggenheim.

TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.
SEP 28 1926

ORCHESTRA NEWS FROM THE "HUB"

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be heard in Washington but twice this season, under the noted Russian, Serge Koussevitzky, will have an eventful season this year of 1926-27.

Koussevitzky, as the New York Times proclaimed last season, "justifies superlatives." He brought forth a number of new and significant works during the past year, with compositions by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre, and the American composers, Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

There was an unusual number of choral performances including Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Brahms' "German Requiem" (both performed at Pension Fund concerts); Liszt's "Faust Symphony" and Psalm XIII; Prokofieff's "Sept, ils sont Sept"; Ibert's "Chant de Folie"; Ducasse's "Sarabande"; and Borodin's dances from "Prince Igor."

In Boston this year there are waiting lists for each of four series, and for the double series in New York.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 23 1926

KOUSSEVITSKY BACK WITH NEW SCORES

Boston Symphony Conductor Returns from Europe.

(Special to the Evening Bulletin.)
Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in this city last evening after a four months "vacation" in Europe, where he acquired many new scores for presentation this season and conducted four "Concerts Koussevitsky" at the Paris Opera. Much of the new music will be played by the Boston Symphony for the first public hearing during the coming season and much was written especially for the organization.

The conductor arrived in New York after a stormy crossing on the French liner France this morning and made fast time through to Boston.

After spending part of his vacation in Paris, Koussevitsky went to Zurich for the International Musical Festival, attended by famous musicians and composers from all parts of the world.

Included in the new scores are four

THIS CLIPPING FROM
ALBERQUERQUE, N. MEX.
JOURNAL
SEP 26 192

◆ ◆ ◆ Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, says that jazz has added nothing to music but color. Yes, colored orchestras do seem to be pretty good at it. ◆ ◆ ◆

GAZETTE
SEP 24 1926

Boston Symphony Coming to Plymouth

Attention is being called to the fact that, through the efforts of the Plymouth Teachers' club the Boston Symphony orchestra, often called the greatest orchestra in the world, will be heard in Plymouth, Oct. 19. Although New England's oldest orchestra, now opening its 46th season, and her oldest town are not many miles apart it has been impossible heretofore to have a symphony concert there because there has been no auditorium large enough for a stage to hold 108 musicians. Plymouth now has Memorial hall with an extended stage and a seating capacity of 2,000, which enables her to present to her own townspeople and those of neighboring towns an opportunity not to be had in the orchestra's own city. For years the name of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been the by-word the world over for what is closest to perfection in musical performance. This achievement is attributable to the wisdom and munificence of the orchestra's founder, Henry L. Higginson. No effort nor expense has been spared to obtain the finest musicians in Europe and America, and the foremost of living conductors to train and lead them. In 1924 there came to the Boston Symphony orchestra its first Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky. Then known to America only by almost incredible reports from Europe, he justified all expectations. There are qualities in his leadership which are said to be quite without equal, and of his brilliant command as a leader, of his inspired and inspiring imagination as an interpreter, there is but one opinion. Edward Morgan, president of the Plymouth Teachers' club visited the Middleboro Teachers' association on Tuesday evening, when he offered to reserve a section of the hall for any from Middleboro who wish to attend this concert, which the Plymouth association is bringing to this section, not with the idea of making money, but to enable the people of Plymouth and the neighboring towns to enjoy a great treat at a nominal cost. The fact that the great Koussevitzky is coming to Plymouth is alone enough to cause a great excitement in that historic town when one considers that every seat is subscribed and there are waiting lists for the Boston Symphony concerts in New York and Boston.

JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 25 1926

KOUSSEVITZKY SEES GREAT SEASON AHEAD

Boston Symphony Conductor Looks Forward to Providence Visit

(Special to the Providence Journal.)
Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will soon begin rehearsals for its 46th season, to-day expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five symphony concerts there, after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of a suitable auditorium.

Mr. Koussevitsky said he looked forward to a particularly eventful season in the Rhode Island capital and promised that his selection for the symphony programmes there would include the greatest of the works of the old masters in addition to the most sifinificant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor, who arrived from Europe on the La France last Wednesday, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony and will have their first performance in this city. Mr. Koussevitzky has many plans for the coming season, which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the famous

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
WASHINGTON, D. C.
SEP 27 1926

Promise or Menace?

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: Jazz, according to Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, is on the wane, and will be replaced shortly by a new musical form. Ought one to take this as a promise or as a menace?

PRESS
CLEVELAND, OHIO
SEP 25 1926

15 STATIONS TO BE ON BOSTON CONCERT TIE-UP

Symphony Orchestra One of of Finest in Whole World

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 24—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out thru a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York WGY, Schnectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard thru WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE WHEELING
WEST VA.
ISSUE OF
SEP 26 1926

15 STATIONS TO BROADCAST 15 CONCERTS

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO OPEN 46TH SESSION ON OCTOBER 9

NINE OF THE CONCERTS WILL ONLY BE BROADCASTED BY STATION WBZ

Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 4, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates to these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.
SEP 26 1926

15 STATIONS JOIN CONCERT HOOK-UP

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 25.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will be in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of twenty-four Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ, which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far West as the Mississippi river, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther West will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 29 and April 2.

HERALD
WASHINGTON, D. C.
SEP 26 1926

With all due respect to the program makers for loud speaker products, one searches in vain for a reason why the New York Symphony Orchestra, the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra should all schedule concerts during the coming season on Saturday evenings. So long

GAZETTE TIMES
PITTSBURG, PA.
SEP 26 1926

Boston Symphony Will Open Season

The first of the season symphony orchestra concerts will be played in Syria Mosque November 5 and 6, when the Boston Symphony appears here under the conductorship of Serge Koussevitzky. He is thought to be the only famous conductor who has the distinction of once having been a virtuoso of the double-bass. When at the age of 14, he had the choice of either this instrument or a brass instrument, he chose the former and developed an extraordinary proficiency, and for 10 years toured Europe giving recitals. He first played the double-bass in this country at Brown University when the degree of Doctor of Music was conferred upon him, last February.

In addition to Koussevitsky, other distinguished conductors to be heard in the series of seven pairs in Pittsburgh are Walter Damrosch, who returns, after a 10-year absence, with his New York Symphony; William Mengelberg, with the New York Philharmonic; Fritz Reiner, the Cincinnati Symphony; Nikolai Sokoloff, Cleveland Symphony; Henri Verbrugghen, Minneapolis Orchestra, and William Furtwaengler, conductor, for the second appearance of the New York Philharmonic.

THIS CLIPPING FROM Syracuse Herald
SEP 24 1926

History of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Serge Koussevitsky, Conductor
Boston Symphony Orchestra

The superlative performances of the Boston Symphony Ochestra are indeed a thing to wonder at. But just how and why this organization has come to be one of the very greatest in the world leaves little room for speculation or debate. The simple facts of its history are self-explanatory.

In 1881, the late Major Henry L. Higginson realized the first dream and aspiration of his life by founding in Boston a full-sized symphony orchestra — a rare phenomenon in those days. This noted musician, soldier, financier, and public-spirited citizen believed that there was a musical public for such an undertaking. Sparing no expense, he engaged the finest musicians then available in Europe to fill up its ranks, and brought to this country one after another of the world's greatest conductors to lend their individual genius to the cumulative improvement of the ensemble.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra in its original form had only sixty players, and its conductor was George Henschel, a celebrated musician of the day. The initial aims (always since adhered to) were that the musicians should play under one conductor in one orchestra, and not debase their talents by routine engagements; that the symphony concerts should provide only the finest music; that artistic considerations should always be paramount, and that the conductor be given absolute control. Controversy waxed hot in those days. The policies, the programmes, even the wisdom of the whole venture were violently attacked and staunchly defended. But the wisdom of the founder was justified as each succeeding year of the Orchestra added growth and success to the last.

The second conductor, Wilhelm Gericke, had two terms (1884-9) and 1898-1906. Through years of tireless training, this thorough and arduous musician gradually built up the fine ensemble for which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has since held its special renown. In the interim of Gericke's periods of service came Arthur Nikisch, the great Hungarian leader, and Emil Pauer who conducted through 1893-8.

Dr. Karl Muck was the conductor from 1906 to 1918, with the exception of the years 1908-12, which were held by Max Fiedler. To Dr. Muck's exacting hand the great Orchestra responded like a single, marvelously perfect instrument.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra next had two French conductors — Henri Rabaud in the season of 1918-19, a distinguished musician and composer, now head of the Paris Conservatoire, — and Pierre Monteux (1919-24), who ably carried on the then established tradition of a finely blended ensemble.

In the autumn of 1924, Serge Koussevitzky first crossed the Atlantic to become the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. From Europe had come many reports of his remarkable qualities as a leader and as an artist.

Expectations were more than fulfilled. America, having heard perhaps all of the "great" conductors living, has found qualities in Koussevitzky's leadership which are said to be quite without an equal.

With such a combination of a great orchestra and a great leader, it is not surprising that a Boston Symphony concert is regarded as one of the finest achievements in the musical performances of our day. There are waiting lists for every subscription series, and seats for any concert are at a premium.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE
SEP 2 6 1926

Simon Guggenheim on France

Among the 1,000 passengers arriving from Havre and Plymouth on the French liner France are Serge Koussevitsky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, accompanied by Mrs. Koussevitsky, coming for the Boston season; A. Buzzi Peccia, of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Mrs. Gilbert Miller, American artist; Ralph Barton, artist and caricaturist; Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Foundation; Dr. Lecomte de Nouy, Dr. Carrel's assistant; Edward Wace, director of the Credit Commercial, of France, and Simon Guggenheim, president of the American Smelting and Refining Company, with Mrs. Guggenheim and Guggenheim.

TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SEP 2 8 1926

ORCHESTRA NEWS FROM THE "HUB"

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be heard in Washington but twice this season, under the noted Russian, Serge Koussevitzky, will have an eventful season this year of 1926-27.

Koussevitzky, as the New York Times proclaimed last season, "justifies superlatives." He brought forth a number of new and significant works during the past year, with compositions by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre, and the American composers, Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

There was an unusual number of choral performances including Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Brahms' "German Requiem" (both performed at Pension Fund concerts); Liszt's "Faust Symphony" and Psalm XIII; Prokofieff's "Sept, ils sont Sept"; Ibert's "Chant de Folie"; Ducasse's "Sarabande"; and Borodin's dances from "Prince Igor."

In Boston this year there are waiting lists for each of four series, and for the double series in New York.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
SEP 23 1926

KOUSSEVITSKY BACK WITH NEW SCORES

Boston Symphony Conductor Returns from Europe.

(Special to the Evening Bulletin.)

Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in this city last evening after a four months "vacation" in Europe, where he acquired many new scores for presentation this season and conducted four "Concerts Koussevitsky" at the Paris Opera. Much of the new music will be played by the Boston Symphony for the first public hearing during the coming season and much was written especially for the organization.

The conductor arrived in New York after a stormy crossing on the French liner France this morning and made fast time through to Boston.

After spending part of his vacation in Paris, Koussevitsky went to Zurich for the International Musical Festival, attended by famous musicians and composers from all parts of the world.

Included in the new scores are four

THIS CLIPPING FROM
ALBERQUERQUE, N. MEX.
JOURNAL
SEP 2 8 1926

◆ ◆ ◆ Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, says that jazz has added nothing to music but color. Yes, colored orchestras do seem to be pretty good at it. ◆ ◆ ◆

GAZETTE
SEP 24 1926

Boston Symphony Coming to Plymouth

Attention is being called to the fact that, through the efforts of the Plymouth Teachers' club the Boston Symphony orchestra, often called the greatest orchestra in the world, will be heard in Plymouth, Oct. 19. Although New England's oldest orchestra, now opening its 46th season, and her oldest town are not many miles apart it has been impossible heretofore to have a symphony concert there because there has been no auditorium large enough for a stage to hold 108 musicians. Plymouth now has Memorial hall with an extended stage and a seating capacity of 2,000, which enables her to present to her own townspeople and those of neighboring towns an opportunity not to be had in the orchestra's own city. For years the name of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been the by-word the world over for what is closest to perfection in musical performance. This achievement is attributable to the wisdom and munificence of the orchestra's founder, Henry L. Higginson. No effort nor expense has been spared to obtain the finest musicians in Europe and America, and the foremost of living conductors to train and lead them. In 1924 there came to the Boston Symphony orchestra its first Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky. Then known to America only by almost incredible reports from Europe, he justified all expectations. There are qualities in his leadership which are said to be quite without equal, and of his brilliant command as a leader, of his inspired and inspiring imagination as an interpreter, there is but one opinion. Edward Morgan, president of the Plymouth Teachers' club visited the Middleboro Teachers' association on Tuesday evening, when he offered to reserve a section of the hall for any from Middleboro who wish to attend this concert, which the Plymouth association is bringing to this section, not with the idea of making money, but to enable the people of Plymouth and the neighboring towns to enjoy a great treat at a nominal cost. The fact that the great Koussevitzky is coming to Plymouth is alone enough to cause a great excitement in that historic town when one considers that every seat is subscribed and there are waiting lists for the Boston Symphony concerts in New York and Boston.

JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

KOUSSEVITZKY SEES GREAT SEASON AHEAD

Boston Symphony Conductor Looks Forward to Providence Visit

(Special to the Providence Journal.)

Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will soon begin rehearsals for its 46th season, to-day expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five symphony concerts there, after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of a suitable auditorium.

Mr. Koussevitsky said he looked forward to a particularly eventful season in the Rhode Island capital and promised that his selection for the symphony programmes there would include the greatest of the works of the old masters in addition to the most sifinificant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor, who arrived from Europe on the La France last Wednesday, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony and will have their first performance in this city. Mr. Koussevitzky has many plans for the coming season, which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the famous [illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
WASHINGTON, D. C.
SEP 27 1926

Promise or Menace?

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: Jazz, according to Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, is on the wane, and will be replaced shortly by a new musical form. Ought one to take this as a promise or as a menace?

PRESS
CLEVELAND, OHIO
SEP 25 1926

15 STATIONS TO BE ON BOSTON CONCERT TIE-UP

Symphony Orchestra One of of Finest in Whole World

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 24—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out thru a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York WGY, Schnectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard thru WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last se[illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM THE WHEELING
WEST VA.
ISSUE OF
SEP 26 1926

15 STATIONS TO BROADCAST 15 CONCERTS

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA TO OPEN 46TH SESSION ON OCTOBER 9

NINE OF THE CONCERTS WILL ONLY BE BROADCASTED BY STATION WBZ

Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 6, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates fo these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.
SEP 26 1926

15 STATIONS JOIN CONCERT HOOK-UP

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 25.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will be in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of twenty-four Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ, which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far West as the Mississippi river, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther West will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 29 and April 2.

HERALD
WASHINGTON, D. C.

* * *

With all due respect to the program makers for loud speaker products, one searches in vain for a reason why the New York Symphony Orchestra, the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra should all schedule concerts during the coming season on Saturday evenings. So long

GAZETTE TIMES
PITTSBURG, PA.

Boston Symphony Will Open Season

The first of the season symphony orchestra concerts will be played in Syria Mosque November 5 and 6, when the Boston Symphony appears here under the conductorship of Serge Koussevitzky. He is thought to be the only famous conductor who has the distinction of once having been a virtuoso of the double-bass. When at the age of 14, he had the choice of either this instrument or a brass instrument, he chose the former and developed an extraordinary proficiency, and for 10 years toured Europe giving recitals. He first played the double-bass in this country at Brown University when the degree of Doctor of Music was conferred upon him, last February.

In addition to Koussevitzky, other distinguished conductors to be heard in the series of seven pairs in Pittsburgh are Walter Damrosch, who returns, after a 10-year absence, with his New York Symphony; William Mengelberg, with the New York Philharmonic; Fritz Reiner, the Cincinnati Symphony; Nikolai Sokoloff, Cleveland Symphony; Henri Verbrugghen, Minneapolis Orchestra, and William Furtwaengler, conductor, for the second appearance of the New York Philharmonic.

THIS CLIPPING FROM Special Clipping Bureau
SEP 24 1926

History of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Serge Koussevitsky, Conductor
Boston Symphony Orchestra

The superlative performances of the Boston Symphony Ochestra are indeed a thing to wonder at. But just how and why this organization has come to be one of the very greatest in the world leaves little room for speculation or debate. The simple facts of its history are self-explanatory.

In 1881, the late Major Henry L. Higginson realized the first dream and aspiration of his life by founding in Boston a full-sized symphony orchestra — a rare phenomenon in those days. This noted musician, soldier, financier, and public-spirited citizen believed that there was a musical public for such an undertaking. Sparing no expense, he engaged the finest musicians then available in Europe to fill up its ranks, and brought to this country one after another of the world's greatest conductors to lend their individual genius to the cumulative improvement of the ensemble.

Page 2 Col. 1

The Boston Symphony Orchestra in its original form had only sixty players, and its conductor was George Henschel, a celebrated musician of the day. The initial aims (always since adhered to) were that the musicians should play under one conductor in one orchestra, and not debase their talents by routine engagements; that the symphony concerts should provide only the finest music; that artistic considerations should always be paramount, and that the conductor be given absolute control. Controversy waxed hot in those days. The policies, the programmes, even the wisdom of the whole venture were violently attacked and staunchly defended. But the wisdom of the founder was justified as each succeeding year of the Orchestra added growth and success to the last.

The second conductor, Wilhelm Gericke, had two terms (1884-9) and 1898-1906. Through years of tireless training, this thorough and arduous musician gradually built up the fine ensemble for which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has since held its special renown. In the interim of Gericke's periods of service came Arthur Nikisch, the great Hungarian leader, and Emil Pauer who conducted through 1893-8.

Dr. Karl Muck was the conductor from 1906 to 1918, with the exception of the years 1908-12, which were held by Max Fiedler. To Dr. Muck's exacting hand the great Orchestra responded like a single, marvelously perfect instrument.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra next had two French conductors — Henri Rabaud in the season of 1918-19, a distinguished musician and composer, now head of the Paris Conservatoire, — and Pierre Monteux (1919-24), who ably carried on the then established tradition of a finely blended ensemble.

In the autumn of 1924, Serge Koussevitzky first crossed the Atlantic to become the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. From Europe had come many reports of his remarkable qualities as a leader and as an artist.

Expectations were more than fulfilled. America, having heard perhaps all of the "great" conductors living, has found qualities in Koussevitzky's leadership which are said to be quite without an equal.

With such a combination of a great orchestra and a great leader, it is not surprising that a Boston Symphony concert is regarded as one of the finest achievements in the musical performances of our day. There are waiting lists for every subscription series, and seats for any concert are at a premium.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE
SEP 2 2 1926

Simon Guggenheim on France

Among the 1,000 passengers arriving from Havre and Plymouth on the French liner France are Serge Koussevitsky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, accompanied by Mrs. Koussevitsky, coming for the Boston season; A. Buzzi Peccia, of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Mrs. Gilbert Miller, American artist; Ralph Barton, artist and caricaturist; Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Foundation; Dr. Lecomte de Nouy, Dr. Carrel's assistant; Edward Wace, director of the Credit Commercial, of France, and Simon Guggenheim, president of the American Smelting and Refining Company, with Mrs. Guggenheim and Guggenheim.

TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SEP 2 3 1926

ORCHESTRA NEWS FROM THE "HUB"

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be heard in Washington but twice this season, under the noted Russian, Serge Koussevitzky, will have an eventful season this year of 1926-27.

Koussevitzky, as the New York Times proclaimed last season, "justifies superlatives." He brought forth a number of new and significant works during the past year, with compositions by Prokofieff, Respighi, Hindemith, Ibert, Tansman, Roussel, Tailleferre, and the American composers, Copland, Bloch, Spelman, Gilbert and Loeffler.

There was an unusual number of choral performances including Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Brahms' "German Requiem" (both performed at Pension Fund concerts); Liszt's "Faust Symphony" and Psalm XIII; Prokofieff's "Sept, ils sont Sept"; Ibert's "Chant de Folie"; Ducasse's "Sarabande"; and Borodin's dances from "Prince Igor."

In Boston this year there are waiting lists for each of four series, and for the double series in New York.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

SEP 3 1926

KOUSSEVITSKY BACK WITH NEW SCORES

Boston Symphony Conductor Returns from Europe.

(Special to the Evening Bulletin.)

Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in this city last evening after a four months "vacation" in Europe, where he acquired many new scores for presentation this season and condected four "Concerts Koussevitsky" at the Paris Opera. Much of the new music will be played by the Boston Symphony for the first public hearing during the coming season and much was written especially for the organization.

The conductor arrived in New York after a stormy crossing on the French liner France this morning and made fast time through to Boston.

After spending part of his vacation in Paris, Koussevitsky went to Zurich for the International Musical Festival, attended by famous musicians and composers from all parts of the world.

Included in the new scores are four

THIS CLIPPING FROM
ALBERQUERQUE, N. MEX.
JOURNAL
SEP 2 6 192

◆ ◆ ◆ Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, says that jazz has added nothing to music but color. Yes, colored orchestras do seem to be pretty good at it. ◆ ◆ ◆

GAZETTE

SEP 24 1926

Boston Symphony Coming to Plymouth

Attention is being called to the fact that, through the efforts of the Plymouth Teachers' club the Boston Symphony orchestra, often called the greatest orchestra in the world, will be heard in Plymouth, Oct. 19. Although New England's oldest orchestra, now opening its 46th season, and her oldest town are not many miles apart it has been impossible heretofore to have a symphony concert there because there has been no auditorium large enough for a stage to hold 108 musicians. Plymouth now has Memorial hall with an extended stage and a seating capacity of 2,000, which enables her to present to her own townspeople and those of neighboring towns an opportunity not to be had in the orchestra's own city. For years the name of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been the by-word the world over for what is closest to perfection in musical performance. This achievement is attributable to the wisdom and munificence of the orchestra's founder, Henry L. Higginson. No effort nor expense has been spared to obtain the finest musicians in Europe and America, and the foremost of living conductors to train and lead them. In 1924 there came to the Boston Symphony orchestra its first Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky. Then known to America only by almost incredible reports from Europe, he justified all expectations. There are qualities in his leadership which are said to be quite without equal, and of his brilliant command as a leader, of his inspired and inspiring imagination as an interpreter, there is but one opinion. Edward Morgan, president of the Plymouth Teachers' club visited the Middleboro Teachers' association on Tuesday evening, when he offered to reserve a section of the hall for any from Middleboro who wish to attend this concert, which the Plymouth association is bringing to this section, not with the idea of making money, but to enable the people of Plymouth and the neighboring towns to enjoy a great treat at a nominal cost. The fact that the great Koussevitzky is coming to Plymouth is alone enough to cause a great excitement in that historic town when one considers that every seat is subscribed and there are waiting lists for the Boston Symphony concerts in New York and Boston.

JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

KOUSSEVITZKY SEES GREAT SEASON AHEAD

Boston Symphony Conductor Looks Forward to Providence Visit

(Special to the Providence Journal.)

Boston, Sept. 22.—Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will soon begin rehearsals for its 46th season, to-day expressed his enthusiasm over the campaign in Providence last spring which resulted in the securing of the E. F. Albee Theatre for a series of five symphony concerts there, after it had been announced that the orchestra would be forced to discontinue its visits to Providence for want of a suitable auditorium.

Mr. Koussevitsky said he looked forward to a particularly eventful season in the Rhode Island capital and promised that his selection for the symphony programmes there would include the greatest of the works of the old masters in addition to the most sifinificant of the newer scores.

The Russian conductor, who arrived from Europe on the La France last Wednesday, brought with him some new manuscript scores by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman, which were written especially for the Boston Symphony and will have their first performance in this city. Mr. Koussevitzky has many plans for the coming season, which will include a special Beethoven series in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the famous composer's death.

The Providence season will comprise five Tuesday evening concerts on the following dates: Oct. 26, Nov. 23, Dec. 7, Jan. 18 and Feb. 15.

Promise or Menace?

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: Jazz, according to Serge Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, is on the wane, and will be replaced shortly by a new musical form. Ought one to take this as a promise or as a menace?

PRESS
CLEVELAND, OHIO

SEP 2 5 1926

15 STATIONS TO BE ON BOSTON CONCERT TIE-UP

Symphony Orchestra One of of Finest in Whole World

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 24—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that 15 concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out thru a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York WGY, Schnectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard thru WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pop Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are Oct. 9, 16 and 23, Nov. 20, Dec. 4, 11 and 25, Jan. 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast thru Westinghouse station WBZ. The dates of these programs are Oct. 30, Nov. 13, Dec. 18, Jan. 1 and 15, Feb. 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

B(

NI

M chai cove land of b day

...teen concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 ... 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 6, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates fo these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

AMERICAN
BALTIMORE, MD.

SEP 2 6 1926

15 STATIONS JOIN CONCERT HOOK-UP

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 25.—Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will be in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens its forty-sixth season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of twenty-four Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ, which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far West as the Mississippi river, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther West will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 29 and April 2.

HERALD
WASHINGTON, D. C.

* * *

With all due respect to the program makers for loud speaker products, one searches in vain for a reason why the New York Symphony Orchestra, the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra should all schedule concerts during the coming season on Saturday evenings. So long as there were to be concerts broadcast to large chains of stations by these orchestras it would seem to be the better part of wisdom to put them on different days of the week.

The Boston Symphony and the Philharmonic will play alternate Saturdays for the microphones of the WJZ chain. The New York Symphony plays for the WEAF chain Washington's station, WRC, could get all of these orchestras if they were on different days. As it is, the National Capital will have to depend on the very slim chance of getting decent transmission from the WJZ chain. While we're not at all desirous of missing the Philharmonic or the Boston organization, we'd a heap rather have the New York Symphony from WEAF and its absolutely sure transmission system, than the other two on the hit or miss hay wire lines WJZ insists on using.

Fashion Key 1/

The exquisite garments sh... slightly soiled and handled, a...

New York Philharmonic.

ITEM
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

SEP 26 1926

FIFTEEN STATIONS JOIN TO RADIOCAST SYMPHONY SERIES

Series of 24 Saturday Concerts Go On Air Starting October 9

BOSTON, Mass., — Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New YORK, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York, and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ. chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22, and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April .

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

SEP 28 1926

Boston Symphony

There is a lively demand for tickets for the Hartford concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, scheduled this season for February. Former patrons of the Sedgwick concerts are securing their seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert, which is the outstanding feature in Hartford's musical season.

Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor arrived in Boston September 22 last bringing with him from Europe some new scores of interest and many promising plans for a remarkable Boston Symphony Orchestra season, which will include a visit to this city. His sojourn in Europe began with a series of "concerts Koussevitzky" which are the principal event of each spring season in Paris. Subsequently he spent much time consulting composers and publishers in quest of new music. The latter part of the summer he took a real vacation in Switzerland and at the watering places of France. Koussevitsky brought back with him manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which have been written especially for the Russian conductor and his orchestra, and which are to have their first performance in Boston. He will assemble the orchestra for rehearsal in Symphony Hall, Boston, next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the season October 8. There will be notable choral concerts, and a Beethoven centennial festival in the spring, in observance of the master's death. Every effort is being made by Mr. Sedgwick to secure Mr. Koussevitzky's consent to present a Beethoven program for his Hartford concert. Seats are on sale at McCoy's music store. Mail orders will have careful attention, and the best seats will be allotted nearest to the location specified.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK, N. Y.
NEWS

OCT 1 01926

The radio routed its highbrow critics last night. Those sour souled scoffers who said that jazz is the highest expression of the loud speaker were forced to eat crow. WJZ made them all look ridiculous by invading the intellectual altitudes and presenting the Boston Symphony orchestra. And not just a mere concert of classics but one that featured Debussy and some of the ultra modern composers!

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.

OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON AIR TONIGHT

The opening concert of the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony orchestra, which will be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ, furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With Stations WJZ of New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the purpose by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8:05 tonight.

W. S. Quinby, head of the W. S. Quinby company of Boston, New York and Chicago, and sponsor of the Symphony broadcasts, will speak to the members of the radio audience, welcoming them to this feast of music.

Then for five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8:15 p. m., and again during the fifteen-minute intermission, the voice of Professor John P. Marshall will be heard giving instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the program used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Professor Marshall will give his interpretations of the Symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of twenty-four concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.

OCT 8 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT

The public of the Boston Symphony orchestra has grown considerably in recent seasons and is now limited only by the number of concerts the great orchestra, which must spend most of its time in rehearsal, can give.

That America expects great things of the pending season, which is to be the third under Serge Koussevitzky, is evident from the length of the waiting lists for every series of concerts. Of the five series of sixty-seven concerts to be given in greater Boston, it will not be possible for a non-subscriber to obtain a single seat.

Penfield Roberts comments on the orchestral situation in the Boston Globe of September 26: "Has any American orchestra ever sold out all its concerts in advance in this fashion before? Seats are to be had for the Philadelpha orchestra's Philadelphia concerts and for the Chicago orchestra's Chicago concerts; though the Friday afternoon series in both cities are sold out. No New York orchestra ever sells out its concerts for the season. Nor does any New York orchestra offer them in series of twenty-four at high prices, as is done in this city."

There is a lively demand for tickets for the Hartford concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra, scheduled this season for February. Former patrons of the Sedgwick concerts are securing their seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert.

Seats are on sale at McCoy's, inc., No. 89 Asylum street. Telephone orders received, 2-6147.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
ATLANTA, GA.

OCT 9 1926

When the famous Boston Symphony orchestra opens its forty-sixth season Saturday night at 7:10 o'clock, Atlanta time, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this noted assemblage of 107 musicians will be on hand. In addition to the capacity crowd at Symphony hall, Boston, the concert will be attended by radio listeners who tune in on stations WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washinton. Serge Koussevitsky, famous Russian conductor, will direct the concert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
GAZETTE
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON RADIO TONIGHT

Springfield, Oct. 9.—The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; Wgy, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussovitsky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8.10 tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8.15 p. m., again during the 15 minute intermission the voice of Prof. John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audiences instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Prof. Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience reside in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom heard, he will make his remarks in non-technical language.

The program of the first Boston Symphony concert to be broadcast through WBZ and the chain network covers a wide range in the field of musical composition. It begins with Weber's Overture. "Der Freischutz," one of the old "standbys" of orchestral music, and includes Debussy's Nocturnes, representing the modern French school, and Prokefiey's suite, representing the modern Russian school. The final number is Beethoven's "Eroica."

Prof. Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony orchestra from 1909 to 1918, and is at present professor of music at Boston university and Holy Cross college. During the World war he served as musician to the commanding general of the northeastern and western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army. With such a musical background, Prof. Marshall is well qualified for the task of interpreting the symphony programs for the radio listeners and his broadcasts are certain to make their programs more vaulable and appreciated by listeners.

seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert.
Seats are on sale at McCoy's, inc., No. 89 Asylum street. Telephone orders received, 2-6147.

The coming of Mr. Hamelin to be first clarinetist of the Symphony Orchestra does not imply the departure of the admired Mr. Allegra, recruit to the band a year ago. He will now play the E-flat clarinet, in the place of Mr. Vannini.

ITEMS ABOUT MUSIC

Transcript — Oct 7

Mr. Koussevitzky's Concert for the League of Composers—A Season in Europe for Miss Hess—Return of Mr. Hayes—Mr. Rakhmaninov's New Concerto

FOR a second time Mr. Koussevitzky has agreed to prepare a concert of ultra-modern music for the League of Composers in New York. It is announced for the Town Hall on Saturday evening, Nov. 27. From his Boston forces the conductor will assemble a chamber-orchestra; singing voices will also assist. The program will traverse Stravinsky's "Mavra," to be heard for the first time in America; Louis Gruenberg's setting of "The Creation," poem by James Wel[illegible]k; [illegible]

Transcript Oct 6

After Many Days

Franck's Symphony Again at Symphony Hall

IMPATIENCE and conjecture need chafe no more. At last, Mr. Koussevitzky is ready to restore Franck's Symphony to the active repertory of the Symphony Orchestra. Since April of 1924, in Mr Monteux's final year, it has not been heard at Symphony Hall. A cherished piece in Boston, many have wondered why Mr. Koussevitzky put it by through two seasons. He did so because his predecessors had repeated it to surfeit and because he himself waited for leisure to study and prepare it. Last summer he found the opportunity and at the second pair of Symphony Concerts, on Oct. 15 and 16, an expectant public will hear his version. In the same program, he includes Mr. Alexander Steinert's first piece of symphonic dimensions, "Southern Night."

THIS CLIPPING FROM SENTINEL
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

Journal
OCT 9 1926

When the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its forty-sixth season tonight at 8:10, Eastern time, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this noted assemblage of 107 musicians will be on hand. In addition to the capacity crowd at Symphony Hall, Boston, the concert will be attended by radio listeners who tune in on Stations WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington. Serge Koussevitsky, famous Russian conductor, will direct tonight's concert.

The skirl of the bag-pipes and the blurr of the fiddles will [illegible]

A BALLET OF CLOWNS: MR. KOUSSEVITZKY'S FIRST NOVEL PIECE

Oct 7th

FRAGMENTS FROM PROKOVIEV'S "CHOUT"

A Lusty Folk-Tale to Lively Music—A Scenario of Hearty Burlesque—The Good Memory of Henry T. Finck—Forthcoming Programs—Incidents and Prospects

TO PARIS last summer Mr. Koussevitzky took many things from his Bostonian repertory. Turn about is fair play; to his first pair of concerts in Boston on Friday and Saturday next, he brings a novelty from his concert in Paris on June third. His friend Prokoviev is the composer. "Chout"—Russian for clown or buffoon—is the title. "Chout" was originally written as a ballet for Dyaghilev's troupe of dancers. In 1915 Prokoviev began sketches for the piece. Interrupted by the war, he completed it in 1920. On the seventeenth of May, 1921, it received first performance—from Dyaghilev's Russian Ballet in Paris. Early in June London also sat before it. In 1923 the composer arranged an orchestral suite from the music, first heard at Brussels in November of 1924. For the ballet Prokoviev wrote the scenario as well as the music. Upon a Russian folk-tale he based it. Into six scenes he cast it. Turned into the spoken English of the year 1926, the sub-title might run: "Story of a Young Clown Who Got the Best of Seven Older Clowns."

Scene I. Once upon a time there was a clown—"Le Bouffon." The clown had a wife—"La Bouffonne." The clown was seated on the edge of his stove trying to invent a trick to play on some other clowns. His wife was scrubbing the floor. Finally the clown found what he was looking for. He jumped to the ground and said: "Wife, listen to me. Shortly seven clowns are coming to visit us. When I tell you to set the table, you will refuse and I will seem to kill you. When you have fallen, I will take my whip. At the first crack of the whip, make some movement; at the second, turn around; at the third, get up and set the table. Then we shall be able to sell our whip at a good price." No sooner said than done: the clowns came, saw the miracle, and paid three hundred rubles for the whip.

Scene II. Returned to their own home, the seven clowns decided to test their purchase. They killed their seven wives; cracked the whip over them; but not one came back to life.

Scene III. The widowers, furious, ran to the house of the young clown, determined to make him pay dearly. He became frightened, hid his wife, disguised himself in his sister's clothes. When the clowns came to seek out the culprit, he was seated at the spinning-wheel. But this "sister" pleased them. They seized "her," led "her" away, and decided to keep "her" as their kitchen-maid until they might find the clown.

Scene IV. The seven clowns had seven daughters. The time had come to find husbands for them. A merchant came with two match-makers to choose a bride from the seven daughters. The merchant was rich, oh! so rich. What good fortune! But the daughters of the clowns did not please the merchant. He chose the "maid."

Scene V. Arrived at home, the merchant took the young wife to his chamber. At first the clown-maid did not know how to set himself out of this situation. He said to the merchant: "I am ill. Tie a sheet to me and lower me through the window into the yard. When I give you the signal, draw me back up." The merchant did as requested. But when he drew up the sheet, he found a goat tied to it, and a great fear came upon him. He cried aloud for help. "Hasten to me, good people; my wife has been turned into a goat." The match-makers and servants came quickly, and tried by magic formulas and by turning and twisting the goat to break the spell. Finally the goat died of their efforts.

Scene VI. The merchant, heart-broken, began to bury his goat-wife. The clowns taunted and mocked him: "You wanted a kitchen-maid; so much the worse for you." Suddenly the young clown appeared, and with him seven soldiers. "Dogs!" said he, "what have you done? Where is my sister?" They gave him the goat. Whereupon he ordered the soldiers to arrest the seven clowns and obliged the merchant to pay three hundred rubles. And the clown and his wife amused themselves with the money, while the seven soldiers amused themselvs with the daughters of the seven clowns.

At the first performance of the ballet in 1921, "Chout" shared the program with "The Firebird," a suite of Andalusian Dances under the general title "Quadro Flamenco" and the Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor." The setting and decorations for "Chout" were designed by Michel Larinov, and four of the costumes are pictured herewith. The color-scheme was of brilliant reds and vivid oranges, in the cubistic manner. Prokoviev conducted. Apparently the chief interest of the day lay in "Chout," and chief interest in "Chout" was concentrated on the music. The dancing and stage-pictures both gave way. Of this music Parisian reviewers have written:

"Chout" is an important work from the point of view of the evolution of musical art. Prokoviev does not follow in the footsteps of Stravinsky. Surely there is no relation to "Le Sacre" in a music the most striking quality of which is transparence. Wilfully aggressive dissonances, brutality, violence are here displaced by a frenetic, laughing vitality, running course like a pure mountain-stream, full of brilliance and light. Nor does Prokoviev share Stravinsky's rhythmic complexities. Rather he invents rapidly running melodic lines with an irresistible force of expression. Without recourse to exceptional accentuation, they give the feeling of continuous activity and motion. Everything in the ballet is of youth, lightness, freshness. With means much simpler than those of his compatriots Prokoviev obtains effects of a delicious novelty. . . .

There is here a new force, lively, supple, tending toward simplicity rather than complexity, toward clarity and melodic plenty. Using all the innovations of his time, Prokoviev creates a new style, infinitely seductive. . . .

One encounters in "Chout" for the first time in Prokoviev, a number of Russian folk-themes, stoutly disguised, to be sure. Indeed, this music is not Russian in the same sense as the music of Balakirev or Musorgsky. It reminds one rather of the Russianism of Rimsky-Korsakov. Occasionally it makes one think even of Mozart and particularly of Scarlatti.

An adaptation of "Chout" under the title "Buffoon" was staged at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York, March 15, 1924. The orchestral score was arranged for two pianos, violin, flute, oboe, percussion. A reviewer with a point of view of his own wrote in The Musical Courier:

For his ballet Prokoviev has written music that has the same relation to real music as the comic sections of our newspapers have to real art, and the pantomime to which he attaches it is of the same nature, real burlesque. It is thoroughly delightful, the whole thing, just harmless good-natured fooling. Musically speaking, this sort of work does more to "place" modernistic music than all of the writings on the subject put together. For the sake of fun-making these discords are perfect, and Prokoviev keeps so close to traditional lines that one knows exactly what he is taking off. Such pieces should make it difficult for the serious music of the modernists to be taken seriously!

The orchestral suite as played by Koussevitzky in Paris comprised: (1) Dance of the Daughters of the Clowns; (2) Dance in the Chamber of the Merchant; (3) The Young Woman Is Becomes a Goat; (4) Final Dance. A. H. M.

is now [illegible] at seventy-two. It was an extraordinary group of critics, that Big Six, which included the three who have left us and those three others who still happily survive—Aldrich and Henderson and Hale. These men did pioneer work in the advancement of musical understanding and appreciation in this country. It was largely due to them that much of the music which now is our daily bread was first tolerated, then accepted, then enjoyed.

Finck was the most pugnacious of the six. His great and excelling quality was courage. No critic was ever less hampered by conventions and fetishes, less awed by the Sacred Cows of musical respectability. It required high courage to speak well of Wagner in the early eighties, when he was abhorred as a revolutionist—almost as much as it takes to speak well of him today, when he is unfashionable and derided. But Finck, with a glad shout, threw his hat into the Wagnerian ring half a century ago, and he fought for this strange new music until he saw Wagner triumphant throughout the world. Yet Finck showed even greater courage: he dared to say that the mighty occasionally nod—that Beethoven, for instance, was sometimes tedious and banal. He said these things not delicately, tentatively, but bluntly and in a loud voice, to the horror of the orthodox and the delight of those who thought the same thoughts but lacked the audacity to confess them.

Another of Finck's rare qualities was his ardor. He never lost his zest for the things he loved, never wearied of hymning his adored Grieg, Dvorak, Liszt, MacDowell. He never wrote as if he were bored, though sometimes he declared that he was—by Brahms, for instance, whom he disliked and engagingly disparaged. He did not always persuade one to agree with him; and he had, like all of us, his prejudices and prepossessions. But what counted was his delight in the beauty and the greatness that took possession of his spirit, and his determination that the things he loved and valued we too should enjoy and esteem. That delight and that conviction he succeeded often in communicating to those who read his words. What more could he have wished? [The New York Herald-Tribune

Programs in Prospect

Beside Franck's Symphony and Mr. Steinert's new tone-poem "Southern Night," the program for the second pair of Symphony Concerts, on Oct. 15 and 16, includes Mozart's "Little Night-Music," with echo-measures, much admired in the eighteenth century, and Strauss's "Til Eulenspiegel" in which Mr. Koussevitzky excels himself. At Cambridge on Thursday evening, Oct. 14, conductor and orchestra will repeat their first program in Boston: Beethoven's "Eroica Symphony"; Weber's [illegible]ture to "Der Freischütz"; Debu[illegible]

ITEM
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

P 2 6 1926

FIFTEEN STATIONS JOIN TO RADIOCAST SYMPHONY SERIES

Series of 24 Saturday Concerts Go On Air Starting October 9

BOSTON, Mass., — Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New YORK, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York, and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ, chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22, and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

SEP 2 8 1926

Boston Symphony

There is a lively demand for tickets for the Hartford concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, scheduled this season for February. Former patrons of the Sedgwick concerts are securing their seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert, which is the outstanding feature in Hartford's musical season.

Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor arrived in Boston September 22 last, bringing with him from Europe some new scores of interest and many promising plans for a remarkable Boston Symphony Orchestra season, which will include a visit to this city. His sojourn in Europe began with his series of "concerts Koussevitzky," which are the principal event of each spring season in Paris. Subsequently he spent much time consulting composers and publishers in quest of new music. The latter part of the summer he took a real vacation in Switzerland and at the watering places of France. Koussevitsky brought back with him manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which have been written especially for the Russian conductor and his orchestra, and which are to have their first performance in Boston. He will assemble the orchestra for rehearsal in Symphony Hall, Boston, next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the season October 8. There will be notable choral concerts, and a Beethoven centennial festival in the spring, in observance of the master's death. Every effort is being made by Mr. Sedgwick to secure Mr. Koussevitzky's consent to present a Beethoven program for his Hartford concert. Seats are on sale at McCoy's music store. Mail orders will have careful attention, and the best seats will be allotted nearest to the location specified.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK,
N. Y.
NEWS

OCT 1 01926

The radio routed its highbrow critics last night. Those sour souled scoffers who said that jazz is the highest expression of the loud speaker were forced to eat crow. WJZ made them all look ridiculous by invading the intellectual altitudes and presenting the Boston Symphony orchestra. And not just a mere concert of classics but one that featured Debussy and some of the ultra modern composers!

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.

OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON AIR TONIGHT

The opening concert of the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony orchestra, which will be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ, furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With Stations WJZ of New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the purpose by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8:05 tonight.

W. S. Quinby, head of the W. S. Quinby company of Boston, New York and Chicago, and sponsor of the Symphony broadcasts, will speak to the members of the radio audience, welcoming them to this feast of music.

Then for five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8:15 p. m., and again during the fifteen-minute intermission, the voice of Professor John P. Marshall will be heard giving instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the program used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Professor Marshall will give his interpretations of the Symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of twenty-four concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.

OCT 8 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT

The public of the Boston Symphony orchestra has grown considerably in recent seasons and is now limited only by the number of concerts the great orchestra, which must spend most of its time in rehearsal, can give.

That America expects great things of the pending season, which is to be the third under Serge Koussevitzky, is evident from the length of the waiting lists for every series of concerts. Of the five series of sixty-seven concerts to be given in greater Boston, it will not be possible for a non-subscriber to obtain a single seat.

Penfield Roberts comments on the orchestral situation in the Boston Globe of September 26: "Has any American orchestra ever sold out all its concerts in advance in this fashion before? Seats are to be had for the Philadelpha orchestra's Philadelphia concerts and for the Chicago orchestra's Chicago concerts, though the Friday afternoon series in both cities are sold out. No New York orchestra ever sells out its concerts for the season. Nor does any New York orchestra offer them in series of twenty-four at high prices, as is done in this city."

There is a lively demand for tickets for the Hartford concert of the Boston Symphony orchestra, scheduled this season for February. Former patrons of the Sedgwick concerts are securing their seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert.

Seats are on sale at McCoy's, inc., No. 89 Asylum street. Telephone orders received, 2-6147.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
ATLANTA, GA.

OCT 9 1926

When the famous Boston Symphony orchestra opens its forty-sixth season Saturday night at 7:10 o'clock, Atlanta time, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this noted assemblage of 107 musicians will be on hand. In addition to the capacity crowd at Symphony hall, Boston, the concert will be attended by radio listeners who tune in on stations WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washinton. Serge Koussevitsky, famous Russian conductor, will direct the concert.

TRANSCRIPT Oct 6

After Many Days

Franck's Symphony Again at Symphony Hall

IMPATIENCE and conjecture need chafe no more. At last, Mr. Koussevitzky is ready to restore Franck's Symphony to the active repertory of the Symphony Orchestra. Since April of 1924, in Mr Monteux's final year, it has not been heard at Symphony Hall. A cherished piece in Boston, many have wondered why Mr. Koussevitzky put it by through two seasons. He did so because his predecessors had repeated it to surfeit and because he himself waited for leisure to study and prepare it. Last summer he found the opportunity and at the second pair of Symphony Concerts, on Oct. 15 and 16, an expectant public will hear his version. In the same program, he includes Mr. Alexander Steinert's first piece of symphonic dimensions, "Southern Night."

THIS CLIPPING FROM NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
GAZETTE
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON RADIO TONIGHT

Springfield, Oct. 9.—The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; Wgy, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussovitsky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8.10 tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8.15 p. m., again during the 15 minute intermission the voice of Prof. John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audiences instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Prof. Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience reside in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom heard, he will make his remarks in non-technical language.

The program of the first Boston Symphony concert to be broadcast through WBZ and the chain network covers a wide range in the field of musical composition. It begins with Weber's Overture. "Der Freischutz," one of the old "standbys" of orchestral music, and ingludes Debussy's Nocturnes, representing the modern French school, and Prokefiey's suite, representing the modern Russian school. The final number is Beethoven's "Eroica."

Prof. Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony orchestra from 1909 to 1918, and is at present professor of music at Boston university and Holy Cross college. During the World war he served as musician to the commanding general of the northeastern and western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army. With such a musical background, Prof. Marshall is well qualified for the task of interpreting the symphony programs for the radio listeners and his broadcasts are certain to make their programs more vaulable and appreciated by listeners.

The coming of Mr. Hamelin to be first clarinetist of the Symphony Orchestra does not imply the departure of the admired Mr. Allegra, recruit to the band a year ago. He will now play the E-flat clarinet, in the place of Mr. Vannini.

ITEMS ABOUT MUSIC

TRANSCRIPT — Oct 7

Mr. Koussevitzky's Concert for the League of Composers—A Season in Europe for Miss Hess—Return of Mr. Hayes—Mr. Rakhmaninov's New Concerto

FOR a second time Mr. Koussevitzky has agreed to prepare a concert of ultra-modern music for the League of Composers in New York. It is announced for the Town Hall on Saturday evening, Nov. 27. From his Boston forces the conductor will assemble a chamber-orchestra; singing voices will also assist. The program will traverse Stravinsky's "Mavra," to be heard for the first time in America; Louis Gruenberg's setting of "The Creation," poem by James Weld[illegible]k; o[illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM SENTINEL
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

OCT 9 1926

When the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its forty-sixth season tonight at 8:10, Eastern time, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this noted assemblage of 107 musicians will be on hand. In addition to the capacity crowd at Symphony Hall, Boston, the concert will be attended by radio listeners who tune in on Stations WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington. Serge Koussevitsky, famous Russian conductor, will direct tonight's concert.

The skirl of the bag-pipes and the blurr of the "r" will be on t[illegible]

A BALLET OF CLOWNS: MR. KOUSSEVITZKY'S FIRST NOVEL PIECE

Oct 7th

FRAGMENTS FROM PROKOVIEV'S "CHOUT"

A Lusty Folk-Tale to Lively Music—A Scenario of Hearty Burlesque—The Good Memory of Henry T. Finck—Forthcoming Programs—Incidents and Prospects

TO PARIS last summer Mr. Koussevitzky took many things from his Bostonian repertory. Turn about is fair play; to his first pair of concerts in Boston on Friday and Saturday next, he brings a novelty from his concert in Paris on June third. His friend Prokoviev is the composer. "Chout"—Russian for clown or buffoon—is the title. "Chout" was originally written as a ballet for Dyaghilev's troupe of dancers. In 1915 Prokoviev began sketches for the piece. Interrupted by the war, he completed it in 1920. On the seventeenth of May, 1921, it received first performance—from Dyaghilev's Russian Ballet in Paris. Early in June London also sat before it. In 1923 the composer arranged an orchestral suite from the music, first heard at Brussels in November of 1924. For the ballet Prokoviev wrote the scenario as well as the music. Upon a Russian folk-tale he based it. Into six scenes he cast it. Turned into the spoken English of the year 1926, the sub-title might run: "Story of a Young Clown Who Got the Best of Seven Older Clowns."

Scene I. Once upon a time there was a clown—"Le Bouffon." The clown had a wife—"La Bouffonne." The clown was seated on the edge of his stove trying to invent a trick to play on some other clowns. His wife was scrubbing the floor. Finally the clown found what he was looking for. He jumped to the ground and said: "Wife, listen to me. Shortly seven clowns are coming to visit us. When I tell you to set the table, you will refuse and I will seem to kill you. When you have fallen, I will take my whip. At the first crack of the whip, make some movement; at the second, turn around; at the third, get up and set the table. Then we shall be able to sell our whip at a good price." No sooner said than done: the clowns came, saw the miracle, and paid three hundred rubles for the whip.

Scene II. Returned to their own home, the seven clowns decided to test their purchase. They killed their seven wives; cracked the whip over them; but not one came back to life.

Scene III. The widowers, furious, ran to the house of the young clown, determined to make him pay dearly. He became frightened, hid his wife, disguised himself in his sister's clothes. When the clowns came to seek out the culprit, he was seated at the spinning-wheel. But this "sister" pleased them. They seized "her," led "her" away, and decided to keep "her" as their kitchen-maid until they might find the clown.

Scene IV. The seven clowns had seven daughters. The time had come to find husbands for them. A merchant came with two match-makers to choose a bride from the seven daughters. The merchant was rich, oh! so rich. What good fortune! But the daughters of the clowns did not please the merchant. He chose the "maid."

Scene V. Arrived at home, the merchant took the young wife to his chamber. At first the clown-maid did not know how to get himself out of this situation. He said to the merchant: "I am ill. Tie a sheet to me and lower me through the window into the yard. When I give you the signal, draw me back up." The merchant did as requested. But when he drew up the sheet, he found a goat tied to it, and a great fear came upon him. He cried aloud for help. "Hasten to me, good people; my wife has been turned into a goat." The match-makers and servants came quickly, and tried by magic formulas and by turning and twisting the goat to break the spell. Finally the goat died of their efforts.

Scene VI. The merchant, heart-broken, began to bury his goat-wife. The clowns taunted and mocked him: "You wanted a kitchen-maid; so much the worse for you." Suddenly the young clown appeared, and with him seven soldiers. "Dogs!" said he, "what have you done? Where is my sister?" They gave him the goat. Whereupon he ordered the soldiers to arrest the seven clowns and obliged the merchant to pay three hundred rubles. And the clown and his wife amused themselves with the money, while the seven soldiers amused themselvs with the daughters of the seven clowns.

At the first performance of the ballet in 1921, "Chout" shared the program with "The Firebird," a suite of Andalusian Dances under the general title "Quadro Flamenco" and the Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor." The setting and decorations for "Chout" were designed by Michel Larinov, and four of the costumes are pictured herewith. The color-scheme was of brilliant reds and vivid oranges, in the cubistic manner. Prokoviev conducted. Apparently the chief interest of the day lay in "Chout," and chief interest in "Chout" was concentrated on the music. To it dancing and stage-pictures both gave way. Of this music Parisian reviewers have written:

> "Chout" is an important work from the point of view of the evolution of musical art. Prokoviev does not follow in the footsteps of Stravinsky. Surely there is no relation to "Le Sacre" in a music the most striking quality of which is transparence. Wilfully aggressive dissonances, brutality, violence are here displaced by a frenetic, laughing vitality, running course like a pure mountain-stream, full of brilliance and light. Nor does Prokoviev share Stravinsky's rhythmic complexities. Rather he invents rapidly running melodic lines with an irresistible force of expression. Without recourse to exceptional accentuation, they give the feeling of continuous activity and motion. Everything in the ballet is of youth, lightness, freshness. With means much simpler than those of his compatriots Prokoviev obtains effects of a delicious novelty. . . .
>
> There is here a new force, lively, supple, tending toward simplicity rather than complexity, toward clarity and melodic plenty. Using all the innovations of his time, Prokoviev creates a new style, infinitely seductive. . . .
>
> One encounters in "Chout" for the first time in Prokoviev, a number of Russian folk-themes, stoutly disguised, to be sure. Indeed, this music is not Russian in the same sense as the music of Balakirev or Musorgsky. It reminds one rather of the Russianism of Rimsky-Korsakov. Occasionally it makes one think even of Mozart and particularly of Scarlatti.

An adaptation of "Chout" under the title "Buffoon" was staged at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York, March 15, 1924. The orchestral score was arranged for two pianos, violin, flute, oboe, percussion. A reviewer with a point of view of his own wrote in The Musical Courier:

> For his ballet Prokoviev has written music that has the same relation to real music as the comic sections of our newspapers have to real art, and the pantomime to which he attaches it is of the same nature, real burlesque. It is thoroughly delightful, the whole thing, just harmless good-natured fooling. Musically speaking, this sort of work does more to "place" modernistic music than all of the writings on the subject put together. For the sake of fun-making these discords are perfect, and Prokoviev keeps so close to traditional lines that one knows exactly what he is taking off. Such pieces should make it difficult for the serious music of the modernists to be taken seriously!

The orchestral suite as played by Mr. Koussevitzky in Paris comprised: (1) Dance of the Daughters of the Clowns; (2) Dance in the Chamber of the Merchant; (3) The Young Woman Is Become a Goat: (4) Final Dance. A. H. M.

is now [illegible] at seventy-two. It was an extraordinary group of critics, that Big Six, which included the three who have left us and those three others who still happily survive—Aldrich and Henderson and Hale. These men did pioneer work in the advancement of musical understanding and appreciation in this country. It was largely due to them that much of the music which now is our daily bread was first tolerated, then accepted, then enjoyed.

Finck was the most pugnacious of the six. His great and excelling quality was courage. No critic was ever less hampered by conventions and fetishes, less awed by the Sacred Cows of musical respectability. It required high courage to speak well of Wagner in the early eighties, when he was abhorred as a revolutionist—almost as much as it takes to speak well of him today, when he is unfashionable and derided. But Finck, with a glad shout, threw his hat into the Wagnerian ring half a century ago, and he fought for this strange new music until he saw Wagner triumphant throughout the world. Yet Finck showed even greater courage: he dared to say that the mighty occasionally nod—that Beethoven, for instance, was sometimes tedious and banal. He said these things not delicately, tentatively, but bluntly and in a loud voice, to the horror of the orthodox and the delight of those who thought the same thoughts but lacked the audacity to confess them.

Another of Finck's rare qualities was his ardor. He never lost his zest for the things he loved, never wearied of hymning his adored Grieg. Dvorak, Liszt, MacDowell. He never wrote as if he were bored, though sometimes he declared that he was—by Brahms, for instance, whom he disliked and engagingly disparaged. He did not always persuade one to agree with him; and he had, like all of us, his prejudices and prepossessions. But what counted was his delight in the beauty and the greatness that took possession of his spirit, and his determination that the things he loved and valued we too should enjoy and esteem. That delight and that conviction he succeeded often in communicating to those who read his words. What more could he have wished? [The New York Herald-Tribune

Programs in Prospect

Beside Franck's Symphony and Mr. Steinert's new tone-poem "Southern Night," the program for the second pair of Symphony Concerts, on Oct. 15 and 16, includes Mozart's "Little Night-Music," with echo-measures, much admired in the eighteenth century, and Strauss's "Til Eulenspiegel" in which Mr. Koussevitzky excels himself. At Cambridge on Thursday evening, Oct. 14, conductor and orchestra will repeat their first program in Boston: Beethoven's "Eroica Symphony"; Weber's [illegible]

ITEM
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

SEP 26 1926

FIFTEEN STATIONS JOIN TO RADIOCAST SYMPHONY SERIES

Series of 24 Saturday Concerts Go On Air Starting October 9

BOSTON, Mass., — Marking the first time that a chain of radio stations of national coverage will tie in with a New England station for transmitting a series of broadcasts, it was announced today that fifteen concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which opens its 46th season October 9, will be sent out through a network including some of the most powerful broadcasters in the world.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts by this world-famous organization of 107 musicians directed by the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, will be broadcast by Westinghouse Station WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, New YORK, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, D. C. This tie in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The concerts which will be heard through WBZ and the chain network will be given to the radio audience by Mr. W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York, and Chicago houses bearing his name, who last season sponsored the broadcasting of both the Boston Symphony and Pops Concerts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ. chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22, and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the twenty-four Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.

SEP 28 1926

Boston Symphony

There is a lively demand for tickets for the Hartford concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, scheduled this season for February. Former patrons of the Sedgwick concerts are securing their seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert, which is the outstanding feature in Hartford's musical season.

Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor, arrived in Boston September 22 last, bringing with him from Europe some new scores of interest and many promising plans for a remarkable Boston Symphony Orchestra season, which will include a visit to this city. His sojourn in Europe began with his series of "concerts Koussevitzky," which are the principal event of each spring season in Paris. Subsequently he spent much time consulting composers and publishers in quest of new music. The latter part of the summer he took a real vacation in Switzerland and at the watering places of France. Koussevitsky brought back with him manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman which have been written especially for the Russian conductor and his orchestra, and which are to have their first performance in Boston. He will assemble the orchestra for rehearsal in Symphony Hall, Boston, next Saturday in preparation for the opening of the season October 8. There will be notable choral concerts, and a Beethoven centennial festival in the spring, in observance of the master's death. Every effort is being made by Mr. Sedgwick to secure Mr. Koussevitzky's consent to present a Beethoven program for his Hartford concert. Seats are on sale at McCoy's music store. Mail orders will have careful attention, and the best seats will be allotted nearest to the location specified.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK,
N. Y.
NEWS

OCT 1 01926

The radio routed its highbrow critics last night. Those sour souled scoffers who said that jazz is the highest expression of the loud speaker were forced to eat crow. WJZ made them all look ridiculous by invading the intellectual altitudes and presenting the Boston Symphony orchestra. And not just a mere concert of classics but one that featured Debussy and some of the ultra modern composers!

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.

OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON AIR TONIGHT

The opening concert of the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony orchestra, which will be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ, furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With Stations WJZ of New York, WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the purpose by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussevitzky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8:05 tonight.

W. S. Quinby, head of the W. S. Quinby company of Boston, New York and Chicago, and sponsor of the Symphony broadcasts, will speak to the members of the radio audience, welcoming them to this feast of music.

Then for five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8:15 p. m., and again during the fifteen-minute intermission, the voice of Professor John P. Marshall will be heard giving instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the program used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Professor Marshall will give his interpretations of the Symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of twenty-four concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.

OCT 8 - 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT

The public of the Boston Symphony orchestra has grown considerably in recent seasons and is now limited only by the number of concerts the great orchestra, which must spend most of its time in rehearsal, can give.

That America expects great things of the pending season, which is to be the third under Serge Koussevitzky, is evident from the length of the waiting lists for every series of concerts. Of the five series of sixty-seven concerts to be given in greater Boston, it will not be possible for a non-subscriber to obtain a single seat.

Penfield Roberts comments on the orchestral situation in the Boston Globe of September 26: "Has any American orchestra ever sold out all its concerts in advance in this fashion before? Seats are to be had for the Philadelpha orchestra's Philadelphia concerts and for the Chicago orchestra's Chicago concerts, though the Friday afternoon seats in both cities are sold out. No New York orchestra ever sells out its concerts for the season. Nor does any New York orchestra offer them in series of four at high prices, as is done here."

[illegible] a lively demand for tickets [illegible]rtford concert of the Boston [illegible]rchestra, scheduled this sea[illegible]ary. Former patrons of [illegible]oncerts are securing their seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert.

Seats are on sale at McCoy's, inc., No. 89 Asylum street. Telephone orders received, 2-6147.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
ATLANTA, GA.

OCT 9 1926

When the famous Boston Symphony orchestra opens its forty-sixth season Saturday night at 7:10 o'clock, Atlanta time, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this noted assemblage of 107 musicians will be on hand. In addition to the capacity crowd at Symphony hall, Boston, the concert will be attended by radio listeners who tune in on stations WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washinton. Serge Koussevitsky, famous Russian conductor, will direct the concert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
GAZETTE
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON RADIO TONIGHT

Springfield, Oct. 9.—The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; Wgy, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussovitsky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8.10 tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8.15 p. m., again during the 15 minute intermission the voice of Prof. John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audiences instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Prof. Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience reside in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom heard, he will make his remarks in non-technical language.

The program of the first Boston Symphony concert to be broadcast through WBZ and the chain network covers a wide range in the field of musical composition. It begins with Weber's Overture. "Der Freischutz," one of the old "standbys" of orchestral music, and includes Debussy's Nocturnes, representing the modern French school, and Prokefiey's suite, representing the modern Russian school. The final number is Beethoven's "Eroica."

Prof. Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony orchestra from 1909 to 1918, and is at present professor of music at Boston university and Holy Cross college. During the World war he served as musician to the commanding general of the northeastern and western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army. With such a musical background, Prof. Marshall is well qualified for the task of interpreting the symphony programs for the radio listeners and his broadcasts are certain to make their programs more vaulable and appreciated by listeners.

The coming of Mr. Hamelin to be first clarinetist of the Symphony Orchestra does not imply the departure of the admired Mr. Allegra, recruit to the band a year ago. He will now play the E-flat clarinet, in the place of Mr. Vannini.

ITEMS ABOUT MUSIC

Transcript — Oct 7

Mr. Koussevitzky's Concert for the League of Composers—A Season in Europe for Miss Hess—Return of Mr. Hayes—Mr. Rakhmaninov's New Concerto

FOR a second time Mr. Koussevitzky has agreed to prepare a concert of ultra-modern music for the League of Composers in New York. It is announced for the Town Hall on Saturday evening, Nov. 27. From his Boston forces the conductor will assemble a chamber-orchestra; singing voices will also assist. The program will traverse Stravinsky's "Mavra," to be heard for the first time in America; Louis Gruenberg's setting of "The Creation," poem by James Weldon John[illegible]; other [illegible]

THIS CLIPPING FROM SENTINEL
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

OCT 9 1926

When the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its forty-sixth season tonight at 8:10, Eastern time, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this noted assemblage of 107 musicians will be on hand. In addition to the capacity crowd at Symphony Hall, Boston, the concert will be attended by radio listeners who tune in on Stations WBZ, Springfield, Mass.; WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington. Serge Koussevitsky, famous Russian conductor, will direct tonight's concert.

—o—

The skirl of the bag-pipes and the blurr of the "r" will be [illegible]

Transcript Oct 6

After Many Days

Franck's Symphony Again at Symphony Hall

IMPATIENCE and conjecture need chafe no more. At last, Mr. Koussevitzky is ready to restore Franck's Symphony to the active repertory of the Symphony Orchestra. Since April of 1924, in Mr Monteux's final year, it has not been heard at Symphony Hall. A cherished piece in Boston, many have wondered why Mr. Koussevitzky put it by through two seasons. He did so because his predecessors had repeated it to surfeit and because he himself waited for leisure to study and prepare it. Last summer he found the opportunity and at the second pair of Symphony Concerts, on Oct. 15 and 16, an expectant public will hear his version. In the same program, he includes Mr. Alexander Steinert's first piece of symphonic dimensions, "Southern Night."

A BALLET OF CLOWNS: MR. KOUSSEVITZKY'S FIRST NOVEL PIECE

Oct 7th

FRAGMENTS FROM PROKOVIEV'S "CHOUT"

A Lusty Folk-Tale to Lively Music—A Scenario of Hearty Burlesque—The Good Memory of Henry T. Finck—Forthcoming Programs—Incidents and Prospects

TO PARIS last summer Mr. Koussevitzky took many things from his Bostonian repertory. Turn about is fair play; to his first pair of concerts in Boston on Friday and Saturday next, he brings a novelty from his concert in Paris on June third. His friend Prokoviev is the composer. "Chout"—Russian for clown or buffoon—is the title. "Chout" was originally written as a ballet for Dyaghilev's troupe of dancers. In 1915 Prokoviev began sketches for the piece. Interrupted by the war, he completed it in 1920. On the seventeenth of May, 1921, it received first performance—from Dyaghilev's Russian Ballet in Paris. Early in June London also sat before it. In 1923 the composer arranged an orchestral suite from the music, first heard at Brussels in November of 1924. For the ballet Prokoviev wrote the scenario as well as the music. Upon a Russian folk-tale he based it. Into six scenes he cast it. Turned into the spoken English of the year 1926, the sub-title might run: "Story of a Young Clown Who Got the Best of Seven Older Clowns."

Scene I. Once upon a time there was a clown—"Le Bouffon." The clown had a wife—"La Bouffonne." The clown was seated on the edge of his stove trying to invent a trick to play on some other clowns. His wife was scrubbing the floor. Finally the clown found what he was looking for. He jumped to the ground and said: "Wife, listen to me. Shortly seven clowns are coming to visit us. When I tell you to set the table, you will refuse and I will seem to kill you. When you have fallen, I will take my whip. At the first crack of the whip, make some movement; at the second, turn around; at the third, get up and set the table. Then we shall be able to sell our whip at a good price." No sooner said than done: the clowns came, saw the miracle, and paid three hundred rubles for the whip.

Scene II. Returned to their own home, the seven clowns decided to test their purchase. They killed their seven wives; cracked the whip over them; but not one came back to life.

Scene III. The widowers, furious, ran to the house of the young clown, determined to make him pay dearly. He became frightened, hid his wife, disguised himself in his sister's clothes. When the clowns came to seek out the culprit, he was seated at the spinning-wheel. But this "sister" pleased them. They seized "her," led "her" away, and decided to keep "her" as their kitchen-maid until they might find the clown.

Scene IV. The seven clowns had seven daughters. The time had come to find husbands for them. A merchant came with two match-makers to choose a bride from the seven daughters. The merchant was rich, oh! so rich. What good fortune! But the daughters of the clowns did not please the merchant. He chose the "maid."

Scene V. Arrived at home, the merchant took the young wife to his chamber. At first the clown-maid did not know how to get himself out of this situation. He said to the merchant: "I am ill. Tie a sheet to me and lower me through the window into the yard. When I give you the signal, draw me back up." The merchant did as requested. But when he drew up the sheet, he found a goat tied to it, and a great fear came upon him. He cried aloud for help. "Hasten to me, good people; my wife has been turned into a goat." The match-makers and servants came quickly, and tried by magic formulas and by turning and twisting the goat to break the spell. Finally the goat died of their efforts.

Scene VI. The merchant, heart-broken, began to bury his goat-wife. The clowns taunted and mocked him: "You wanted a kitchen-maid; so much the worse for you." Suddenly the young clown appeared, and with him seven soldiers. "Dogs!" said he, "what have you done? Where is my sister?" They gave him the goat. Whereupon he ordered the soldiers to arrest the seven clowns and obliged the merchant to pay three hundred rubles. And the clown and his wife amused themselves with the money, while the seven soldiers amused themselves with the daughters of the seven clowns.

At the first performance of the ballet in 1921, "Chout" shared the program with "The Firebird," a suite of Andalusian Dances under the general title "Quadro Flamenco" and the Polovtsian Dances from "Prince Igor." The setting and decorations for "Chout" were designed by Michel Larinov, and four of the costumes are pictured herewith. The color-scheme was of brilliant reds and vivid oranges, in the cubistic manner. Prokoviev conducted. Apparently the chief interest of the day lay in "Chout," and chief interest in "Chout" was concentrated on the music. To it dancing and stage-pictures both gave way. Of this music Parisian reviewers have written:

"Chout" is an important work from the point of view of the evolution of musical art. Prokoviev does not follow in the footsteps of Stravinsky. Surely there is no relation to "Le Sacre" in a music the most striking quality of which is transparence. Wilfully aggressive dissonances, brutality, violence are here displaced by a frenetic, laughing vitality, running course like a pure mountain-stream, full of brilliance and light. Nor does Prokoviev share Stravinsky's rhythmic complexities. Rather he invents rapidly running melodic lines with an irresistible force of expression. Without recourse to exceptional accentuation, they give the feeling of continuous activity and motion. Everything in the ballet is of youth, lightness, freshness. With means much simpler than those of his compatriots Prokoviev obtains effects of a delicious novelty. . . .

There is here a new force, lively, supple, tending toward simplicity rather than complexity, toward clarity and melodic plenty. Using all the innovations of his time, Prokoviev creates a new style, infinitely seductive. . . .

One encounters in "Chout" for the first time in Prokoviev, a number of Russian folk-themes, stoutly disguised, to be sure. Indeed, this music is not Russian in the same sense as the music of Balakirev or Musorgsky. It reminds one rather of the Russianism of Rimsky-Korsakov. Occasionally it makes one think even of Mozart and particularly of Scarlatti.

An adaptation of "Chout" under the title "Buffoon" was staged at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York, March 15, 1924. The orchestral score was arranged for two pianos, violin, flute, oboe, percussion. A reviewer with a point of view of his own wrote in The Musical Courier:

For his ballet Prokoviev has written music that has the same relation to real music as the comic sections of our newspapers have to real art, and the pantomime to which he attaches it is of the same nature, real burlesque. It is thoroughly delightful, the whole thing, just harmless good-natured fooling. Musically speaking, this sort of work does more to "place" modernistic music than all of the writings on the subject put together. For the sake of fun-making these discords are perfect, and Prokoviev keeps so close to traditional lines that one knows exactly what he is taking off. Such pieces should make it difficult for the serious music of the modernists to be taken seriously!

The orchestral suite as played by Mr. Koussevitzky in Paris comprised: (1) Dance of the Daughters of the Clowns; (2) Dance in the Chamber of the Merchant; (3) The Young Woman Is Become a Goat; (4) Final Dance. A. H. M.

A Good Memory

One by one the Elder Statesmen among the music-critics of America go to their honored rest. Huneker, Krehbiel, and now Finck—the versatile, pertinacious, inimitable Henry T. Finck, who retired from The New York Evening Post in 1924 after a service of forty-three years as music-editor of that journal, and who

His Titanic Swats
(Acme Photo)

[illegible] well of him today, when he is [illegible]nfashionable and derided. But Finck, [illegible]ith a glad shout, threw his hat into the [illegible]agnerian ring half a century ago, and [illegible]e fought for this strange new music until he saw Wagner triumphant throughout the world. Yet Finck showed even greater courage: he dared to say that the mighty occasionally nod—that Beethoven, for instance, was sometimes tedious and banal. He said these things not delicately, tentatively, but bluntly and in a loud voice, to the horror of the orthodox and the delight of those who thought the same thoughts but lacked the audacity to confess them.

Another of Finck's rare qualities was his ardor. He never lost his zest for the things he loved, never wearied of hymning his adored Grieg, Dvorak, Liszt, MacDowell. He never wrote as if he were bored, though sometimes he declared that he was—by Brahms, for instance, whom he disliked and engagingly disparaged. He did not always persuade one to agree with him; and he had, like all of us, his prejudices and prepossessions. But what counted was his delight in the beauty and the greatness that took possession of his spirit, and his determination that the things he loved and valued we too should enjoy and esteem. That delight and that conviction he succeeded often in communicating to those who read his words. What more could he have wished? [The New York Herald-Tribune

Programs in Prospect

Beside Franck's Symphony and Mr. Steinert's new tone-poem "Southern Night," the program for the second pair of Symphony Concerts, on Oct. 15 and 16, includes Mozart's "Little Night-Music," with echo-measures, much admired in the eighteenth century, and Strauss's "Til Eulenspiegel" in which Mr. Koussevitzky excels himself. At Cambridge on Thursday evening, Oct. 14, conductor and orchestra will repeat their first program in Boston: Beethoven's "Eroica Symphony"; Weber's Overture to "Der Freischütz"; Febr[illegible]

[illegible]'s Game, and Was Transmitted to New York the Finished Made the

THIS CLIPPING FROM REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
OCT 9 1926

34

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON RADIO TONIGHT

Opening Concert of Winter Series to Be Broadcast By WBZ Starts at 8.10

The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; WGY, Schnectady; and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussovitsky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8.10 p. m. tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8.15 p. m., again during the 15 minute intermission the voice of Prof John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audences instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Prof Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience reside in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom heard, he will make his remarks in nontechnical language.

The program of the first Boston Symphony concert to be broadcast through WBZ and the chain network covers a wide range in the field of musical composition. It begins with Weber's Overture, "Der Freischutz," one of the old "standbys" of orchestral music, and includes Debussy's Nocturnes, representing the modern French school, and Prokefiev's suite, representing the modern Russian school. The final number is Beethoven's "Eroica."

Prof Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony orchestra from 1909 to 1918, and is at present professor of music at Boston University and Holy Cross college. During the World war he served as musical to the commanding general of the northeastern and western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army. With such a musical background, Prof Marshall is well qualified for the task of interpreting the symphony programs for the radio listeners and his broadcasts are certain to make their programs more veluable and appreciated by listeners.

The complete program of Saturday's concert follows:

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 9 1926

SYMPHONY OPENING PROVES GALA EVENT

Koussevitzky Given Ovation In Boston; Providence Tickets In Great Demand

(Special to the Providence Journal)

Boston, Oct. 8.—The inauguration of the concert season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to-day at Symphony Hall proved a gala event. An ovation greeted Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, as he made his appearance on the stage, and the applause was spontaneous and sustained at the end of the brilliant Beethoven "Eroica Symphony," which terminated the programme.

The novelty of the afternoon was Prokofieff's ballet suite "Chout" (Buffoon). One or both of these pieces is expected to be included in the programme at the orchestra's premiere at the E. F. Albee Theatre in Providence, Oct. 26.

The subscription office in Symphony Hall has reported a greater demand for season tickets to the Providence series of concerts than ever before. Mail orders are still being received. Such seats as remain unsold by Oct. 18 will be placed on sale on that date at Steinert's music store in Providence.

The personnel of the Symphony this season is again at its customary standard of excellence. A notable acquisition to the gifted group of artists is that of one principal player, Gaston Hamelin, celebrated clarinet virtuoso, who arrived from Paris this week to fill that important position.

Prof Marshall Will Interpret Boston Symphony

N. Y. EVENING SUN
OCT 9 1926

Symphony on Air

Boston Orchestra to Give Saturday Series During Winter.

WHEN Serge Koussevitzky gives the baton signal which will open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians, aggregating millions, will be tuned in to station WBZ and the chain network linked with that station.

Excepting those Saturday nights when the Symphony Orchestra will be on tour, WBZ will offer its listeners the Saturday evening Symphony programs of approximately two hours' duration from the opening concert until the concluding one on April 30. The chain network, which includes WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will transmit fifteen of the twenty-four concerts which go out on the WBZ wave.

To Discuss Music.

One of the features of the Symphony broadcasts will be the interesting and instructive discussions of symphonic music by Prof. John P. Marshall. About five minutes before the opening selection by the orchestra he will give an informative talk on symphony music in general. His voice will again be heard during the intermission, at which time he will interpret for the radio audience the selections of the evening's program. In order that the listeners may understand these weekly talks, arrangements are being made to illustrate the various points discussed with instrumental music.

Prof. Marshall from 1909 until 1918 was organist of the University and Holy Cross College. During the world war he served as musical aid to the commanding General of the Northwestern and Western departments and was later appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army.

As was the case with the Symphony and Pope concerts broadcast last season, W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, is sponsoring the Symphony programs, which will be heard through the WBZ chain again this year.

Simultaneously with the above announcement comes another of a series of Sunday evening concerts which will be presented during October and November by Boris Kreinin, who was associated with Koussevitzky for a number of years in his work at Moscow.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT TO-NIGHT TO BE BROADCAST

Opening Programme of 46th Season to Be Put on Air by Four Stations.—Tickets for Providence Series Eagerly Sought.

Music lovers and radio fans are looking forward to the initial radio concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 46th season at 8:10 o'clock this evening, following reports from Boston that the opening concert in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon was one of the most successful premieres in recent years.

To-night's programme will be broadcast from WBZ, Springfield, hooked up with WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, was greeted with a spontaneous outburst of applause as he appeared on the platform last night.

The novelty of yesterday afternoon was Prokofieff's ballet suite "Chout" (Buffoon). One or both of these pieces is expected to be included in the programme at the orchestra's premiere at the E. F. Albee Theatre in Providence, Oct. 26.

The subscription office in Symphony Hall has reported a greater demand for season tickets to the Providence series of concerts than ever before. Mail orders are still being received. Such seats as remain unsold by Oct. 18 will be placed on sale on that date at Steinert's music store in Providence.

The personnel of the Symphony this season is again at its customary standard of excellence. A notable acquisition to the gifted group of artists is that of one principal player, Gaston Hamelin, celebrated clarinet virtuoso, who arrived from Paris this week to fill that important position.

W. S. Quinby, head of the W. S. Quinby Company of Boston, New York and Chicago, and sponsor of the symphony broadcasts, will speak to the members of the radio audience who listen in to-night, welcoming them to the feast of music.

Then for five minutes preceding the first number on the programme, scheduled for 8:15, and again during the 15-minute intermission, Prof. John P. Marshall will give instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programme used by the audience at Symphony Hall.

Prof. Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programmes each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience resides in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom, he

THIS CLIPPING FROM MILWAUKEE, WIS.
NEWS
OCT 9 1926

HEAR SYMPHONY TOMORROW

BOSTON, Mass.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 o'clock tonight, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world famous orchestra of one hundred seven musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire twenty-four concerts of the symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director.

He also stated that the powerful stations WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, restricted [illegible] activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov. 13 and 20, Dec. 4, 11, 18, 25, Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb. 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

ing the modern Russian school The final number, Symphony No. 3 in E-flat major, is a representative of the famous Beethoven school.

Prof. Marshall will speak of the motives of these schools and will supplement his remarks with illustrations of themes and other features to which he desires to direct the especial attention of the radio audience.

Prof. Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1909 to 1918 and is at present professor of music at Boston University and Holy Cross College. During the World War he served as musical aide to the commanding General of the Northeastern and Western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army.

The complete programme of Saturday's concert follows:

Overture to "Der Freischutz".....Weber
Two Nocturnes .....Debussy
a. Nuages (Clouds).
b. Fetes (Festivals).
Ballet Suite, "Chout" .....Prokofieff
a. Danse des filles des bouffons.
b. Dans la chambre a coucher du marchand.
c. Le jeune femme est devenue chevre.
d. Dans finale.
First time in Boston.
Symphony No. 3 in E-flat major, "Eroica" .....Beethoven
Op. 55
I. Allegro con brio.
II. Marcia Funebre; Adagio assai.
III. Scherzo; Allegro vivace; Trio.
IV. Finale; Allegro molto.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 9 1926

Boston Symphony on Air Through WJZ and Chain

The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Kousevitsky which has been made available by W. S. Quinby of Boston, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8:10 p. m. tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program scheduled for 8.15 p. m., and again during the fifteen minute intermission, the voices of Professor John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audience instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony Hall.

Professor Marshall will give his interpretations of the Symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of twenty-four concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience resides in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom, he will make his remarks in non-technical language.

THIS CLIPPING FROM CITIZEN
COLUMBUS, OHIO
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON ORCHESTRA CONCERTS

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Oct. 9.—Station WBZ, here, has completed its schedule of Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts which are to be broadcast by that station.

The following are the dates for these orchestra broadcasts. A date followed by an asterisk indicates that WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, N. Y., and WRC, Washington, will rebroadcast the program:

October 9*, 16*, 23*, 30.
November 13, 20*.
December 4*, 11*, 18, 25*.
January 1, 15, 22*, 29*.
February 12, 19*, 26*.
March 5*, 19, 26.
April 2, 16*, 23*, 30*.

SYMPHONY PROGRAM

The program of the concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, will comprise Haydn's Symphony in E flat (No. 3 B & H.) "Les Rencontres," a suite of ballet pieces by Jacques Ibert, (first American performance) and the following four Wagnerian excerpts: Prelude to "Lohengrin"; The funeral music of Siegfried from the "Dusk of the Gods"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; and the prelude to the "Meistersinger."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM
OCT 9 - 1926

Noted Boston Symphony in Radio Series

First Concert To Be Radiated by WJZ This Evening.

THE premier concert of a series which will bring the leading symphony orchestras of New York and Boston to the listening audience of the North Atlantic States every Saturday night during the coming winter will be broadcast by stations WJZ, WRC, WGY and WBZ, starting at 8:10 o'clock tonight, and present the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky.

The other great orchestra which will be heard in this series will be the New York Philharmonic in its students' concerts under Willem Mengelberg, but the opening concert of that orchestra will not be given until October 30.

This concert by the Boston Symphony will be given in Symphony Hall, Boston, and will mark the opening of the forty-sixth season of that organization. Its audience at that time will be the greatest in its history, it being estimated that over 10,000,000 persons will hear this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians.

W. S. Quinby, head of the New York, Boston and Chicago house bearing his name, is sponsoring the series of concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It was he who was responsible for the first broadcasting by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on January 23 of this year and the subsequent twelve Boston Symphony concerts and the nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra, all of which were broadcast by station WBZ.

Serge Koussevitzky, the Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony, has just returned to America to lead the orchestra in this series. His entire summer was spent abroad in conference with composers and publishers on new scores for the organization.

NEW YORK
EVE. WORLD
OCT 9 - 1926

Boston Symphony to Open Winter Season Before 10,000,000 Fans

THE premier concert of a series which will bring the leading symphony orchestras of New York and Boston to the listening audience of the North Atlantic States every Saturday night during the coming winter will be broadcast by station WJZ, starting at 8.10 P. M. tonight with the presentation of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky. The other great orchestra which will be heard in this series will be the New York Philharmonic in its Student's Concerts, under Willem Mengelberg. The latter's opening concert, however, will not be given until Oct. 30.

The concert by the Boston Symphony will be given in Symphony Hall, Boston, and will mark the opening of their forty-sixth season. It is estimated that over 10,000,000 persons will hear this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians, which will simultaneously play for the audiences of WRC, WGY and WBZ, in addition to WJZ.

HERALD Oct 17

THIS CLIPPING FROM REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON RADIO TONIGHT

Opening Concert of Winter Series to Be Broadcast By WBZ Starts at 8.10

The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; WGY, Schnectady; and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussovitsky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8.10 p. m. tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8.15 p. m., again during the 15 minute intermission the voice of Prof John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audences instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Prof Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience reside in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom heard, he will make his remarks in nontechnical language.

The program of the first Boston Symphony concert to be broadcast through WBZ and the chain network covers a wide range in the field of musical composition. It begins with Weber's Overture, "Der Freischutz," one of the old "standbys" of orchestral music, and includes Debussy's Nocturnes, representing the modern French school, and Prokeflev's suite, representing the modern Russian school. The final number is Beethoven's "Eroica."

Prof Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony orchestra from 1909 to 1918, and is at present professor of music at Boston University and Holy Cross college. During the World war he served as musical to the commanding general of the northeastern and western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army. With such a musical background, Prof Marshall is well qualified for the task of interpreting the symphony programs for the radio listeners and his broadcasts are certain to make their programs more veluable and appreciated by listeners.

The complete program of Saturday's concert follows:

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 9 1926

SYMPHONY OPENING PROVES GALA EVENT

Koussevitzky Given Ovation In Boston; Providence Tickets In Great Demand

(Special to the Providence Journal)

Boston, Oct. 8.—The inauguration of the concert season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to-day at Symphony Hall proved a gala event. An ovation greeted Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, as he made his appearance on the stage, and the applause was spontaneous and sustained at the end of the brilliant Beethoven "Eroica Symphony," which terminated the programme.

The novelty of the afternoon was Prokofieff's ballet suite "Chout" (Buffoon). One or both of these pieces is expected to be included in the programme at the E. F. Albee Theatre in Providence, Oct. 26.

The subscription office in Symphony Hall has reported a greater demand for season tickets to the Providence series of concerts than ever before. Mail orders are still being received. Such seats as remain unsold by Oct. 18 will be placed on sale on that date at Steinert's music store in Providence.

The personnel of the Symphony this season is again at its customary standard of excellence. A notable acquisition to the gifted group of artists is that of one principal player, Gaston Hamelin, celebrated clarinet virtuoso, who arrived from Paris this week to fill that important position.

Prof Marshall Will Interpret Boston Symphony

N. Y. EVENING SUN
OCT 9 1926

Symphony on Air

Boston Orchestra to Give Saturday Series During Winter.

WHEN Serge Koussevitzky gives the baton signal which will open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians, aggregating millions, will be tuned in to station WBZ and the chain network linked with that station.

Excepting those Saturday nights when the Symphony Orchestra will be on tour, WBZ will offer its listeners the Saturday evening Symphony programs of approximately two hours' duration from the opening concert until the concluding one on April 30. The chain network, which includes WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will transmit fifteen of the twenty-four concerts which go out on the WBZ wave.

To Discuss Music.

One of the features of the Symphony broadcasts will be the interesting and instructive discussions of symphonic music by Prof. John P. Marshall. About five minutes before the opening selection by the orchestra he will give an informative talk on symphony music in general. His voice will again be heard during the intermission, at which time he will interpret for the radio audience the selections of the evening's program. In order that the listeners may understand these weekly talks, arrangements are being made to illustrate the various points discussed with instrumental music.

Prof. Marshall from 1909 until 1918 was organist of the University and Holy Cross College. During the world war he served as musical aid to the commanding General of the Northwestern and Western departments and was later appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army.

As was the case with the Symphony and Pope concerts broadcast last season, W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, is sponsoring the Symphony programs, which will be heard through the WBZ chain again this year.

Simultaneously with the above announcement comes another of a series of Sunday evening concerts which will be presented during October and November by Boris Kreinin, who was associated with Koussevitzky for a number of years in his work at Moscow.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT TO-NIGHT TO BE BROADCAST

Opening Programme of 46th Season to Be Put on Air by Four Stations.—Tickets for Providence Series Eagerly Sought.

Music lovers and radio fans are looking forward to the initial radio concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 46th season at 8:10 o'clock this evening, following reports from Boston that the opening concert in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon was one of the most successful premieres in recent years.

To-night's programme will be broadcast from WBZ, Springfield, hooked up with WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, was greeted with a spontaneous outburst of applause as he appeared on the platform last night.

The novelty of yesterday afternoon was Prokofieff's ballet suite "Chout" (Buffoon). One or both of these pieces is expected to be included in the programme at the orchestra's premiere at the E. F. Albee Theatre in Providence, Oct. 26.

The subscription office in Symphony Hall has reported a greater demand for season tickets to the Providence series of concerts than ever before. Mail orders are still being received. Such seats as remain unsold by Oct. 18 will be placed on sale on that date at Steinert's music store in Providence.

The personnel of the Symphony this season is again at its customary standard of excellence. A notable acquisition to the gifted group of artists is that of one principal player, Gaston Hamelin, celebrated clarinet virtuoso, who arrived from Paris this week to fill that important position.

W. S. Quinby, head of the W. S. Quinby Company of Boston, New York and Chicago, and sponsor of the symphony broadcasts, will speak to the members of the radio audience who listen in to-night, welcoming them to the feast of music.

Then for five minutes preceding the first number on the programme, scheduled for 8:15, and again during the 15-minute intermission, Prof. John P. Marshall will give instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programme used by the audience at Symphony Hall.

Prof. Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programmes each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience resides in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom heard, he will make his remarks in non-technical language.

THIS CLIPPING FROM MILWAUKEE, WIS.
NEWS
OCT 9 1926

HEAR SYMPHONY TOMORROW

BOSTON, Mass.—When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony orchestra season opens at 8:10 o'clock tonight, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world famous orchestra of one hundred seven musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony hall and through the air to millions of homes.

Westinghouse station WBZ at Springfield will broadcast the entire twenty-four concerts of the symphony season, it was announced today by G. H. Jaspert, director.

He also stated that the powerful stations WJZ of New York, WGY of Schenectady and WRC of Washington will tie-in with WBZ on the opening night, thus making the concert available to radio listeners along the Atlantic seaboard and as far west as the Mississippi river.

Serge Koussevitzky, Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, restricted his European activities this summer to his annual series of "Concerts Koussevitzky" at the Grand Opera in Paris.

The dates of the broadcasts of the Boston Symphony orchestra programs through WBZ are Oct. 9, 16, 23 and 30, Nov. 13 and 20, Dec. 4, 11, 18, 25, Jan. 1, 15, 22 and 29, Feb. 12, 19 and 26, March 5, 19 and 26, April 2, 16, 23 and 30.

ing the modern Russian school The final number, Symphony No. 3 in E-flat major, is a representative of the famous Beethoven school.

Prof. Marshall will speak of the motives of these schools and will supplement his remarks with illustrations of themes and other features to which he desires to direct the especial attention of the radio audience.

Prof. Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1909 to 1918 and is at present professor of music at Boston University and Holy Cross College. During the World War he served as musical aide to the commanding General of the Northeastern and Western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army.

The complete programme of Saturday's concert follows:

Overture to "Der Freischutz".....Weber
Two Nocturnes .....Debussy
a. Nuages (Clouds).
b. Fetes (Festivals).
Ballet Suite, "Chout" .....Prokofieff
a. Dance des filles des bouffons.
b. Dans la chambre a coucher du marchand.
c. Le jeune femme est devenue chevre.
d. Dans finale.
First time in Boston.
Symphony No. 3 in E-flat major, "Eroica" .....Beethoven
Op. 55
I. Allegro con brio.
II. Marcia Funebre; Adagio assai.
III. Scherzo; Allegro vivace; Trio.
IV. Finale; Allegro molto.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 9 1926

Boston Symphony on Air Through WJZ and Chain

The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Kousevitsky which has been made available by W. S. Quinby of Boston, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8:10 p. m. tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program scheduled for 8.15 p. m., and again during the fifteen minute intermission, the voices of Professor John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audience instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony Hall.

Professor Marshall will give his interpretations of the Symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of twenty-four concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience resides in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom, he will make his remarks in non-technical language.

THIS CLIPPING FROM CITIZEN
COLUMBUS, OHIO
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON ORCHESTRA CONCERTS

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Oct. 9.—Station WBZ, here, has completed its schedule of Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts which are to be broadcast by that station.

The following are the dates for these orchestra broadcasts. A date followed by an asterisk indicates that WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, N. Y., and WRC, Washington, will rebroadcast the program:

October 9*, 16*, 23*, 30.
November 13, 20*.
December 4*, 11*, 18, 25*.
January 1, 15, 22*, 29*.
February 12, 19*, 26*.
March 5*, 19, 26.
April 2, 16*, 23*, 30*.

SYMPHONY PROGRAM

The program of the concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, will comprise Haydn's Symphony in E flat (No. 3 B & H.) "Les Rencontres," a suite of ballet pieces by Jacques Ibert, (first American performance) and the following four Wagnerian excerpts: Prelude to "Lohengrin"; The funeral music of Siegfried from the "Dusk of the Gods"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; and the prelude to the "Meistersinger."

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM
OCT 9 - 1926

Noted Boston Symphony in Radio Series

First Concert To Be Radiated by WJZ This Evening.

THE premier concert of a series which will bring the leading symphony orchestras of New York and Boston to the listening audience of the North Atlantic States every Saturday night during the coming winter will be broadcast by stations WJZ, WRC, WGY and WBZ, starting at 8:10 o'clock tonight, and present the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky.

The other great orchestra which will be heard in this series will be the New York Philharmonic in its students' concerts under Willem Mengelberg, but the opening concert of that orchestra will not be given until October 30.

This concert by the Boston Symphony will be given in Symphony Hall, Boston, and will mark the opening of the forty-sixth season of that organization. Its audience at that time will be the greatest in its history, it being estimated that over 10,000,000 persons will hear this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians.

W. S. Quinby, head of the New York, Boston and Chicago house bearing his name, is sponsoring the series of concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It was he who was responsible for the first broadcasting by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on January 23 of this year and the subsequent twelve Boston Symphony concerts and the nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra, all of which were broadcast by station WBZ.

Serge Koussevitzky, the Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony, has just returned to America to lead the orchestra in this series. His entire summer was spent abroad in conference with composers and publishers on new scores for the organization.

NEW YORK
EVE. WORLD

Boston Symphony to Open Winter Season Before 10,000,000 Fans

THE premier concert of a series which will bring the leading symphony orchestras of New York and Boston to the listening audience of the North Atlantic States every Saturday night during the coming winter will be broadcast by station WJZ, starting at 8.10 P. M. tonight with the presentation of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky. The other great orchestra which will be heard in this series will be the New York Philharmonic in its Student's Concerts, under Willem Mengelberg. The latter's opening concert, however, will not be given until Oct. 30.

The concert by the Boston Symphony will be given in Symphony Hall, Boston, and will mark the opening of their forty-sixth season. It is estimated that over 10,000,000 persons will hear this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians, which will simultaneously play for the audiences of WRC, WGY and WBZ, in addition to WJZ.

Herald Oct 17

THIS CLIPPING FROM REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
OCT 9 - 1926

34

BOSTON SYMPHONY ON RADIO TONIGHT

Opening Concert of Winter Series to Be Broadcast By WBZ Starts at 8.10

The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; WGY, Schnectady; and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Koussovitsky, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8.10 p. m. tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program, scheduled for 8.15 p. m., again during the 15 minute intermission the voice of Prof John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audences instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony hall.

Prof Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience reside in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom heard, he will make his remarks in nontechnical language.

The program of the first Boston Symphony concert to be broadcast through WBZ and the chain network covers a wide range in the field of musical composition. It begins with Weber's Overture, "Der Freischutz," one of the old "standbys" of orchestral music, and includes Debussy's Nocturnes, representing the modern French school, and Prokefiev's suite, representing the modern Russian school. The final number is Beethoven's "Eroica."

Prof Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony orchestra from 1909 to 1918, and is at present professor of music at Boston University and Holy Cross college. During the World war he served as musical to the commanding general of the northeastern and western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army. With such a musical background, Prof Marshall is well qualified for the task of interpreting the symphony programs for the radio listeners and his broadcasts are certain to make their programs more veluable and appreciated by listeners.

The complete program of Saturday's concert follows:

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 91926

SYMPHONY OPENING PROVES GALA EVENT

Koussevitzky Given Ovation In Boston; Providence Tickets In Great Demand

(Special to the Providence Journal)

Boston, Oct. 8.—The inauguration of the concert season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to-day at Symphony Hall proved a gala event. An ovation greeted Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, as he made his appearance on the stage, and the applause was spontaneous and sustained at the end of the brilliant Beethoven "Eroica Symphony," which terminated the programme.

The novelty of the afternoon was Prokofieff's ballet suite "Chout" (Buffoon). One or both of these pieces is expected to be included in the programme at the orchestra's premiere at the E. F. Albee Theatre in Providence, Oct. 26.

The subscription office in Symphony Hall has reported a greater demand for season tickets to the Providence series of concerts than ever before. Mail orders are still being received. Such seats as remain unsold by Oct. 18 will be placed on sale on that date at Steinert's music store in Providence.

The personnel of the Symphony this season is again at its customary standard of excellence. A notable acquisition to the gifted group of artists is that of one principal player, Gaston Hamelin, celebrated clarinet virtuoso, who arrived from Paris this week to fill that important position.

Prof Marshall Will Interpret Boston Symphony

N. Y. EVENING SUN
OCT 9 1926
OCT 9 1926

Symphony on Air

Boston Orchestra to Give Saturday Series During Winter.

WHEN Serge Koussevitzky gives the baton signal which will open the forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians, aggregating millions, will be tuned in to station WBZ and the chain network linked with that station.

Excepting those Saturday nights when the Symphony Orchestra will be on tour, WBZ will offer its listeners the Saturday evening Symphony programs of approximately two hours' duration from the opening concert until the concluding one on April 30. The chain network, which includes WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, will transmit fifteen of the twenty-four concerts which go out on the WBZ wave.

To Discuss Music.

One of the features of the Symphony broadcasts will be the interesting and instructive discussions of symphonic music by Prof. John P. Marshall. About five minutes before the opening selection by the orchestra he will give an informative talk on symphony music in general. His voice will again be heard during the intermission, at which time he will interpret for the radio audience the selections of the evening's program. In order that the listeners may understand these weekly talks, arrangements are being made to illustrate the various points discussed with instrumental music.

Prof. Marshall from 1909 until 1918 was organist of the University and Holy Cross College. During the world war he served as musical aid to the commanding General of the Northwestern and Western departments and was later appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army.

As was the case with the Symphony and Pope concerts broadcast last season, W. S. Quinby, head of the Boston, New York and Chicago houses bearing his name, is sponsoring the Symphony programs, which will be heard through the WBZ chain again this year.

Simultaneously with the above announcement comes another of a series of Sunday evening concerts which will be presented during October and November by Boris Kreinin, who was associated with Koussevitzky for a number of years in his work at Moscow.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT TO-NIGHT TO BE BROADCAST

Opening Programme of 46th Season to Be Put on Air by Four Stations.—Tickets for Providence Series Eagerly Sought.

Music lovers and radio fans are looking forward to the initial radio concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 46th season at 8:10 o'clock this evening, following reports from Boston that the opening concert in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon was one of the most successful premieres in recent years.

To-night's programme will be broadcast from WBZ, Springfield, hooked up with WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington.

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, was greeted with a spontaneous outburst of applause as he appeared on the platform last night.

The novelty of yesterday afternoon was Prokofieff's ballet suite "Chout" (Buffoon). One or both of these pieces is expected to be included in the programme at the orchestra's premiere at the E. F. Albee Theatre in Providence, Oct. 26.

The subscription office in Symphony Hall has reported a greater demand for season tickets to the Providence series of concerts than ever before. Mail orders are still being received. Such seats as remain unsold by Oct. 18 will be placed on sale on that date at Steinert's music store in Providence.

The personnel of the Symphony this season is again at its customary standard of excellence. A notable acquisition to the gifted group of artists is that of one principal player, Gaston Hamelin, celebrated clarinet virtuoso, who arrived from Paris this week to fill that important position.

W. S. Quinby, head of the W. S. Quinby Company of Boston, New York and Chicago, and sponsor of the symphony broadcasts, will speak to the members of the radio audience who listen in to-night, welcoming them to the feast of music.

Then for five minutes preceding the first number on the programme, scheduled for 8:15, and again during the 15-minute intermission, Prof. John P. Marshall will give instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programme used by the audience at Symphony Hall.

Prof. Marshall will give his interpretations of the symphony programmes each Saturday evening during the series of 24 concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience resides in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom heard, he will make his remarks in non-technical language.

The programme of the first Boston Symphony concert to be broadcast through WBZ and the chain network covers a wide range in the field of musical composition. It begins with Weber's Overture, "Der Freischutz," one of the old "standbys" of orchestral music, and includes Debussy's Nocturnes, representing the modern French school, and Prokofieff's suite, representing the modern Russian school The final number, Symphony No. 3 in E-flat major, is a representative of the famous Beethoven school.

Prof. Marshall will speak of the motives of these schools and will supplement his remarks with illustrations of themes and other features to which he desires to direct the especial attention of the radio audience.

Prof. Marshall was organist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra from 1909 to 1918 and is at present professor of music at Boston University and Holy Cross College. During the World War he served as musical aide to the commanding General of the Northeastern and Western departments and was appointed assistant director of camp music of the entire army.

The complete programme of Saturday's concert follows:

Overture to "Der Freischutz".....Weber

Two Nocturnes .....Debussy
- a. Nuages (Clouds).
- b. Fetes (Festivals).

Ballet Suite, "Chout" .....Prokofieff
- a. Danze des filles des bouffons.
- b. Dans la chambre a coucher du marchand.
- c. Le jeune femme est devenue chevre.
- d. Dans finale.

First time in Boston.

Symphony No. 3 in E-flat major, "Eroica" .....Beethoven
Op. 55

I. Allegro con brio.
II. Marcia Funebre; Adagio assai.
III. Scherzo; Allegro vivace; Trio.
IV. Finale; Allegro molto.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 9 1926

Boston Symphony on Air Through WJZ and Chain

The opening concert of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony which will be broadcast through Westinghouse station WBZ furnishes the outstanding attraction on the air tonight. With station WJZ of New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, tied in with the Westinghouse station for the program by the celebrated orchestra of 107 musicians under the direction of Serge Kousevitsky which has been made available by W. S. Quinby of Boston, it is estimated that an audience aggregating millions will dial their receivers for this feature at 8:10 p. m. tonight.

For five minutes preceding the first number on the program scheduled for 8.15 p. m., and again during the fifteen minute intermission, the voice of Professor John P. Marshall will be heard giving to the listening radio audience instructive information and comment corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience at Symphony Hall.

Professor Marshall will give his interpretations of the Symphony programs each Saturday evening during the series of twenty-four concerts. His broadcasts will include interesting facts regarding the compositions played and information regarding the composer and his particular style of composition. Realizing that the majority of the vast radio audience resides in localities where symphony orchestras and symphonic music are seldom, he will make his remarks in non-technical language.

THIS CLIPPING FROM CITIZEN
COLUMBUS, OHIO
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON ORCHESTRA CONCERTS

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Oct. 9.—Station WBZ, here, has completed its schedule of Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts which are to be broadcast by that station.

The following are the dates for these orchestra broadcasts. A date followed by an asterisk indicates that WJZ, New York, WGY, Schenectady, N. Y., and WRC, Washington, will rebroadcast the program:

October 9*, 16*, 23*, 30.
November 13, 20*.
December 4*, 11*, 18, 25*.
January 1, 15, 22*, 29*.
February 12, 19*, 26*.
March 5*, 19, 26.
April 2, 16*, 23*, 30*.

SYMPHONY PROGRAM

The program of the concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, will comprise Haydn's Symphony in E flat (No. 3 B & H.) "Les Rencontres," a suite of ballet pieces by Jacques Ibert, (first American performance) and the following four Wagnerian excerpts: Prelude to "Lohengrin"; The funeral music of Siegfried from the "Dusk of the Gods"; "Waldweben" from Siegfried; and the prelude to the "Meistersinger."

HERALD Oct 17

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TELEGRAM
OCT 9 - 1926

Noted Boston Symphony in Radio Series

First Concert To Be Radiated by WJZ This Evening.

THE premier concert of a series which will bring the leading symphony orchestras of New York and Boston to the listening audience of the North Atlantic States every Saturday night during the coming winter will be broadcast by stations WJZ, WRC, WGY and WBZ, starting at 8:10 o'clock tonight, and present the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky.

The other great orchestra which will be heard in this series will be the New York Philharmonic in its students' concerts under Willem Mengelberg, but the opening concert of that orchestra will not be given until October 30.

This concert by the Boston Symphony will be given in Symphony Hall, Boston, and will mark the opening of the forty-sixth season of that organization. Its audience at that time will be the greatest in its history, it being estimated that over 10,000,000 persons will hear this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians.

W. S. Quinby, head of the New York, Boston and Chicago house bearing his name, is sponsoring the series of concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It was he who was responsible for the first broadcasting by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on January 23 of this year and the subsequent twelve Boston Symphony concerts and the nine concerts of the Pops Orchestra, all of which were broadcast by station WBZ.

Serge Koussevitzky, the Russian conductor of the Boston Symphony, has just returned to America to lead the orchestra in this series. His entire summer was spent abroad in conference with composers and publishers on new scores for the organization.

NEW YORK
EVE. WORLD
OCT 9 1926

Boston Symphony to Open Winter Season Before 10,000,000 Fans

THE premier concert of a series which will bring the leading symphony orchestras of New York and Boston to the listening audience of the North Atlantic States every Saturday night during the coming winter will be broadcast by station WJZ, starting at 8.10 P. M. tonight with the presentation of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky. The other great orchestra which will be heard in this series will be the New York Philharmonic in its Student's Concerts, under Willem Mengelberg. The latter's opening concert, however, will not be given until Oct. 30.

The concert by the Boston Symphony will be given in Symphony Hall, Boston, and will mark the opening of their forty-sixth season. It is estimated that over 10,000,000 persons will hear this world famous orchestra of 107 musicians, which will simultaneously play for the audiences of WRC, WGY and WBZ, in addition to WJZ.

THIS CLIPPING FROM STAR
MONTREAL, CANADA
Gazette
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA HISTORY

Founding in 1881 Was Realization of Major H. L. Higginson's Aspirations

The superlative performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are indeed a thing to wonder at. But just how and why this organization has come to be one of the very greatest in the world leaves little room for speculation or debate. The simple facts of its history are self-explanatory.

In 1881 Major Henry L. Higginson, since deceased, realized the first dream of his life by founding in Boston a full-sized symphony orchestra—a rare phenomenon in those days. This noted musician, soldier, financier and public-spirited citizen believed that there was a musical public for such an undertaking. Sparing no expense, he engaged the finest musicians then available in Europe to fill up its ranks, and brought to this country one after another of the world's greatest conductors to lend their individual genius to the cumulative improvement of the orchestra.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra in its original form had only sixty players, and its conductor was George Henschel, a celebrated musician of the day. The initial aims (always since adhered to) were that the musicians should play under one conductor in one orchestra, and not debase their talents by routine engagements; that the symphony concerts should provide only the finest music; that artistic considerations should always be paramount, and that the conductor be given absolute control. Controversy waxed hot in those days. The policies, the programmes, even the venture itself, were violently attacked and staunchly defended. But the wisdom of the founder was justified as each succeeding year of the orchestra added growth and success to the last. In 1900 Symphony Hall was built, to become the orchestra's special and permanent home.

The second conductor, Wilhelm Gericke, had two terms (1884-9 and 1898-1906). Through years of tireless training, this thorough and ardent musician gradually built up the fine ensemble for which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has since held its special renown. In the interim of Gericke's periods of service came Arthur Nikisch, the great Hungarian leader, and Emil Pauer who conducted through 1893-8.

Dr. Karl Muck was the conductor from 1906 to 1918, with the exception of the years 1908-12, which were held by Max Fiedler. To Dr. Muck's exacting hand the orchestra responded like a single, marvelously perfect instrument.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra next had two French conductors—Henri Rabaud in the season of 1918-19, a distinguished musician and composer, now head of the Paris Conservatoire, and Pierre Monteux (1919-24), who ably carried on the then established tradition of a finely blended ensemble.

In the autumn of 1924 Serge Kous-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 3 192

The management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced last week that advance sales for the Providence course of concerts, to be given this year in the Albee theatre, had already far surpassed the highest record of the orchestra in this city, the increased size of the auditorium making this possible. In Boston this season all seats for the five series, totalling 67 concerts, are sold, and it will be impossible for a non-subscriber to secure a seat for any concert there. This is considered by musical authorities to set a new record for an American orchestra.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
OCT - 91926

BOSTON SYMPHONY'S FIRST RADIO CONCERT

On the Air at 8 10 p. m.—Rehearsal Shows All Kinks Smoothed Out for Broadcasting

Tonight all ears will be turned toward the Boston symphony orchestra, which will be on the WBZ air at 8.10 p. m. It has been our privilege to listen in on a test program of this organization, and the results more than cover WBZ with glory. Many have said that this music is way over the heads of most radio fans, but we believe that with the explanation given by Prof Marshall just previous to the broadcast, it will be an enjoyable evening for all. Nothing has been spared by the engineers of the local station to bring this music to the homes of listeners in such a perfect manner that they can sit back in their chairs and imagine the actual orchestra playing before them. So much has been said regarding the organization itself that we will not burden with more. We try to advise our readers on the best bets for the evening. Don't miss the Boston Symphony. If you once learn to understand the music you will never regret it. It is of the world's finest, and is played by an ensemble of international repute.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
OCT 1 0 192

SYMPHONY CONCERTS ON AIR THIS WINTER

Boston Symphony and N. Y. Philharmonic Through WJZ.

The radio audience will have symphonic concerts every Saturday night throughout the winter, according to a recent announcement by the management of Station WJZ. The two big orchestras which will be heard during these series are the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Serge Koussevitzky, which will be broadcast from Symphony Hall, Boston, and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under Willem Mengelberg, Furtwaengir, Toscannini and Hadley. The concerts of the Boston Symphony will be sponsored by W. S. Quinby, of W. S. Quinby and Company, and are the 1926 sequel to the Symphony and Pops Orchestra concerts broadcast by WBZ through his courtesy last year.

The concerts of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra will be the

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 3 192

SYMPHONY SEATS IN GREAT DEMAND

Number of Subscribers Already Has Exceeded That of Previous Years

(Special to the Providence Journal)

Boston, Oct. 2.—The number of subscribers for seats at the series of concerts which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present, beginning Oct. 26, at the E. F. Albee Theatre in Providence, already has exceeded that of previous years, according to an announcement made by the management of the orchestra here to-day.

On and after Oct. 18, until the date set for the first concert, tickets for the series will be on sale at Steinert's music store in Providence, but until Oct. 18 application for tickets should be mailed to Symphony Hall in Boston. Indications are at present, according to the management, that not a seat will be left even before the first concert of the Providence series, and this condition will obtain, it is said, at the series which the orchestra will give in New York and Boston, for which waiting lists have already been formed.

The opening programme of the orchestra next Friday in Boston will include Beethoven's "Eroica Symphony," Prokofieff's "Buffoon" and shorter classics. Serge Koussevitzky is beginning his third season as conductor of the famous orchestra and has declared his anticipation of a remarkably successful and significant year for the organization.

Symphony

CONDUCTOR RETURNED, ORCHESTRA REGAINED, CLASSICS REKINDLED

Oct 9th

FIRST SYMPHONY CONCERT OF A NEW YEAR

Mr. Koussevitzky Warmly Welcomed—Little Changed Band Again on Its Mettle—Familiar Weber, Debussy and Beethoven Freshened and Renewed—A Ballet Suite from Prokoviev More Than Half Denatured

THE FAITHFUL chronicler sees his duty and does it. . . . Yesterday afternoon, at two o'clock and thirty-six minutes, Eastern Standard Time, Mr. Koussevitzky emerged from the right-hand door on the platform of Symphony Hall and walked briskly toward the conductor's stand of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In no respect of body, garb or manner had his familiar presence altered. He was received by a standing orchestra, the strings of which tapped their bows upon the body of their instruments. There was no apparent change in the seating of the players, and only two familiar figures were gone from them. Mr. Jacques Hoffmann has withdrawn of his own motion from the first violins, and Mr. Vannini has given way to Mr. Hamelin and Mr. Allegra among the clarinets. A part of the audience also rose to greet the entering conductor; but, by cursory glance, as many more kept their seats—another sign of the gradual abatement, by mutual consent, of a dubious rite. From all sides, however, the clapping was full of good will. It persisted briefly and in a moment or two conductor and orchestra set to their work.

At the end of each piece, except the final symphony, the applause was warm enough to recall Mr. Koussevitzky; but not sufficiently prolonged to bring the orchestra to its feet—unwonted occurrence at the first concert of a new season. Rather, it was the conductor who by repeated gesture heaped praise upon his forces. As it was nearly half-past four when the "Eroica Symphony" ended, the audience, according to Friday-custom, lingered for no plaudits. More: it was to be observed with pain that not a few who cry aloud for the "dear old classics" were unable to sit through that same "Eroica" and departed at every halt. Indeed, the conductor waited (as it seemed a little impatiently) to begin the Scherzo unrhythmed by padding feet and swinging doors. By these signs, human nature keeps its sway over the platform and the auditorium of Symphony Hall.

Of the quality of the orchestra, at the outset of Mr. Koussevitsky's third season, only praise may be written. More and more it is made in his image and responsive to his will. It was well-nigh a perfect instrument on which he could play, measure by measure, the manifold Overture to "Der Freischütz." In the "Clouds" of Debussy, it gave him back subdued, shaded, tone, slow-moving, evanescent, but never bodiless or shapeless. In the ensuing "Fetes," edged, glinting, incisive was its voice. As a band it shrilled through the humors of the Suite from Prokoviev's ballet, "Chout"; rollicked in Russian folk-song; beat out Russian folk-dance as though to matter and manner born. Throughout the "Eroica Symphony," there was reason to admire its pliancy and power; its feeling for the warmth and largeness of Beethoven's melody; its vigor with his reiterated chords and pounding progressions. Its voice was plangent through the Funeral March; darting and light-pitched across the Scherzo; free-striding and quick-turning over the Finale.

Nor were individual virtuosities lacking. The subdued richness of the strings gave atmosphere to the beginning of Weber's Overture. In the ensuing song, the horns were mellow and lustrous. Instrument by instrument, the wood winds gained an exceeding lightness and loveliness of tone in "Clouds"; while the "aerial procession" in "Fêtes" was a little miracle of distant suggestion drawing nearer. The tonal grotesquerie of Prokoviev is exacting—and sounded impulsive, as the bassoons released their grunts or the flutes their twitters. When lingering melody suffuses the tumult of

For the most part the music of the day was a placed and established music yet by that virtue and vitality ever provoking new reflections. Within the easy recollection of hearers hardly middle-aged, the musical form and substance, the imaginative quality, of these two Nocturnes of Debussy were matter for endless and bitter debate. They were not to be endured, or they were revelations of a new beauty and imagery in sound. Nowadays, few question and fewer debate. For most the present concern is a performance that shall miss not a whit of either. We have become connoisseurs in the passing of the "aerial procession." We wait for the bite of contrast between the dying fall of "Clouds" and the lusty upspringing of "Fêtes." Upon the quality of tone for each measure of "Clouds," upon the partings and the meetings of the solo-voices, we now bestow our questionings—and speak of Mr. Koussevitzky's or Mr. Stokowski's Nocturnes oftener than of Debussy's. In the first stage of progress toward classic place the matter and the manner of a piece of music establish themselves. In the second, virtuosity has its inning and we listeners are concerned with shading and accents. In the third and last, we bid the performance freshen and renew.

In this third stage now stands the "Eroica Symphony." We will not hear it descending upon us from a pedestal. Going to it, conductor and orchestra must re-invoke the sensations it may have stirred at first, second, third performance in Beethoven's immediate world. Such a re-creation, or rather restoration, is the chief glory of Mr. Koussevitzky's "reading." By pace, rhythm, contrasts, shadings, he makes the first movement still sound as passionate and tumultuous as it surely did to the Vienna of 1805. We also are plumbing the depths of Beethoven's melody; catching up with the large might of his stride. Upon our ears the Funeral March again falls piercing and lambent, by a century and a quarter stressed rather than subdued. Anew and afresh the rhythmic and melodic verve of the scherzo sings and dances in our ears. We also discover the bright turmoil of Beethoven's finale, riven by warm gusts of melody. As act of faith in a passion of revelation anew sounds "The Eroica."

With Weber the difference is greater; the difficulty more. Conductors of Mr. Koussevitzky's temper must wreak themselves upon this Overture to "Der Freischütz," if it is to be epitome of a romantic mood, manner, time. Hence sedulous pains, mystery cloaking the beginning; the song of the horns releasing remote, subdued beauty; the sinister pages sombre and tense; Agathe's aquiver with longing; the suspensive chords parting the air; the finale flinging off rhetorical and romantical flourishes. Say, if the hearer likes, that the Overture to "Der Freischütz" so manipulated is overdone. Yet the warrant is the clear purpose, the intrinsic and everlasting thrill of a "hackneyed" classic. Mr. Koussevitzky but clears the mirror and deepens the image; while we hearers bathe in the reflection.

Possibly Serge Sergeivich Prokoviev was too vividly and variously companioned for the good of his Suite from "Chout." Possibly he erred when he believed that fragments of that music could be stripped of grotesque action and flamboyant setting; detached from the theater and led little diminished into the concert-hall. Supposition remains supposition; but certain it is that these novel pieces made the least impression among the numbers of the day. The "Final Dance" is vigorous and cumulative exercise with Russian folk-rhythms; while the whole power of the orchestra whips them, blow by blow, to climax. The tang and the frenzy are alike there—but long before Prokoviev Stravinsky in "Petrushka" turned the trick for western ears. No doubt, it is rude and lewd fun-making when the amorous merchant draws up his "lady" into the chamber and finds that the fleeing clown is transformed into goat. Most certainly, it warrants Prokoviev's rollicking measures; but our delight might be more boisterous if we saw, as well as heard, these japes, with the stage—and not the program-book—for communicating medium. No less, the first two divisions of the Suite disclose Prokoviev's design of a music rank and raucous with grotesquerie, tumbling and chortling with clownish humors, tweaking and twittering in the same breath, relieving itself (as it were) by excursions into hearty folk-melody. Yet the clew to the humors is the stage-figures and the stage-

THIS CLIPPING FROM SUN
PITTSBURG, PA.
OCT 16 1926

Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Pittsburgh is promised a series of highly interesting programs to be given by the visiting orchestras this season at Syria Mosque. The symphony orchestra series consists of seven Friday nights and seven Saturday afternoons, with 14 programs in store. The first concerts will be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 players, under the distinguished leadership of Serge Koussevitzky on Friday night, November 5, and Saturday afternoon, November 6.

THIS CLIPPING FROM COURIER
BUFFALO, N. Y.
OCT 3 192

A superb opening for the orchestra series of the Buffalo Musical Foundation this season, is assured in the announcement of new program plans for the Boston Symphony orchestra which plays here on Wednesday evening, November 3d. Serge Koussevitzky, in Paris as usual this summer, has been spending much time in quest of new music. On his return to Boston, September, he came bearing his precious musical spoils. Carefully guarded, manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman were brought with other works.

Boston will be followed in the orchestra series by the Detroit Symphony orchestra. Ossip Gabrilowitch is to delight Buffalo audiences both as conductor and soloist in the orchestra series this year.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 12 1926

Boston Symphony

Serge Koussevitzky assembled the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall, Monday morning, October 4, for the first rehearsal in preparation for the opening of the symphony season on the following Friday afternoon. After greeting the orchestra, the Russian conductor introduced Gaston Hamelin, the clarinet virtuoso of high European repute who is to be its clarinet soloist and the only new principal in the orchestra's personnel.

Hamelin graduated with honors from the Paris Conservatory in 1904 and likewise took the first "Rose" prize. He became solo clarinet with the Sechiari Association, the Gaite Lyrique, the Pasdeloup, the "Concerts Koussevitzky," and other orchestras. He was also prominent in chamber music, playing on numerous occasions with the houses of chamber music in Paris.

Mr. Koussevitzky also introduced three violinists, Gaston Elcus, H. Graeser and J. Leibovici, illustrious musicians, with which the conductor is confident that he can even further improve these actions. J. Lemaire, bass and B. Zighera, second harp, completed the new members.

The rehearsal started with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, which is to figure on the opening program of the season, next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening.

There is a lively demand for tickets for the Hartford concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, scheduled this season for February, patrons of the Sedgwick concerts are securing their seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert which is the outstanding feature in Hartford's musical season.

Every effort is being made by Mr. Sedgwick to secure Mr. Koussevitzky's consent to present a Beethoven program for his Hartford concert. Seats are on sale at McCoy's music store, 89 Asylum street, Hartford. Mail orders will have careful attention and the best seats will be allotted nearest to the location specified.

THIS CLIPPING FROM INQUIRER
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
OCT 3 192

WJZ TO RADIO SYMPHONIC PROGRAMMES WEEKLY

N. Y. Philharmonic and Boston Symphony to Be Heard on Saturday Nights

THE radio audience will have symphonic concerts every Saturday night throughout the winter according to a recent announcement by the management of Station WJZ. The two big orchestras which will be heard during these series are the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Serge Koussevitzky, which will be broadcast from Symphony Hall Boston, by Stations WBZ, WJZ, WGY and WRC and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Willem Mengelberg, Furtwaengler, Toscannini and Hadley. The concerts of the Boston Symphony will be sponsored by W. S. Quinby, of W. S. Quinby and Company and are the 1925 sequel to the symphony and Pops Orchestra concerts broadcast by WBZ through his courtesy last year.

The concerts of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra will be the Student's Series, of which there will be twelve, to be given on Saturday nights intermittently throughout the coming winter.

The opening concert of this series will be the broadcast of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at ten minutes after eight, next Saturday night, when George Koussevitzky waves the signal baton starting the forty-ninth season for that organization. For the balance of the season until the last part of April, the Boston Symphony and the New York Philharmonic will divide Saturday nights.

The complete schedule of Saturday night symphonic concerts is given.

October 9—Boston Symphony.
October 16—Boston Symphony.
October 23—Boston Symphony.
October 30—New York Philharmonic.
November 6—New York Philharmonic.
November 13—New York Philharmonic.
November 20—Boston Symphony.
November 27—New York Philharmonic.
December 4—Boston Symphony.
December 11—Boston Symphony.
December 18—New York Philharmonic.
December 25—Boston Symphony.
January 1—New York Philharmonic.
January 15—New York Philharmonic.
January 22—Boston Symphony.
January 29—Boston Symphony.
February 5—New York Philharmonic.
February 12—New York Philharmonic.
February 19—Boston Symphony.
February 26—Boston Symphony.
March 5—Boston Symphony.
March 19—New York Philharmonic.
March 26—New York Philharmonic.
April 2—New York Philharmonic.
April 16—Boston Symphony.
April 23—Boston Symphony.
April 30—Boston Symphony.

THIS CLIPPING FROM STAR
MONTREAL, CANADA
Gazette
OCT 9 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA HISTORY

Founding in 1881 Was Realization of Major H. L. Higginson's Aspirations

The superlative performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra are indeed a thing to wonder at. But just how and why this organization has come to be one of the very greatest in the world leaves little room for speculation or debate. The simple facts of its history are self-explanatory.

In 1881 Major Henry L. Higginson, since deceased, realized the first dream of his life by founding in Boston a full-sized symphony orchestra —a rare phenomenon in those days. This noted musician, soldier, financier and public-spirited citizen believed that there was a musical public for such an undertaking. Sparing no expense, he engaged the finest musicians then available in Europe to fill up its ranks, and brought to this country one after another of the world's greatest conductors to lend their individual genius to the cumulative improvement of the orchestra.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra in its original form had only sixty players, and its conductor was George Henschel, a celebrated musician of the day. The initial aims (always since adhered to) were that the musicians should play under one conductor in one orchestra, and not debase their talents by routine engagements; that the symphony concerts should provide only the finest music; that artistic considerations should always be paramount, and that the conductor be given absolute control. Controversy waxed hot in those days. The policies, the programmes, even the venture itself, were violently attacked and staunchly defended. But the wisdom of the founder was justified as each succeeding year of the orchestra added growth and success to the last. In 1900 Symphony Hall was built, to become the orchestra's special and permanent home.

The second conductor, Wilhelm Gericke, had two terms (1884-9 and 1898-1906). Through years of tireless training, this thorough and ardent musician gradually built up the fine ensemble for which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has since held its special renown. In the interim of Gericke's periods of service came Arthur Nikisch, the great Hungarian leader, and Emil Pauer who conducted through 1893-8.

Dr. Karl Muck was the conductor from 1906 to 1918, with the exception of the years 1908-12, which were held by Max Fiedler. To Dr. Muck's exacting hand the orchestra responded like a single, marvelously perfect instrument.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra next had two French conductors—Henri Rabaud in the season of 1918-19, a distinguished musician and composer, now head of the Paris Conservatoire, and Pierre Monteux (1919-24), who ably carried on the then established tradition of a finely blended ensemble.

In the autumn of 1924 Serge Koussevitzky first crossed the Atlantic to become the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. From Europe had come many reports of his remarkable qualities as a leader and as an artist. Expectations were more than fulfilled. Arrangements have been concluded for the appearance of the orchestra here, at the Forum, on November 1.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
OCT - 91926

BOSTON SYMPHONY'S FIRST RADIO CONCERT

On the Air at 8 10 p. m.—Rehearsal Shows All Kinks Smoothed Out for Broadcasting

Tonight all ears will be turned toward the Boston symphony orchestra, which will be on the WBZ air at 8.10 p. m. It has been our privilege to listen in on a test program of this organization, and the results more than cover WBZ with glory. Many have said that this music is way over the heads of most radio fans, but we believe that with the explanation given by Prof Marshall just previous to the broadcast, it will be an enjoyable evening for all. Nothing has been spared by the engineers of the local station to bring this music to the homes of listeners in such a perfect manner that they can sit back in their chairs and imagine the actual orchestra playing before them. So much has been said regarding the organization itself that we will not burden with more. We try to advise our readers on the best bets for the evening. Don't miss the Boston Symphony. If you once learn to understand the music you will never regret it. It is of the world's finest, and is played by an ensemble of international repute.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
OCT 1 0 1926

SYMPHONY CONCERTS ON AIR THIS WINTER

Boston Symphony and N. Y. Philharmonic Through WJZ.

The radio audience will have symphonic concerts every Saturday night throughout the winter, according to a recent announcement by the management of Station WJZ. The two big orchestras which will be heard during these series are the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Serge Koussevitzky, which will be broadcast from Symphony Hall, Boston, and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under Willem Mengelberg, Furtwaengler, Toscannini and Hadley. The concerts of the Boston Symphony will be sponsored by W. S. Quinby, of W. S. Quinby and Company, and are the 1926 sequel to the Symphony and Pops Orchestra concerts broadcast by WBZ through his courtesy last year.

The concerts of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra will be the Student's Series, of which there will be twelve, to be given on Saturday nights intermittently throughout the coming winter. The last of this series will come in the early part of April. The concerts are to be given in Carnegie Hall and for the most part will be under the baton of Willem Mengelberg, as conductor.

The opening concert of this series was the broadcast of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:10 o'clock last night, when Serge Koussevitsky waved the signal baton starting the forty-ninth season for that organization. Fr the balance of the season, until the last part of April, the Boston Symphony and the New York Philharmonic will divide Saturday nights.

Symphony

CONDUCTOR RETURNED, ORCHESTRA REGAINED, CLASSICS REKINDLED

Oct 9th

FIRST SYMPHONY CONCERT OF A NEW YEAR

Mr. Koussevitzky Warmly Welcomed—Little Changed Band Again on Its Mettle—Familiar Weber, Debussy and Beethoven Freshened and Renewed—A Ballet Suite from Prokoviev More Than Half Denatured

THE FAITHFUL chronicler sees his duty and does it. . . . Yesterday afternoon, at two o'clock and thirty-six minutes, Eastern Standard Time, Mr. Koussevitzky emerged from the right-hand door on the platform of Symphony Hall and walked briskly toward the conductor's stand of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In no respect of body, garb or manner had his familiar presence altered. He was received by a standing orchestra, the strings of which tapped their bows upon the body of their instruments. There was no apparent change in the seating of the players, and only two familiar figures were gone from them. Mr. Jacques Hoffmann has withdrawn of his own motion from the first violins, and Mr. Vannini has given way to Mr. Hamelin and Mr. Allegra among the clarinets. A part of the audience also rose to greet the entering conductor; but, by cursory glance, as many more kept their seats—another sign of the gradual abatement, by mutual consent, of a dubious rite. From all sides, however, the clapping was full of good will. It persisted briefly and in a moment or two conductor and orchestra set to their work.

At the end of each piece, except the final symphony, the applause was warm enough to recall Mr. Koussevitzky; but not sufficiently prolonged to bring the orchestra to its feet—unwonted occurrence at the first concert of a new season. Rather, it was the conductor who by repeated gesture heaped praise upon his forces. As it was nearly half-past four when the "Eroica Symphony" ended, the audience, according to Friday-custom, lingered for no plaudits. More: it was to be observed with pain that not a few who cry aloud for the "dear old classics" were unable to sit through that same "Eroica" and departed at every halt. Indeed, the conductor waited (as it seemed a little impatiently) to begin the Scherzo unrhythmed by padding feet and swinging doors. By these signs, human nature keeps its sway over the platform and the auditorium of Symphony Hall.

Of the quality of the orchestra, at the outset of Mr. Koussevitsky's third season, only praise may be written. More and more it is made in his image and responsive to his will. It was well-nigh a perfect instrument on which he could play, measure by measure, the manifold Overture to "Der Freischütz." In the "Clouds" of Debussy, it gave him back subdued, shaded, tone, slow-moving, evanescent, but never bodiless or shapeless. In the ensuing "Fetes," edged, glinting, incisive was its voice. As a band it shrilled through the humors of the Suite from Prokoviev's ballet, "Chout"; rollicked in Russian folk-song; beat out Russian folk-dance as though to matter and manner born. Throughout the "Eroica Symphony," there was reason to admire its pliancy and power; its feeling for the warmth and largeness of Beethoven's melody; its vigor with his reiterated chords and pounding progressions. Its voice was plangent through the Funeral March; darting and light-pitched across the Scherzo; free-striding and quick-turning over the Finale.

Nor were individual virtuosities lacking. The subdued richness of the strings gave atmosphere to the beginning of Weber's Overture. In the ensuing song, the horns were mellow and lustrous. Instrument by instrument, the wood winds gained an exceeding lightness and loveliness of tone in "Clouds"; while the "aerial procession" in "Fêtes" was a little miracle of distant suggestion drawing nearer. The tonal grotesquerie of Prokoviev is exacting—and sounded impulsive, as the bassoons released their grunts or the flutes their twitters. When lingering melody suffuses the tumult of Beethoven's Finale, the suppleness and euphony of every choir withstood the test. A band of virtuosi indeed; but a band fused also into a single manifold voice—the composer's through the conductor's speaking.

For the most part the music of the day was a placed and established music yet by that virtue and vitality ever provoking new reflections. Within the easy recollection of hearers hardly middle-aged, the musical form and substance, the imaginative quality, of these two Nocturnes of Debussy were matter for endless and bitter debate. They were not to be endured, or they were revelations of a new beauty and imagery in sound. Nowadays, few question and fewer debate. For most the present concern is a performance that shall miss not a whit of either. We have become connoisseurs in the passing of the "aerial procession." We wait for the bite of contrast between the dying fall of "Clouds" and the lusty upspringing of "Fêtes." Upon the quality of tone for each measure of "Clouds," upon the partings and the meetings of the solo-voices, we now bestow our questionings —and speak of Mr. Koussevitzky's or Mr. Stokowski's Nocturnes oftener than of Debussy's. In the first stage of progress toward classic place the matter and the manner of a piece of music establish themselves. In the second, virtuosity has its inning and we listeners are concerned with shading and accents. In the third and last, we bid the performance freshen and renew.

In this third stage now stands the "Eroica Symphony." We will not hear it descending upon us from a pedestal. Going to it, conductor and orchestra must re-invoke the sensations it may have stirred at first, second, third performance in Beethoven's immediate world. Such a re-creation, or rather restoration, is the chief glory of Mr. Koussevitzky's "reading." By pace, rhythm, contrasts, shadings, he makes the first movement still sound as passionate and tumultuous as it surely did to the Vienna of 1805. We also are plumbing the depths of Beethoven's melody; catching up with the large might of his stride. Upon our ears the Funeral March again falls piercing and lambent, by a century and a quarter stressed rather than subdued. Anew and afresh the rhythmic and melodic verve of the scherzo sings and dances in our ears. We also discover the bright turmoil of Beethoven's finale, riven by warm gusts of melody. As act of faith in a passion of revelation anew sounds "The Eroica."

With Weber the difference is greater; the difficulty more. Conductors of Mr. Koussevitzky's temper must wreak themselves upon this Overture to "Der Freischütz," if it is to be epitome of a romantic mood, manner, time. Hence sedulous pains, mystery cloaking the beginning; the song of the horns releasing remote, subdued beauty; the sinister pages sombre and tense; Agathe's a-quiver with longing; the suspensive chords parting the air; the finale flinging off rhetorical and romantical flourishes. Say, if the hearer likes, that the Overture to "Der Freischütz" so manipulated is overdone. Yet the warrant is the clear purpose, the intrinsic and everlasting thrill of a "hackneyed" classic. Mr. Koussevitzky but clears the mirror and deepens the image; while we hearers bathe in the reflection.

Possibly Serge Sergeivich Prokoviev was too vividly and variously companioned for the good of his Suite from "Chout." Possibly he erred when he believed that fragments of that music could be stripped of grotesque action and flamboyant setting; detached from the theater and led little diminished into the concert-hall. Supposition remains supposition; but certain it is that these novel pieces made the least impression among the numbers of the day. The "Final Dance" is vigorous and cumulative exercise with Russian folk-rhythms; while the whole power of the orchestra whips them, blow by blow, to climax. The tang and the frenzy are alike there —but long before Prokoviev Stravinsky in "Petrushka" turned the trick for western ears. No doubt, it is rude and lewd fun-making when the amorous merchant draws up his "lady" into the chamber and finds that the fleeing clown is transformed into goat. Most certainly, it warrants Prokoviev's rollicking measures; but our delight might be more boisterous if we saw, as well as heard, these japes, with the stage—and not the program-book—for communicating medium. No less, the first two divisions of the Suite disclose Prokoviev's design of a music rank and raucous with grotesquerie, tumbling and chortling with clownish humors, tweaking and twittering in the same breath, relieving itself (as it were) by excursions into hearty folk-melody. Yet the clew to the humors is the stage-figures and the stage-action; while out of both come the warrant for the folk-melody and at least half its virtue. Somehow the composer of the "Scythian Suite" and "They Are Seven" hardly needs translation from the theater.

H. T. P.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 12 1926

Boston Symphony

Serge Koussevitzky assembled the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall, Monday morning, October 4, for the first rehearsal in preparation for the opening of the symphony season on the following Friday afternoon. After greeting the orchestra, the Russian conductor introduced Gaston Hamelin, the clarinet virtuoso of high European repute who is to be its clarinet soloist and the only new principal in the orchestra's personnel.

Hamelin graduated with honors from the Paris Conservatory in 1904 and likewise took the first "Rose" prize. He became solo clarinet with the Sechiari Association, the Gaite Lyrique, the Pasdeloup, the "Concerts Koussevitzky," and other orchestras. He was also prominent in chamber music, playing on numerous occasions with the houses of chamber music in Paris.

Mr. Koussevitzky also introduced three violinists, Gaston Elcus, H. Graeser and J. Leibovici, illustrious musicians, with which the conductor is confident that he can even further improve these actions, J. Lemaire, bass and B. Zighera, second harp, completed the new members.

The rehearsal started with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, which is to figure on the opening program of the season, next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening.

There is a lively demand for tickets for the Hartford concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, scheduled this season for February, patrons of the Sedgwick concerts are securing their seat reservations early in order to have first choice of location for this concert which is the outstanding feature in Hartford's musical season.

Every effort is being made by Mr. Sedgwick to secure Mr. Koussevitzky's consent to present a Beethoven program for his Hartford concert. Seats are on sale at McCoy's music store, 89 Asylum street, Hartford. Mail orders will have careful attention and the best seats will be allotted nearest to the location specified.

THIS CLIPPING FROM INQUIRER
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
OCT 3 - 1926

WJZ TO RADIO SYMPHONIC PROGRAMMES WEEKLY

N. Y. Philharmonic and Boston Symphony to Be Heard on Saturday Nights

THE radio audience will have symphonic concerts every Saturday night throughout the winter according to a recent announcement by the management of Station WJZ. The two big orchestras which will be heard during these series are the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Serge Koussevitzky, which will be broadcast from Symphony Hall Boston, by Stations WBZ, WJZ, WGY and WRC and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra under Willem Mengelberg, Furtwaengler, Toscannini and Hadley. The concerts of the Boston Symphony will be sponsored by W. S. Quinby, of W. S. Quinby and Company and are the 1925 sequel to the symphony and Pops Orchestra concerts broadcast by WBZ through his courtesy last year.

The concerts of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra will be the Student's Series, of which there will be twelve, to be given on Saturday nights intermittently throughout the coming winter.

The opening concert of this series will be the broadcast of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at ten minutes after eight, next Saturday night, when George Koussevitzky waves the signal baton starting the forty-ninth season for that organization. For the balance of the season until the last part of April, the Boston Symphony and the New York Philharmonic will divide Saturday nights.

The complete schedule of Saturday night symphonic concerts is given.

October 9—Boston Symphony.
October 16—Boston Symphony.
October 23—Boston Symphony.
October 30—New York Philharmonic.
November 6—New York Philharmonic.
November 13—New York Philharmonic.
November 20—Boston Symphony.
November 27—New York Philharmonic.
December 4—Boston Symphony.
December 11—Boston Symphony.
December 18—New York Philharmonic.
December 25—Boston Symphony.
January 1—New York Philharmonic.
January 15—New York Philharmonic.
January 22—Boston Symphony.
January 29—Boston Symphony.
February 5—New York Philharmonic.
February 12—New York Philharmonic.
February 19—Boston Symphony.
February 26—Boston Symphony.
March 5—Boston Symphony.
March 19—New York Philharmonic.
March 26—New York Philharmonic.
April 2—New York Philharmonic.
April 16—Boston Symphony.
April 23—Boston Symphony.
April 30—Boston Symphony.

...after the meetings, and agreed on a com-...mon policy.

...cert there. This is considered by mu-...sical authorities to set a new record ... an American orchestra.

* * *

...will obtain, ... the orchestra will g... and Boston, for which waiting lists have already been formed.

The opening programme of the orchestra next Friday in Boston will include Beethoven's "Eroica Symphony," Prokofieff's "Buffoon" and shorter classics. Serge Koussevitzky is beginning his third season as conductor of the famous orchestra and has declared his anticipation of a remarkably successful and significant year for the organization.

...esque. The sym-...orchestra series consists of seven Friday nights and seven Saturday afternoons, with 14 programs in store. The first concerts will be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 players, under the distinguished leadership of Serge Koussevitzky on Friday night, November 5, and Saturday afternoon, November 6.

A super... ...a series of the Buffa... ...al Foundation this season, is assured in the announcement of new program plans for the Boston Symphony orchestra which plays here on Wednesday evening, November 3d. Serge Koussevitzky, in Paris as usual this summer, has been spending much time in quest of new music. On his return to Boston, September, he came bearing his precious musical spoils. Carefully guarded, manuscript scores of works by Respighi, Roussel and Tansman were brought with other works.

Boston will be followed in the orchestra series by the Detroit Symphony orchestra. Ossip Gabrilowitch is to delight Buffalo audiences both as conductor and soloist in the orchestra series this year.

Koussevitzky Defends American Composers

BY WARREN STOREY SMITH

Among the distinguished visitors to the festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music at Zurich last summer was Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. And with flattering loyalty to the country of his temporary adoption he found himself resenting the rather slim representation then and there accorded the American composer.

"I was disappointed," he said in a recent conversation regarding the matter in his Jamaica Plain home, "to find the American musician making no better showing. Not that the sole American composition to be heard there, Frederic Jacobi's string quartet, was itself undeserving of the honor shown it, but in a festival where orchestral works played a predominant part, why not something of larger mould?

"America may not yet boast composers of genius, but it possesses composers of decided talent. I cannot help but feel that at Zurich the place given to American music was unjustly proportional. Next year the festival will be held at Frankfort, with a symphony orchestra and every other resource at its disposal. It is my conviction that America deserves a really adequate representation, and I feel that a strenuous campaign should be waged to that end. Through these annual festivals contemporary American music can receive a hearing which should prove a gateway to further European performance. Take my own case for typical example. At Zurich I heard certain works that interested me, and they will appear upon my programmes for the coming season. Indeed, at a single concert I will perform four of these Zurich compositions—works by the Englishman, Walton, the Czecho-Slovakian, Krasa, the Austrian, Webern, and the Pole, Tansman."

These sentiments which Mr. Koussevitzky has so earnestly and so generously expressed have, in fact, been voiced by the committee whose task it is to assemble the available American music and to bring the worthiest of it to the attention of the jury that makes up the festival programmes. This committee, of which Alfred Human is the chairman, includes also Chalmers Clifton, Olin Downes, Lawrence Gilman, Harold Morris, Carlos Salzedo, Edgar Varese and Frank Patterson. From it is being broadcasted an appeal, not for the music itself, but for the names of composers and the titles of their works, restricting the latter to pieces in the larger forms—compositions for orchestra, chamber music and songs with orchestral or small instrumental accompaniment. It is likewise the intention of the committee to bring such pieces to the attention of orchestral conductors and chamber music societies, that the American composer may have wider opportunities for actual performance than are at present available.

And now a word as to the society, its four festivals and the part our own country has thus far played in them. Late in 1922, the International Society for Contemporary Music was founded and in the United States a national section was soon formed, with O. G. Sonneck as chairman. For the first two years the festival was held in Salzburg; in 1925, it was transferred to Venice, and last summer in the Swiss metropolis it was for the first time extended to embrace orchestral as well as chamber music. Originally the international jury numbered seven. It was reduced to three, increased to five, and now stands at the latter number. In 1927, its members will be Alois Haba of Prague, Philipp Jarnach of Berlin, Simonsen of Copenhagen, Walter Straram of Paris, and Sir Henry Wood of London.

The festival of 1923 saw America represented through Emerson Whithorne's suite of piano pieces, "New York Days and Nights." The following year there was no piece from America. In 1925 at Venice two of Henry Eichheim's "Oriental Impressions" gained a hearing.

Numerically, to be sure, the United States fared no worse at Zurich than did many another country. Of the 19 pieces played in five concerts, three were French, two Swiss, two German and two Austrian, and among the countries that that had but one piece to their credit were Spain, England, Italy and Russia. That America should be placed above these European nations is hardly to be expected. But the point which Mr. Koussevitzky would make is that the American piece for Frankfort should be, preferably, a work for orchestra, and one truly representative of America's position in contemporary music.

"I will do all within my power toward discovering such a piece," he said, and added his hope that other conductors of symphony orchestras in America would make equally diligent search for worthwhile pieces from the younger generation of American composers.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS

At the Symphony Concerts of this week Mr. Koussevitzky will bring to its first performance Alexander Steinert's "Southern Night," a poem for orchestra. This is the first orchestral composition by the young Bostonian to gain a hearing, and the score bears a dedication to Mr. Koussevitzky. Franck's Symphony, unheard here since Mr. Monteux's departure, Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks' make the rest of a promising programme.

TRANSCRIPT Oct 9th

Symphony Finances

Annual Accounting for the Season of 1925-26—Estimated Deficit for the Season of 1926-27

THE FISCAL YEAR of the Symphony Orchestra ends on July 31 in the midst of the summer holidays. Not until the resumption of the Symphony Concerts in the following October may the Trustees print the annual accounting. The program book of yesterday contained it, viz.:

RECEIPTS, 1925-26

Gross Income from Concerts	$490,821.50
Symphony Hall (Rents, etc.)	115,364.99
Program-Books	53,566.65
Sale of Bound Volumes	884.20
Interest on Bank Balances	3,225.01
Sundry Receipts	628.46
Operating Income	$576,293.44

OUTGO, 1925-26

Expenses of Concerts, Rents, Travelling Expenses, Soloists, etc.	$158,230.92
Symphony Hall (Maintenance)	120,262.16
Program-Books	42,069.73
Orchestra-Salaries	361,756.71
Other Salaries	29,093.00
Insurance	1,530.24
Music (Scores)	4,205.04
Sundry Expenses	12,339.22
Operating Outgo	$729,487.02

BALANCE SHEET, 1925-26

Operating Income	$664,490.81
Operating Outgo	729,487.02
Operating Deficit	$64,996.21
Income Endowment Fund and Interest	11,194.21
Net Loss	$53,802 00

The Trustees proffer these comments: "For the year 1925-26, the operating income increased by $40,487.93. The operating expenses increased by $54,984.76, due almost entirely to higher salaries and additional men in the orchestra. Again this year (1926-27) the orchestra-salaries must be increased by about $15,000, and taxes have risen by $5000 owing to the higher tax-rate in Boston. The estimated deficit for the current year is $75,000. We have pledges of $16,001.67 toward it. We hope the total pledges will be increased to at least $75,000."

Boston Symphony Season Opened

MONITOR Oct 9th

THE forty-sixth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the third under the conductorship of Serge Koussevitzky, was opened in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon with a concert which will be repeated this evening. The program:

Overture to "Der Freischütz".....Weber
Two Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals".....Debussy
Suite from the Ballet "Chout" op. 21.....Prokofieff
Symphony No. 3 in E flat major ("Eroica") op. 55.....Beethoven

Mr. Koussevitzky was warmly greeted. The orchestra stood when he entered; a large portion of the audience followed suit, and the applause continued after nearly all had sat down again.

Prokofieff's Suite was performed for the first time in Boston. The "story" of the ballet is amusing. Unhappily the sections of the music that make up this suite carry no suggestion, save in the most general way, of the action of the scenes they are supposed to represent; except for one horrid cry that seems to mark the discovery of the white goat. That is perhaps nothing to complain about; it merely becomes necessary to regard the suite purely as music. As such, it is characteristically well made, stirring in rhythmical and dynamic contrasts, and gorgeous in color. There is even a section of sustained lyrical beauty, as beauty used to be defined. The more violent expressions, too, come rather pleasingly to the ear today. When the ballet was first done in London, in 1921, one critic found much of the music "harsh, raucous, bitter." Had he then heard "The Rite of Spring?" Today this music of Prokofieff's strikes one as delightful, amusing, thrilling or lovely; but not as bitter. Nor as strikingly original. It is much nearer to Moussorgsky than to Stravinsky in his prime. Most of the audience seemed pleased; nobody walked out. The performance was surpassingly good. A solo violin passage was played by Mr. Burgin with fine dash.

The symphony, which was played by Mr. Koussevitzky two years ago, now marks perhaps the initial gesture of homage at the beginning of the Beethoven centenary season. It was played, as previously under Mr. Koussevitzky, eloquently and with all reverence to the composer. The final movement in particular was aflame with poetic beauty. Beethoven is not one of the composers with whom Mr. Koussevitzky takes liberties.

But does the conductor read the program notes? They included a note taken from the first published score of this work, which said: "Since this symphony is longer than an ordinary symphony, it should be performed at the beginning, rather than at the end of a concert, either after an overture or an aria, or after a concerto." There is sound sense in that. It applies, too, to other symphonies than the "Eroica." The fashion is against it. But fashion cannot alter the fact that this program would have been more enjoyable if the symphony had had the second place.

Debussy's oft-exhibited twins were dusted off and made most presentable. The overture to "Freischütz" suffered from the too great attention of the conductor. Instead of being electrical, it was soporific. Of course, when Mr. Koussevitzky asks us, we listen politely while he musically dissects. But sometimes we wish—like Christopher Robin—that he wouldn't.

L. A. S.

THIS CLIPPING FROM COURIER
BUFFALO, N. Y.

OCT 1 01926

Serge Koussevitzky has added new members to the brilliant Boston Symphony ensemble which comes to Buffalo on November 3d to open the orchestra series. Mr. Brennan, manager of the orchestra, was in town last week to confer with Miss de Forest, manager of the Foundation, and commented on the beautiful form which the Boston ensemble is showing in its first rehearsals. Three new violinists who are notables in the orchestral world have been added.

There are also a new second harp and a clarinetist, Hamelin, who is the only new principal in the orchestra.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
WASHINGTON, D. C.

OCT 1 01926

Season Opened.

The Boston Symphony orchestra, which will be heard in Washington twice this season under the management of Mrs. Wilson-Greene, opened its 1926-27 concert season at Boston on Friday afternoon. Its Washington concerts are scheduled for February 2 and April 5, both in the afternoon, at Poli's.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
WASHINGTON, D. C.

OCT 1 01926

BOSTON SYMPHONY GIVES FIRST CONCERT IN SERIES

Famed Musicians Heard in WRC Recital; New York Philharmonic October 30.

NOTED ARTISTS TONIGHT

The premiere concert of a series which will bring the leading symphony orchestras of New York and Boston to the listening audience of the North Atlantic States every Saturday night during the coming winter, was broadcast by stations WJZ, WRC, WGY and WBZ last night. The famous Boston Symphony orchestra is under the leadership of Serge Koussevitzky. The other orchestra, which will be heard in this series, will be the New York Philharmonic, in its Students' concerts, under Willem Mengelberg. The opening concet of that orchestra will be given October 30.

The concert by the Boston Symphony was given in Symphony hall, Boston, and marked the opening of the forty-sixth season of that organization. It is estimated that over 10,000,000 persons heard this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians.

W. S. Quinby, head of the New York, Boston and Chicago house bearing his name, is sponsoring this series of concerts.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

OCT 10 1926

Musical Notes

A gala event in Boston was the opening of the Boston Symphony Orchestra season in Symphony Hall last Friday. The applause amounted to a real demonstration as the conductor first stepped upon the stage, and again after the brilliant end of the Beethoven Eroica Symphony which closed the concert.

The novelty of the afternoon was Prokofieff's Ballet Suite "Chout" (Buffoon). It is hoped that one or both of these pieces will figure upon the opening of the Providence season, in the Albee Theatre, Oct. 26.

The subscription offices in Symphony Hall report a greater demand for season tickets in Providence than ever before. It is expected, indeed, that no seats will be left for the single concerts by the time the season sale is over. Mail orders are being received, and such seats as remain unsold by Oct. 18 will then be placed on public sale at Steinert's.

The orchestra maintains its fine personnel of last season with the addition of one principal player in Gaston Hamelin, the celebrated clarinet virtuoso, who has come from Paris to fill that important position. There are also one or two minor changes.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

OCT 1 0 1926

The opening of the 46th season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday in Symphony Hall, Boston, was a brilliant affair, according to reports from the Hub city. Serge Koussevitzky's band which will be heard in its opening concert here on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, has practically the same personnel as last year. One notable addition is Gaston Hamelin, the celebrated clarinet virtuoso, who came from Paris this year to become the principal in the clarinet section of the Boston orchestra.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
PRESS
PITTSBURG, PA.

OCT 1 01926

NEW EUROPEAN SCORES TO BE CONCERT FEATURE

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived from Europe last week, bringing with him some new scores of interest and many promising plans for a remarkable Boston Symphony orchestra season, which will include two concerts in Pittsburgh on November 5 and 6 at Syria Mosque.

Mr. Koussevitzky's sojourn in Europe began with his series of "Concerts Koussevitzky," which are the principal events of each spring season in Paris.

The Boston orchestra will open the series of seven Friday night and seven Saturday afternoon symphony concerts in Pittsburgh under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Orchestra association. Others to follow are the Cincinnati on November 19-20; the Cleveland, December 10-11; New York Philharmonic, January 7-8; the New York Symphony, Walter Damrosch conductor, January 28-29; the Minneapolis, February 11-12; and the New York Philharmonic for a second visit on March 11 and 12.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE TIMES
PITTSBURG, PA.

OCT 1 0 1926

City on Itinerary Of Boston Orchestra

Pittsburgh will be included in the first tour of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opened its season last week under leadership of Sarge Koussevitzky. Concerts will be given at Syria Mosque Friday night, November 5, and Saturday afternoon, November 6, under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association.

These concerts will open the orchestra season in Pittsburgh, the schedule including the Cincinnati, November 19 and 20; Cleveland, December 10 and 11; New York Philharmonic, January 7 and 8; New York Symphony, January 28 and 29; Minneapolis, February 11 and 12, and New York Philharmonic, March 11 and 12.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
OCT

SYMPHONIC CONCERT NIGHT'S AIR FEATURE

Radio reception last evening was excellent, with the conditions permitting stations in Florida, Texas and Far West to be heard as clearly as those nearby. Eight Chicago stations were heard, while several distant "broadcasters" of low power and unfamiliar to fans were picked up well. The fact that WEAF was heard attests to excellence of conditions.

The feature of the evening was the opening concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Sergei Koussevitzky. Late programs consisted mainly of dance numbers and popular music, following the custom of Saturday evenings. "Bloopers" were less annoying because of the many stations that could be tuned in.

THIS CLIPPING FROM UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

OCT 11 1926

* * *

The center of the radio stage was occupied by WBZ Saturday night and we took no interest in anything but the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For some unknown reason the loud passages were subject to an unpleasant grumble which might have been either the pickup or the loud speaker. We are inclined to suspect a peculiar resonance at the pickup as being the fault. We did not listen at our own set so cannot place the fault accurately.

* * *

CONCERT-CHRONICLE: SATURDAY AUDIENCE SUNDAY SOBRIETIES

Transcript — Oct 17th

MR. KOUSSEVITZKY GOES TO HIS METTLE

Second Beginning at Symphony Hall—Mr. Elman Exhibits His New Quartet of All the Virtues—A Just Program Justly Played—The Coming of Ursula Greville—Via Brussels—Programs at Hand—Information and Improvement

IN the performance of music the audience also plays its part—seldom in clearer evidence than at the Symphony Concert of Saturday evening. On Friday afternoon, the listening company was uncommonly stodgy. It could not muster enough applause to bring the orchestra to its feet; while through the final number—Beethoven's "Eroica Symphony"—its collective mind was clearly turning to tea, cars and suburban homes. Of another mood was the house on Saturday—alert, eager, unhurried, striking out sparks from the moment in which Mr. Koussevitzky came upon the stage. It clapped him to the echo; rose en masse to salute him; had the orchestra standing at the end of Prokoviev's Suite; lingered to reward the most vivid performance of "The Eroica" that Boston has heard for many a year. Plainly its mind was on the concert; it had come for musical pleasure and received it; with one accord returned lusty thanks. More and more this evening assembly becomes the representative audience at the Symphony Concerts. Young years now divide it with middle age. It is cosmopolitan, rather than native-born. It stimulates both conductor and orchestra. They give back accordingly.

In such company it was easy to believe the Suite from "Chout" interesting and important, when the orchestra, to a man of all the hundred, beat out the rhythm and up-drove the great crescendo of the final dance. As stirringly it flailed through the scene in the merchant's chamber and shrilled high his comic disicomfiture and alarm at the "jeune femme" become goat. Once and again it is a pleasure to hear rowdy music at a Symphony Concert, and rowdy at every other moment is this ballet of "Chout." Prokoviev broad-humored, grotesque, riotous, it certainly is; but Prokoviev also master of rhythm, impetus,, full strokes, high colors, comic frenzies—music written from the shoulder and shaking the diaphragms of those that hear. Once, even, they answered with rich laughter.

Crown to the whole was the performance of the "Eroica Symphony." Against the weight of the string choir, Mr. Koussevitzky did well to multiply the woodwinds into fours and strengthen the brass; for Beethoven here wrote a deep-voiced music, scaling it also high. So swelled the orchestral tone was magnificently resonant; rhythmic ardor whipped it; large and full it sang; strode, clove, hammered at Beethoven's very heels. As for the conductor, he was altogether in the vein with this first release in a Symphony of the composer's romantic faith and passionate works. In the manifold first movement he interspersed power with beauty; the lengths of the Funeral March seemed inevitable and piercing play of emotion into invention; the contrasts of the Scherzo leapt to the ear; the stars of Beethoven's young maturity sang together in the Finale. A hundred and twenty-one years ago he scrawled his name on the fly-leaf. All that time, like lava, the music has cooled. Now Mr. Koussevitzky and the orchestra tossed it up again volcano-like. It glowed and it burnt.

SYMPHONY IN 2ND CONCERT

Traveler — Oct 16

Music by Alexander Steinert Played for First Time

A young Boston composer was represented on the program at yesterday's concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky, a program to be repeated tonight at Symphony hall.

Alexander Lang Steinert was present in the audience to hear the first performance of his "Southern Night," poem for orchestra, first of his orchestral compositions to gain a hearing here.

The gifted young Bostonian is no stranger to Symphony audiences. He appeared as pianist with the orchestra in Scriabin's "Prometheus" two seasons ago, and while still at Harvard had two of his tunes, composed for the 1921 Hasty Pudding show, performed at the Pops.

"Southern Night," composed in the Provencal region of France and in the Maritime Alps, reflects the beauty of this country. It is a melodious piece, cleverly scored, which confirms the high promise of Mr. Steinert's vocal and piano compositions.

The composer was called up on the stage and vigorously applauded.

The program also included Mozart's serenade for string orchestra, "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Strauss's "Till Eulenspiegel" and Cesar Franck's symphony in D minor.

Symphony Series Here Dominates the Providence Musical Horizon

Providence Journal Oct 13

BY HORACE M. REYNOLDS.

The advent of autumn is the awakening of the city; at this time of year the city quickens into life as does the countryside at the touch of spring. Each man interprets this new rhythm of life in terms of his interests. To some it means college and football; to others new clothes or a change in bodily comfort; to still others, the revival of the theatrical season. But there is a smaller group to whom autumn means, perhaps above everything else, the commencement of the musical life of the city.

* * *

In Providence the five concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra dominate the musical horizon from which the mist of summer inactivity is just beginning to rise. And this year the true music lover, as he sits before his fire and fingers his five paste-boards, is thinking not alone of the programmes of the year but of how the music of those programmes will sound in the Albee Theatre. I have had small opportunity to judge the acoustic properties of the Albee, but I will hazard a guess on the strength of the few times I have sat in that theatre, that he will hear his music this year better than he heard it last year or than he will hear it in the seasons to come. Music halls are like violins in this: to be perfect they must be good to start with, and they must be mellowed by years of use. Infantry Hall was a barn, not a music hall, and while its convenient position recommended it to those of us who live on the hill, we shall not be sorry to exchange its circus-like atmosphere for the more appropriate one of a theatre. I say, morosely, better this year than in the seasons to come, because the music lover must face the fact that the Masons are not building a hall to be used solely as a concert hall, but one to be used primarily for whatever Masons do in their halls. An ideal concert hall should be high, fairly narrow, and not too deep. An assembly hall even if it has good acoustics rarely makes a perfect background for orchestral harmonies. It is usually too wide, too deep, with enormous vistas which swallow up the listener, engulfing him in a great impersonal space which makes very difficult that instantaneous response of audience to orchestra upon which a perfect performance depends.

As for the matter of music, we can be sure of the regular fare of the standard orchestral repertoire seasoned with a liberal sprinkling of novelties; novelties for which we can be sure Mr. Koussevitzky has searched over Europe this summer. And Mr. Koussevitzky's temperament makes him particularly hospitable to novelties, for in them he finds rich opportunities for the virtuosity which is his greatest gift as a conductor.

* * *

The matter of hall and programme settled, our music lover will probably spend some time thinking of the orchestra itself; he will allow his mind to run back to the first time he heard the orchestra and will trace it from this point to the present, stopping to consider the various conductors, comparing them one with the other, trying to capture again, perhaps, the magic of a particularly fine performance.

My own memories of the Boston Symphony Orchestra date back to 1915 when I came from Philadelphia to live in Cambridge. I had then for many years paid my twenty-five cents for the privilege of climbing the long staircase that led from the dimly-lit back entrance, to the second balcony, where, in tall-backed, narrow, pew-like seats, we listened to Saturday-night concerts by the Philadelphia Orchestra. That was in the old Academy of Music, the most perfect music hall in which it has even been my good fortune to hear music. A few years ago when this fine, old hall was threatened with demolishment in the interest of a more modern building, it was through the efforts of Mr. Edward Bok that it was saved for future generations of music-lovers, and for that act I have forgiven Mr. Bok his autobiography. These concerts were conducted first, by Carl Pohlig, later by Leopold Stokowski. After the concerts a small group of us foregathered at Soules's; a fine old cafe on Fourth street, redolent of hundred-year-old oak and walnut. There we drank Culmbacher, aesthetized, and exclaimed to ourselves, "This is life."

The change from Philadelphia to Boston, speaking orchestrally, was a come-down. The barn-like Symphony Hall seemed to swallow the music which the old Academy had held so beautifully; the audience was not so sympathetic, not so creative, to use Robert Haven Schauffler's term; and I missed the cafe, that instinctive centre of culture. The orchestra and the conductor, though, were fully as good, perhaps better. Muck had power; he was strong, and this strength showed in his face, which had a tremendous jaw, and a slightly sardonic expression about the eyes. One night, as I sat alone on one of those long backless benches in the smoking-room of the Boston Opera House, Muck came in and sat down beside me. It was then that I saw the power in the face which I had heard in his readings. As I sat there, cigarette in hand, studying this man, I could see the resemblance to Richard Wagner which had been so often noted. The face revealed little else than power; it was a perfect mask, a typical face of the Italian Renaissance—such as Giovanni Bellini has painted in his Doge of Venice. In the exchange of Stokowski for this man I had lost nothing. Great music under Muck's baton was vibrant with the power which springs from reserve strength, from emotion under the tension of discipline.

* * *

Rabaud followed Muck, and Rabaud was as dry a conductor as I have ever listened to. A man of wide but unimpassioned musical culture, he was devoted to the weak, wishy-washy music of the modern French school, and he deluged Boston audiences with that music, converting the strong substantial fare of Muck into programmes which were like large bowls of milk toast. Whether or not his programme-making was part of the French propaganda, doesn't interest me. But he will forever have a place in my mind as the dryest of dry conductors. He had none of that combination of precision and poetry, which marks the French mind at its best; that high harmony of intellect and emotion which one finds in a Cesar Franck, a Chausson, a Meryon, or a Verlaine. I remember one concert which, according to Rabaud's habit, comprised among other examples of French music, a Saint Saens symphony and the Vision Fugitive from Massanet's Herodiade. Werrenrath was the soloist, and I remember the oasis in the intolerable desert of Rabaud's usual aridity. Under him the orchestra sunk to the lowest level it has attained in the past 15 years.

Then came Monteux, a conductor of more sympathy, breadth and power. His performances were always impeccable, and characterized by a fine artistic restraint. What Monteux lacked was fire. Remembering Muck's face and how he had succeeded in giving to Brahms the intensity with which his music is meant to glow, I went downstairs one evening and took an unoccupied seat in the front row, far enough to the left to enable me to watch Monteux's face. Then I knew what I had guessed. Monteux had not the passion in his face and eyes to kindle his men into great playing. Watch any great conductor's face; his body may be as quiet as a tree, but his face will plead, threaten, cajole and condemn. Transfigured by the greatness of another man's conception, he pulls his players along to the perfect execution of a dream set down with black notes on lined white paper.

* * *

And now we have Koussevitzky, a virtuoso conductor of dash and brilliance. I have seldom heard the orchestra play so brilliantly as it plays under his beat.

And so we look forward with the keenest anticipation to what this year will bring forth. One hopes that Koussevitzky's fondness for novelties and the rich field they offer for "effects" will not exclude too much of the music of the great men who have something to say; one hopes that we will be moved as well as pleased and excited.

Certainly the Beethoven festival in the spring will make great demands on Koussevitzky's powers of interpretation. And those of us who find it possible to journey to Boston for that event will find in it ample opportunity to measure more completely Koussevitzy's stature as a reader of scores. His energy, intelligence and virtuosity have been proven.

THIS CLIPPING FROM GLOBE
TORONTO, CAN.

OCT 21 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Serge Koussevitzky arrived in Boston on Sept. 22 last, bringing with him from Europe some new scores of interest and many promising plans for a remarkable Boston Symphony Orchestra season, which will include a visit to this city. Mail orders are now being accepted by Massey Hall office for the Boston Symphony concert on Tuesday, Nov. 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM MAIL
TORONTO, CAN.

OCT 30 1926

Boston Symphony.

Several numbers of unusual interest and brilliance should make an event of the first significance in the coming concert here by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Massey Hall, on Tuesday evening, November 2nd. Serge Koussevitsky will present as the principal number on the program Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony in F minor. This score is often considered the greatest by the Russian master and of higher brilliance and finer calibre than his Pathetic Symphony No. 6. There are a number of good reservations left at the Massey Hall Box Office.

2ND SYMPHONY OF SEASON GIVEN

Herald — Oct 16

Brilliant Performance of Strauss's Rondo by Orchestra

STEINERT'S SOUTHERN NIGHT SHOWS COLOR

By PHILIP HALE

The second concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Koussevitzky conductor, took place yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall. The program was as follows: Mozart, Eine Kleine Nachtmusik; A. L. Steinert, "Southern Night" (first performance); Strauss, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks." Franck, Symphony, D minor.

There was a remarkably brilliant performance of Strauss' rondo, one of the few compositions by him that will preserve his memory for some years to come. It has been said that this rondo is one of his best works, perhaps the one that shows the most musical individuality, because it portrays some of his personal characteristics: his rough humor, his love of musical tricks that in this case embellish, in other instances disfigure his music, a certain slyness, a desire to be sensational. In the rondo these characteristics unite, with his indisputable vein of poetry, in creating a masterpiece. For this composer who finds in Till a congenial playfellow, introduces him to the audience with a few lovely measures, as a man telling a fairy story, beginning "once upon a time," and after the tale is told, and the scapegrace has been judged and sentenced to the scaffold, one hears Strauss saying: "I've told the story. Till is dead; think kindly of him, for through me he has amused you."

In the performance of Franck's Symphony yesterday the second movement, beautifully played and poetically read, was the salient feature. Is it blasphemous to say that it is not easy to understand why Franck in the first movement repeats the opening slow passage? Whether the effect of its first appearance is not frittered away? Whether by the repetition the movement has less fine proportions? M. d'Indy would of course not admit any change; he would scout the idea that in the whole work there is a superfluous measure.

Mr. Koussevitzky's reading of the symphony was eminently dramatic, as it was free in the matter of tempi. To those who look on Franck only as a saint, composing on his knees, intoxicated with pious orgies, or rapt in mystical visions, Mr. Koussevitsky's interpretation in some respects would seem too passionate, too worldly. But why refuse human qualities to Franck? He was not always in the church; his ecstasy was not always spiritual. When he wrote this symphony, it was not necessarily as an act of faith; he wrote music, and for the most part he wrote eloquently whether in tender or triumphant mood.

In comparatively recent years Mr. Gericke was the only conductor who gave the first theme of the Finale its proper sweep and dignity. Neither this theme nor the first of the first Allegro endures hurrying and agitation. An Allegro non troppo" even when it is in 2-2 time is not necessarily an "Allegro molto." We are not sticklers for strict observance of a composer's indications; they have been more than once misleading; composers conducting have often ignored them. But the prace of a first section is to be regulated by the nature of the phrase and its immediate development. These phrases of Franck's to which we have alluded do not admit of restlessness and rush.

Mr. Steinert says that his "Southern Night," while it has no program, was influenced by the beauty of Southern France and the Maritime Alps. M. d'Indy, one of Mr. Steinert's teachers, in composition, wrote last summer two orchestral pieces, "Diptyque Mediterraneen," giving "impressions of meridional light"; so that master and pupil sought inspiration in a southern clime.) It is natural that a young composer living in Paris and hearing much ultra-modern music should be led to write in an impressionistic vein; but Mr. Steinert's studies have not led him to believe that beauty lies only in wild irregularity nor is he a wooer of the purely fantastical. For a first orchestral work, this "Southern Night" is creditable to the composer, since it reveals his possession of a sense of color. The opening measures establish at once a mood. Later there are sections that show fancy, and in one there is an emotional outburst. On the other hand there are pages without marked significance, pages that seem tentative, experimental. This is not surprising. The composer himself would probably be the first to admit it. Let us not talk about "form" and "development"; for the tendency today is to put greater stress on color and rhythm. The conception of form today reminds one of the saying of Plotinus reasoning about beauty, a saying which once would have seemed paradoxical if not unintelligible: "Fire surpasses other bodies in beauty because, compared with the other elements, it obtains the order of form; for it is more eminent than the rest, and is the most subtle of all, bordering as it were on an incorporeal nature." We have had too much corporeal music. "Southern Night" and its composer were warmly applauded by the great audience.

How charming in its artistic simplicity, its spontaneous and vital beauty is Mozart's little Serenade for strings. There has been only one Mozart. The Serenade was delightfully performed.

The concert will be repeated tonight. The program of next week will be as follows: Haydn, Symphony, E flat major (B. & H. No. 3—not No. 1 as announced in the program book); Ibert, "Les Rencontres," three pieces for ballet (first time in the United States); Wagner, Prelude to "Lohengrin," Funeral Music of Siegfried, "Waldweben" and Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg."

CONCERT-CHRONICLE: ENTER MR. STEINERT; BUSY MISS LEGINSKA

Transcript — Oct 14

HIS "POEM" FROM THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

A Note About "Southern Night" and the Composer — Public and Pieces for the Philharmonic Sundays—Old Acquaintances in Boston Give Pleasure in London —Forthcoming Programs — Chamber-Music at the Public Library

WITH Mr. Koussevitzky it is nothing against a composer that he is an American. He has played the music of Americans in both Boston and Paris. Performing artists receive their chance at his hands as well. Thus, as a pianist in Skriabin's "Prometheus" he introduced last year to the public of the Symphony Concerts Mr. Alexander Steinert. Those who follow closely musical affairs in Boston had already known him through the medium of numerous songs and piano-pieces. And this year—this week in fact—he is to make his bow in Symphony Hall as composer for orchestra in "Southern Night."

The tone-poem was composed in the summer of 1925 and scored during the early part of the following winter. It is based on no program or story; but it was undoubtedly influenced by the character of the country in which Mr. Steinert spends much of his time. For he has a studio at St. Paul, in the Maritime Alps, not far from Nice. Here he and his young wife spend most of their winters, both engaged in creative work. While Mr. Steinert composes, Mrs. Steinert paints; and each knows well the field of the other. The summer and early autumn they like to spend in New England. But it is the rugged Provence that lends its flavor to "Southern Night." There the old feudal atmosphere is still strongly in evidence. Time, the process of modernization, have not yet affected this part of the world.

"Southern Night" runs in simple, free, three-part form. The music is based on two important phrases of the first section. It affects neither the swollen orchestra used by some contemporary composers, nor the most recent harmonic idiom. Rather is its language that of ten or fifteen years ago, the current musical speech of the days just before the war. "Southern Night" is not a long piece; eight minutes—no more—suffice for performance. Nor is it an objective music, attempting to paint the country so dear to Mr. Steinert. Quite the contrary. Despite the ruggedness, it is a personal music, a subjective music, releasing moods aroused in the composer by his environment.

Mr. Steinert, now in his twenty-sixth year, began the study of the piano when he was eight years old. He is a graduate of Harvard College ("magna cum laude"), where he continued his musical studies. He lays much stress on the instruction in composition which he received from Mr. Charles Martin Loeffler. After his college days Mr. Steinert went to Paris. There he studied for two years at the Conservatory and privately with d'Indy and Gédalge.

Mr. Steinert published his first piece when he was sixteen years old—to his present regret. He has not published anything since 1922, wishing to be certain of the quality of his work before placing it in the hands of the public. In the larger forms he wrote in 1924-25 a Sonata for Violin and Piano, in the usual three movements, as yet unpublished and unplayed. Of it Mr. Steinert says whimsically: "The first movement took me two years; the second two months, and the last two weeks." Pondering it he has been merciless with his own criticism, subjecting it to much revision. (Beethoven's habit is not yet extinct among composers.) Since July Mr. Steinert has been at work on a Trio for Violin, Violoncello and Piano. A week after the performance of "Southern Night' Mr. and Mrs. Steinert expect to return to their beloved studio in France.

Mr. Steinert has definite preferences among composers and definite opinions of them. Without sacrificing in the least a broadly catholic taste, his preference goes to Musorgsky, and, in particular, to Ravel, Debussy and Stravinsky. He believes that Ravel is the greatest living musician, but that history will in time rank Debussy higher than Ravel, because of Debussy's pioneering work. He sees a long and easily traceable line of development in the music of Stravinsky; believes that before his recent turn into a "classical" period of his own Stravinsky was the greatest among living composers; is not so certain about this latest phase. Mr. Steinert has experienced a period of warm admiration for Strauss and Skriabin, who have now given way in his mind to the four named above. Further, he gives no small allegiance to the classics—including Brahms—amongst whom he prefers Mozart and Bach.

Mr. Steinert agrees with the current opinion that nowhere is music so well performed as in America. Also that nowhere is appreciation so broadly developed. In Paris his friends cannot see how he can admire Brahms at the same time as the chosen four. Further, in Paris he is called upon to take sides among the cliques and "chapels" into which musicians align themselves. Likewise, in Germany there is little knowledge of the music of the French or feeling for it. Only in America is there a broad catholicity of understanding—which is best brought home to one by going abroad.

A. H.

CONCERT-CHRONICLE: SATURDAY AUDIENCE SUNDAY SOBRIETIES

Transcript — Oct 17

MR. KOUSSEVITZKY GOES TO HIS METTLE

Second Beginning at Symphony Hall—Mr. Elman Exhibits His New Quartet of All the Virtues—A Just Program Justly Played—The Coming of Ursula Greville—Via Brussels—Programs at Hand—Information and Improvement

IN the performance of music the audience also plays its part—seldom in clearer evidence than at the Symphony Concert of Saturday evening. On Friday afternoon, the listening company was uncommonly stodgy. It could not muster enough applause to bring the orchestra to its feet; while through the final number—Beethoven's "Eroica Symphony"—its collective mind was clearly turning to tea, cars and suburban homes. Of another mood was the house on Saturday—alert, eager, unhurried, striking out sparks from the moment in which Mr. Koussevitzky came upon the stage. It clapped him to the echo; rose en masse to salute him; had the orchestra standing at the end of Prokoviev's Suite; lingered to reward the most vivid performance of "The Eroica" that Boston has heard for many a year. Plainly its mind was on the concert; it had come for musical pleasure and received it; with one accord returned lusty thanks. More and more this evening assembly becomes the representative audience at the Sypmhony Concerts. Young years now divide it with middle age. It is cosmopolitan, rather than native-born. It stimulates both conductor and orchestra. They give back accordingly.

In such company it was easy to believe the Suite from "Chout" interesting and important, when the orchestra, to a man of all the hundred, beat out the rhythm and up-drove the great crescendo of the final dance. As stirringly it flailed through the scene in the merchant's chamber and shrilled high his comic disicomfiture and alarm at the "jeune femme" become goat. Once and again it is a pleasure to hear rowdy music at a Symphony Concert, and rowdy at every other moment is this ballet of "Chout." Prokoviev broad-humored, grotesque, riotous, it certainly is; but Prokoviev also master of rhythm, impetus,, full strokes, high colors, comic frenzies—music written from the shoulder and shaking the diaphragms of those that hear. Once, even, they answered with rich laughter.

Crown to the whol was the performance of the "Eroica Symphony." Against the weight of the string choir, Mr. Kouszevitzky did well to multiply the woodwinds into fours and strengthen the brass; for Beethoven here wrote a deep-voiced music, scaling it also high. So swelled the orchestral tone was magnificently resonant; rhythmic ardor whipped it; large and full it sang; strode, clove, hammered at Beethoven's very heels. As for the conductor, he was altogether in the vein with this first release in a Symphony of the composer's romantic faith and passionate works. In the manifold first movement he interspersed power with beauty; the lengths of the Funeral March reemed inevitable and piercing play of emotion into invention; the contrasts of the Scherzo leapt to the ear; the stars of Beethoven's young maturity sang together in the Finale. A hundred and twenty-one years ago he scrawled his name on the fly-leaf. All that time, like lava, the music has cooled. Now Mr. Koussevitzky and the orchestra tossed it up again volcano-like. It glowed and it burnt.

SYMPHONY IN 2ND CONCERT

Traveler — Oct 16

Music by Alexander Steinert Played for First Time

A young Boston composer was represented on the program at yesterday's concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky, a program to be repeated tonight at Symphony hall.

Alexander Lang Steinert was present in the audience to hear the first performance of his "Southern Night," poem for orchestra, first of his orchestral compositions to gain a hearing here.

The gifted young Bostonian is no stranger to Symphony audiences. He appeared as pianist with the orchestra in Scriabin's "Prometheus" two seasons ago, and while still at Harvard had two of his tunes, composed for the 1921 Hasty Pudding show, performed at the Pops.

"Southern Night," composed in the Provencal region of France and in the Maritime Alps, reflects the beauty of this country. It is a melodious piece, cleverly scored, which confirms the high promise of Mr. Steinert's vocal and piano compositions.

The composer was called up on the stage and vigorously applauded.

The program also included Mozart's Serenade for string orchestra, "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Strauss's "Till Eulenspiegel" and Cesar Franck's symphony in D minor.

Symphony Series Here Dominates the Providence Musical Horizon

Providence Journal Oct 13

BY HORACE M. REYNOLDS.

The advent of autumn is the awakening of the city; at this time of year the city quickens into life as does the countryside at the touch of spring. Each man interprets this new rhythm of life in terms of his interests. To some it means college and football; to others new clothes or a change in bodily comfort; to still others, the revival of the theatrical season. But there is a smaller group to whom autumn means, perhaps above everything else, the commencement of the musical life of the city.

* * *

In Providence the five concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra dominate the musical horizon from which the mist of summer inactivity is just beginning to rise. And this year the true music lover, as he sits before his fire and fingers his five paste-boards, is thinking not alone of the programmes of the year but of how the music of those programmes will sound in the Albee Theatre. I have had small opportunity to judge the acoustic properties of the Albee, but I will hazard a guess on the strength of the few times I have sat in that theatre, that he will hear his music this year better than he heard it last year or than he will hear it in the seasons to come. Music halls are like violins in this: to be perfect they must be good to start with, and they must be mellowed by years of use. Infantry Hall was a barn, not a music hall, and while its convenient position recommended it to those of us who live on the hill, we shall not be sorry to exchange its circus-like atmosphere for the more appropriate one of a theatre. I say, morosely, better this year than in the seasons to come, because the music lover must face the fact that the Masons are not building a hall to be used solely as a concert hall, but one to be used primarily for whatever Masons do in their halls. An ideal concert hall should be high, fairly narrow, and not too deep. An assembly hall even if it has good acoustics rarely makes a perfect background for orchestral harmonies. It is usually too wide, too deep, with enormous vistas which swallow up the listener, engulfing him in a great impersonal space which makes very difficult that instantaneous response of audience to orchestra upon which a perfect performance depends.

As for the matter of music, we can be sure of the regular fare of the standard orchestral repertoire seasoned with a liberal sprinkling of novelties, novelties for which we can be sure Mr. Koussevitzky has searched over Europe this summer. And Mr. Koussevitzky's temperament makes him particularly hospitable to novelties, for in them he finds rich opportunities for the virtuosity which is his greatest gift as a conductor.

* * *

The matter of hall and programme settled, our music lover will probably spend some time thinking of the orchestra itself; he will allow his mind to run back to the first time he heard the orchestra and will trace it from this point to the present, stopping to consider the various conductors, comparing them one with the other, trying to capture again, perhaps, the magic of a particularly fine performance.

My own memories of the Boston Symphony Orchestra date back to 1915 when I came from Philadelphia to live in Cambridge. I had then for many years paid my twenty-five cents for the privilege of climbing the long staircase that led from the dimly-lit back entrance, to the second balcony, where, in tall-backed, narrow, pew-like seats, we listened to Saturday-night concerts by the Philadelphia Orchestra. That was in the old Academy of Music, the most perfect music hall in which it has even been my good fortune to hear music. A few years ago when this fine, old hall was threatened with demolishment in the interest of a more modern building, it was through the efforts of Mr. Edward Bok that it was saved for future generations of music-lovers, and for that act I have forgiven Mr. Bok his autobiography. These concerts were conducted first, by Carl Pohlig, later by Leopold Stokowski. After the concerts a small group of us foregathered at Soules's; a fine old cafe on Fourth street, redolent of hundred-year-old oak and walnut. There we drank Culmbacher, aesthetized, and exclaimed to ourselves, "This is life."

The change from Philadelphia to Boston, speaking orchestrally, was a come-down. The barn-like Symphony Hall seemed to swallow the music which the old Academy had held so beautifully; the audience was not so sympathetic, not so creative, to use Robert Haven Schauffler's term; and I missed the cafe, that instinctive centre of culture. The orchestra and the conductor, though, were fully as good, perhaps better. Muck had power; he was strong, and this strength showed in his face, which had a tremendous jaw, and a slightly sardonic expression about the eyes. One night, as I sat alone on one of those long backless benches in the smoking-room of the Boston Opera House, Muck came in and sat down beside me. It was then that I saw the power in the face which I had heard in his readings. As I sat there, cigarette in hand, studying this man, I could see the resemblance to Richard Wagner which had been so often noted. The face revealed little else than power; it was a perfect mask, a typical face of the Italian Renaissance—such as Giovanni Bellini has painted in his Doge of Venice. In the exchange of Stokowski for this man I had lost nothing. Great music under Muck's baton was vibrant with the power which springs from reserve strength, from emotion under the tension of discipline.

* * *

Rabaud followed Muck, and Rabaud was as dry a conductor as I have ever listened to. A man of wide but unimpassioned musical culture, he was devoted to the weak, wishy-washy music of the modern French school, and he deluged Boston audiences with that music, converting the strong substantial fare of Muck into programmes which were like large bowls of milk toast. Whether or not his programme-making was part of the French propaganda, doesn't interest me. But he will forever have a place in my mind as the dryest of dry conductors. He had none of that combination of precision and poetry, which marks the French mind at its best; that high harmony of intellect and emotion which one finds in a Cesar Franck, a Chausson, a Meryon, or a Verlaine. I remember one concert which, according to Rabaud's habit, comprised among other examples of French music, a Saint Saens symphony and the Vision Fugitive from Massanet's Herodiade. Werrenrath was the soloist, and I remember the oasis in the intolerable desert of Rabaud's usual aridity. Under him the orchestra sunk to the lowest level it has attained in the past 15 years.

Then came Monteux, a conductor of more sympathy, breadth and power. His performances were always impeccable, and characterized by a fine artistic restraint. What Monteux lacked was fire. Remembering Muck's face and how he had succeeded in giving to Brahms the intensity with which his music is meant to glow, I went downstairs one evening and took an unoccupied seat in the front row, far enough to the left to enable me to watch Monteux's face. Then I knew what I had guessed. Monteux had not the passion in his face and eyes to kindle his men into great playing. Watch any great conductor's face; his body may be as quiet as a tree, but his face will plead, threaten, cajole and condemn. Transfigured by the greatness of another man's conception, he pulls his players along to the perfect execution of a dream set down with black notes on lined white paper.

* * *

And now we have Koussevitzky, a virtuoso conductor of dash and brilliance. I have seldom heard the orchestra play so brilliantly as it plays under his beat.

And so we look forward with the keenest anticipation to what this year will bring forth. One hopes that Koussevitzky's fondness for novelties and the rich field they offer for "effects" will not exclude too much of the music of the great men who have something to say; one hopes that we will be moved as well as pleased and excited.

Certainly the Beethoven festival in the spring will make great demands on Koussevitzky's powers of interpretation. And those of us who find it possible to journey to Boston for that event will find in it ample opportunity to measure more completely Koussevitzy's staturé as a reader of scores. His energy, intelligence and virtuosity have been proven.

THIS CLIPPING FROM GLOBE
TORONTO, CAN.

OCT 21 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

Serge Koussevitzky arrived in Boston on Sept. 22 last, bringing with him from Europe some new scores of interest and many promising plans for a remarkable Boston Symphony Orchestra season, which will include a visit to this city. Mail orders are now being accepted by Massey Hall office for the Boston Symphony concert on Tuesday, Nov. 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM MAIL
TORONTO, CAN.

OCT 30 1926

Boston Symphony.

Several numbers of unusual interest and brilliance should make an event of the first significance in the coming concert here by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Massey Hall, on Tuesday evening, November 2nd. Serge Koussevitsky will present as the principal number on the program Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony in F minor. This score is often considered the greatest by the Russian master and of higher brilliance and finer calibre than his Pathetic Symphony No. 6. There are a number of good reservations left at the Massey Hall Box Office.

2ND SYMPHONY OF SEASON GIVEN

Herald — Oct 16

Brilliant Performance of Strauss's Rondo by Orchestra

STEINERT'S SOUTHERN NIGHT SHOWS COLOR

By PHILIP HALE

The second concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Koussevitzky conductor, took place yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall. The program was as follows: Mozart, Eine Kleine Nachtmusik; A. L. Steinert, "Southern Night" (first performance); Strauss, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks." Franck, Symphony, D minor.

There was a remarkably brilliant performance of Strauss' rondo, one of the few compositions by him that will preserve his memory for some years to come. It has been said that this rondo is one of his best works, perhaps the one that shows the most musical individuality, because it portrays some of his personal characteristics: his rough humor, his love of musical tricks that in this case embellish, in other instances disfigure his music, a certain slyness, a desire to be sensational. In the rondo these characteristics unite, with his indisputable vein of poetry, in creating a masterpiece. For this composer who finds in Till a congenial playfellow, introduces him to the audience with a few lovely measures, as a man telling a fairy story, beginning "once upon a time," and after the tale is told, and the scapegrace has been judged and sentenced to the scaffold, one hears Strauss saying: "I've told the story. Till is dead; think kindly of him, for through me he has amused you."

In the performance of Franck's Symphony yesterday the second movement, beautifully played and poetically read, was the salient feature. Is it blasphemous to say that it is not easy to understand why Franck in the first movement repeats the opening slow passage? Whether the effect of its first appearance is not frittered away? Whether by the repetition the movement has less fine proportions? M. d'Indy would of course not admit any change; he would scout the idea that in the whole work there is a superfluous measure.

Mr. Koussevitzky's reading of the symphony was eminently dramatic, as it was free in the matter of tempi. To those who look on Franck only as a saint, composing on his knees, intoxicated with pious orgies, or rapt in mystical visions, Mr. Koussevitsky's interpretation in some respects would seem too passionate, too worldly. But why refuse human qualities to Franck? He was not always in the church; his ecstasy was not always spiritual. When he wrote this symphony, it was not necessarily as an act of faith; he wrote music, and for the most part he wrote eloquently whether in tender or triumphant mood.

In comparatively recent years Mr. Gericke was the only conductor who gave the first theme of the Finale its proper sweep and dignity. Neither this theme nor the first of the first Allegro endures hurrying and agitation. An Allegro non troppo" even when it is in 2-2 time is not necessarily an "Allegro molto." We are not sticklers for strict observance of a composer's indications; they have been more than once misleading; composers conducting have often ignored them. But the prace of a first section is to be regulated by the nature of the phrase and its immediate development. These phrases of Franck's to which we have alluded do not admit of restlessness and rush.

Mr. Steinert says that his "Southern Night," while it has no program, was influenced by the beauty of Southern France and the Maritime Alps. M. d'Indy, one of Mr. Steinert's teachers, in composition, wrote last summer two orchestral pieces, "Diptyque Mediterraneen," giving "impressions of meridional light"; so that master and pupil sought inspiration in a southern clime.) It is natural that a young composer living in Paris and hearing much ultra-modern music should be led to write in an impressionistic vein; but Mr. Steinert's studies have not led him to believe that beauty lies only in wild irregularity nor is he a wooer of the purely fantastical. For a first orchestral work, this "Southern Night" is creditable to the composer, since it reveals his possession of a sense of color. The opening measures establish at once a mood. Later there are sections that show fancy, and in one there is an emotional outburst. On the other hand there are pages without marked significance, pages that seem tentative, experimental. This is not surprising. The composer himself would probably be the first to admit it. Let us not talk about "form" and "development"; for the tendency today is to put greater stress on color and rhythm. The conception of form today reminds one of the saying of Plotinus reasoning about beauty, a saying which once would have seemed paradoxical if not unintelligible: "Fire surpasses other bodies in beauty because, compared with the other elements, it obtains the order of form; for it is more eminent than the rest, and is the most subtle of all, bordering as it were on an incorporeal nature." We have had too much corporeal music. "Southern Night" and its composer were warmly applauded by the great audience.

How charming in its artistic simplicity, its spontaneous and vital beauty is Mozart's little Serenade for strings. There has been only one Mozart. The Serenade was delightfully performed.

The concert will be repeated tonight. The program of next week will be as follows: Haydn, Symphony, E flat major (B. & H. No. 3—not No. 1 as announced in the program book); Ibert, "Les Rencontres," three pieces for ballet (first time in the United States); Wagner, Prelude to "Lohengrin," Funeral Music of Siegfried, "Waldweben" and Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg."

CONCERT-CHRONICLE: ENTER MR. STEINERT; BUSY MISS LEGINSKA

Transcript — Oct 14

HIS "POEM" FROM THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

A Note About "Southern Night" and the Composer — Public and Pieces for the Philharmonic Sundays—Old Acquaintances in Boston Give Pleasure in London —Forthcoming Programs — Chamber-Music at the Public Library

WITH Mr. Koussevitzky it is nothing against a composer that he is an American. He has played the music of Americans in both Boston and Paris. Performing artists receive their chance at his hands as well. Thus, as a pianist in Skriabin's "Prometheus" he introduced last year to the public of the Symphony Concerts Mr. Alexander Steinert. Those who follow closely musical affairs in Boston had already known him through the medium of numerous songs and piano-pieces. And this year—this week in fact—he is to make his bow in Symphony Hall as composer for orchestra in "Southern Night."

The tone-poem was composed in the summer of 1925 and scored during the early part of the following winter. It is based on no program or story; but it was undoubtedly influenced by the character of the country in which Mr. Steinert spends much of his time. For he has a studio at St. Paul, in the Maritime Alps, not far from Nice. Here he and his young wife spend most of their winters, both engaged in creative work. While Mr. Steinert composes, Mrs. Steinert paints; and each knows well the field of the other. The summer and early autumn they like to spend in New England. But it is the rugged Provence that lends its flavor to "Southern Night." There the old feudal atmosphere is still strongly in evidence. Time, the process of modernization, have not yet affected this part of the world.

"Southern Night" runs in simple, free, three-part form. The music is based on two important phrases of the first section. It affects neither the swollen orchestra used by some contemporary composers, nor the most recent harmonic idiom. Rather is its language that of ten or fifteen years ago, the current musical speech of the days just before the war. "Southern Night" is not a long piece; eight minutes—no more—suffice for performance. Nor is it an objective music, attempting to paint the country so dear to Mr. Steinert. Quite the contrary. Despite the ruggedness, it is a personal music, a subjective music, releasing moods aroused in the composer by his environment.

Mr. Steinert, now in his twenty-sixth year, began the study of the piano when he was eight years old. He is a graduate of Harvard College ("magna cum laude"), where he continued his musical studies. He lays much stress on the instruction in composition which he received from Mr. Charles Martin Loeffler. After his college days Mr. Steinert went to Paris. There he studied for two years at the Conservatory and privately with d'Indy and Gédalge.

Mr. Steinert published his first piece when he was sixteen years old—to his present regret. He has not published anything since 1922, wishing to be certain of the quality of his work before placing it in the hands of the public. In the larger forms he wrote in 1924-25 a Sonata for Violin and Piano, in the usual three movements, as yet unpublished and unplayed. Of it Mr. Steinert says whimsically: "The first movement took me two years; the second two months, and the last two weeks." Pondering it he has been merciless with his own criticism, subjecting it to much revision. (Beethoven's habit is not yet extinct among composers.) Since July Mr. Steinert has been at work on a Trio for Violin, Violoncello and Piano. A week after the performance of "Southern Night' Mr. and Mrs. Steinert expect to return to their beloved studio in France.

Mr. Steinert has definite preferences among composers and definite opinions of them. Without sacrificing in the least a broadly catholic taste, his preference goes to Musorgsky, and, in particular, to Ravel, Debussy and Stravinsky. He believes that Ravel is the greatest living musician, but that history will in time rank Debussy higher than Ravel, because of Debussy's pioneering work. He sees a long and easily traceable line of development in the music of Stravinsky; believes that before his recent turn into a "classical" period of his own Stravinsky was the greatest among living composers; is not so certain about this latest phase. Mr. Steinert has experienced a period of warm admiration for Strauss and Skriabin, who have now given way in his mind to the four named above. Further, he gives no small allegiance to the classics—including Brahms—amongst whom he prefers Mozart and Bach.

Mr. Steinert agrees with the current opinion that nowhere is music so well performed as in America. Also that nowhere is appreciation so broadly developed. In Paris his friends cannot see how he can admire Brahms at the same time as the chosen four. Further, in Paris he is called upon to take sides among the cliques and "chapels" into which musicians align themselves. Likewise, in Germany there is little knowledge of the music of the French or feeling for it. Only in America is there a broad catholicity of understanding—which is best brought home to one by going abroad.

A. H. M.

Plans and Hooks

THIS CLIPPING FROM RECORD
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

OCT 3 - 1926

Koussevitzky to Broadcast

WBZ Begins Series of Thirteen Concerts on Saturday.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 10 minutes past 8 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts will be broadcast by WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, WGY and WRC. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
PRESS
PITTSBURG, PA.

OCT 3 - 1926

Remarkable Record Held By the Boston Symphony

The superlative performances of the Boston Symphony orchestra are indeed a thing to wonder at. But just how and why this organization has come to be one of the greatest in the world leaves little room for speculation or debate.

In 1881 the late Major Henry L. Higginson realized the first dream and aspiration of his life by founding a full-sized symphony orchestra in Boston. This noted musician and public-spirited citizen believed there was a musical public for such an undertaking. Sparing no expense, he engaged the finest musicians then available in Europe to fill its ranks, and brought to this country one after another of the world's finest conductors.

The Boston Symphony in its original form had only 60 players, and its conductor was George Henschel. The initial aims were that the musicians should play under one conductor in one orchestra, and not debase their talents by routine engagements; that the symphony concerts should provide only the finest music; that artistic considerations should always be paramount, and that the conductor should be given absolute control.

The policies, programs, and even the venture were violently attacked and staunchly defended. But the wisdom of the founder was justified as each succeeding year the orchestra added growth and success to the list. In 1900 Symphony hall was built, to become the orchestra's permanent home.

William Gericke, the second conductor, had two terms (1884-9 and 1898-1906). Through years of tireless training, he gradually built up the fine ensemble for which the orchestra has since held its special renown. In the interim of Gericke's periods of service came Arthur Nikisch, the great Hungarian leader, and Emil Pauer, who conducted through 1893-8. Dr. Karl Muck was the next conductor and was there from 1906 to 1918, with the exception of the years 1908 to 1912, which were held by Max Fiedler.

The orchestra next had two French conductors, Henri Rabaud, now head of the Paris Conservatoire, and Pierre Monteux, who ably carried on the established tradition of a finely blended ensemble.

In the autumn of 1924, Serge Koussevitsky became the conductor. From Europe had come many reports of his remarkable qualities as a leader and artist. Expectations were more than fulfilled. America, having heard perhaps all of the great living conductors, has found qualities in Koussevitsky's leadership, which are said to be quite without equal.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BUFFALO, N. Y.

OCT 16 1926

Symphony Orchestra Series

THE radio audience will have symphonic concerts every Saturday night throughout the winter according to a recent announcement by the management of station WJZ. The two big orchestras which will be heard during these series are the Boston Symphony orchestra, under Serge Koussevitzky, which will be broadcast from Symphony Hall, Boston, by stations WBZ, WJZ, WGY and WRC and the New York Philharmonic orchestra, under Willem Mengelberg, Furtwaengler, Toscan-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
N. Y. EVENING SUN

The concerts of the New York Philharmonic orchestra will be the student's series, of which there will be 12, to be given on Saturday nights intermittently throughout the coming winter. The last of this series will come in the early part of April. The concerts are to be given in Carnegie hall and for the most part will be under the baton of Willem Mengelberg as conductor.

The student's concerts are especially designed to fit the needs of the student musician. The entire season's program, which is now being prepared by Mr. Mengelberg, will be built in the form of a musical education and the history of music will be traced from the days of the early composers down to the latest writers of classical music.

OCT 16 1926

Music and Musicians

By W. J. HENDERSON

Mr. Lawrence Gilman has returned from Europe with many thoughts about Wagner and the prodigies of the "Ring." Mr. Philip Hale, the mentor of Boston, has found in "The Thunderer" a consideration of "coloratura" singing and has deemed it worthy of reproduction in the first number of that amazing treasury of learning and discernment, the program book of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There is ground for belief that the British article was written by H. C. Colles, musical editor of the London Times, and at one period guest critic of the New York Times.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

OCT 9 - 1926

TWO composers are writing music especially for the Chamber Symphony Orchestra of New York, Max Jacobs, conductor. Boris Levinson's will be a Hebrew suite, "Palestine," and Mortimer Wilson will be represented by "Music and Calories," which is in ten short movements, fifteen minutes in all, with the following sub-titles: "Dewey Morn in the Garden Patch," "Crawling, Hopping and Waddling Things," "Pink Stockings, Chigger Bites and Wet Feet," "Citrus, Cereal and Swine," "From Roses to Coffee," "In a Vineyard," "A Gravel Walk," "A Picture Hat and No Hurry," "A Cold Bottle and a Bird," Grazing Kine on a Hillside West" and "From Soup to Nuts."

In addition to modern novelties rarely or never played compostions by such old masters as Cimarosa, Leopold and W. A. Mozart, Philip Emanuel Bach, Orlando Gibbons and Mehul will be on the programs of the Chamber Symphony Orchestra. Assisting soloists will be Wanda Landowska, Max Rosen and Carlos Salzedo.

Serge Koussevitsky, who led a picked group of men from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at a chamber orchestral concert for the League of Composers of this city last year, will appear under the same auspices, by courtesy of the trustees of the Boston organiza-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.

OCT 16 1926

Boston Symphony Second Concert On Air Tonight

The second of the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra being broadcast through Weshingtouse Station WBZ and a chain of stations including WJZ, WBY and WRC will go on the air tonight. These concerts are arranged by W. S. Quinby.

The first concert by this organization of 107 musicians, under the direction of the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitsky brought a flood of letters and telegrams of appreciation.

During the broadcast direct from Symphony Hall tonight, Professor Marshall will again go on the air to interpret the Symphony program. He will give a sketch of the life of Mozart and familiarize the radio audience with the principal themes of his Kleine Nacht Musik, the opening selection on tonight's program. He will also tell of the life of Caesar Franck, playing portions of his symphony in D minor, and explaining the composer's methods of treating his themes.

During the intermission, Professor Marshall will illustrate Strauss' symphanic poem "Til Eulenspiegel," explaining how this humorous music is connected with the Eulenspiegel legend. The novelty on tonight's symphony broadcast is the tone poem, "Southern Nights," by Alexander Lang Steinert.

Tel. Chelsea ...

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
TIMES

THE PUBLIC of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has grown considerably in recent seasons and is now limited only by the number of concerts the great orchestra, which must spend most of its time in rehearsal, can give.

That America expects great things of the pending season, which is to be the third under Serge Koussevitzky, is evident from the length of the waiting lists for every series of concerts. At the five series of sixty-seven concerts to be given in greater Boston, it will not be possible for a non-subscriber to obtain a single seat.

Penfield Roberts comments on the orchestral situation in the Boston Globe of September 26th:

"Has any American orchestra ever sold out all its concerts in advance in this fashion before? Seats are to be had for the Philadelphia Orchestra's Philadelphia concerts and for the Chicago Orchestra's Chicago concerts, though the Friday afternoon series in both cities are sold out. No N... York orchestra ever sells out its con-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
PITTSBURG, PA.

OCT 17 1926

ORCHESTRA PROGRAMS

Pittsburgh is promised a series of highly interesting programs to be given by the visiting orchestras this season at Syria Mosque. The Symphony Orchestra series consists of seven Friday nights and seven Saturday afternoons, with 14 programs in store. The first concerts will be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of 104 players, under the distinguished leadership of Serge Koussevitzky. The programs for these concerts are announced here for the first time, and the dates are Friday night, November 5, and Saturday afternoon, November 6.

FRIDAY NIGHT.

Overture "Le Carnaval Romain," Op. 9 ..... Berlioz
Symphony in D minor ..... Franck
Suite from the Ballett "Chout" (Buffoon) Op. 21 ..... Prokofieff
Prelude to "Lehengrin" ..... Wagner
Symphonic Poem, "Pini di Roma ((Pines of Rome) ..... Respighi
The Pines of the Villa Gorghese.
The Pines near a Catacomb.
The Pines of the Janiculum.
The Pines of the Appian Way.
Saturday Matinee.
"Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" Serenade... Mozart
For String Orchestra.
Two Nocturnes ..... Debussy
Nuages (Clouds).
Fetes (Festivals).
Orchestra Suite from the Ballet "Petrouchka" ..... Stravinsky
Symphony No. 4 in F Minor, Op. 36 ..... Tschaikowsky

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

OCT 16 1926

OCT 16 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT TONIGHT

Fine Evening of Music Promised on Local Radio—La Zazzera Back on the Air

Now that the baseball season has reached a most successful conclusion, radio enthusiasts can devote their entire attention to the football season. WBZ, the local Westinghouse station, has arranged to broadcast a banner series of games between some of the leading college teams of the country. One of these choice morsels will be offered to fans this afternoon at 2.30 when the Yale-Dartmouth game will be put on the air. The play-by-play description of the game will come direct from the Yale bowl at New Haven, by way of special wire to the station at East Springfield, and will be described by Jim Murley, sports announcer for WBZ.

The evening program will of course be given over almost in its entirety to the Boston Symphony concert. Tonight's concert is one, lighter in nature, one might say, than the offering of last week. The first number will be a work of Mozard, "Eine Kleine Machtmusik Serenade." This will be followed by "Southern Night," a tone poem for orchestra composed by Steinert, while the third number, closing the first part of the program, will consist of a composition of Strauss, Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks After the Old-Fashioned Roguish Manner." Following the intermission, in which Prof Marshall will speak briefly regarding the symphony to follow, the audience will hear the "Symphony in D Minor," by Caesar Franck. This is a more pretentious work and will require more careful listening on the part of the listeners to understand its beauties.

Quite in keeping with the fine type of program presented by the Boston Symphony will be the offering of Gustave LaZazzera, 'cellist, of our own city, who will be heard from the local studio at 6.30. Gustave LaZazzera is one of Springfield's finest musicians. He first studied with the celebrated Arturo Cuccoli of Padua, then with Francesco Serato of Bologna, and Tito Rosati of Rome. In Italy he was considered an artist of the highest grade and played with the Augustus orchestra of Rome and other orchestras, both symphonic and operatic. His work along radio lines will be recalled by WBZ audiences, when he appeared as 'cellist of the Philharmonic trio that broadcast each evening from this station for over two years. It is interesting to note that in tonight's program Mr LaZazzara has chosen those numbers that were most popular with the listeners in when he was on the air with the trio before. The piano accompaniments will be played by Eleanor Turner LaZazzera.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

OCT 16 1926

SYMPHONY WILL REPEAT BOSTON NUMBERS HERE

First Three at Opening of Providence Season to Be Identical With Those of Initial Programme in Hub.—Public Sale of Season Tickets Monday.

The first three numbers played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the opening of its Providence season, in the E. F. Albee Theatre on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, will be identical with those of the opening programme in Boston, Oct. 8. Included will be Prokofieff's Ballet Suite "Chout" [illegible] and Providence music lovers will have the honor of hearing its second American rendition.

Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz" and Debussey's two nocturnes "Clouds" and "Festivals," are the two other numbers to be repeated here. The symphony of the evening will be Franck's greatest masterpiece in D-minor. Serge Koussevitzky, director of the Boston Symphony, won high praise from Boston music critics for his interpretation of the great Belgian composer's masterpiece in that city.

Public sale of season tickets for Boston Symphony concerts in this city will [illegible] Steinert's. If

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

OCT 12 1926

Well, the Boston Symphony concert came and went Saturday night, and a good time was had by all. An especially good time was had by Mr. Quinby, who sponsored and arranged the broadcasts, for he was given the microphone for a period before the music went on the air. We learned of his gratification on being able to supply such good music for the world in general, and, in a way, it wasn't such a bad little talk at that. He might have indulged in tactless advertising, subtle or otherwise, but he didn't. Ever since some theater owner in Cincinnati devoted more of his remarks to his theater than to "The Ten Commandments," which he was describing via WLW a year or two ago, we have been suspicious of these "big-hearted Andies," so to speak. But, as we said before, we have no fault to find with Mr. Quinby. He exercised good taste.

After Mr. Quinby came Professor Marshall, who showed us something new in the way of describing the musical program. Not only did he cover this in a generally more interesting and educational manner than we are accustomed to, but he went to the trouble of illustrating the motifs on the piano. We could do with a lot more of this sort of thing.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK EVENING POST

OCT 16 1926

The Boston Symphony Orchestra began in Symphony Hall, Boston, October 8, its forty-sixth season, and its third season under Serge Koussevitzky. The program included Prokofieff's Ballet suite, "Chout"; Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony; Debussy's Nocturnes "Clouds" and "Festivals;" and the "Freischutz" overture. The season of five Thursday evening and five Saturday afternoon concerts, in Carnegie Hall, will open on November 25.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
TAMPA, FLA.

OCT 17 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY AT WBZ

BOSTON, Oct. 16.—Another artistic triumph is announced by WBZ, the Westinghouse station at Boston, which states that it has captured the world-renowned Boston Symphony orchestra for its entire series of twenty-four Saturday night (not consecutive) concerts. The first will be a grand broadcast for the entire Atlantic seaboard and comes October 9. This intial concert will be rebroadcast through WGY, Schenectady, WJZ, New York and WRC, Washington, D. C. The other concerts via WBZ will follow on October 16, 23, 30; November 13, 20; December 4, 11, 18, 25; January 1, 15, 22, 29; February 12, 19, 26; March 5, 19, 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30. W. S. Quinby is credited for bringing the Boston Symphony to the air audiences.

THIS CLIPPING FROM RECORD
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
OCT 3 - 1926

Koussevitzky to Broadcast

WBZ Begins Series of Thirteen Concerts on Saturday.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 10 minutes past 8 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts will be broadcast by WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, WGY and WRC. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
PRESS
PITTSBURG, PA.
OCT 3 - 1926

Remarkable Record Held By the Boston Symphony

The superlative performances of the Boston Symphony orchestra are indeed a thing to wonder at. But just how and why this organization has come to be one of the greatest in the world leaves little room for speculation or debate.

In 1881 the late Major Henry L. Higginson realized the first dream and aspiration of his life by founding a full-sized symphony orchestra in Boston. This noted musician and public-spirited citizen believed there was a musical public for such an undertaking. Sparing no expense, he engaged the finest musicians then available in Europe to fill its ranks, and brought to this country one after another of the world's finest conductors.

The Boston Symphony in its original form had only 60 players, and its conductor was George Henschel. The initial aims were that the musicians should play under one conductor in one orchestra, and not debase their talents by routine engagements; that the symphony concerts should provide only the finest music; that artistic considerations should always be paramount, and that the conductor should be given absolute control.

The policies, programs, and even the venture were violently attacked and staunchly defended. But the wisdom of the founder was justified as each succeeding year the orchestra added growth and success to the list. In 1900 Symphony hall was built, to become the orchestra's permanent home.

William Gericke, the second conductor, had two terms (1884-9 and 1898-1906). Through years of tireless training, he gradually built up the fine ensemble for which the orchestra has since held its special renown. In the interim of Gericke's periods of service came Arthur Nikisch, the great Hungarian leader, and Emil Pauer, who conducted through 1893-8. Dr. Karl Muck was the next conductor and was there from 1906 to 1918, with the exception of the years 1908 to 1912, which were held by Max Fiedler.

The orchestra next had two French conductors, Henri Rabaud, now head of the Paris Conservatoire, and Pierre Monteux, who ably carried on the established tradition of a finely blended ensemble.

In the autumn of 1924, Serge Koussevitsky became the conductor. From Europe had come many reports of his remarkable qualities as a leader and artist. Expectations were more than fulfilled. America, having heard perhaps all of the great living conductors, has found qualities in Koussevitsky's leadership, which are said to be quite without equal.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BUFFALO, N. Y.
OCT 16 1926

Symphony Orchestra Series

THE radio audience will have symphonic concerts every Saturday night throughout the winter according to a recent announcement by the management of station WJZ. The two big orchestras which will be heard during these series are the Boston Symphony orchestra, under Serge Koussevitzky, which will be broadcast from Symphony Hall, Boston, by stations WBZ, WJZ, WGY and WRC and the New York Philharmonic orchestra, under Willem Mengelberg, Furtwaengler, Toscannini and Hadley. The concerts of the Boston symphony will be sponsored by W. S. Quinby, of W. S. Quinby & Co., and are the 1926 sequel to the symphony and Pops orchestra concerts broadcast by WBZ through his courtesy last year.

The concerts of the New York Philharmonic orchestra will be the student's series, of which there will be 12, to be given on Saturday nights intermittently throughout the coming winter. The last of this series will come in the early part of April. The concerts are to be given in Carnegie hall and for the most part will be under the baton of Willem Mengelberg as conductor.

The student's concerts are especially designed to fit the needs of the student musician. The entire season's program, which is now being prepared by Mr. Mengelberg, will be built in the form of a musical education and the history of music will be traced from the days of the early composers down to the latest writers of classical music.

Musicians

ENDERSON

Mr. Lawrence Gilman has returned from Europe with many thoughts about Wagner and the prodigies of the "Ring." Mr. Philip Hale, the mentor of Boston, has found in "The Thunderer" a consideration of "colorature" singing and has deemed it worthy of reproduction in the first number of that amazing treasury of learning and discernment, the program book of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There is ground for belief that the British article was written by H. C. Colles, musical editor of the London Times, and at one period guest critic of the New York Times.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
EVENING POST
OCT 9 - 1926

TWO composers are writing music especially for the Chamber Symphony Orchestra of New York, Max Jacobs, conductor. Boris Levinson's will be a Hebrew suite, "Palestine," and Mortimer Wilson will be represented by "Music and Calories," which is in ten short movements, fifteen minutes in all, with the following sub-titles: "Dewey Morn in the Garden Patch," "Crawling, Hopping and Waddling Things," "Pink Stockings, Chigger Bites and Wet Feet," "Citrus, Cereal and Swine," "From Roses to Coffee," "In a Vineyard," "A Gravel Walk," "A Picture Hat and No Hurry," "A Cold Bottle and a Bird," Grazing Kine on a Hillside West" and "From Soup to Nuts."

In addition to modern novelties rarely, or never played compostiions by such old masters as Cimarosa, Leopold and W. A. Mozart, Philip Emanuel Bach, Orlando Gibbons and Mehul will be on the programs of the Chamber Symphony Orchestra. Assisting soloists will be Wanda Landowska, Max Rosen and Carlos Salzedo.

Serge Koussevitsky, who led a picked group of men from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at a chamber orchestral concert for the League of Composers of this city last year, will appear under the same auspices, by courtesy of the trustees of the Boston organization, at a concert in Town Hall on November 27. He will present a program of premiere performances, including Stravinsky's "Mavra" for chamber orchestra and voices, the only major work of that composer which has not yet been heard in America. "The Creation" by Louis Gruenberg, a setting of James Weldon Johnson's poem of that name, a work written especially for the League of Composers by the Hungarian, Bela Bartok, and other new compositions.

CHARLES PIKE SAWYER.

Race Will Start in January.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.
OCT 16 1926

Boston Symphony Second Concert On Air Tonight

The second of the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra being broadcast through Weshingtouse Station WBZ and a chain of stations including WJZ, WBY and WRC will go on the air tonight. These concerts are arranged by W. S. Quinby.

The first concert by this organization of 107 musicians, under the direction of the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitsky brought a flood of letters and telegrams of appreciation.

During the broadcast direct from Symphony Hall tonight, Professor Marshall will again go on the air to interpret the Symphony program. He will give a sketch of the life of Mozart and familiarize the radio audience with the principal themes of his Kleine Nacht Musik, the opening selection on tonight's program. He will also tell of the life of Caesar Franck, playing portions of his symphony in D minor, and explaining the composer's methods of treating his themes.

During the intermission, Professor Marshall will illustrate Strauss' symphanic poem "Til Eulenspiegel," explaining how this humorous music is connected with the Eulenspiegel legend. The novelty on tonight's symphony broadcast is the tone poem, "Southern Nights," by Alexander Lang Steinert.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
EVENING POST
OCT 16 1926

The Boston Symphony Orchestra began in Symphony Hall, Boston, October 18, its forty-sixth season, and its third season under Serge Koussevitzky. The program included Prokofieff's Ballet Suite, "Chout"; Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony; Debussy's Nocturnes "Clouds" and "Festivals;" and the "Freischutz" overture. The season of five Thursday evening and five Saturday afternoon concerts, in Carnegie Hall, will open on November 25.

Tel. Chelsea ...
THIS CLIPPING FROM
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
TIMES
OCT 16 19...

THE PUBLIC of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has grown considerably in recent seasons and is now limited only by the number of concerts the great orchestra, which must spend most of its time in rehearsal, can give.

That America expects great things of the pending season, which is to be the third under Serge Koussevitzky, is evident from the length of the waiting lists for every series of concerts. At the five series of sixty-seven concerts to be given in greater Boston, it will not be possible for a non-subscriber to obtain a single seat.

Penfield Roberts comments on the orchestral situation in the Boston Globe of September 26th:

"Has any American orchestra ever sold out all its concerts in advance in this fashion before? Seats are to be had for the Philadelphia Orchestra's Philadelphia concerts and for the Chicago Orchestra's Chicago concerts, though the Friday afternoon series in both cities are sold out. No New York orchestra ever sells out its concerts for the season. Nor does any New York orchestra offer them in series of twenty-four at high prices, as is done in this city."

Koussevitzky is now rehearsing the great Orchestra for the season's opening in Boston next Friday, October 22nd. The opening Boston program will include Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, Prokofieff's Suite "Buffoon" and shorter classics.

by the Boston Symphony ... 104 players, under the distinguished leadership of Serge Koussevitzky. The programs for these concerts are announced here for the first time, and the dates are Friday night, November 5, and Saturday afternoon, November 6.

FRIDAY NIGHT.

Overture "Le Carnaval Romain," Op. 9 ..... Berlioz
Symphony in D minor ..... Franck
Suite from the Ballett "Chout" (Buffoon) Op. 21 ..... Prokofieff
Prelude to "Lehengrin" ..... Wagner
Symphonic Poem, "Pini di Roma ((Pines of Rome) ..... Respighi
The Pines of the Villa Gorghese.
The Pines near a Catacomb.
The Pines of the Janiculum.
The Pines of the Appian Way.

Saturday Matinee.

"Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" Serenade...Mozart
For String Orchestra.
Two Nocturnes ..... Debussy
Nuages (Clouds).
Fetes (Festivals).
Orchestra Suite from the Ballet "Petrouchka" ..... Stravinsky
Symphony No. 4 in F Minor, Op. 36 ..... Tschaikovsky

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
OCT 16 1926
OCT 16 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT TONIGHT

Fine Evening of Music Promised on Local Radio—La Zazzera Back on the Air

Now that the baseball season has reached a most successful conclusion, radio enthusiasts can devote their entire attention to the football season. WBZ, the local Westinghouse station, has arranged to broadcast a banner series of games between some of the leading college teams of the country. One of these choice morsels will be offered to fans this afternoon at 2.30 when the Yale-Dartmouth game will be put on the air. The play-by-play description of the game will come direct from the Yale bowl at New Haven, by way of special wire to the station at East Springfield, and will be described by Jim Murley, sports announcer for WBZ.

The evening program will of course be given over almost in its entirety to the Boston Symphony concert. Tonight's concert is one, lighter in nature, one might say, than the offering of last week. The first number will be a work of Mozard, "Eine Kleine Machtmusik Serenade." This will be followed by "Southern Night," a tone poem for orchestra composed by Steinert, while the third number, closing the first part of the program, will consist of a composition of Strauss, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks After the Old-Fashioned Roguish Manner." Following the intermission, in which Prof Marshall will speak briefly regarding the symphony to follow, the audience will hear the "Symphony in D Minor," by Caesar Franck. This is a more pretentious work and will require more careful listening on the part of the listeners to understand its beauties.

Quite in keeping with the fine type of program presented by the Boston Symphony will be the offering of Gustave LaZazzera, 'cellist, of our own city, who will be heard from the local studio at 6.30. Gustave LaZazzera is one of Springfield's finest musicians. He first studied with the celebrated Arturo Cuccoli of Padua, then with Francesco Serato of Bologna, and Titó Rosati of Rome. In Italy he was considered an artist of the highest grade and played with the Augustus orchestra of Rome and other orchestras, both symphonic and operatic. His work along radio lines will be recalled by WBZ audiences, when he appeared as cellist of the Philharmonic trio that broadcast each evening from this station for over two years. It is interesting to note that in tonight's program Mr LaZazzara has chosen those numbers that were most popular with the listeners in when he was on the air with the trio before. The piano accompaniments will be played by Eleanor Turner LaZazzera.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 16 1926

SYMPHONY WILL REPEAT BOSTON NUMBERS HERE

First Three at Opening of Providence Season to Be Identical With Those of Initial Programme in Hub.—Public Sale of Season Tickets Monday.

The first three numbers played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the opening of its Providence season, in the E. F. Albee Theatre on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, will be identical with those of the opening programme in Boston, Oct. 8. Included will be Prokofieff's Ballet Suite "Chout" (Buffoon) and Providence music lovers will have the honor of hearing its second American rendition.

Weber's overture to "Der Freichutz" and Debussey's two nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals," are two other numbers to be repeated here. The symphony of the evening will be Franck's greatest masterpiece in D-minor. Serge Koussevitzky, director of the Boston Symphony, won high praise from Boston music critics for his interpretation of the great Belgian composer's masterpiece in that city.

Public sale of season tickets for Boston Symphony concerts in this city will open Monday morning at Steinert's. If any remain unsold at the end of next week, single tickets for the opening concert will go on sale one week from Monday morning.

... artistic ... is announced by WBZ, the Westinghouse station at Boston, which states that it has captured the world-renowned Boston Symphony orchestra for its entire series of twenty-four Saturday night (not consecutive) concerts. The first will be a grand broadcast for the entire Atlantic seaboard and comes October 9. This intial concert will be rebroadcast through WGY, Schenectady, WJZ, New York and WRC, Washington, D. C. The other concerts via WBZ will follow on October 16, 23, 30; November 13, 20; December 4, 11, 18, 25; January 1, 15, 22, 29; February 12, 19, 26; March 5, 19, 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30. W. S. Quinby is credited for bringing the Boston Symphony to the air audiences.

THIS CLIPPING FROM RECORD
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
OCT 3 - 1926

Koussevitzky to Broadcast

WBZ Begins Series of Thirteen Concerts on Saturday.

When the forty-sixth Boston Symphony Orchestra season opens at 10 minutes past 8 on Saturday evening, October 9, the greatest audience that has ever listened to this world-famous orchestra of 107 musicians will be in readiness for Serge Koussevitzky's baton signal which will send the opening strains out from Symphony Hall and through the air to millions of homes.

The entire series of 24 Saturday evening concerts will be broadcast by WBZ which will feed the Symphony concerts to a chain including WJZ, WGY and WRC. This tie-in will thus make the concerts available to all listeners as far west as the Mississippi River, while owners of powerful receivers located still farther west will be well able to hear the broadcasts.

The dates of the broadcasts by the WBZ chain are October 9, 16 and 23, November 20, December 4, 11 and 25, January 22 and 29, February 19 and 26, March 5, April 16, 23 and 30.

The other nine of the 24 Saturday night concerts will only be broadcast through Westinghouse Station WBZ. The dates of these programs are October 30, November 13, December 18, January 1 and 15, February 12, March 19 and 26, and April 2.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
PRESS
PITTSBURG, PA.
OCT 3 - 1926

Remarkable Record Held By the Boston Symphony

The superlative performances of the Boston Symphony orchestra are indeed a thing to wonder at. But just how and why this organization has come to be one of the greatest in the world leaves little room for speculation or debate.

In 1881 the late Major Henry L. Higginson realized the first dream and aspiration of his life by founding a full-sized symphony orchestra in Boston. This noted musician and public-spirited citizen believed there was a musical public for such an undertaking. Sparing no expense, he engaged the finest musicians then available in Europe to fill its ranks, and brought to this country one after another of the world's finest conductors.

The Boston Symphony in its original form had only 60 players, and its conductor was George Henschel. The initial aims were that the musicians should play under one conductor in one orchestra, and not debase their talents by routine engagements; that the symphony concerts should provide only the finest music; that artistic considerations should always be paramount, and that the conductor should be given absolute control.

The policies, programs, and even the venture were violently attacked and staunchly defended. But the wisdom of the founder was justified as each succeeding year the orchestra added growth and success to the list. In 1900 Symphony hall was built, to become the orchestra's permanent home.

William Gericke, the second conductor, had two terms (1884-9 and 1898-1906). Through years of tireless training, he gradually built up the fine ensemble for which the orchestra has since held its special renown. In the interim of Gericke's periods of service came Arthur Nikisch, the great Hungarian leader, and Emil Pauer, who conducted through 1898-8. Dr. Karl Muck was the next conductor and was there from 1906 to 1918, with the exception of the years 1908 to 1912, which were held by Max Fiedler.

The orchestra next had two French conductors, Henri Rabaud, now head of the Paris Conservatoire, and Pierre Monteux, who ably carried on the established tradition of a finely blended ensemble.

In the autumn of 1924, Serge Koussevitsky became the conductor. From Europe had come many reports of his remarkable qualities as a leader and artist. Expectations were more than fulfilled. America, having heard perhaps all of the great living conductors, has found qualities in Koussevitsky's leadership, which are said to be quite without equal.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
BUFFALO, N. Y.
OCT 16 1926

Symphony Orchestra Series

THE radio audience will have symphonic concerts every Saturday night throughout the winter according to a recent announcement by the management of station WJZ. The two big orchestras which will be heard during these series are the Boston Symphony orchestra, under Serge Koussevitzky, which will be broadcast from Symphony Hall, Boston, by stations WBZ, WJZ, WGY and WRC and the New York Philharmonic orchestra, under Willem Mengelberg, Furtwaengler, Toscannini and Hadley. The concerts of the Boston symphony will be sponsored by W. S. Quinby, of W. S. Quinby & Co., and are the 1926 sequel to the symphony and Pops orchestra concerts broadcast by WBZ through his courtesy last year.

The concerts of the New York Philharmonic orchestra will be the student's series, of which there will be 12, to be given on Saturday nights intermittently throughout the coming winter. The last of this series will come in the early part of April. The concerts are to be given in Carnegie hall and for the most part will be under the baton of Willem Mengelberg as conductor.

The student's concerts are especially designed to fit the needs of the student musician. The entire season's program, which is now being prepared by Mr. Mengelberg, will be built in the form of a musical education and the history of music will be traced from the days of the early composers down to the latest writers of classical music.

Musicians

ENDERSON

Mr. Lawrence Gilman has returned from Europe with many thoughts about Wagner and the prodigies of the "Ring." Mr. Philip Hale, the mentor of Boston, has found in "The Thunderer" a consideration of "colorature" singing and has deemed it worthy of reproduction in the first number of that amazing treasury of learning and discernment, the program book of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There is ground for belief that the British article was written by H. C. Colles, musical editor of the London Times, and at one period guest critic of the New York Times.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
EVENING POST
OCT 9 - 1926

TWO composers are writing music especially for the Chamber Symphony Orchestra of New York, Max Jacobs, conductor. Boris Levinson's will be a Hebrew suite, "Palestine," and Mortimer Wilson will be represented by "Music and Calories," which is in ten short movements, fifteen minutes in all, with the following sub-titles: "Dewey Morn in the Garden Patch," "Crawling, Hopping and Waddling Things," "Pink Stockings, Chigger Bites and Wet Feet," "Citrus, Cereal and Swine," "From Roses to Coffee," "In a Vineyard," "A Gravel Walk," "A Picture Hat and No Hurry," "A Cold Bottle and a Bird," Grazing Kine on a Hillside West" and "From Soup to Nuts."

In addition to modern novelties rarely, or never played compostitions by such old masters as Cimarosa, Leopold and W. A. Mozart, Philip Emanuel Bach, Orlando Gibbons and Mehul will be on the programs of the Chamber Symphony Orchestra. Assisting soloists will be Wanda Landowska, Max Rosen and Carlos Salzedo.

Serge Koussevitsky, who led a picked group of men from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at a chamber orchestral concert for the League of Composers of this city last year, will appear under the same auspices, by courtesy of the trustees of the Boston organization, at a concert in Town Hall on November 27. He will present a program of premiere performances, including Stravinsky's "Mavra" for chamber orchestra and voices, the only major work of that composer which has not yet been heard in America. "The Creation" by Louis Gruenberg, a setting of James Weldon Johnson's poem of that name, a work written especially for the League of Composers by the Hungarian, Bela Bartok, and other new compositions.

CHARLES PIKE SAWYER.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
OBSERVER DISPATCH
UTICA, N. Y.
OCT 16 1926

Boston Symphony Second Concert On Air Tonight

The second of the concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra being broadcast through Weshingtouse Station WBZ and a chain of stations including WJZ, WBY and WRC will go on the air tonight. These concerts are arranged by W. S. Quinby.

The first concert by this organization of 107 musicians, under the direction of the Russian conductor, Serge Koussevitsky brought a flood of letters and telegrams of appreciation.

During the broadcast direct from Symphony Hall tonight, Professor Marshall will again go on the air to interpret the Symphony program. He will give a sketch of the life of Mozart and familiarize the radio audience with the principal themes of his Kleine Nacht Musik, the opening selection on tonight's program. He will also tell of the life of Caesar Franck, playing portions of his symphony in D minor, and explaining the composer's methods of treating his themes.

During the intermission, Professor Marshall will illustrate Strauss' symphanic poem "Til Eulenspiegel," explaining how this humorous music is connected with the Eulenspiegel legend. The novelty on tonight's symphony broadcast is the tone poem, "Southern Nights," by Alexander Lang Steinert.

Tel. Chelsea
THIS CLIPPING FROM
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
TIMES

THE PUBLIC of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has grown considerably in recent seasons and is now limited only by the number of concerts the great orchestra, which must spend most of its time in rehearsal, can give.

That America expects great things of the pending season, which is to be the third under Serge Koussevitzky, is evident from the length of the waiting lists for every series of concerts. At the five series of sixty-seven concerts to be given in greater Boston, it will not be possible for a non-subscriber to obtain a single seat.

Penfield Roberts comments on the orchestral situation in the Boston Globe of September 26th:

"Has any American orchestra ever sold out all its concerts in advance in this fashion before? Seats are to be had for the Philadelphia Orchestra's Philadelphia concerts and for the Chicago Orchestra's Chicago concerts, though the Friday afternoon series in both cities are sold out. No New York orchestra ever sells out its concerts for the season. Nor does any New York orchestra offer them in series of twenty-four at high prices, as is done in this city."

Koussevitzky is now rehearsing the great Orchestra for the season's opening in Boston next Friday, October 22nd. The opening Boston program will include Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, Prokofieff's Suite "Buffoon" and shorter classics.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
OCT 16 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERT TONIGHT

Fine Evening of Music Promised on Local Radio—La Zazzera Back on the Air

Now that the baseball season has reached a most successful conclusion, radio enthusiasts can devote their entire attention to the football season. WBZ, the local Westinghouse station, has arranged to broadcast a banner series of games between some of the leading college teams of the country. One of these choice morsels will be offered to fans this afternoon at 2.30 when the Yale-Dartmouth game will be put on the air. The play-by-play description of the game will come direct from the Yale bowl at New Haven, by way of special wire to the station at East Springfield, and will be described by Jim Murley, sports announcer for WBZ.

The evening program will of course be given over almost in its entirety to the Boston Symphony concert. Tonight's concert is one, lighter in nature, one might say, than the offering of last week. The first number will be a work of Mozard, "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik Serenade." This will be followed by "Southern Night," a tone poem for orchestra composed by Steinert, while the third number, closing the first part of the program, will consist of a composition of Strauss, Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks After the Old-Fashioned Roguish Manner." Following the intermission, in which Prof Marshall will speak briefly regarding the symphony to follow, the audience will hear the "Symphony in D Minor," by Caesar Franck. This is a more pretentious work and will require more careful listening on the part of the listeners to understand its beauties.

Quite in keeping with the fine type of program presented by the Boston Symphony will be the offering of Gustave LaZazzera, 'cellist, of our own city, who will be heard from the local studio at 6.30. Gustave LaZazzera is one of Springfield's finest musicians. He first studied with the celebrated Arturo Cuccoli of Padua, then with Francesco Serato of Bologna, and Tito Rosati of Rome. In Italy he was considered an artist of the highest grade and played with the Augustus orchestra of Rome and other orchestras, both symphonic and operatic. His work along radio lines will be recalled by WBZ audiences, when he appeared as cellist of the Philharmonic trio that broadcast each evening from this station for over two years. It is interesting to note that in tonight's program Mr LaZazzara has chosen those numbers that were most popular with the listeners in when he was on the air with the trio before. The piano accompaniments will be played by Eleanor Turner LaZazzera.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 16 1926

SYMPHONY WILL REPEAT BOSTON NUMBERS HERE

First Three at Opening of Providence Season to Be Identical With Those of Initial Programme in Hub.—Public Sale of Season Tickets Monday.

The first three numbers played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the opening of its Providence season in the E. F. Albee Theatre on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, will be identical with those of the opening programme in Boston, Oct. 8. Included will be Prokofieff's Ballet Suite "Chout" [illegible] and Providence music lovers will have the honor of hearing its second American rendition.

Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz" and Debussey's two nocturnes "Clouds" and "Festivals," are two other numbers to be repeated here. The symphony of the evening will be Franck's greatest masterpiece in D-minor. Serge Koussevitzky, director of the Boston Symphony, won high praise from Boston music critics for his interpretation of the great Belgian composer's masterpiece in that city.

Public sale of season tickets for Boston Symphony concerts in this city will open Monday morning at Steinert's. If any remain unsold at the end of next week, single tickets for the opening concert will go on sale one week from Monday morning.

[illegible] is announced by WBZ, the Westinghouse station at Boston, which states that it has captured the world-renowned Boston Symphony orchestra for its entire series of twenty-four Saturday night (not consecutive) concerts. The first will be a grand broadcast for the entire Atlantic seaboard and comes October 9. This intial concert will be rebroadcast through WGY, Schenectady, WJZ, New York and WRC, Washington, D. C. The other concerts via WBZ will follow on October 16, 23, 30; November 13, 20; December 4, 11, 18, 25; January 1, 15, 22, 29; February 12, 19, 26; March 5, 19, 26; April 2, 16, 23 and 30. W. S. Quinby is credited for bringing the Boston Symphony to the air audiences.

Kaye Will Start In January.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK
EVENING POST
OCT 16 1926

The Boston Symphony Orchestra began in Symphony Hall, Boston, October 8, its forty-sixth season, and its third season under Serge Koussevitzky. The program included Prokofieff's Ballet Suite, "Chout"; Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony; Debussy's Nocturnes "Clouds" and "Festivals;" and the "Freischutz" overture. The season of five Thursday evening and five Saturday afternoon concerts, in Carnegie Hall, will open on November 25.

by the Boston Symphony [illegible] 104 players, under the distinguished leadership of Serge Koussevitzky. The programs for these concerts are announced here for the first time, and the dates are Friday night, November 5, and Saturday afternoon, November 6.

FRIDAY NIGHT.

Overture "Le Carnaval Romain," Op. 9 ..... Berlioz
Symphony in D minor ..... Franck
Suite from the Ballett "Chout" (Buffoon) Op. 21 ..... Prokofieff
Prelude to "Lehengrin" ..... Wagner
Symphonic Poem, "Pini di Roma ((Pines of Rome) ..... Respighi
The Pines of the Villa Gorghese.
The Pines near a Catacomb.
The Pines of the Janiculum.
The Pines of the Appian Way.
Saturday Matinee.
"Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" Serenade...Mozart
For String Orchestra.
Two Nocturnes ..... Debussy
Nuages (Clouds).
Fetes (Festivals).
Orchestra Suite from the Ballet "Petrouchka" ..... Stravinsky
Symphony No. 4 in F Minor, Op. 36 ..... Tschaikowsky

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 17 1926

Boston Symphony Will Give Concert Here February 6

Hartford music lovers have already shown their interest in the coming February concert of the Boston symphony orchestra by buying advance sale tickets at McCoy's music store, No. 89 Asylum street. This concert appearance is always the outstanding musical event of the year in Hartford. Concerning a recent concert under Mr. Koussevitzky's direction in Boston, "The Post" of that city said:

"There was enthusiasm throughout the concert. Yet at the end the applause bestowed upon the performance of Beethoven's Third Symphony was, by the standard of the past two years, hardly commensurate either with the splendor of its presentation.

As a matter of fact this semi-apathy is easy to explain. In the sense that it over-towered the other pieces of the afternoon—Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz," Debussy's Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals" and the suite, new to Boston, from Prokofieff's ballet "Chout"—Beethoven's "Eroica," abstractly considered, fully deserved to stand as crown and climax to them.

But music such as this, though it be 40 times familiar, has still need to fall upon fresh ears.

Yet, to repeat, the performance of the "Eroica" was superb; there is no other word. Superb in the conductor's conception of the music, superb in the performance by an orchestra as rich-toned, as responsive, as noble-voiced as though the concert had been, not the first, but the 20th of the season."

Reservations for seats can be made by calling at McCoy's music store or by phoning 2-6147.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
OCT 17 1926

THE second of the series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky will be broadcast by WJZ, WBZ and WGY at 8:10 P. M. Saturday. The pick-up will be made by Station WBZ direct from Symphony Hall, Boston.

The opening number will be the "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" serenade for string orchestra, by Mozart. The allegro, romanza, andante, menuetto, allegretto, rondo and allegro movements will be played. A poem for orchestra, "Southern Night," by Steinert, will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time as the second number on this program.

The last selection in the first half of the concert will be "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks, After the Old-Fashioned, Roguish Manner," in rondo form, Opus 28, by Strauss. The entire second half of the concert will be devoted to the playing of Cesar Franck's Symphony in D minor.

One of the unusual features of this series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be a part of this concert, is the comment and instructive information, corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience in Symphony Hall which will be given for the benefit of the listening audience five minutes before the first selection and again during the intermission by Professor John P. Mar-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
TIMES
OCT 18 1926

The past two Saturdays have brought to those members of the listening audience who stayed home to hear them, the unusually fine concerts by the Boston Symphony and the New York Philharmonic. And beginning this coming Saturday, the Bakilte Hour from WEAF will present Walter Damrosch, who will among other things, revive his noted series of Wagnerian piano-lectures.

Now if someone would pass a law interchanging Friday and Saturday, we would be quite contented.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 17 1926

How to Organize Symphony Band

That the business men of America are giving more adequate recognition to the place of music in civic development is indicated by a recent report on music issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. That report is entitled "The Movement for Symphony Orchestras in American Cities." It was compiled in response to inquiries received from member groups of that organization. Copies of the report are to be had from the headquarters of the organization in Washington, D. C. It was designed merely to present facts without advocacy. However, the bulletin gives practical hints for the financing of symphony orchestras such as may help interested persons to establish them in their own cities.

In tracing the history of our leading symphony orchestras, the report credits the New York Philharmonic with having given freedom to the musician's point of view in symphonic presentation. It also credits the Boston Symphony with the first serious effort to bring orchestral music within the reach of the masses.

Besides describing the essentials of orchestral management, the report discusses the question of municipal versus private support for a symphony orchestra. It continues:

"Before adopting any particular financing plan it is well to get some idea as to what the musical needs of the community really are. Where there is a musical association of some sort it should not be difficult to obtain this information; in the absence of such a body it may be possible to appoint a committee of local persons with musical interests to make a report.

"If it is decided to organize a symphony orchestra the first step is to estimate probable costs, including concert hall, salaries of director and musicians, printing and office expense, etc. By comparing estimated costs with estimated revenues from ticket and box sales some idea of probable deficit may be obtained."

Three possible financing methods, as described in the report, are those of endowment by wealthy citizens, a guarantee fund from a group of underwriters and the membership association plan.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.
OCT 18 1926

BOSTON MUSIC WEEK-END HIT

Dame Nature covered the radio wave lengths with a new top-coating from the Aurora Borealis, or something equally blanketing, for the week end and the result was freaky reception—where there was any at all! New Orleans, Jacksonville, and points East made themselves heard Saturday in faint tones and Havana, Jacksonville, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore came into loud speakers with varying intensity last night.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's interpretation of the Cesar Franck D Minor Symphony reached such heights of musical performance Saturday night that nothing in the loud speakers over the week-end can be compared with it! That is written deliberately, after weighing carefully the merits of the bevy of stars who assaulted the microphones during the Sunday evening hours. If we but had all of the superlatives we have lavished on much lesser performances perhaps some justice might be done to the way the orchestra played the composition. But we haven't.

Also, after the emotional awakening such music gives, it is rather difficult, if not impertinent, to attempt to describe it. It is enough to say that the symphony came after a performance of modern music that was neither badly or particularly well played; that it came as modern music after a very formal serenade of Mozart, a rather indifferently interpreted tone poem of Richard Strauss, and a sort of cubist production of Alexander Lang Steinert. And it fell on ears that were just about to become bored, with a sweetness and then a grandeur and finally an overpowering intoxication of tone that was completely overwhelming. Few things have equalled it in radio concertizing since we've been listening in. Incidentally, the WJZ and WRC transmission was perfect.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.
OCT 18 1926

HOW BOSTON HONORS ITS GREAT SYMPHONY

The 1926-27 season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, opened in Boston recently with every seat for its entire Boston series of 67 concerts sold in advance to former subscribers.

This is regarded as a record, even for the Boston Symphony which, under Serge Koussevitzky, has once again retained its high position in the American music world.

The opening Boston program included Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, Prokofieff's Suite "Buffoon," and shorter classics. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Koussevitzky, is one of the attractions of Mrs. Wilson-Greene's Artists' Course of concerts.

The performance at Poli's on Thursday afternoon, November 4, of Feodor Chaliapin and his own opera company in "The Barber of Seville," opens this series, with Elvira de Hidalgo, principals, chorus and symphony orchestra of 35.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST STANDARD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
OCT 18 1926

DESPITE poor receiving conditions Saturday night many enjoyed the concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra broadcast by WBZ, WJZ and WGY. Of the three stations WGY was the only one that could be had but fortunately this station came in well. These programs will be available each Saturday night.

Radio reception was better Saturday afternoon than during the evening hours. New York stations could be had easily with the result fans were able to follow the football games, reports of which were broadcast.

We now have had four nights when reception has been only fair or bad. The trouble has not been that of a natural interference such as static or fading but rather that caused by a magnetic storm, visible as Northern Lights, which have made radio signals so weak only two or three comparatively nearby powerful stations even could be picked up. Northern Lights always have caused radio reception troubles in the fall and so no one should consider results of the last three or four nights as being the fault of receivers. Indeed, so great was the magnetic storm Friday night that newspapers carried stories Saturday morning about telegraph lines failing. Conditions may be expected to improve greatly within the next 24 or 48 hours.

The best entertainment last evening came from WGY. That station linked with WJZ, gave two musical programs which would be hard to beat, the leading feature being the Maxwell House Hour. Had it not been for WGY this program would have come through poorly from WJZ.

Other New York stations were out of the question and Central New Yorkers missed the Atwater Kent concert

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
OCT 19 1926

and not badly either.

The Boston Symphony Saturday night

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 19 1926

Student Cards Available.

The Rhode Island State Federation of Music Clubs is again giving the students of music opportunity to secure cards for the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series at a nominal cost to themselves. Miss Virginia Boyd Anderson is again in charge of this phase of the federation's work.

Students must be under 25 years of age, and their application must be signed by their music teacher in recommendation. The cards, issued by the federation, are redeemable on the day of the concert, at the office of Mrs. Misch, 400 Westminster street.

The members of the Octo Whist Club met for the first game, Friday evening, at the home of Miss Helen Coffey. Prizes were taken by Mrs. G. Semper, Mrs. P. J. Lennon and Mrs. G. Demis.

There was a collation served by the hostess and it was announced that Miss Kitty Hopkins will entertain the club next Friday at her home, 1263 Smith street.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK JOURNAL
OCT 20 1926
OCT 19 1926

"Picking Up" the Boston Symphony

OPERATING ROOM IN SYMPHONY HALL.

A sound-proof room is used by WBZ for "picking up" the weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which are relayed by land lines to WJZ, WGY and WRC. At the microphone is Professor John P. Marshall who interprets the symphony programmes for the four stations. The operators at the amplifiers control the volume and "blend" the microphones during special orchestrations.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EXAMINER
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
OCT 20 1926

SYMPHONY WILL BE BROADCAST

BY PATTERSON GREENE

Walter Damrosch will open a series of concerts by the New York Symphony Orchestra over WEAF and associated stations next Saturday night. In advance of these programs, the veteran conductor has issued a statement which implies an interesting commentary on radio.

"What I should like to accomplish by this series," says Damrosch, "is to draw hundreds of thousands into the magic circle of real music.

"If New York has 6,000,000 inhabitants, and 50,000 of them, at a generous estimate, attend orchestral concerts, that means that 5,959,000 still live in Egyptian darkness so far as music is concerned. These 5,000,000 are human beings with human emotions and aspirations, just the same as the fortunate 50,000. I cannot see any reason why the greater part of them should not be made to understand this most beautiful language of the emotions—music.

"What is true of New York is true of every city, town and village in our country.

"The radio offers such great opportunities, and can reach so far beyond the limits of the concert hall that I am overcome with its marvelous possibilities."

The New York Symphony is not the only great organization of its kind to be broadcast from the East. The great Boston Symphony, under Koussevitsky, will also be heard over a chain of stations, WJZ, WBZ and WGY.

I am hoping that some of our fine

THIS CLIPPING FROM MONTREAL, CANADA
STAR
OCT 21 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Interesting Programme for Concert Here November 1

The programme of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which is playing at the Forum on Monday evening, November 1, includes several unusually interesting and brilliant numbers.

Serge Koussevitsky will present as the principal number on the programme Franck's Symphony in D minor, which has been called the greatest symphony of the last half century and the greatest of the French school of music. Berlioz's "Roman Carnival Overture" will open the programme, while a novelty will be a ballet suite, "Chout," by Prokofieff, the talented young Russian composer. Wagner's prelude to "Lohengrin" will also be given.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE TIMES
PITTSBURG, PA.
OCT 24 1926

TO PLAY "PINES OF ROME"

A feature of the concert here on Friday night, November 5, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Syria Mosque, will be "Pines of Rome," the latest symphonic poem of Respighi, the famous Italian composer. Respighi made his first visit to America last season and conducted this score in several cities, where it was applauded as one of the most significant achievements of the modern Italian school. A second concert will be played Saturday afternoon, November 6.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 26 1926

Boston Symphony Seasons Opens Tonight

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor will arrive in Providence late this afternoon in readiness for the opening of the season in the Albee Theatre, to-night at 8:15. A gala opening is expected on this, the occasion of the orchestra's transference to the better auditorium. The demand for seats has exceeded all records, and a capacity audience will welcome the famous organization to-night.

The first half of the program is the same as that of the opening of the symphony season in Boston, and includes overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz;" Debussy's two nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals;" Prokofieff's ballet suite, "Chout" ("Buffoon"). The evening will close with

D mi

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 26 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY GIVES CONCERT HERE TO-NIGHT

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor will arrive in Providence late this afternoon in readiness for the opening of the season in the Albee theatre to-night at 8:15. The demand for seats has exceeded all records, and a capacity audience will probably welcome the famous organization.

The first half of the programme is the same as that of the opening of the symphony season in Boston and includes Overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz"; Debussy's Two Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals"; Prokofieff's Ballet Suite, "Chout" ("Buffoon"). The evening will close with Franck's great Symphony in D minor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 17 1926

Boston Symphony Will Give Concert Here February 6

Hartford music lovers have already shown their interest in the coming February concert of the Boston symphony orchestra by buying advance sale tickets at McCoy's music store, No. 89 Asylum street. This concert appearance is always the outstanding musical event of the year in Hartford. Concerning a recent concert under Mr. Koussevitzky's direction in Boston, "The Post" of that city said:

"There was enthusiasm throughout the concert. Yet at the end the applause bestowed upon the performance of Beethoven's Third Symphony was, by the standard of the past two years, hardly commensurate either with the splendor of its presentation.

As a matter of fact this semi-apathy is easy to explain. In the sense that it over-towered the other pieces of the afternoon—Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz," Debussy's Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals" and the suite, new to Boston, from Prokofieff's ballet "Chout"—Beethoven's "Eroica," abstractly considered, fully deserved to stand as crown and climax to them.

But music such as this, though it be 40 times familiar, has still need to fall upon fresh ears.

Yet, to repeat, the performance of the "Eroica" was superb; there is no other word. Superb in the conductor's conception of the music, superb in the performance by an orchestra as rich-toned, as responsive, as noble-voiced as though the concert had been, not the first, but the 20th of the season."

Reservations for seats can be made by calling at McCoy's music store or by phoning 2-6147.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
OCT 17 1926

THE second of the series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky will be broadcast by WJZ, WBZ and WGY at 8:10 P. M. Saturday. The pick-up will be made by Station WBZ direct from Symphony Hall, Boston.

The opening number will be the "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" serenade for string orchestra, by Mozart. The allegro, romanza, andante, menuetto, allegretto, rondo and allegro movements will be played. A poem for orchestra, "Southern Night," by Steinert, will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time as the second number on this program.

The last selection in the first half of the concert will be "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks, After the Old-Fashioned, Roguish Manner," in rondo form, Opus 28, by Strauss. The entire second half of the concert will be devoted to the playing of Cesar Franck's Symphony in D minor.

One of the unusual features of this series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be a part of this concert, is the comment and instructive information, corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience in Symphony Hall which will be given for the benefit of the listening audience five minutes before the first selection and again during the intermission by Professor John P. Mar-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
TIMES
OCT 18 1926

The past two Saturdays have brought to those members of the listening audience who stayed home to hear them, the unusually fine concerts by the Boston Symphony and the New York Philharmonic. And beginning this coming Saturday, the Bakilte Hour from WEAF will present Walter Damrosch, who will among other things, revive his noted series of Wagnerian piano-lectures.

Now if someone would pass a law interchanging Friday and Saturday, we would be quite contented.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 17 1926

How to Organize Symphony Band

That the business men of America are giving more adequate recognition to the place of music in civic development is indicated by a recent report on music issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. That report is entitled "The Movement for Symphony Orchestras in American Cities." It was compiled in response to inquiries received from member groups of that organization. Copies of the report are to be had from the headquarters of the organization in Washington, D. C. It was designed merely to present facts without advocacy. However, the bulletin gives practical hints for the financing of symphony orchestras such as may help interested persons to establish them in their own cities.

In tracing the history of our leading symphony orchestras, the report credits the New York Philharmonic with having given freedom to the musician's point of view in symphonic presentation. It also credits the Boston Symphony with the first serious effort to bring orchestral music within the reach of the masses.

Besides describing the essentials of orchestral management, the report discusses the question of municipal versus private support for a symphony orchestra. It continues:

"Before adopting any particular financing plan it is well to get some idea as to what the musical needs of the community really are. Where there is a musical association of some sort it should not be difficult to obtain this information; in the absence of such a body it may be possible to appoint a committee of local persons with musical interests to make a report.

"If it is decided to organize a symphony orchestra the first step is to estimate probable costs, including concert hall, salaries of director and musicians, printing and office expense, etc. By comparing estimated costs with estimated revenues from ticket and box sales some idea of probable deficit may be obtained."

Three possible financing methods, as described in the report, are those of endowment by wealthy citizens, a guarantee fund from a group of underwriters and the membership association plan.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.
OCT 18 1926

BOSTON MUSIC WEEK-END HIT

Dame Nature covered the radio wave lengths with a new top-coating from the Aurora Borealis, or something equally blanketing, for the week end and the result was freaky reception—where there was any at all! New Orleans, Jacksonville, and points East made themselves heard Saturday in faint tones and Havana, Jacksonville, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore came into loud speakers with varying intensity last night.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's interpretation of the Cesar Franck D Minor Symphony reached such heights of musical performance Saturday night that nothing in the loud speakers over the week-end can be compared with it! That is written deliberately, after weighing carefully the merits of the bevy of stars who assaulted the microphones during the Sunday evening hours. If we but had all of the superlatives we have lavished on much lesser performances perhaps some justice might be done to the way the orchestra played the composition. But we haven't.

Also, after the emotional awakening such music gives, it is rather difficult, if not impertinent, to attempt to describe it. It is enough to say that the symphony came after a performance of modern music that was neither badly or particularly well played; that it came as modern music after a very formal serenade of Mozart, a rather indifferently interpreted tone poem of Richard Strauss, and a sort of cubist production of Alexander Lang Steinert. And it fell on ears that were just about to become bored, with a sweetness and then a grandeur and finally an overpowering intoxication of tone that was completely overwhelming. Few things have equalled it in radio concertizing since we've been listening in. Incidentally, the WJZ and WRC transmission was perfect

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.
OCT 18 1926

HOW BOSTON HONORS ITS GREAT SYMPHONY

The 1926-27 season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, opened in Boston recently with every seat for its entire Boston series of 67 concerts sold in advance to former subscribers.

This is regarded as a record, even for the Boston Symphony which, under Serge Koussevitzky, has once again retained its high position in the American music world.

The opening Boston program included Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, Prokofieff's Suite "Buffoon," and shorter classics. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Koussevitzky, is one of the attractions of Mrs. Wilson-Greene's Artists' Course of concerts.

The performance at Poli's on Thursday afternoon, November 4, of Feodor Chaliapin and his own opera company in "The Barber of Seville," opens this series, with Elvira de Hidalgo, principals, chorus and symphony orchestra of 35.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST STANDARD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
OCT 18 1926

DESPITE poor receiving conditions Saturday night many enjoyed the concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra broadcast by WBZ, WJZ and WGY. Of the three stations WGY was the only one that could be had but fortunately this station came in well. These programs will be available each Saturday night.

Radio reception was better Saturday afternoon than during the evening hours. New York stations could be had easily with the result fans were able to follow the football games, reports of which were broadcast.

We now have had four nights when reception has been only fair or bad. The trouble has not been that of a natural interference such as static or fading but rather that caused by a magnetic storm, visible as Northern Lights, which have made radio signals so weak only two or three comparatively nearby powerful stations even could be picked up. Northern Lights always have caused radio reception troubles in the fall and so no one should consider results of the last three or four nights as being the fault of receivers. Indeed, so great was the magnetic storm Friday night that newspapers carried stories Saturday morning about telegraph lines failing. Conditions may be expected to improve greatly within the next 24 or 48 hours.

The best entertainment last evening came from WGY. That station linked with WJZ, gave two musical programs which would be hard to beat, the leading feature being the Maxwell House Hour. Had it not been for WGY this program would have come through poorly from WJZ.

Other New York stations were out of the question and Central New Yorkers missed the Atwater Kent concert

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
OCT 19 1926

and not badly either.

The Boston Symphony Saturday night

TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 19 1926

Student Cards Available.

The Rhode Island State Federation of Music Clubs is again giving the students of music opportunity to secure cards for the Boston Symphony Orchestra concert series at a nominal cost to themselves. Miss Virginia Boyd Anderson is again in charge of this phase of the federation's work.

Students must be under 25 years of age, and their application must be signed by their music teacher in recommendation. The cards, issued by the federation, are redeemable on the day of the concert, at the office of Mrs. Misch, 400 Westminster street.

The members of the Octo Whist Club met for the first game, Friday evening, at the home of Miss Helen Coffey. Prizes were taken by Mrs. G. Semper, Mrs. P. J. Lennon and Mrs. G. Demis.

There was a collation served by the hostess and it was announced that Miss Kitty Hopkins will entertain the club next Friday at her home, 1263 Smith street.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK JOURNAL
OCT 20 1926
OCT 19 1926

"Picking Up" the Boston Symphony

OPERATING ROOM IN SYMPHONY HALL.

A sound-proof room is used by WBZ for "picking up" the weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which are relayed by land lines to WJZ, WGY and WRC. At the microphone is Professor John P. Marshall who interprets the symphony programmes for the four stations. The operators at the amplifiers control the volume and "blend" the microphones during special orchestrations.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EXAMINER
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
OCT 20 1926

SYMPHONY WILL BE BROADCAST

BY PATTERSON GREENE

Walter Damrosch will open a series of concerts by the New York Symphony Orchestra over WEAF and associated stations next Saturday night. In advance of these programs, the veteran conductor has issued a statement which implies an interesting commentary on radio.

"What I should like to accomplish by this series," says Damrosch, "is to draw hundreds of thousands into the magic circle of real music.

"If New York has 6,000,000 inhabitants, and 50,000 of them, at a generous estimate, attend orchestral concerts, that means that 5,959,000 still live in Egyptian darkness so far as music is concerned. These 5,000,000 are human beings with human emotions and aspirations, just the same as the fortunate 50,000. I cannot see any reason why the greater part of them should not be made to understand this most beautiful language of the emotions—music.

"What is true of New York is true of every city, town and village in our country.

"The radio offers such great opportunities, and can reach so far beyond the limits of the concert hall that I am overcome with its marvelous possibilities."

The New York Symphony is not the only great organization of its kind to be broadcast from the East. The great Boston Symphony, under Koussevitsky, will also be heard over a chain of stations, WJZ, WBZ and WGY.

I am hoping that some of our fine

THIS CLIPPING FROM MONTREAL, CANADA
STAR
OCT 21 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY

Interesting Programme for Concert Here November 1

The programme of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which is playing at the Forum on Monday evening, November 1, includes several unusually interesting and brilliant numbers.

Serge Koussevitsky will present as the principal number on the programme Franck's Symphony in D minor, which has been called the greatest symphony of the last half century and the greatest of the French school of music. Berlioz's "Roman Carnival Overture" will open the programme, while a novelty will be a ballet suite, "Chout," by Prokofieff, the talented young Russian composer. Wagner's prelude to "Lohengrin" will also be given.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE TIMES
PITTSBURG, PA.
OCT 24 1926

TO PLAY "PINES OF ROME"

A feature of the concert here on Friday night, November 5, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Syria Mosque, will be "Pines of Rome," the latest symphonic poem of Respighi, the famous Italian composer. Respighi made his first visit to America last season and conducted this score in several cities, where it was applauded as one of the most significant achievements of the modern Italian school. A second concert will be played Saturday afternoon, November 6.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 26 1926

Boston Symphony Seasons Opens Tonight

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor will arrive in Providence late this afternoon in readiness for the opening of the season in the Albee Theatre to-night at 8:15. A gala opening is expected on this, the occasion of the orchestra's transference to the larger auditorium. The demand for seats has exceeded all records, and a capacity audience will welcome the famous organization.

The first half of the programme is the same as that of the opening of the symphony season in Boston and includes Overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz"; Debussy's Two Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals"; Prokofieff's Ballet Suite, "Chout" ("Buffoon"). The evening will close with Franck's great Symphony in D mi

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 26 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY GIVES CONCERT HERE TO-NIGHT

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor will arrive in Providence late this afternoon in readiness for the opening of the season in the Albee theatre to-night at 8:15. The demand for seats has exceeded all records, and a capacity audience will probably welcome the famous organization.

The first half of the programme is the same as that of the opening of the symphony season in Boston and includes Overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz"; Debussy's Two Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals"; Prokofieff's Ballet Suite, "Chout" ("Buffoon"). The evening will close with Franck's great Symphony in D minor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 17 1926

Boston Symphony Will Give Concert Here February 6

Hartford music lovers have already shown their interest in the coming February concert of the Boston symphony orchestra by buying advance sale tickets at McCoy's music store, No. 89 Asylum street. This concert appearance is always the outstanding musical event of the year in Hartford. Concerning a recent concert under Mr. Koussevitzky's direction in Boston, "The Post" of that city said:

"There was enthusiasm throughout the concert. Yet at the end the applause bestowed upon the performance of Beethoven's Third Symphony was, by the standard of the past two years, hardly commensurate either with the splendor of its presentation.

As a matter of fact this semi-apathy is easy to explain. In the sense that it over-towered the other pieces of the afternoon—Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz," Debussy's Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals" and the suite, new to Boston, from Prokofieff's ballet "Chout"—Beethoven's "Eroica," abstractly considered, fully deserved to stand as crown and climax to them.

But music such as this, though it be 40 times familiar, has still need to fall upon fresh ears.

Yet, to repeat, the performance of the "Eroica" was superb; there is no other word. Superb in the conductor's conception of the music, superb in the performance by an orchestra as rich-toned, as responsive, as noble-voiced as though the concert had been, not the first, but the 20th of the season."

Reservations for seats can be made by calling at McCoy's music store or by phoning 2-6147.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
OCT 17 1926

THE second of the series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitzky will be broadcast by WJZ, WBZ and WGY at 8:10 P. M. Saturday. The pick-up will be made by Station WBZ direct from Symphony Hall, Boston.

The opening number will be the "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" serenade for string orchestra, by Mozart. The allegro, romanza, andante, menuetto, allegretto, rondo and allegro movements will be played. A poem for orchestra, "Southern Night," by Steinert, will be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the first time as the second number on this program.

The last selection in the first half of the concert will be "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks, After the Old-Fashioned, Roguish Manner," in rondo form, Opus 28, by Strauss. The entire second half of the concert will be devoted to the playing of Cesar Franck's Symphony in D minor.

One of the unusual features of this series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will be a part of this concert, is the comment and instructive information, corresponding to the notes in the programs used by the audience in Symphony Hall which will be given for the benefit of the listening audience five minutes before the first selection and again during the intermission by Professor John P. Marshall, who is Professor of Music at Boston University and Holy Cross College.

* *

... the New York Philharmonic. And beginning this coming Saturday, the Baklite Hour from WEAF will present Walter Damrosch, who will among other things, revive his noted series of Wagnerian piano-lectures.

Now if someone would pass a law interchanging Friday and Saturday, we would be quite contented.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 17 1926

How to Organize Symphony Band

That the business men of America are giving more adequate recognition to the place of music in civic development is indicated by a recent report on music issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. That report is entitled "The Movement for Symphony Orchestras in American Cities." It was compiled in response to inquiries received from member groups of that organization. Copies of the report are to be had from the headquarters of the organization in Washington, D. C. It was designed merely to present facts without advocacy. However, the bulletin gives practical hints for the financing of symphony orchestras such as may help interested persons to establish them in their own cities.

In tracing the history of our leading symphony orchestras, the report credits the New York Philharmonic with having given freedom to the musician's point of view in symphonic presentation. It also credits the Boston Symphony with the first serious effort to bring orchestral music within the reach of the masses.

Besides describing the essentials of orchestral management, the report discusses the question of municipal versus private support for a symphony orchestra. It continues:

"Before adopting any particular financing plan it is well to get some idea as to what the musical needs of the community really are. Where there is a musical association of some sort it should not be difficult to obtain this information; in the absence of such a body it may be possible to appoint a committee of local persons with musical interests to make a report.

"If it is decided to organize a symphony orchestra the first step is to estimate probable costs, including concert hall, salaries of director and musicians, printing and office expense, etc. By comparing estimated costs with estimated revenues from ticket and box sales some idea of probable deficit may be obtained."

Three possible financing methods, as described in the report, are those of endowment by wealthy citizens, a guarantee fund from a group of underwriters and the membership association plan.

* * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.
OCT 17 1926

BOSTON MUSIC WEEK-END HIT

Dame Nature covered the radio wave lengths with a new top-coating from the Aurora Borealis, or something equally blanketing, for the week end and the result was freaky reception—where there was any at all! New Orleans, Jacksonville, and points East made themselves heard Saturday in faint tones and Havana, Jacksonville, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore came into loud speakers with varying intensity last night.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's interpretation of the Cesar Franck D Minor Symphony reached such heights of musical performance Saturday night that nothing in the loud speakers over the week-end can be compared with it! That is written deliberately, after weighing carefully the merits of the bevy of stars who assaulted the microphones during the Sunday evening hours. If we but had all of the superlatives we have lavished on much lesser performances perhaps some justice might be done to the way the orchestra played the composition. But we haven't.

Also, after the emotional awakening such music gives, it is rather difficult, if not impertinent, to attempt to describe it. It is enough to say that the symphony came after a performance of modern music that was neither badly or particularly well played; that it came as modern music after a very formal serenade of Mozart, a rather indifferently interpreted tone poem of Richard Strauss, and a sort of cubist production of Alexander Lang Steinert. And it fell on ears that were just about to become bored, with a sweetness and then a grandeur and finally an overpowering intoxication of tone that was completely overwhelming. Few things have equalled it in radio concertizing since we've been listening in. Incidentally, the WJZ and WRC transmission was perfect.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
WASHINGTON, D. C.
OCT 18 1926

HOW BOSTON HONORS ITS GREAT SYMPHONY

The 1926-27 season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Serge Koussevitsky, conductor, opened in Boston recently with every seat for its entire Boston series of 67 concerts sold in advance to former subscribers.

This is regarded as a record, even for the Boston Symphony which, under Serge Koussevitzky, has once again retained its high position in the American music world.

The opening Boston program included Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, Prokofieff's Suite "Buffoon," and shorter classics. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Koussevitzky, is one of the attractions of Mrs. Wilson-Greene's Artists' Course of concerts.

The performance at Poli's on Thursday afternoon, November 4, of Feodor Chaliapin and his own opera company in "The Barber of Seville," opens this series, with Elvira de Hidalgo, principals, chorus and symphony orchestra of 35.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST STANDARD
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
OCT 18 1926

DESPITE poor receiving conditions Saturday night many enjoyed the concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra broadcast by WBZ, WJZ and WGY. Of the three stations WGY was the only one that could be had but fortunately this station came in well. These programs will be available each Saturday night.

Radio reception was better Saturday afternoon than during the evening hours. New York stations could be had easily with the result fans were able to follow the football games, reports of which were broadcast.

We now have had four nights when reception has been only fair or bad. The trouble has not been that of a natural interference such as static or fading but rather that caused by a magnetic storm, visible as Northern Lights, which have made radio signals so weak only two or three comparatively nearby powerful stations even could be picked up. Northern Lights always have caused radio reception troubles in the fall and so no one should consider results of the last three or four nights as being the fault of receivers. Indeed, so great was the magnetic storm Friday night that newspapers carried stories Saturday morning about telegraph lines failing. Conditions may be expected to improve greatly within the next 24 or 48 hours.

The best entertainment last evening came from WGY. That station linked with WJZ, gave two musical programs which would be hard to beat, the leading feature being the Maxwell House Hour. Had it not been for WGY this program would have come through poorly from WJZ.

Other New York stations were out of the question and Central New Yorkers missed the Atwater Kent concert

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
OCT 19 1926

... and not badly either.

The Boston Symphony Saturday night was, of course, wonderful. There is very little to say about it, of course, except to describe the music, and that is not necessary. Our announcing professor, however, had a violinist to help him in his explanation of the themes, and it was not as successful as he is at the piano alone. The contrast of the duet with the orchestra was too great and too noticeable.

... issued by the federation, are redeemable on the day of the concert, at the office of Mrs. Misch, 400 Westminster street.

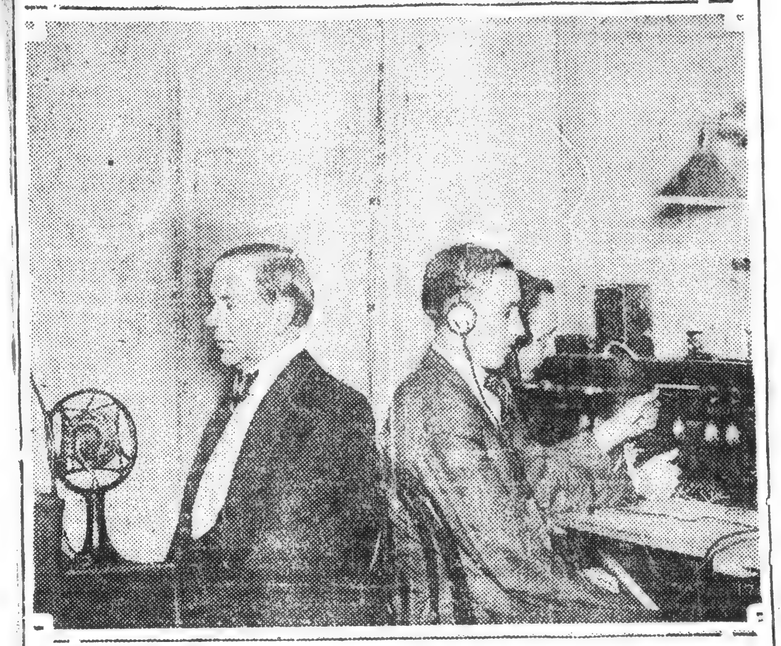
The members of the Octo Whist Club met for the first game, Friday evening, at the home of Miss Helen Coffey. Prizes were taken by Mrs. G. Semper, Mrs. P. J. Lennon and Mrs. G. Demis.

There was a collation served by the hostess and it was announced that Miss Kitty Hopkins will entertain the club next Friday at her home, 1263 Smith street.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK JOURNAL
OCT 20 1926
OCT 19 1926

34

"Picking Up" the Boston Symphony



OPERATING ROOM IN SYMPHONY HALL.

A sound-proof room is used by WBZ for "picking up" the weekly concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which are relayed by land lines to WJZ, WGY and WRC. At the microphone is Professor John P. Marshall who interprets the symphony programmes for the four stations. The operators at the amplifiers control the volume and "blend" the microphones during special orchestrations.

... has been called the greatest symphony of the last half century and the greatest of the French school of music. Berlioz's "Roman Carnival Overture" will open the programme, while a novelty will be a ballet suite, "Chout," by Prokofieff, the talented young Russian composer. Wagner's prelude to "Lohengrin" will also be given.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
EXAMINER
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
OCT 20 1926

SYMPHONY WILL BE BROADCAST

BY PATTERSON GREENE

Walter Damrosch will open a series of concerts by the New York Symphony Orchestra over WEAF and associated stations next Saturday night. In advance of these programs, the veteran conductor has issued a statement which implies an interesting commentary on radio.

"What I should like to accomplish by this series," says Damrosch, "is to draw hundreds of thousands into the magic circle of real music.

"If New York has 6,000,000 inhabitants, and 50,000 of them, at a generous estimate, attend orchestral concerts, that means that 5,959,000 still live in Egyptian darkness so far as music is concerned. These 5,000,000 are human beings with human emotions and aspirations, just the same as the fortunate 50,000. I cannot see any reason why the greater part of them should not be made to understand this most beautiful language of the emotions—music.

"What is true of New York is true of every city, town and village in our country.

"The radio offers such great opportunities, and can reach so far beyond the limits of the concert hall that I am overcome with its marvelous possibilities."

The New York Symphony is not the only great organization of its kind to be broadcast from the East. The great Boston Symphony, under Koussevitsky, will also be heard over a chain of stations, WJZ, WBZ and WGY.

I am hoping that some of our fine Western orchestras will be made similarly available to the great army of radio listeners. The result would be of benefit to the orchestra as well as to the hearers. Where music is heard, it is liked: and where tit is liked, there is ar influx to the concert hall.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
GAZETTE TIMES
PITTSBURG, PA.
OCT 24 1926

TO PLAY "PINES OF ROME"

A feature of the concert here on Friday night, November 5, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Syria Mosque, will be "Pines of Rome," the latest symphonic poem of Respighi, the famous Italian composer. Respighi made his first visit to America last season and conducted this score in several cities, where it was applauded as one of the most significant achievements of the modern Italian school. A second concert will be played Saturday afternoon, November 6.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 26 1926

Boston Symphony Season Opens Tonight

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor will arrive in Providence late this afternoon in readiness for the opening of the season in the Albee theatre to-night at 8:15. A gala opening is planned on this occasion of the theatre's transformation to the latter playhouse. The demand for seats has exceeded all records, and a capacity audience will welcome the famous organization.

The first half of the programme is the same as that of the opening of the symphony season in Boston and includes Overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz"; Debussy's Two Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals"; Prokofieff's Ballet Suite, "Chout" ("Buffoon"). The evening will close with Franck's great Symphony in D minor.

BOSTON SYMPHONY GIVES CONCERT HERE TO-NIGHT

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor will arrive in Providence late this afternoon in readiness for the opening of the season in the Albee theatre to-night at 8:15. The demand for seats has exceeded all records, and a capacity audience will probably welcome the famous organization.

The first half of the programme is the same as that of the opening of the symphony season in Boston and includes Overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz"; Debussy's Two Nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals"; Prokofieff's Ballet Suite, "Chout" ("Buffoon"). The evening will close with Franck's great Symphony in D minor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
SENTINAL
Plymouth Mass
OCT 22 1926

A Review of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Special to The Old Colony Memorial

This article is written with regret for it closes an episode unique in the long history of this town. It is written, also, with satisfaction, for with Finis must be set down Success. The Teachers' Club has achieved a most notable feat, and the townspeople of Plymouth can offer each member of that organization sincere congratulations well merited. The Club has demonstrated in the only absolutely incontrovertible fashion that it can handle big affairs, and that the town can appreciate and support a Symphony Concert. An undertaking of such magnitude, planned and executed with such care should afford satisfaction to each citizen of this town in the knowledge that it was carried through to success by the men and women whose duty it is to teach the children of our town. It is an indication of the calibre of our teaching force. It should be convincing.

As for the concert, itself, to attempt to write about it is futile. It is possible to give some idea of the beauty and dignity of the hall in which it was held, of the gathering that sat entranced through a brilliant and stirring program, of the enthusiastic applause, and the absorbed attention that meant more than applause, of the great conductor whose interpretations were suave, jocose, fiery and gay, solemn and powerful as the music, and the mood demanded—but of the music itself, nothing can be said. Only those who experienced it, felt it, can have an adequate idea of its appeal and power. It was a concert of such beauty, of such spirited and sympathetic playing as is seldom heard in the larger cities. Mr. Koussevitzky was evidently inspired by the warm-hearted reception given him by his audience, and by the splendid hall placed at the disposal of his orchestra. He responded whole-heartedly, and led his men in the manner which has gained him the great reputation he possesses. Many people, who attend the Symphony concerts in Boston say that his performance here surpassed anything they had previously experienced. In the Mozart "Nachtumsik" for strings (a happy choice for an opening number) he displayed such a gentle, pleasant suavity as would ingratiate him and his music with the most obdurate of critics. The Berlioz "Carnaval Romain Overture" yielded a gay picture of charm and color and movement under his baton. There was such warmth and grace and gayety as seldom is made apparent in this overture under the direction of less gifted conductors.

With the opening bass of the Lohengrin Prelude, a new emotion made itself felt. The spiritual sweetness and dignity increased as the music flowed serenely on until it reached a sublimity in keeping with the holiest of man's desires. There was an appeal, an inspiration, of such profound power as music alone will yield when in the hands of a master interpreter. "Till Eulenspiegel" brought the audience gaily back to an earthly sphere; and Mr. Koussevitzky with a jocosity most charming, and a sense of the burlesque, the absurd and the mischievous allowed the waggish mechanic full latitude for his horseplay and his gay devilties.

After intermission the audience again assembled and expectancy was in the air. Then these burst forth such grandeur and power as few composers, conductors and orchestras are capable of. Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony was worthy of the orchestra, and the orchestra was worthy of Tschaikowsky. The conductor was a man exalted, and the travail of the composer became a passion which swept the audience like fire. It is impossible to speak of the beauties of the second and third movements during which that flame smouldered and flared intermittenly; the intervales in which clear, cool tones and dancing rhythms attempted to belie the heat and force which raged beneath to break forth again in a Finale which rose to a consummation which left the listeners awed.

For an appreciable space of time there was silence, and then such a outbreak of applause as the conductor will long remember. There can be no doubt as to the feelings of that audience. Indeed, Koussevitzky seemed the only self possessed person in all the hall. It must take tremendous restraint and iron control to bring a great band of musicians through the emotional storm of such a composition and keep them responsive to every call. This Koussevitzky did, and for it deserves the deep respect of all men. It was his con-

THIS CLIPPING FROM
SENTINAL
Plymouth Mass
OCT 22 1926

EDITORIALS

* * *

A REMARKABLE ACHIEVEMENT

* * *

"And now the matchless deed achieved Determined, dared and done."
—Christopher Smart.

The noted Boston Symphony Orchestra with its some hundred and ten musicians led by that famous conductor, Serge Koussevitsky, rendered a concert in the new Memorial Hall, Tuesday evening, Oct. 19, 1926.

Every available seat was sold and the audience numbering some 2,500 were thrilled by the wonderful musical treat to which they listened.

Surely Plymouth has again lived up to its tradition. "You might as well have the best" is a slogan frequently broadcasted over the radio in connection with the Radio Symphony Concerts which millions of listeners-in have enjoyed, but they lack that personal quality which those enjoy when present with the great Koussevitsky and his musicians in action at their best.

To the Teachers' Club of Plymouth largely belongs the honor of bringing the Boston Symphony Orchestra to this town. Their courageous zeal and untiring effort were crowned with success. Civic pride and community spirit runs high along several lines in our Pilgrim Town, and once the teachers' plans became known great encouragement and enthusiasm was everywhere manifest. Over one hundred sponsors came forward pledging themselves to meet financial obligations should the Teachers' Club require financial assistance. What a splendid community spirit was here shown. What honor is due those who stood ready if needed. And back of all this stands the town itself, of which Plymoutheans you are a unit within the whole body of Plymoutheans and it is your spirit, your desire for progress, expansion and happiness and whose money and desire to perpetuate Plymouth which now prompts you to pay for and support our splendid Memorial Building, for without such a building in our midst no such elaborate and highly entertaining performance as The Boston Symphony Concert could have taken place. The occupying of every available seat in the hall is sufficient testimonial as to the appreciation of highest order musical concerts by the people of Plymouth and other towns.

On the whole the Symphony Concert was one of the best advertising efforts for the town that has yet taken place. It again demonstrates to the world at large the fact that Plymouth today as even in Ye Pilgrim Times stands for the highest ideals in all those things leading to clean Christian living, friendship and happiness. Verily we may and should be proud of our town and all within it.

* * * * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
PITTSBURG, PA.
OCT 24 1926

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA CONCERT

A feature of the concert here on Friday night, November 5, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Syria Mosque, will be "Pines of Rome," the latest symphonic poem of Respighi, Italian composer. Respighi made his first visit to America last season, and conducted this score in several cities, where it was applauded as one of the most significant achievements of the modern Italian school. Special attention was attracted by an episode in the third movement, the introduction of a phonograph into an orchestral score for the first time in history. Respighi had been struck by some remarkable phonographic recordings of the singing of the nightingale. So great was the success of "The Pines of Rome" when it was performed by Koussevitzky and his Boston Symphony Orchestra at the concerts in Boston, that it was repeated. The four different movements are described as follows: "The Pines of the Villa Borghese," "The Pines near a Catacomb," "The Pines of the Janiculum," and "The Pines of the Appian Way." Other numbers on the Friday evening program Berlioz Overture, "Le Carnaval Romaine," Ceasar Franck Symphony in D minor; Prokofieff "Suite from the Ballet 'Chout'; and Wagner's "Prelude to Lohengrin." The Saturday matinee program includes Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Serenade for string orchestra; two Nocturnes by Debussy; Stravinsky's Orchestral Suite from the Ballet "Petrouchka"; and Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 26 1926

SYMPHONY SEASON OPENS TONIGHT

The opening concert of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held this evening at the Albee Theatre. It is expected that a capacity audience will be on hand to welcome the famous organization back to Providence.

The first half of the program is the same as that of the opening of the symphony season in Boston and includes overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz"; Debussy's two nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals"; Prokofieff's ballet suite, "Chout" ("Buffoon"). The evening will close with Franck's great symphony in D minor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LOWELL MASS.
COURIER-CITIZEN
OCT 27 1926

George E. Burns, contralto.

At the concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra this week the program will include the Second Symphony of Borodin; a new number, "Tziganes" by the Roumanian composer, Lazar, for its first performance in America; Berlioz's overture "Roman Carnival" and Respighi's "Pines of Rome." Lowell patrons of the concerts will be interested to examine the Casadeus collection of ancient instruments, which has been acquired by the orchestra as a memorial of its founder and which are to form a permanent exhibit at Symphony Hall.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 27 1926

Boston Symphony

The first of the 1926-27 season Boston Symphony concerts, given in the Albee Theatre last evening, needed nothing more than the Festival overture to give it all the joy of a fete. The serenity of the conductor, the finish of the orchestra, the enthusiasm of the audience, all contributed to make the performance as near ideal as one can hope to enjoy.

At the beginning, President Faunce of Brown University came upon the stage and in his inimitable way greeted the audience, congratulating it on its fine appearance, rising rank on rank to the heights, and commended Mr. Albee's generosity in giving the music lovers of Providence an opportunity to hear the orchestra, although in doing so he was put to great inconvenience.

He also addressed the conductor as an adopted son of Brown University, and commented on his sperlative art in the manipulation of the bass viol. To all of which the audience signified its approval by prolonged applause, which was redoubled when Mr. Koussewitski took the stand.

In places in the house the acoustics was somewhat disappointing. The orchestra, seated far back on the stage, seemed as if it were cased in soft velvets and other devices to deaden its tone. The voices of some of the instruments gave nothing of the resonance that one is in the habits of expecting from them.

Particularly noticeable was this in the case of the cellos and the basses. They were never strong enough to reveal their character, and often they were very dim inded. The woodwinds and the reeds, on the other hand, were particularly good, and the violins were, on the whole, fresh and vivid; but the general effect was one of subdued restraint, as though the orchestra had been cut down in numbers rather than augmented, as it seemed to be.

The programme contained two notable numbers the Ballet Suite, "Chout" of Prokofieff and the Symphony in D minor of Cesar Franck. The first was in its own right unusual music, and besides, it carried with it a very amusing story that could never have been gathered from the tones that perhaps were intended to represent it. It was remarkable for the rhythmic intensity, its vitality and its gorgeous color, as well as its audacity and its insolence. No rogue story could be more alluring or insinuating.

It contained a fine passage for solo violin which Mr. Burgin handled with his usual skill. The last number was a veritable riot. It gave the orchestra such an opportunity to shriek as has fallen to the lot of few orchestras in the past. Just imagine how poor old Hayden's Surprise would fare in such company.

The very antithesis to this Suite was Franck's Symphony, which from beginning to end was a thing of sheer beauty unbroken by a single ugly phrase. From this it is easy to see why Franck has been called a mystic and a dreamer all unconscious of the world about him, who seemed to sit in his ivory tower and enjoy the imagery of his soul as it passed in review, quite unmindful of the human race. The music in places suggests a chastened and circumspect Wagner with all the sting of his cynicism removed.

Themes came and passed from instrument to instrument and went on only to return and pause and contemplate themselves and pass again from instrument to instrument in a most leisurely and delightful manner. In the first movement it would seem that a greater contrast might be made between the Lento and the Allegro non troppo. The second movement was a thing of infinite perfection. The responses in the instrumentation, particularly between the English horn and the 'cello, were delightful in their variety.

Debussy's Fetes and Nuages made a fine study in contrast, as well as in suggestion. His comments made it plain what he intended to show in his clouds, but one who had not read them might easily imagine children playing in the sand or making mud pies. And the gray clouds of this number are in strong contrast to the cloudlike movement of the Lento of the Franck symphony, where clouds far richer in color are rising and breaking and vanishing away in endless sequence.

Fetes, with its episode of processions, whether by night or by day, now falls short of some of the work in similar vein by the English composer Holst.

Weber's overture, played with the utmost finish, seemed in places a little dull and languid. Perhaps it felt a little out of place in the company that it was keeping.

M. C. W.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 27 1926

Boston Symphony

The first of the 1926-27 season Boston Symphony concerts, given in the Albee Theatre last evening, needed nothing more than the Festival overture to give it all the joy of a fete. The serenity of the conductor, the finish of the orchestra, the enthusiasm of the audience, all contributed to make the performance as near ideal as one can hope to enjoy.

At the beginning, President Faunce of Brown University came upon the stage and in his inimitable way greeted the audience, congratulating it on its fine appearance, rising rank on rank to the heights, and commended Mr. Albee's generosity in giving the music lovers of Providence an opportunity to hear the orchestra, although in doing so he was put to great inconvenience.

He also addressed the conductor as an adopted son of Brown University, and commented on his sperlative art in the manipulation of the bass viol. To all of which the audience signified its approval by prolonged applause, which was redoubled when Mr. Koussewitski took the stand.

In places in the house the acoustics was somewhat disappointing. The orchestra, seated far back on the stage, seemed as if it were cased in soft velvets and other devices to deaden its tone. The voices of some of the instruments gave nothing of the resonance that one is in the habits of expecting from them.

Particularly noticeable was this in the case of the cellos and the basses. They were never strong enough to reveal their character, and often they were very dim inded. The woodwinds and the reeds, on the other hand, were particularly good, and the violins were, on the whole, fresh and vivid; but the general effect was one of subdued restraint, as though the orchestra had been cut down in numbers rather than augmented, as it seemed to be.

The programme contained two notable numbers the Ballet Suite, "Chout" of Prokofieff and the Symphony in D minor of Cesar Franck. The first was in its own right unusual music, and besides, it carried with it a very amusing story that could never have been gathered from the tones that perhaps were intended to represent it. It was remarkable for the rhythmic intensity, its vitality and its gorgeous color, as well as its audacity and its insolence. No rogue story could be more alluring or insinuating.

It contained a fine passage for solo violin which Mr. Burgin handled with his usual skill. The last number was a veritable riot. It gave the orchestra such an opportunity to shriek as has fallen to the lot of few orchestras in the past. Just imagine how poor old Hayden's Surprise would fare in such company.

The very antithesis to this Suite was Franck's Symphony, which from beginning to end was a thing of sheer beauty unbroken by a single ugly phrase. From this it is easy to see why Franck has been called a mystic and a dreamer all unconscious of the world about him, who seemed to sit in his ivory tower and enjoy the imagery of his soul as it passed in review, quite unmindful of the human race. The music in places suggests a chastened and circumspect Wagner with all the sting of his cynicism removed.

Themes came and passed from instrument to instrument and went on only to return and pause and contemplate themselves and pass again from instrument to instrument in a most leisurely and delightful manner. In the first movement it would seem that a greater contrast might be made between the Lento and the Allegro non troppo. The second movement was a thing of infinite perfection. The responses in the instrumentation, particularly between the English horn and the 'cello, were delightful in their variety.

Debussy's Fetes and Nuages made a fine study in contrast, as well as in suggestion. His comments made it plain what he intended to show in his clouds, but one who had not read them might easily imagine children playing in the sand or making mud pies. And the gray clouds of this number are in strong contrast to the cloudlike movement of the Lento of the Franck symphony, where clouds far richer in color are rising and breaking and vanishing away in endless sequence.

Fetes, with its episode of processions, whether by night or by day, now falls short of some of the work in similar vein by the English composer Holst.

Weber's overture, played with the utmost finish, seemed in places a little dull and languid. Perhaps it felt a little out of place in the company that it was keeping.

M. C. W.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
SENTINAL

A Review of the Boston Symphony Orchestra

Special to The Old Colony Memorial

This article is written with regret for it closes an episode unique in the long history of this town. It is written, also, with satisfaction, for with Finis must be set down Success. The Teachers' Club has achieved a most notable feat, and the townspeople of Plymouth can offer each member of that organization sincere congratulations well merited. The Club has demonstrated in the only absolutely incontrovertible fashion that it can handle big affairs, and that the town can appreciate and support a Symphony Concert. An undertaking of such magnitude, planned and executed with such care should afford satisfaction to each citizen of this town in the knowledge that it was carried through to success by the men and women whose duty it is to teach the children of our town. It is an indication of the calibre of our teaching force. It should be convincing.

As for the concert, itself, to attempt to write about it is futile. It is possible to give some idea of the beauty and dignity of the hall in which it was held, of the gathering that sat entranced through a brilliant and stirring program, of the enthusiastic applause, and the absorbed attention that meant more than applause, of the great conductor whose interpretations were suave, jocose, fiery and gay, solemn and powerful as the music, and the mood demanded—but of the music itself, nothing can be said. Only those who experienced it, felt it, can have an adequate idea of its appeal and power. It was a concert of such beauty, of such spirited and sympathetic playing as is seldom heard in the larger cities. Mr. Koussevitzky was evidently inspired by the warm-hearted reception given him by his audience, and by the splendid hall placed at the disposal of his orchestra. He responded whole-heartedly, and led his men in the manner which has gained him the great reputation he possesses. Many people, who attend the Symphony concerts in Boston say that his performance here surpassed anything they had previously experienced. In the Mozart "Nachtumsik" for strings (a happy choice for an opening number) he displayed such a gentle, pleasant suavity as would ingratiate him and his music with the most obdurate of critics. The Berlioz "Carnaval Romain Overture" yielded a gay picture of charm and color and movement under his baton. There was such warmth and grace and gayety as seldom is made apparent in this overture under the direction of less gifted conductors.

With the opening bass of the Lohengrin Prelude, a new emotion made itself felt. The spiritual sweetness and dignity increased as the music flowed serenely on until it reached a sublimity in keeping with the holiest of man's desires. There was an appeal, an inspiration, of such profound power as music alone will yield when in the hands of a master interpreter. "Till Eulenspiegel" brought the audience gaily back to an earthly sphere; and Mr. Koussevitzky with a jocosity most charming, and a sense of the burlesque, the absurd and the mischievous allowed the waggish mechanic full latitude for his horseplay and his gay devilties.

After intermission the audience again assembled and expectancy was in the air. Then these burst forth such grandeur and power as few composers, conductors and orchestras are capable of. Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony was worthy of the orchestra, and the orchestra was worthy of Tschaikowsky. The conductor was a man exalted, and the travail of the composer became a passion which swept the audience like fire. It is impossible to speak of the beauties of the second and third movements during which that flame smouldered and flared intermittenly; the intervales in which clear, cool tones and dancing rhythms attempted to belie the heat and force which raged beneath to break forth again in a Finale which rose to a consummation which left the listeners awed.

For an appreciable space of time there was silence, and then such a outbreak of applause as the conductor will long remember. There can be no doubt as to the feelings of that audience. Indeed, Koussevitzky seemed the only self possessed person in all the hall. It must take tremendous restraint and iron control to bring a great band of musicians through the emotional storm of such a composition and keep them responsive to every call. This Koussevitzky did, and for it deserves the deep respect of all men. It was his con-

THIS CLIPPING FROM SENTINAL

EDITORIALS

* * *

A REMARKABLE ACHIEVEMENT

* * *

"And now the matchless deed achieved Determined, dared and done."
—Christopher Smart.

The noted Boston Symphony Orchestra with its some hundred and ten musicians led by that famous conductor, Serge Koussevitsky, rendered a concert in the new Memorial Hall, Tuesday evening, Oct. 19, 1926.

Every available seat was sold and the audience numbering some 2,500 were thrilled by the wonderful musical treat to which they listened.

Surely Plymouth has again lived up to its tradition. "You might as well have the best" is a slogan frequently broadcasted over the radio in connection with the Radio Symphony Concerts which millions of listeners-in have enjoyed, but they lack that personal quality which those enjoy when present with the great Koussevitsky and his musicians in action at their best.

To the Teachers' Club of Plymouth largely belongs the honor of bringing the Boston Symphony Orchestra to this town. Their courageous zeal and untiring effort were crowned with success. Civic pride and community spirit runs high along several lines in our Pilgrim Town, and once the teachers' plans became known great encouragement and enthusiasm was everywhere manifest. Over one hundred sponsors came forward pledging themselves to meet financial obligations should the Teachers' Club require financial assistance. What a splendid community spirit was here shown. What honor is due those who stood ready if needed. And back of all this stands the town itself, of which Plymoutheans you are a unit within the whole body of Plymoutheans and it is your spirit, your desire for progress, expansion and happiness and whose money and desire to perpetuate Plymouth which now prompts you to pay for and support our splendid Memorial Building, for without such a building in our midst no such elaborate and highly entertaining performance as The Boston Symphony Concert could have taken place. The occupying of every available seat in the hall is sufficient testimonial as to the appreciation of highest order musical concerts by the people of Plymouth and other towns.

On the whole the Symphony Concert was one of the best advertising efforts for the town that has yet taken place. It again demonstrates to the world at large the fact that Plymouth today as even in Ye Pilgrim Times stands for the highest ideals in all those things leading to clean Christian living, friendship and happiness. Verily we may and should be proud of our town and all within it.

* * * * *

THIS CLIPPING FROM
POST
PITTSBURG, PA.

OCT 24 1926

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA CONCERT

A feature of the concert here on Friday night, November 5, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Syria Mosque, will be "Pines of Rome," the latest symphonic poem of Respighi, Italian composer. Respighi made his first visit to America last season, and conducted this score in several cities, where it was applauded as one of the most significant achievements of the modern Italian school. Special attention was attracted by an episode in the third movement, the introduction of a phonograph into an orchestral score for the first time in history. Respighi had been struck by some remarkable phonographic recordings of the singing of the nightingale. So great was the success of "The Pines of Rome" when it was performed by Koussevitzky and his Boston Symphony Orchestra at the concerts in Boston, that it was repeated. The four different movements are described as follows: "The Pines of the Villa Borghese," "The Pines near a Catacomb," "The Pines of the Janiculum," and "The Pines of the Appian Way." Other numbers on the Friday evening program Berlioz Overture, "Le Carnaval Romaine," Ceasar Franck Symphony in D minor; Prokofieff "Suite from the Ballet 'Chout'; and Wagner's "Prelude to Lohengrin." The Saturday matinee program includes Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," Serenade for string orchestra; two Nocturnes by Debussy; Stravinsky's Orchestral Suite from the Ballet "Petrouchka"; and Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

OCT 26 1926

SYMPHONY SEASON OPENS TONIGHT

The opening concert of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be held this evening at the Albee Theatre. It is expected that a capacity audience will be on hand to welcome the famous organization back to Providence.

The first half of the program is the same as that of the opening of the symphony season in Boston and includes overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz"; Debussy's two nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals"; Prokofieff's ballet suite, "Chout" ("Buffoon"). The evening will close with Franck's great symphony in D minor.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
LOWELL MASS.
COURIER-CITIZEN

OCT 2 7 1926

George E. Burns, contralto.

At the concerts of the Boston Symphony orchestra this week the program will include the Second Symphony of Borodin; a new number, "Tziganes" by the Roumanian composer, Lazar, for its first performance in America; Berlioz's overture "Roman Carnival" and Respighi's "Pines of Rome." Lowell patrons of the concerts will be interested to examine the Casadeus collection of ancient instruments, which has been acquired by the orchestra as a memorial of its founder and which are to form a permanent exhibit at Symphony Hall.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

OCT 27 1926

Boston Symphony

The first of the 1926-27 season Boston Symphony concerts, given in the Albee Theatre last evening, needed nothing more than the Festival overture to give it all the joy of a fete. The serenity of the conductor, the finish of the orchestra, the enthusiasm of the audience, all contributed to make the performance as near ideal as one can hope to enjoy.

At the beginning, President Faunce of Brown University came upon the stage and in his inimitable way greeted the audience, congratulating it on its fine appearance, rising rank on rank to the heights, and commended Mr. Albee's generosity in giving the music lovers of Providence an opportunity to hear the orchestra, although in doing so he was put to great inconvenience.

He also addressed the conductor as an adopted son of Brown University, and commented on his sperlative art in the manipulation of the bass viol. To all of which the audience signified its approval by prolonged applause, which was redoubled when Mr. Koussewitski took the stand.

In places in the house the acoustics was somewhat disappointing. The orchestra, seated far back on the stage, seemed as if it were cased in soft velvets and other devices to deaden its tone. The voices of some of the instruments gave nothing of the resonance that one is in the habits of expecting from them.

Particularly noticeable was this in the case of the cellos and the basses. They were never strong enough to reveal their character, and often they were very dim inded. The woodwinds and the reeds, on the other hand, were particularly good, and the violins were, on the whole, fresh and vivid; but the general effect was one of subdued restraint, as though the orchestra had been cut down in numbers rather than augmented, as it seemed to be.

The programme contained two notable numbers the Ballet Suite, "Chout" of Prokofieff and the Symphony in D minor of Cesar Franck. The first was in its own right unusual music, and besides, it carried with it a very amusing story that could never have been gathered from the tones that perhaps were intended to represent it. It was remarkable for the rhythmic intensity, its vitality and its gorgeous color, as well as its audacity and its insolence. No rogue story could be more alluring or insinuating.

It contained a fine passage for solo violin which Mr. Burgin handled with his usual skill. The last number was a veritable riot. It gave the orchestra such an opportunity to shriek as has fallen to the lot of few orchestras in the past. Just imagine how poor old Hayden's Surprise would fare in such company.

The very antithesis to this Suite was Franck's Symphony, which from beginning to end was a thing of sheer beauty unbroken by a single ugly phrase. From this it is easy to see why Franck has been called a mystic and a dreamer all unconscious of the world about him, who seemed to sit in his ivory tower and enjoy the imagery of his soul as it passed in review, quite unmindful of the human race. The music in places suggests a chastened and circumspect Wagner with all the sting of his cynicism removed.

Themes came and passed from instrument to instrument and went on only to return and pause and contemplate themselves and pass again from instrument to instrument in a most leisurely and delightful manner. In the first movement it would seem that a greater contrast might be made between the Lento and the Allegro non troppo. The second movement was a thing of infinite perfection. The responses in the instrumentation, particularly between the English horn and the 'cello, were delightful in their variety.

Debussy's Fetes and Nuages made a fine study in contrast, as well as in suggestion. His comments made it plain what he intended to show in his clouds, but one who had not read them might easily imagine children playing in the sand or making mud pies. And the gray clouds of this number are in strong contrast to the cloudlike movement of the Lento of the Franck symphony, where clouds far richer in color are rising and breaking and vanishing away in endless sequence.

Fetes, with its episode of processions, whether by night or by day, now falls short of some of the work in similar vein by the English composer Holst.

Weber's overture, played with the utmost finish, seemed in places a little dull and languid. Perhaps it felt a little out of place in the company that it was keeping.

M. C. W.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

OCT 27 1926

Boston Symphony

The first of the 1926-27 season Boston Symphony concerts, given in the Albee Theatre last evening, needed nothing more than the Festival overture to give it all the joy of a fete. The serenity of the conductor, the finish of the orchestra, the enthusiasm of the audience, all contributed to make the performance as near ideal as one can hope to enjoy.

At the beginning, President Faunce of Brown University came upon the stage and in his inimitable way greeted the audience, congratulating it on its fine appearance, rising rank on rank to the heights, and commended Mr. Albee's generosity in giving the music lovers of Providence an opportunity to hear the orchestra, although in doing so he was put to great inconvenience.

He also addressed the conductor as an adopted son of Brown University, and commented on his sperlative art in the manipulation of the bass viol. To all of which the audience signified its approval by prolonged applause, which was redoubled when Mr. Koussewitski took the stand.

In places in the house the acoustics was somewhat disappointing. The orchestra, seated far back on the stage, seemed as if it were cased in soft velvets and other devices to deaden its tone. The voices of some of the instruments gave nothing of the resonance that one is in the habits of expecting from them.

Particularly noticeable was this in the case of the cellos and the basses. They were never strong enough to reveal their character, and often they were very dim inded. The woodwinds and the reeds, on the other hand, were particularly good, and the violins were, on the whole, fresh and vivid; but the general effect was one of subdued restraint, as though the orchestra had been cut down in numbers rather than augmented, as it seemed to be.

The programme contained two notable numbers the Ballet Suite, "Chout" of Prokofieff and the Symphony in D minor of Cesar Franck. The first was in its own right unusual music, and besides, it carried with it a very amusing story that could never have been gathered from the tones that perhaps were intended to represent it. It was remarkable for the rhythmic intensity, its vitality and its gorgeous color, as well as its audacity and its insolence. No rogue story could be more alluring or insinuating.

It contained a fine passage for solo violin which Mr. Burgin handled with his usual skill. The last number was a veritable riot. It gave the orchestra such an opportunity to shriek as has fallen to the lot of few orchestras in the past. Just imagine how poor old Hayden's Surprise would fare in such company.

The very antithesis to this Suite was Franck's Symphony, which from beginning to end was a thing of sheer beauty unbroken by a single ugly phrase. From this it is easy to see why Franck has been called a mystic and a dreamer all unconscious of the world about him, who seemed to sit in his ivory tower and enjoy the imagery of his soul as it passed in review, quite unmindful of the human race. The music in places suggests a chastened and circumspect Wagner with all the sting of his cynicism removed.

Themes came and passed from instrument to instrument and went on only to return and pause and contemplate themselves and pass again from instrument to instrument in a most leisurely and delightful manner. In the first movement it would seem that a greater contrast might be made between the Lento and the Allegro non troppo. The second movement was a thing of infinite perfection. The responses in the instrumentation, particularly between the English horn and the 'cello, were delightful in their variety.

Debussy's Fetes and Nuages made a fine study in contrast, as well as in suggestion. His comments made it plain what he intended to show in his clouds, but one who had not read them might easily imagine children playing in the sand or making mud pies. And the gray clouds of this number are in strong contrast to the cloudlike movement of the Lento of the Franck symphony, where clouds far richer in color are rising and breaking and vanishing away in endless sequence.

Fetes, with its episode of processions, whether by night or by day, now falls short of some of the work in similar vein by the English composer Holst.

Weber's overture, played with the utmost finish, seemed in places a little dull and languid. Perhaps it felt a little out of place in the company that it was keeping.

M. C. W.

OSTON HERALD
DAY, OCT. 14, 1926

very day in the year at 171
Boston, by Boston Publishing

he Boston (Mass.) Postoffice matter. Address all com-
The Boston Herald, Boston. ll checks payable to Boston pany.

ions by Mail, Postpaid

One Year.	Six Months.	One Month.
$6.60	$3.30	$.55
5.20	2.75	.50

per copy in Boston postal

REIGN RATES

$12.00	$6.00	$1.00
11.40	5.70	.95

es include postage in the excepting Boston postal dis-
o, Philippines, Cuba, Hawaii,
Canal Zone, Republic of States of Colombia, Bolivia
Peru. Also include Canada
aper, or daily and Sunday da for Sunday paper alone, additional.

sumes no financial responsi-
raphical errors in advertise-eprint that part of an adver-
ch the typographical error
sers will please notify the mediately of any error which rald will not be responsible nuscript unless accompanied eturn.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Press is exclusively entitled ublication of all news dis-it or not otherwise credited s of republication of special are also reserved.

arning for learning's
he reopened evening

ron's Good Sense

from a directorship
tional Liberty League
e declaration of its for the Democratic this state, Mr. Clar-on, publisher of the Bureau, and of finan-in six other cities, en business intuitions good sense. He is to prohibition. But is not that, if indeed lled an issue at all,
r the maintenance of iness conditions, or only call prosperity.
ade an effective pres-
case in the letter nn, which we printed y morning. It should he situation. It expective and so de-

ments, including several assistant attorneys-general, includes 30 names, and there is a small army of clerks and other minor employes. In the midst of the civil war there were just eight persons in the entire staff of the attorney-general—the department of justice was not established until 1870, and included among these eight persons were four clerks and one messenger.

Boston may well congratulate herself on the pleasing way in which the new Statler is fitting into its older surroundings. In particular the open space where Arlington street crosses Providence has given the city one more spot impressive for architectural setting.

The Daylight Saving Decision

Most of us have felt there was small likelihood that the United States supreme court would overturn the decisions of the lower federal courts on the constitutionality of the Massachusetts daylight saving law. But the pertinacity with which its opponents have fought it year after year, seeking now in one way and again in another to get rid of it, is a token of their conviction that the law is doing them harm.

This decision brings the issue back to the state itself, where it belongs. It is really a local issue, and its most important aspect is that of the size of the local unit, whether the state as a whole, or some smaller area, as a county or a municipality. The argument on the score of general convenience is all for the state as the unit, and yet there are none of us who want unreasonable hardship inflicted on our farming population. If the agriculturists can shoulder the burden of proof, which obviously rests upon them in view of the majority sentiment of the state, and bring forward reasons sufficiently cogent for repeal, the subject may be made a live issue. Anyhow, the minority are sure of a fair hearing.

Those rude inscriptions on Dighton rock, which is in the original part of Dighton set off in 1735 as Berkeley, have long puzzled visitors, George Washington included. If at last Prof. Delabarre is right in his interpretation, we can assume that the Indians tried their own hands at illustrating Miguel Corteral's lettering.

realizes that she has made only a beginning in these latter concerns, for official statistics touching what we may call the instruments of culture, although they show a surprising growth, do not bear comparison with those of some older states. The "public and society" libraries of Texas, for example, number, by the latest Federal census, 640,000 volumes. No doubt the number is now considerably greater, for Texas grows in a half decade with astonishing rapidity, not only in population and material wealth, but in her instruments of culture. Nevertheless, the libraries of Massachusetts, according to the same census, numbered 8,250,000 volumes, and Texas, at her best speed, must for a long while be far behind Massachusetts in this matter of "public and society libraries." The college and professional libraries of Texas, numbered rather less than 680,000 volumes, those of Massachusetts rather more than 3,760,000 volumes. As to private libraries, those of Massachusetts must greatly exceed those of Texas in the number of volumes. with a population a third less than that of Texas on an area about three and a half per cent. that of Texas, grows a vastly greater crop of the thing we call culture. But Massachusetts reads these statistics not with cheap pride, rather with an unenvious satisfaction in the speed of Texas along the path that she herself has so long trodden.

Amateurs quickly learn that it takes more than kick to make grape wine.

The German Dyes Case

On Monday the supreme court handed down a final decision in a case which for several years has been in process, first before the district court at Wilmington, Del., and then in the circuit court, and now for the third time the United States government loses. It was President Harding who directed the attorney-general, Harry M. Daugherty, to bring suit against the Chemical Foundation, Inc., at a time when the air was full of rumors of scandalous proceedings in connection with the sale of nearly 5000 German dye and chemical patents in 1919 by Frank L. Polk, then acting as secretary of state, to this Foundation, organized under the laws of Delaware with a capitalization of $250,000. The case individual buyer could have done as he pleased with this property. But the Foundation was established to take over these patents in the interest of the whole public; the dye and chemical manufacturers of the United States bought not for profit but for research and is to license the use of the patents on reasonable terms to all applicants. Whatever the merit of this contention, the court now turns aside from all the sinister interpretations which have been placed on this sale. The price seems small, but it is explained that many of the patents could not be deciphered, that a fourth of the total number have expired, that others are not of practical value, and that in many instances Germany held patents here not for actual use but to prevent American competition with goods made in Germany and brought over here for sale.

The supreme court waited a year to make its decision. We are glad the decision is against the government. Confusion worse confounded would have ensued upon a reversal of the lower courts. Individuals have suffered from the seizure of these patents; such is war. The way now is open for the establishment of that American dyes industry which has been predicted and the public is waiting to be "shown." We are glad also that this time a government agency comes out of the courts with clean hands.

In the eternal triangles is man or woman oftener the minority?

What More for Mussolini?

Were it possible to satiate the appetite of Benito Mussolini for power, he might now be expected to lie back at ease, restful and thankful. Yet, possibly, being surfeited, he may be caused some discomfort by a feeling of oppressive fulness. In either case it is naturally beyond anticipation that he should ask for more. Suppose he did, what more could Italy give? She has permitted him to seize and hold the reins of political power. The King is merely a name to be attached to decrees at the bidding of the premier. All elections, except parliamentary elections that are not held, have been taken out of the hands of the people. Provincial, city, town and village officials are appointed from above, by the duly authorized organizers of the Fascist

NOTES and LINES

By PHILIP HALE

Arthur B. Walkley, the celebrated dramatic critic of the London Times, who died a few days ago, wrote entertainingly about literature, social whims, food, all things pertaining to humanity. He once went to a concert of the London Symphony orchestra.

"The conductor enters, and there is more applause. It is Mr. Serge Koussevitzky, whose behavior as he advances to the desk is so quiet and restrained that you would never suspect that diable au corps for which he is famous. But when he starts the Meistersinger overture he is a man transformed. The great, blazing, pompous marches lift his arms high above his head, and then down, down they go, pushing the music, as it were, back in its overwhelming advance. But to speak thus is, of course, to speak as a fool. The gestures of the conductor, by which he seeks to give out again to the orchestra the soul of the music he has absorbed within him, seem only exaggerated contortions to the unmusical or the soulless. The staid and statuesque Englishman may find Mr. Koussevitzky's movements excessive, but then Mr. Koussevitsky is not an Englishman—c'est tout dire. I found him very interesting to watch, and I think, if I were playing in his orchestra (say, the triangle), I should be compelled, under his electric inspiration, to bang it like mad. When it came to Sir Edward Elgar's turn to conduct (his own Variations, Op. 36) the effect was, naturally and rightly, different: intimate, and, if I may say so, homely. Under him, I should not be so fierce with my triangle, but touch it delicately, as though I loved it. I instance the triangle for safety; because, as a matter of fact, there is no triangle in the L. S. O."

For this week the program comprises Mozart's Kleine Nachtmusik, Steinert's "Southern Night" (first performance), Strauss's "Till Eulenspiegel" and Franck's Symphony, D minor.

THE HONOR OF THE FAMILY

We have received an interesting letter about "The Honor of the Family" in which Mr. Otis Skinner is now shining brilliantly at the Hollis Street Theatre.

Notes and Lines:

Permit me to extend my compliments to "H. F. M." for his most comprehensive review of "The Honor of the Family" in The Boston Herald of Tuesday, Oct. 5, also to acknowledge the correctness of his assertion that Philippe Bridau "should have been killed". In the original French production he was.

I had the pleasure of seeing M. Gemier in the play at his theatre and it was ther[illegible]

...was so pleased with the ... received in the United Sta... has sold his home across ... is coming here to live. ... receiving distinguished fo... is the very best thing we ... But after you settle down ... you with the income tax ... tear your automobile all ... likker and the bandits loo... in the clothes closet and carr... our diamonds and young gran... and you buy champagne and fin... bout the same as corrosive subli... nd—well, Raquel, it's a great coun... you don't weaken. L.L.

SELECTIONS FR... OUR MAIL BA...

WET AT ALL HAZAR...

To the Editor of The Herald:

Of course Mr. Gaston can't ... anything about prohibition, but ... oting for him gives a chance to exp... one's self on this paramount issue, ... opose to vote for any candidate for ... office who has nerve enough to ex... his stand openly. There are tho... ds of others also who feel as I do. ...thing else matters this year.

LAWRENCE P. ...DGE

Boston, Oct. 11.

AN INTERESTING SUGGES...

To the Editor of The Herald:

I have just read your editori... in today's Herald on "America's ...ystery Rock." I have no quarrel wit... the interpretation, but I do question t... interpretation of the interpretati... The average man on the street, ... me, would think that Capt. Miguel Corteral was claiming to be an American Indian chief, but I very much doubt that he stayed here long enough for that. It is more than likely that either a Pequot or a Narragansett put an arrow through him at the start.

I suggest that the character reading would be "By the Grace of God, in Supreme Command Over India." A Europe was trying to find the route t... India, and in the arrogance of the time claimed everything that they cam... across. I think this is a case in point.

JOHN PRESTON TRUE.

Waban, Oct. 13.

THAT TROUBLESOME CROSSING

To the Editor of The Herald:

Judge Grant and Mr. Anthony Skeld... ing have recorded their difficulties at t... corner of Beacon and Charles street. It is a difficult corner to negotiat... I often make the crossing, sometim... half a dozen times a day. I am, there... fore, the more appreciative of the ale... eye and warning or beckoning hand ... the traffic officer. Never once, when ... has been on duty, has he failed to gi... the safeguarding signals when this fea... ful and clumsy citizen has essayed ... crossing. So I record my more fort... nate experience—the more willing... because, having just watched the r... view of the police force on the Co... mon—I am reminded of our obligati...

You take the stairs . . .

TWO at a time. You eat breakfast with a gulp and a promise, and grabbing your hat you're off for town. But that is no way to start the day. No, sir!

Take time to eat your breakfast, leisurely. Prop up the morning paper on the sugar bowl. Fruit. Then cereal. Then eggs and a crisp slice of bacon. And plenty of hot coffee. Chase & Sanborn's Seal Brand Coffee.

As the proverb has it, "Good coffee and good tempers go together." Try it and see!

Chase & Sanborn's SEAL BRAND COFFEE

Chase & Sanborn's Seal Brand Tea is of the same high qua...

Our Correspondent in Mexico

SALVADOR, THE INACCESSIBLE

...one may, access to Salvador is ... difficult matter. In Gaute... I was told that the auto ride ... Anna was the easiest way but ... the hardest in my whole ex... of traveling. After one has ...ightful pavements of Gaute... the road for many miles ... border is very good indeed ...s not last long. The start ...:30 in the morning ... walk a mile ahead through a sm... country with an occasional few w... from a passing native.

By four o'clock we approach ano... wide river when we have another br... down involving a long delay. I w... like to cross but there is no bri... Two horsemen fortunately appear... the other side and cross over, ki... granting me permission to ride ... and I enjoy myself. Some Indian ... men pass me on the way and ask ... for a smoke. They stop at a hut wh...

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 27 1926

-:- MUSIC -:-

KOUSSEVITZKY, VIRTUOSO

M. Koussevitzky was pre-eminently the virtuoso in the program which he selected to open this season's Boston Symphony concerts last night. We except, of course, the "Der Freischutz" overture which was the first number. Just why that was played we are at a loss to understand; once in 10 years is enough for a composition which might well be left to less important potons.

The virtuosity of M. Koussevitzky was mainly expressed in the Debussy's "Two Nocturnes" and the Prokokieff ballet suite "Chout." And it was at its best in the Debussy trinity of musical impressionism. Mr. Koussevitzky's love of wandering to the edges of experience—dreamy experience—was seen in the reading he gave to those three short projections of Debussy's dreams. It does not matter whether the clouds or the festivals or the sirens we saw last night were of the same breed as M. Koussevitzky's. What does matter is that he created a world of perfectly entrancing illusion while it lasted. Unfortunately it did not last very long.

The Prokokieff music, it seems to us, ought never to be played in the concert hall. This is objective music. Its grotesque humor does not live unless the figures that justify the tones move before our eyes. We protest against the attempt to make us recreate from a group of excellent musicians in evening clothes the antics of a colorful farce. From the musical humors of "Die Meistersinger" it is possible to obtain something akin to a world of ideas; so is it from the humors of Strauss's "Till Eulinspiegel." But Prokokieff is objective and his clowning is not rich enough to make M. Koussevitzky a Prospero.

As for the Caesar Franck symphony which ended the program, we can only say that it did not move us last night. Doubtless, it has deeper experience than M. Koussevitzky was in a mood to bring forth though we have always doubted Franck's depth for we have regarded Franck as not altogether devoid of that pseudo-mysticism which may be found—shall we say?—in Tennyson's "Idylls of the King."

M. Koussevitzky last night kept eternally reminding us of another Slav, the famous novelist, Turgenev. There were times when Turgenev seemed to think that the whole of human experience was created only that he might turn a phrase. Mr. Koussevitzky was like that, it seemed to us, in his first concert in the Albee Theatre.

Do we complain? Yes and no. No, when we remember that we enjoyed thoroughly the virtuosity, the sure craftsmanship, of the performance. Yes, when we recall the power of Koussevitzky to summon beauty out of torturing experience, which we did not see last night.

The concert was preceded by a felicitous speech delivered by President Faunce. The audience filled the house and was very appreciative, as it ought to have been. We are glad we heard M. Koussevitzky last night in that deliberate mood which regards poetry as emotion recollected in tranquillity.

R. de A. J.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.
OCT 27 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY IN OPENING CONCERT

Albee Theatre Thronged at First Offering by Famous Orchestra.

Serge Koussevitzky led his Boston Symphony orchestra in the opening concert of the Providence season last evening in the Albee Theatre. It was not only the beginning of the season for Rhode Island lovers of the symphony; it was the beginning of a new period in symphony concert history marking the departure of the custom, more than a generation old, of holding these concerts in Infantry Hall. The theatre was thronged.

President Faunce of Brown University, before the first number, made a brief introductory address, paying tribute to Director Koussevitzky and commending the generosity of Edward F. Albee in giving to the Rhode Island public an opportunity to hear this great orchestra. In performing this service, President Faunce said, the theatre management had been put to serious inconvenience.

The programme was typically Boston Symphony and typically a Koussevitzky selection. Opening with the familiar but always beautiful "Der Freischutz" overture, passing through two Debussy numbers and a Russian ballet suite, it concluded with the Cesar Franck symphony in D-minor, so beloved of orchestra devotees. It cannot fairly be said that the entire programme met with the unqualified approval of the audience, but always the impression of perfect playing and interpretation of the highest intelligence remained with the hearer.

Of the two Debussy numbers, "Clouds" and "Festivals," the first, perhaps, made the deepest impression. "Cloudy" seems to describe it, but there were moments when the singing of the strings, clear and compelling, brought the hearer to instant response.

Prokofieff's ballet suite, "Shout," Russian as the Russias, was given a vigorous rendition. It is easy to believe that in the hands of another conductor it would be difficult to follow, but under the incomparable Koussevitzky the orchestra revealed it as something far out of the ordinary, one that the hearer would like to hear again.

The Franck symphony is one of the most popular major compositions played by the Boston orchestra here. It is sufficient to say that it was beautifully interpreted by Mr. Koussevitzky, and played with a full freedom and beauty characteristic of this orchestra.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 27 1926

Boston Symphony

The characteristics of Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are interestingly revealed in the reminiscences of his friend and fellow pupil in Russia in the days when he was first prominent as a doublebass virtuoso. The following description is taken from a contribution to the "New York Times" by Vladimir Dubinsky, previous to Koussevitzky's New York debut:—

"The engagement of Koussevitzky as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra brings to me many memories of days of our youth. They are concerned mostly with Koussevitzky as the wonderful bass player I knew him to be, for it was long before any one, even Koussevitzky himself, conceived the idea of taking up the baton. Koussevitzky studied at the Music Dramatic School of the Moscow Philharmonic Society. I was a pupil at the Moscow Imperial Conservatory. We were both advanced students and in vacation time during one summer we accepted positions with a symphonic orchestra to play at a seashore place called Mayorenhoff, situated on the Baltic sea, near Riga, now the capital of Latvia. As there were very few Russians there, Koussevitzky and I were drawn close and we became "pals." Koussevitzky's name in Russian is Sergei, and for short Serioja. He was a lovely chap—amiable and congenial. He was also ambitious, energetic and determined in his decisions, but very modest about his ability as a musician. In my opinion, no matter what instrument he had studied, he would have attained the same great results that he reached on the bass viol.

"Of Koussevitzky as the conductor and orchestra organizer I can say only this much: that if he directs the orchestra the way he played the bass violin when I knew him, he must be a remarkable orchestra leader."

The seat sale is now in progress for the Hartford Concert of the Boston Symphony at McCoy's, and music lovers are securing their tickets this early, in order to have choice of locations. The Boston Symphony comes to Hartford under the direction of Mr. Sedgwick.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 27 1926

Symphony Concert At Albee Theatre

First of Annual Series by Boston Orchestra Draws Appreciative Assembly

A poor Ford struggling along Westminster street around 8 o'clock last night must have snorted and fumed in plebian protest at the shoving it received from the long line of four figure cars sidling up to the entrance of the E. F. Albee Theatre. The Social Register of Rhode Island, along with music lovers, attended in full force the first of the annual series of concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

After the barren walls and the chairs of asceticism in Infantry Hall, the gorgeous Albee auditorium was a heaven of bliss where the followers of music could sink into comfortable seats and enjoy the concert in bodily ease. It was a mighty occasion in more ways than one. First, Dr. W. H. P. Faunce appeared on the stage with Dr. Sarge Koussevitsky, the adopted son of Brown, as Dr. Fauce called him, reminding the audience that last spring in Sayles Hall the Russian conductor had been invested with an honorary doctor's degree. Dr. Faunce thanked, on behalf of the citizen's committee, the generosity of the people who had made the concerts this season possible. He thanked particularly Mr. E. F. Albee, who, at a tremendous sacrifice, had discontinued the regular performances of his artists that the people of Providence might have good music; and through the spaces he sent his expression of gratitude to Mr. Albee.

The program selected by the conductor was not distinguished. Weber's familiar overture to "Der Freischultz" opened, to be followed by two Debussy nocturnes, deep in color and perfume. The Prokofieff ballet suite "Chout" was interesting, though from the smiles on the faces of some of the music lovers and from the comments heard afterward one might think that the numbers of the ensemble had been playing out of tune instead of following the score. From which it can be deduced that the ballet suite was one of those modern numbers which in more sophisticated and more emotional audiences of Europe bring both hisses and cheers. M. Brokieff will be remembered as the Russian who played as a solo artist with the Boston Symphony here last season. The story of the ballet, described fully in the program notes, explains the outlandish passages. The characters were buffoons and the music had a roughish, if not scandalous, air.

The Cesar French symphony is lovely in a commonplace way. It has no claim to be among the great distinguished symphonies. At times it bored and then it reached distinction. It would have been much better had M. Koussevitsky played the Beethoven originally planned, much better for everybody.

4TH SYMPHONY CONCERT GIVEN

Koussevitzky Leads Boston Orchestra in Intricate Program

Herald Oct 30

SONOROUS TRIBUTE PAID BY AUDIENCE

By PHILIP HALE

The fourth concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Koussevitzky, conductor, took place yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall. The program was as follows: Berlioz, overture, "The Roman Carnival," Borodin, Symphony No. 2, B minor, Lazar, Gypsies, a Scherzo (first performance). Respighi, Pines of Rome.

To some of us this program, brilliant as it was, suffered somewhat from a lack of contrast. The greater part of the music was of a fierce, strong, robustious temper, truly in Ercles's vein. Yet the orchestra never showed greater virtuosity. The enthusiasm of the audience was a sonorous tribute to Mr. Koussevitzky and the members of the various choirs.

Borodin's symphony had not been heard here since the excellent Rabaud conducted it. Only a Russian can do justice to this music which is wildly Russian; that is to say, the Russia of the Orient. One is tempted, hearing the repetitions of the first leading theme, a motto phrase it may be called, to say with Hamlet: "Leave thy damnable faces and begin," but the monotony of repetition becomes impressive. A Russian critic was reminded more than once in the course of the first and last movements of the ancient Russian knights in their awkwardness, also in their greatness. We are told that Borodin intended to portray them in tones. He himself said that in the slow movement he wished to recall the songs of Slav troubadours; to picture in the first movement the gatherings of princes, and in the Finale the banquets of heroes where the Russian Guzla and bamboo flute were heard while the mighty men caroused. It is easy in the lyrical passages to be reminded of corresponding phrases in "Prince Igor," nor is this surprising, for he was working on the symphony and the opera at the same time. He was then obsessed by the life of feudal Russia.

No composer can be called great simply because he is a Nationalist in his music. The folk tunes of a nation have often worked damage to the composer relying on them for his themes and content with the mere exposition of them. Rimsky-Korsakov and Moussorgsky were Nationalists, but their music passed the frontier; it gives pleasure in every country. Is Borodin to be ranked with them?

Eric Blom, speaking of Borodin as a pioneer, remembers how he was once condemned as an "incompetent amateur who wrote hideous discords because he did not know the rules of harmony"—an unwarranted and foolish condemnation, as unjust as Tchaikovsky's characterization in the bitter letter he wrote to Mme. Von Meck in 1878 the year after this symphony was first heard. Admitting that Borodin had talent "a very great talent," he said that it had come to nothing for the want of teaching, "because blind fate has led him into the science laboratories instead of a vital musical existence." The reference was to Borodin's fame as a chemist at the Academy of Medicine. This was written when Tchaikovsky was accused of that atrocious crime, cosmopolitanism, by his fellow laborers in the Russian vineyard.

There are pages of splendid savagery in this symphony; there are a few wild haunting melodies. No, the composer of the two symphonies, one at least of the string quartets, and a handful of exquisite songs is not to be flippantly dismissed.

Lazar, a Rumanian, born in 1894, studied at Bucharest and later at Leipsic. His "Gypsies" describes their dancing, shouting, wrangling near the court yard of a boyard. The belle among the women dances a dance of seduction and then leaves at twilight. The men would fain renew the dance, but they are driven away by the boyard's attendants, who were not to be blamed; nay, they were to be applauded, if the gypsy music in any way resembled Lazar's scherzo. A man of pronounced technical proficiency, his musical ideas, so far as the scherzo is concerned, are commonplace, not pleasing in an obvious way, not fascinating by exotic charm or fury. There was a chance for relieving contrast, for voluptuous measures in the episode of the woman's pas seul, but how dry, how tame the music Lazar provided for her!

To us the most prominent feature of the concert was the dazzling, marvelous performance of the "Roman Carnival." This music, composed over 80 years ago, is still irresistible in the beauty of the opening—the English horn solo was admirably played by Mr. Speyer—in the vivacity and dash of the allegro measures.

Will Respighi's "Pines of Rome" wear as well as his "Fountains of Rome"? We doubt it. After a third hearing the section "Pines near a Catacomb" is still the most imaginative, poetical, impressive. The effect of "The Appian Way" consists chiefly in its rhythm and the ever increasing sonority till the climax crashes.

The concert will be repeated tonight. As the orchestra will be out of town next week there will be no concerts. The program of Nov. 12, 13 will be as follows: Arensky, Variations on a Theme of Tchaikovsky, op. 35, a (first time in Boston); Schumann, Symphony, No. 1, B flat major; Bartok, Three Village Scenes (first time in Boston).

THIS CLIPPING FROM
NEWS
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 27 1926

-:- MUSIC -:-

KOUSSEVITZKY, VIRTUOSO

M. Koussevitzky was pre-eminently the virtuoso in the program which he selected to open this season's Boston Symphony concerts last night. We except, of course, the "Der Freischutz" overture which was the first number. Just why that was played we are at a loss to understand; once in 10 years is enough for a composition which might well be left to less important batons.

The virtuosity of M. Koussevitzky was mainly expressed in the Debussy's "Two Nocturnes" and the Prokokieff ballet suite "Chout." And it was at its best in the Debussy trinity of musical impressionism. Mr. Koussevitzky's love of wandering to the edges of experience—dreamy experience—was seen in the reading he gave to those three short projections of Debussy's dreams. It does not matter whether the clouds or the festivals or the sirens we saw last night were of the same breed as M. Koussevitzky's. What does matter is that he created a world of perfectly entrancing illusion while it lasted. Unfortunately it did not last very long.

The Prokokieff music, it seems to us, ought never to be played in the concert hall. This is objective music. Its grotesque humor does not live unless the figures that justify the tones move before our eyes. We protest against the attempt to make us recreate from a group of excellent musicians in evening clothes the antics of a colorful farce. From the musical humors of "Die Meistersinger" it is possible to obtain something akin to a world of idea; so is it from the humors of Strauss's "Till Eulinspiegel." But Prokokieff is objective and his clowning is not rich enough to make M. Koussevitzky a Prospero.

As for the Caesar Franck symphony which ended the program, we can only say that it did not move us last night. Doubtless, it has deeper experience than M. Koussevitzky was in a mood to bring forth though we have always doubted Franck's depth for we have regarded Franck as not altogether devoid of that pseudo-mysticism which may be found—shall we say?—in Tennyson's "Idylls of the King."

M. Koussevitzky last night kept eternally reminding us of another Slav, the famous novelist, Turgenev. There were times when Turgenev seemed to think that the whole of human experience was created only that he might turn a phrase. M. Koussevitzky was like that, it seemed to us, in his first concert in the Albee Theatre.

Do we complain? Yes and no. No, when we remember that we enjoyed thoroughly the virtuosity, the sure craftsmanship, of the performance. Yes, when we recall the power of Koussevitzky to summon beauty out of torturing experience, which we did not see last night.

The concert was preceded by a felicitous speech delivered by President Faunce. The audience filled the house and was very appreciative, as it ought to have been. We are glad we heard M. Koussevitzky last night in that deliberate mood which regards poetry as emotion recollected in tranquillity.

R. de A. J.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R. I.
OCT 27 1926

BOSTON SYMPHONY IN OPENING CONCERT

Albee Theatre Thronged at First Offering by Famous Orchestra.

Serge Koussevitzky led his Boston Symphony orchestra in the opening concert of the Providence season last evening in the Albee Theatre. It was not only the beginning of the season for Rhode Island lovers of the symphony; it was the beginning of a new period in symphony concert history marking the departure of the custom, more than a generation old, of holding these concerts in Infantry Hall. The theatre was thronged.

President Faunce of Brown University, before the first number, made a brief introductory address, paying tribute to Director Koussevitzky and commending the generosity of Edward F. Albee in giving to the Rhode Island public an opportunity to hear this great orchestra. In performing this service, President Faunce said, the theatre management had been put to serious inconvenience.

The programme was typically Boston Symphony and typically a Koussevitzky selection. Opening with the familiar but always beautiful "Der Freischutz" overture, passing through two Debussy numbers and a Russian ballet suite, it concluded with the Cesar Franck symphony in D-minor, so beloved of orchestra devotees. It cannot fairly be said that the entire programme met with the unqualified approval of the audience, but always the impression of perfect playing and interpretation of the highest intelligence remained with the hearer.

Of the two Debussy numbers, "Clouds" and "Festivals," the first, perhaps, made the deepest impression. "Cloudy" seems to describe it, but there were moments when the singing of the strings, clear and compelling, brought the hearer to instant response.

Prokofieff's ballet suite, "Shout," Russian as the Russias, was given a vigorous rendition. It is easy to believe that in the hands of another conductor it would be difficult to follow, but under the incomparable Koussevitzky the orchestra revealed it as something far out of the ordinary, one that the hearer would like to hear again.

The Franck symphony is one of the most popular major compositions played by the Boston orchestra here. It is sufficient to say that it was beautifully interpreted by Mr. Koussevitzky, and played with a full freedom and beauty characteristic of this orchestra.

Describes Ch...

THIS CLIPPING FROM
COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
OCT 27 1926

Boston Symphony

The characteristics of Serge Koussevitzky, the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are interestingly revealed in the reminiscences of his friend and fellow pupil in Russia in the days when he was first prominent as a doublebass virtuoso. The following description is taken from a contribution to the "New York Times" by Vladimir Dubinsky, previous to Koussevitzky's New York debut:—

"The engagement of Koussevitzky as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra brings to me many memories of days of our youth. They are concerned mostly with Koussevitzky as the wonderful bass player I knew him to be, for it was long before any one, even Koussevitzky himself, conceived the idea of taking up the baton. Koussevitzky studied at the Music Dramatic School of the Moscow Philharmonic Society. I was a pupil at the Moscow Imperial Conservatory. We were both advanced students and in vacation time during one summer we accepted positions with a symphonic orchestra to play at a seashore place called Mayorenhoff, situated on the Baltic sea, near Riga, now the capital of Latvia. As there were very few Russians there, Koussevitzky and I were drawn close and we became "pals." Koussevitzky's name in Russian is Sergei, and for short Serioja. He was a lovely chap—amiable and congenial. He was also ambitious, energetic and determined in his decisions, but very modest about his ability as a musician. In my opinion, no matter what instrument he had studied, he would have attained the same great results that he reached on the bass viol.

"Of Koussevitzky as the conductor and orchestra organizer I can say only this much: that if he directs the orchestra the way he played the bass violin when I knew him, he must be a remarkable orchestra leader."

The seat sale is now in progress for the Hartford Concert of the Boston Symphony at McCoy's, and music lovers are securing their tickets this early, in order to have choice of locations. The Boston Symphony comes to Hartford under the direction of Mr. Sedgwick.

THIS CLIPPING FROM
TRIBUNE
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
OCT 27 1926

Symphony Concert At Albee Theatre

First of Annual Series by Boston Orchestra Draws Appreciative Assembly

A poor Ford struggling along Westminster street around 8 o'clock last night must have snorted and fumed in plebian protest at the shoving it received from the long line of four figure cars sidling up to the entrance of the E. F. Albee Theatre. The Social Register of Rhode Island, along with music lovers, attended in full force the first of the annual series of concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

After the barren walls and the chains of asceticism in Infantry Hall, the gorgeous Albee auditorium was a heaven of bliss where the followers of music could sink into comfortable seats and enjoy the concert in bodily ease. It was a mighty occasion in more ways than one. First, Dr. W. H. P. Faunce appeared on the stage with Dr. Sarge Loussevitsky, the adopted son of Brown, as Dr. Fauce called him, reminding the audience that last spring in Sayles Hall the Russian conductor had been invested with an honorary doctor's degree. Dr. Faunce thanked, on behalf of the citizen's committee, the generosity of the people who had made the concerts this season possible. He thanked particularly Mr. E. F. Albee, who, at a tremendous sacrifice, had discontinued the regular performances of his artists that the people of Providence might have good music; and through the spaces he sent his expression of gratitude to Mr. Albee.

The program selected by the conductor was not distinguished. Weber's familiar overture to "Der Freischuitz" opened, to be followed by two Debussy nocturnes, deep in color and perfume. The Prokofieff ballet suite "Chout" was interesting, though from the smiles on the faces of some of the music lovers and from the comments heard afterward one might think that the numbers of the ensemble had been playing out of tune instead of following the score. From which it can be deduced that the ballet suite was one of those modern numbers which in more sophisticated and more emotional audiences of Europe bring both hisses and cheers. M. Brosieff will be remembered as the Russian who played as a solo artist with the Boston Symphony here last season. The story of the ballet, described fully in the program notes, explains the outlandish passages. The characters were buffoons and the music had a roughish, if not scandalous, air.

The Cesar French symphony is lovely in a commonplace way. It has no claim to be among the great distinguished symphonies. At times it bored and then it reached distinction. It would have been much better had M. Koussevitsky played the Beethoven originally planned, much better for everybody.

4TH SYMPHONY CONCERT GIVEN

Koussevitzky Leads Boston Orchestra in Intricate Program

Herald Oct 30

SONOROUS TRIBUTE PAID BY AUDIENCE

By PHILIP HALE

The fourth concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Koussevitzky, conductor, took place yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall. The program was as follows: Berlioz, overture, "The Roman Carnival," Borodin, Symphony No. 2, B minor, Lazar, Gypsies, a Scherzo (first performance). Respighi, Pines of Rome.

To some of us this program, brilliant as it was, suffered somewhat from a lack of contrast. The greater part of the music was of a fierce, strong, robustious temper, truly in Ercles's vein. Yet the orchestra never showed greater virtuosity. The enthusiasm of the audience was a sonorous tribute to Mr. Koussevitzky and the members of the various choirs.

Borodin's symphony had not been heard here since the excellent Rabaud conducted it. Only a Russian can do justice to this music which is wildly Russian; that is to say, the Russia of the Orient. One is tempted, hearing the repetitions of the first leading theme, a motto phrase it may be called, to say with Hamlet: "Leave thy damnable faces and begin," but the monotony of repetition becomes irrepressive. A Russian critic was reminded more than once in the course of the first and last movements of the ancient Russian knights in their awkwardness, also in their greatness. We are told that Borodin intended to portray them in tones. He himself said that in the slow movement he wished to recall the songs of Slav troubadours; to picture in the first movement the gatherings of princes, and in the Finale the banquets of heroes where the Russian Guzla and bamboo flute were heard while the mighty men caroused. It is easy in the lyrical passages to be reminded of corresponding phrases in "Prince Igor," nor is this surprising, for he was working on the symphony and the opera at the same time. He was then obsessed by the life of feudal Russia.

No composer can be called great simply because he is a Nationalist in his music. The folk tunes of a nation have often worked damage to the composer relying on them for his themes and content with the mere exposition of them. Rimsky-Korsakov and Moussorgsky were Nationalists, but their music passed the frontier; it gives pleasure in every country. Is Borodin to be ranked with them?

Eric Blom, speaking of Borodin as a pioneer, remembers how he was once condemned as an "incompetent amateur who wrote hideous discords because he did not know the rules of harmony"—an unwarranted and foolish condemnation, as unjust as Tchaikovsky's characterization in the bitter letter he wrote to Mme. Von Meck in 1878 the year after this symphony was first heard. Admitting that Borodin had talent "a very great talent," he said that it had come to nothing for the want of teaching, "because blind fate has led him into the science laboratories instead of a vital musical existence." The reference was to Borodin's fame as a chemist at the Academy of Medicine. This was written when Tchaikovsky was accused of that atrocious crime, cosmopolitanism, by his fellow laborers in the Russian vineyard.

There are pages of splendid savagery in this symphony; there are a few wild haunting melodies. No, the composer of the two symphonies, one at least of the string quartets, and a handful of exquisite songs is not to be flippantly dismissed.

